2 KILLED IN GREENSBORO FIRE

Two Greensboro residents were found burned to death early Saturday after a flash fire swept through their home on Sunset Avenue.

State police at Easton said the bodies of Mrs. Grace Elizabeth Luff, 66, and Norris Harry Knox, 55, both of the Sunset Avenue address, were found downstairs near a staircase after units from the Greensboro, Denton, Ridgely and Goldsboro Fire Companies extinguished the blaze, which began shortly before midnight. Both were severely burned, according to reports. Police said the fire is being investigated by Vernon Dulin, investigator for the Maryland fire marshal's office.

The fire apparently quickly engulfed the two-story frame house. Fire officials said the house was completely destroyed in the blaze. The daughter of Mrs. Luff, Mrs. Alien Huston of Greensboro, said she had done some shopping for her mother, taken the packages to the house and left. She said it was only a short time afterwards officials heard of the fire, reported at 11:50 Friday. The fire marshal said the fire apparently started in the living room.

Mr. Knox was a truck driver for the Greensboro Meat Packers, Inc. He was born in Greensboro and was a lifelong resident of the area. He was an Army veteran of World War II, having served in the Pacific. He never married.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Ella Lituski, of Greensboro; a half-sister, Mary Howell of Canfield, Ohio; and a brother, Calvin Knox, of American Corner.

City Okays Improvements On Streets and Trash Collections

The City Council Tuesday approved a street improvement program to start possibly next week. It also appointed a firm to collect trash, a chore done by the City many years.

Streets to be improved by hot-mix are as follows: Reese Avenue 435 feet to the Penn Central Railroad; Smith Avenue; Harrington Avenue from Center Street to Liberty Street; Grant Street;

Dixon Street from Clark Street to Center Street, and Dickerson Street.

Cost of the work is estimated at approximately $24,000 to come from the state's municipal aid fund.

Remaining municipal aid funds will be used for police and electric bills. Last year, the total municipal aid fund was around $35,000.

Contractor on streets will be Warren Brothers Company of Dover.

The Reese Avenue work will be done to provide outlet for an industrial park which expects to start a building in September.

As for trash removal, the City is awaiting a contract from All-Rite Rubbish Removal of Felton. William Duerr, company representative, said his firm would collect rubbish Tuesday and Friday of each week and would include heavy articles such as stoves, refrigerators, mattresses, etc., at a cost of $2 per month. The City is to collect for the collections and pay All-Rite which will start the first part of July. It will have a three-year contract.

The City expects to save by the elimination of costs on its trash trucks and a reduction in street help.

In other work, the Council acted as follows. Passed a motion to prohibit plowing within five feet of a curb, street or alley.

Approved an ordinance to prohibit horses or ponies within 150 feet of a dwelling if the dweller presents a written complaint to the City.

Accepted recommendation of Planning and Zoning Commission to permit Joseph Richardson to erect garage building on Third Street.

Read letter from Phillip Price requesting position of city manager. Mrs. Kathryn Derrickson has said she intends to retire soon, but Mayor Burton E. Satterfield replied "right now the City was not interested in another city manager," but the letter would be kept on file.

BBB Warns About Multi-Level Plans

Persons considering an investment in so-called multi-level marketing plans were advised by the Better Business Bureau of Delaware recently to study carefully the operations of the company first.

Ethical multi-level firms focus their efforts on selling their products, according to John E. Babiary, president of the Delaware bureau, training and guiding sales persons who deal directly with the consumer. Recruiting additional sales people is controlled by the company, and rewards for recruiting are in the form of commissions based on increased volume of goods actually purchased by customers.

He warned that when this kind of plan is promoted with more emphasis on income from the sale of distributorships than from actual sale of the product to the consumer, it can turn into pyramid or endless chain selling. And the end result is frequently loss of investment due to saturation of the area by uncontrolled sales of distributorships.

Some multi-level plans have been subject to action in a number of states under anti-lottery or security registration statutes.

A multi-level operation often works this way:

Large distributors buy the products from the company at a discount and sell them to smaller distributors at a smaller discount. Distributor also receive commissions or bonuses for recruiting other distributors and fees from recruits. In addition, they receive overrides on the purchases of products from the company by lower level distributors.

Without controls, the number of distributors proliferates. For example, if five distributors each recruit five more distributors, who each recruited five more, Babiary said, there would be 125 at the second stage, 625 at the third, 3,125 at the fourth and 15,625 at the fifth stage. By the eighth stage, there would be nearly 2,000,000.

Because this kind of marketing plan can get out of hand so quickly, the BBB said, investors should look for the following danger signals in a multi-level offering.

1. Emphasis on recruiting distributors and subordinates without apparent limits; inducements offered to engage friends and relatives as income products.

2. Return on investment mainly from recruiting fees, overrides or bonuses for enrolling more distributors rather than from actual sale of the product.

3. Emphasis on the efforts to others to do the actual selling, promises of potential earnings made without regard to experience, limitations of product appeal, national or regional competition, or local regulations.

4. Most or all of the burden for sales carried by local distributors with little or no national advertising back-up by the company, or company control over product quality and its continuing availability.

5. Unlimited and continuous recruitment opportunities offered with no apparent concern for how many distributors an area can support.

6. Local distributors prepare and place sales recruitment advertising with no company review or controls on claims relating to earnings, investment requirements and the relationship between the various levels of distributors.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne Holberton

There is no "out of season" for products from the garden or orchard if you have a home freezer or space in a neighborhood locker plant. And now is the "season" to start freezing all of the many delicious fresh fruits and vegetables of the summer months when they are at their best and cheapest.

Freezing is one of the simplest and least time-consuming ways to preserve foods at home. It keeps well the natural color, fresh flavor, and nutritive values of most fruits and vegetables. Frozen fruits and vegetables are ready to serve in short order since the work has been done before they are frozen, adding another important plus for freezing.

Since strawberries are in good supply right now and soon sour cherries and blueberries will be ripe, what are the fine points for freezing. First, what you freeze can be no better than the products are originally, therefore, only select the best quality. All fruits need to be washed in cold water and in the case of strawberries, cherries and many others, wash before taking seeds out or stems off. Wash in small quantities to save undue handling. Lift washed fruit out of water gently and drain thoroughly. Don't let fruit stand in water, some lose food value and flavor that way and some get water soaked. Prepare in serving pieces as you would to serve fresh.

Most fruits have better texture and flavor if packed in sugar or syrup. Some, however, may be packed without sweetening such as gooseberries, currants, cranberries, rhubarb and vegetables. Your selection of the way to pack will depend on how you plan to use it. Fruits packed in a syrup are generally best for dessert use; those packed in dry sugar or unsweetened are best for cooking purposes. Generally though unsweetened packs yield lower quality. A 40 percent syrup is recommended for most fruits. This means 3 cups of sugar to 4 cups of water and the yield will be 5 1/2 cups of syrup. It will take one-half to two-thirds cups of syrup for each pint package of fruit. You may dissolve the sugar in either hot or cold water. (I prefer to make my syrup the day before and bring it to a boil to make sure all the sugar is dissolved and the liquid is clear. I then refrigerate it so it is cold when I need it.) Be sure to cover the fruit with cold syrup so the top pieces will not change in color and flavor. If the fruit floats then crumple water resistant wrapping material on top and press fruit down in the syrup before closing and sealing the container.

To sugar pack, sprinkle sugar over fruits in a bowl or shallow pan. Mix gently until juice is drawn and sugar is dissolved. Then pack in containers and seal. The unsweetened pack may use water containing ascorbic acid to cover fruit or may not use any liquid.

Some fruits darken during freezing if not treated to retard darkening. Your directions for freezing will list anti-darkening treatment as part of the freezing preparation, so read your directions carefully before you start to freeze.

One last point, do not overload your home freezer with too much unfrozen food at once. A good rule of thumb is allow two or three pounds of unfrozen food to each cubic foot of freezer capacity. Overloading slows down the rate of freezing and foods that freeze too slowly may lose quality or spoil.

Memorabilia of The Dorman Family

by Albert C. Price (Editorial Note: The following material was provided by Mrs. Alice Dorman Font, the State Archives, The Harrington Journal's historical edition of March, 1970, Byle's Map of Kent County for 1859, Pomeroy & Beer's Atlas of 1868, and O. H. Bailey & Company's "Bird's-Eye View of Harrington," a lithograph of 1885, and "Scharf's History of Delaware).

Mrs. Font

Previous to 1859, Harrington was known as Clarks and Clarks' Corners. The Dorman family has a prominent place in the history of Harrington for two reasons: 1. A substantial portion of the western part of the city was originally Dorman land. 2. Dorman Street was named for the Dorman family, possibly for George W. Dorman, who owned the land and who died in 1864. The first appearance of Dorman Street was in Pomeroy & Beers Atlas of 1868, though the streets were not identified.

died in 1864, much of his land to the west was sold. The remainder was sold in building lots when his wife died in 1903. Dorman was listed in the U.S. census of 1850 as being a farmer, 25 years of age, and worth $1000.

Mrs. Font remembers well her grandmother's home and farm; also a colored woman, Diana, who wore a bandanna handkerchief on her head, who took care of the Thomas J. Dorman children.

Some of the other Dormans were George "Cudge" Dorman, a railroad, son of George W. Dorman.

Some Dormans, listed in the census of 1850, but not otherwise identified, are Sarah, 13; Lydia, 27, and Mary E., 7.

There is a Thomas H. Dorman, shown in the P & B atlas of 1868 as residing on Dorman Street. He and William Sapp owned the Delaware House in 1861. He was one of the town commissioners named in the Charter of 1869 for the incorporation of Harrington. He died March 18, 1892, and is buried in Hollywood Cemetery. He was Mrs. Font's great-uncle.

She recalls a Solomon Dorman, of Andrewville, born Dec. 6, 1833, who died July 9, 1923, and is buried in Hollywood Cemetery. Mrs. Font is uncertain of his exact relationship to her but related he was. He was probably named after her great-great-grandfather, heretofore mentioned. He was probably the son of one of the children of the Solomon Dorman whose will dated Jan. 3, 1832.

David Dorman, July 18, 1838 heir, widow Eliza. Thomas H. Dorman, Oct. 10, 1843, great-grandfather of Mrs. Font; heirs, George W. Dorman, Mrs. Font's grandfather; Thomas H. Dorman. The latter Thomas H. Dorman, a carpenter, was 20 in the U.S. census of 1850.

Mrs. Font's father was Thomas J. Dorman, son of George W. Dorman. She is the last of the Dormans in Harrington, though she has a nephew, John C. Dorman, son of the late Herma Dorman, of Milford. Mrs. Font's other brothers were George and Fred, both deceased. Herman once lived in Texas but died here, Mrs. Font said.

She was the daughter of Thomas J. Dorman and Laura Wyatt Dorman and was born at Masten's Corner, April 10, 1882. The family moved to Smocktown, an area still known by this name near the fairgrounds and thence to a house at 21 Clark St. This structure was, eventually, converted into a store which is now a second-hand store.

Father Dorman, a freight brakeman for the Pennsylvania Railroad, now the Penn Central, moved to Denton in 1889 and helped build a bridge over the Choptank River for the old Queen Anne Railroad.

Alice Dorman married Serphine Font in New York City when she was 23. They moved to Barcelona, Spain, in 1920, where Font was a sales representative for Kern Commercial Company. He died in Spain in 1926 and in 1929 the widow moved to Harrington and made her home with her aunt, Mrs. Willie Farrow, on West Street. The house was on land now partly occupied by Lake Forest B. Elementary School.

She now lives at 25 W. Mispillion St., where she purchased a small building from John Larimore, who had a clock and repair shop there, and added three rooms.

Armed Forces News Army Private First Class Richard A. Garton, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving H. Garton, Route 5, Dover, recently completed a 10-week military journalist course at Defense Information School, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. During the course students receive instruction in the preparation of news and feature stories, photography and speech. Another important part of the class time is spent on preparation of material for radio and television broadcasting. Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller
LOVE YOURSELF

The Good Book tells us: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Some wise philosopher has observed that self-love is the basis of our sentiments and actions. We might consider Edgar Guest's poem:

"MYSELF"

I have to live with myself, and so,
I want to be fit for myself to know.
I want to be able as days go by,
Always to look myself, straight in the eye.

I don't want to stand with the setting sun
And hate myself for the things that I've done.
Whatever happens, I want to be Self-respecting and conscious-free.

Love God — Neighbor — thyself (keep them in that order) and the rest is insured.

The key to tomorrow is character and integrity. In a word — self-love.

Last of the Dormans Here Tells of By-Gone Days

My Memories from the 1880's (and on)
Alice Dorman Font

Sitting here thinking of my childhood days, and I remember well, down the street not far from my dear Grandmother Dorman's home and farm. Where the Trinity Methodist Church stands stood an old blacksmith shop that was at the end of Grandmother Dorman's lane and across the lane, where the brick double-house is was a wild cherry tree.

No houses from there on down to where Potter's Store now stands. There was an apple orchard and a peach orchard. No houses on the western side (of Commerce Street).

Aunt Louisa Simpson was my grandmother's (Mrs. Sadie Wyatt's) sister and the late M. T. Adams' mother, also the Adams boys' grandmother. (The children of M. T. Adams).

My grandmother Dorman's house stood where the Bullock (10 W. Mispillion) house stands today. Her land went to Mechanic Street (down Dorman to Commerce, down Commerce to West Street, north on West Street to Mechanic Street).

Where Stone's Hotel is (4 Mechanic St.) that was my aunt's home, Aunt Maryluz and Uncle Ben Fleming) and the barbershop (2 Mechanic St.) was a little notion store run by Mrs. Nora Taylor, and the printing office (No. 1 Commerce Street) was a bank, the only one in town.

Present site of The First National Bank housed Dickerson's (Alonso) Hotel and livery stable. I remember the old lockup, that was its name, hardly big enough for one person (stood on an alley, facing the railroad, in the rear of 21 Clark St.).

I remember our town balliif was Mr. Parvis (John). We had no cops. I remember Mrs. Rody Satterfield had a store in the block where the new post office (built in 1928) stands and also (Alexander) Matthews had a "Crusty Chicken Wrap-ups" is the name chosen by Mrs. Piantek for her third place winning recipe. A graduate of DePaul University, Chicago, she is a homemaker, substitute teacher and tutor. Her dish features chicken drumsticks with barbecue sauce, parmesan cheese and sesame seeds.

Mrs. Petrelli, earned her $2,000 award with a recipe named in honor of her husband, "Chicken Breasts A La Casa Giovanni." This is her second major cooking contest triumph. In 1966, Mrs. Petrelli won the $25,000 grand prize in the Pillsbury Bake-off. Besides her $10,000 prize Mrs. Young also captured one of the nine $100 bonus prizes awarded to contestants who created recipes judged outstanding in specific categories. Mrs. Young's recipe was chosen the top d'oeuvre recipe. Mrs. Young's winning recipe is prepared as follows:

"Dipper's Nuggets" Chicken 6 whole broiler-fryer breasts, skinned, boned and cut into 1 x 1 1/2 inch nuggets (6 nuggets each half of 12 to 14 ounce breast) 2 eggs, beaten 1 cup water 1 1/2 teaspoons salt 3 tablespoons sesame seed 1 cup flour 1 to 1 1/2 pints Mazola corn oil

Mix eggs, water, salt, sesame seed and flour into a batter. Heat corn oil, over medium heat in a heavy sturdy, flat-bottom 3-quart saucapen or deep fryer, filling utensil no more than 1/3 full. Heat over medium heat to 375 degrees F. Dip nuggets into batter; drain off excess batter. Add nuggets in a single layer, about 8 or 9 at a time. Fry about 3 to 5 minutes or until golden brown. Drain on paper towels.

Locals Do Well In Junior Olympics

Two bus loads of downstate boys and girls competed in the state junior olympic track meet, held at Baynard Stadium, Wilmington, on Saturday afternoon.

Competitors from this area helped the downstaters make a fine showing.

William Lester "Buck-Buck" Fountain, a Lake Forest High freshman from Harrington, won the intermediate boys long jump, with a leap of 18 feet, 7 inches. The record in this event is 19-6, set in 1970 by another Harringtonian, George Turner.

The senior girls 100 yard dash was captured by Janie Sherwood of Felton, Charlotte Coverdale won the intermediate girls 100 in 1970, while living in Harrington. Now residing in Milford, she again was first in that event.

Pat Hudson of Felton and Cheryl Mosley of Harrington went 1-2 in the senior girls shot put.

Patty Lisehora of Millsboro and Doreen Chaffinch of Harrington were second and third, respectively in the intermediate girls 200 yard dash.

Lisehora, Chaffinch, Coverdale and Harrington's Kathy Young, then finished a good second to the Delaware Sports Club's 440 relay unit. The upstate girls compete much of the year, have some performers with as much as six years experience. They were favored to prevail easily, but had to set a junior olympic record (5.31) to win.

Kathy Young did especially well, as the Jim Hogsten-coached downstaters were in contention most of the way. A courageous Canterburyite (or is it Canterburyan?) named Chris Brown tied for first in the high jump, with a leap of 4 feet 2 inches. Chris, 14, is only five feet tall. She was taken to the hospital with a dislocated finger, then amazed the doctors by clamoring to get back to Baynard Stadium, in time to run in the intermediate girls half mile. She didn't make it, by five minutes.

Lester Fountain, William Flamer, Leon Shockley and Ricky Wright didn't place in the 440 relay but ran very well, indeed.

Fountain and Flamer had been working out with two other lads, but usually ran from 54 to 58 seconds, in practice. Chipman School students, Shockley of Fredericka and Wright, of Vernon, were last minute substitutes. Without one workout, the newcomers teamed with Flamer and Fountain and scorched a quarter mile in 50.2 seconds.

Town And Country Topics

Pesticide safety cannot be overemphasized during this season of the year. All farmers and many homeowners are using pesticides to control weeds, insects, and diseases on their property. Failure to use these pesticides wisely is endangering yourself, your children, and your neighbors.

According to the United States Department of Agriculture and the National Safety Council, accidents caused by misuse of pesticides during 1969 occurred to a total of 5,747 people. A large majority of this number were children under five years of age. Out of this large number, there were only 26 deaths reported.

To give just a little insight on a few of these cases that happened, one sixteen year old boy died during 1969 because he wore no protective clothing and did not wash his hands before eating after handling a very toxic pesticide.

A twenty-eight year old farm worker spilled a pesticide on his clothes and continued working without changing, or even washing if off his skin.

One other person, a fifty-five year old pest exterminator, drank water from an open bottle which was located in the kitchen of the house he had just finished fumigating.

Pesticide accidents occur with all types of people in many different occupations. When pesticides are used correctly and by label directions, pesticides are safe. Always read the entire label for directions on applications methods, rates, and one of the most important, the antidote, in case of an accident.

Remember, the number of the Poison Information Center is listed on the inside cover of all Delaware telephone directories. Refer to this number in emergencies for proper procedures.

The United States Department of Agriculture Research Center has been working with a new chemical that will turn off flower colors and produce pure white flowers in many floral crops.

This chemical bleaches the color from poinsettia bracts, marigolds, and chrysanthemums. This chemical inhibits certain materials within the plant that makes up the various colors in flowers. It makes flowers pure white over the entire floral area. This has been long desired by florists and others for weddings, funerals and many other ornamental purposes.

This is a step that may lead to growing flowers that will be of a specific size, shape, growth and color for the desired purpose. This will permit a person to order flowers the same as they now order different accessories on an automobile.

We are now in the full swing of soybean planting in the county. The soybean is a very interesting plant and a great forgiver.

Soybeans can be handled haphazardly and the producer can still realize a reasonable rate. However, good fertility, pH, good varieties, inoculation and good weed control are all essential steps in good soybean production. None of these can take the place of the other; they must all be in balance to realize good soybean yields.

Occasionally, if your soybeans appear yellow in the new growth, particularly if your pH is high, in many cases, is manganese deficiency. If you have encountered this in some of your soils, it may be corrected by applying six pounds per acre of manganese mixed with the fertilizer to be applied in the row at planting. However, foliar applications may be employed if this shows up in soils that were not expected of this deficiency. Manganese Sulfate or a chelated material may also be used.

One other very important area in soybean production is good weed control. This may be obtained with the use of chemicals, or in light weed populations, mechanical cultivations are very effective. You must be selective in your choice of herbicides because one material will not control all weeds. Diagnose your weed problem and then select the chemical that is effective on those particular weeds.

If you have any questions and would like further information on any aspect of soybean production, call the Kent County Extension Office 736-1448, for more information.

Kent County 4-H'ers will celebrate June as dairy month and crown their very own dairy princess. Many clubs will be represented on June 12 at 8 p.m. to vie for the honors.

The Houston Cardinals 4-H club will again sponsor the contest to be held at the Houston Firehall.

Each girl will milk a cow and after a quick clothes change present a short extemporaneous talk.

Miss Charmayne Pierson, 1970 Dairy Princess will crown the 1971 princess.

Dr. George Haenlein, associate professor, animal science, will be master of ceremonies for the evening.

Judges will be Mrs. George Haenlein and Mr. and Mrs. David Woodward.

State land judging scores have just been released. New Castle County placed first with Kent County in second place.

Joe Gibson, Woodside Emeralds, was first place judge. Richard Hand, Oak Grove, second; Ken Carlisle, Woodside Emeralds, third; Billy French, Westville, fourth; and Gary Baker, Peach Blossom, fifth.

The state contest was held at Newton's Bridgeville.

Dairy Princess Competes In Chicago

Her reign is drawing to a close, but one highlight is yet to come for Delaware's 1971 Dairy Princess, Miss Joy Lynn Gooden of Camden-Wyoming.

From June 28-30, Joy will join 28 other dairy princesses from around the nation to compete for the title of American Dairy Princess. With the title, the winner will receive a complete wardrobe and a $2,000 scholarship.

During their stay in Chicago the contestants will tour the Marshall Field department store, take a bus tour of the city and visit the Chicago Art Institute. In addition, there will be a mealtime meetings with various groups of judges and a personal interview for each candidate.

Joy will make the expense-paid trip with her chaperone, Mrs. Nancy Woodward of Middletown—herself a former Miss Delaware.

After Chicago, Joy will soon have to relinquish her title. She will crown her successor during the Delaware State Fair, July 28, at Harrington.

This means Joy will be the first Delaware Dairy Princess to only have a six-month reign. In the past, the state dairy princess has been crowned in December and has ruled until the following December.

The American Dairy Association recommends that state dairy princesses be selected right after the national contest, however, so Delaware is altering its schedule to meet that recommendation. Thus, the new Delaware Dairy Princess will wear the crown until July, 1972.

The state-wide contest is organized by Delaware's dairy organizations and the Delaware Cooperative Service. To be eligible for this event, contestants must be high school graduates between 16 and 25 years old and live or have lived on a dairy farm that produces milk commercially. Each girl will be interviewed by a panel of judges and will present a three to five minute dairy talk during the contest.

Joy Lynn Gooden
1971 Del. Dairy Princess

Contestants will also be judged on grooming, poise, personality and charm.

The new Delaware Dairy Princess will receive a cash award and an expense-paid trip to the national dairy princess contest next year.

Entries for this year's Delaware Dairy Princess contest must be received by the contest committee by July 1. Applications and additional information are available from county extension offices in Newark, Dover and Georgetown.

It Seams To Me

by Janet Reed

Clothes seem to be stain-prone in the summer time. Fruit juices, soft drinks, grass, picnic foods—all present problems.

Stain removal can be rather complex in spite of all the ads. The same stain requires different methods of removal depending on the fabric.

The wonderful crease resistant fabrics are easily soiled by grease. If you don't get rid of the stain promptly, it may remain forever. So as soon as possible, remove it with grease solvent. If you subject the garment to heat whether it's hot water, in the dryer or with a hot iron, the stain may be permanently set. Heavy duty liquid detergents work well on washable fabrics if the greasy stain is treated before the garment is washed.

Stains from citrus fruits or soft drinks may be invisible when fresh but tend to yellow on ageing. These stains may be difficult to remove, but if you're persistent you can remove them with bleach. Chlorine bleach will damage fabrics that contain wool, silk, spandex or polyurethane foam. Also, it shouldn't be used on fabrics with a special finish such as permanent press, or on colored fabrics unless the label says they are safe with chlorine bleach.

Powered peroxygen bleaches are milder in action and repeated treatments may remove the stain. If the stain is a stubborn one, and the garment is washable, dampen the stain and sprinkle powdered peroxygen bleach on the stain. Work it into the fabric, and with a spoon or medicine dropper, pour a small amount of hot water on the stain. Rinse well and repeat if necessary.

Washing products which contain enzymes work well on protein type stains such as blood, and food stains such as chocolate, milk, egg and gravy. However, they will not remove all stains.

Before trying to remove the stain, test the effect of the stain removers on an unexposed part of the garment.

If the garment is a good one and you are in doubt about using home methods, take it to a professional dry cleaner. If the dry cleaner knows the type of stain and the kind of fabric, he usually can remove the stain successfully.

Want A Garden, But Lack Land—Try A Minigarden

If you live in an apartment and want to grow your own vegetables this summer, don't let the lack of a proper garden plot stop you—try a minigarden.

A small containerized garden for a window sill, balcony, patio or doorstep can be fun and provide a variety of vegetables for summer meals, says Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

Vegetables well suited to a minigarden includes tomatoes, peppers, radishes, cucumbers, onions, chives and other herbs.

A bucket, box, or pot can be used as planting containers, says Stevens. But a bushel or half-bushel basket is probably best for larger vegetables such as tomatoes and peppers. Small 6-to-10-inch diameter pots will provide sufficient growing space for chives, radishes and herbs.

First, place a layer of gravel or coarse sand in the bottom of the container and make drainage openings in the container bottom.

Then fill your container with a mixture of sand, peat moss and good top soil in equal amounts. Fertilize with one cup of 5-10-10 per bushel of soil mix. If available, add a cup of ground limestone and a half cup of 20 percent superphosphate.

Stevens says additional fertilizer should be applied when the plants are four to five inches tall and every three weeks thereafter. Apply a 5-10-10 fertilizer at the rate of one teaspoon per square foot of soil, mix with the top half inch of soil and water thoroughly.

Proper watering is important to the success of minigardens. During hot, dry weather, plants may need watering three times a week, but too much water can kill the plants. When the soil is dry to a depth of half an inch, provide enough water to saturate this area. Avoid wetting the plant's foliage, however.

Vegetables usually grow best in full sunlight. But some plants can tolerate more shade than others. Place tomatoes, cucumbers and peppers where they will get the most sun. Lettuce, cabbage, beets, radishes and other leafy and root vegetables can stand more shade.

Watch carefully for insect damage, adds Stevens. Just because your vegetables may not be on ground level, doesn't mean insects won't attack them. Usually, hand removal of insects provides adequate control.

4-H'ers To Attend W. Va. Conference

Two Delaware 4-H'ers have been selected to participate in the annual West Virginia Older 4-H Members' Conference, June 29 to July 3.

Vicki Baker 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Baker, Newark, and Jim Harrison, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Harrison, Goldsboro, Md., will represent Delaware during the five-day program at Jackson's Mill, W. Va.

Miss Baker, a member of the Yellowjackets 4-H club, has been active in 4-H work for seven years. She is vice president of the New Castle Junior 4-H Council and was a recent county medal winner in dress review. A member of the Westville 4-H club, Harrison has been active in club work for eight years and is a junior leader and president of the Kent County Junior 4-H Council.

During the conference, the Delaware 4-H'ers will take part in discussion groups, music and recreation leadership training courses and a creative arts workshop. Their experiences at Jackson's Mill will enable them to perform more effectively as junior leaders in the 4-H program and as leaders in community affairs.

KENT COUNTY COMMENTS

by JOSHUA M. TWILLEY
Levy Court President

Last Tuesday the Kent County Levy Court voted unanimously to oppose Governor Peterson's coastal zoning bill. The bill prevents counties from exercising any zoning authority in regards to manufacturing and processing uses along the coastal zone which includes all of the area east of Route #9 in Kent County. This is not just marshlands, but extends over approximately one quarter of Kent County.

Our main reasons for opposing the bill are as follows:

Kent County Devy Court already has sole jurisdiction over zoning in Kent County by statute. We already are in the process of developing a comprehensive land use plan for the county.

All members of the present Levy Court are on record opposing heavy industry in Kent County.

This bill infers that the people of Kent County cannot be relied upon to govern themselves and decide what they want for Kent County.

A zoning board appointed by the governor would not be as close to the people of Kent County as the Levy Court. The Levy Court meets every Tuesday morning and is open to the public. A zoning board would only be responsible to the governor and that is not enough.

What House Bill 300 proposes now might be exactly the opposite with a new governor in 1973 who could very quickly change the zoning board to react as he, the new governor, would so desire. That could be exactly

Vacation-Proof Your House

Getting your house ready for summer vacation is as important as getting suitcases packed.

If you want a house you'll be glad to come back to, don't overlook good house-keeping before you go. Make a list so other members of your family will know what they can do to help, suggests Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Plan to clean kitchen appliances thoroughly or you may find bugs have taken over. Crumbs and spills are an invitation bugs will all-too-willingly accept.

De-crumbs the toaster after your last pre-vacation breakfast. Wash off the refrigerator racks and walls while you dispose of perishables. Clean out the bread box as soon as you get the last sandwich made.

If your oven needs cleaning, do it before you leave. You won't be in any mood to clean it when you get home.

Make that last meal a simple one and, naturally, clean up afterwards. If you really don't have time to wash dishes, use paper plates and plastic knives and forks. But don't leave dirty pots and pans behind either.

Leave the dishwasher lid or door open slightly so air can circulate. Run cold water through the food waste disposer for several minutes after garbage is ground. This will make sure the unit is entirely clean.

List the appliances you want disconnected or turned off, advises Miss Morris. Actually, nothing has to be disconnected except a de-humidifier that doesn't have a drain hose or automatic shut-off.

However, you may prefer to turn off the air conditioner, or, at least, turn the thermostat up.

It's a good idea to shut off the water supply to outdoor faucets, the washing machine and the ice maker in a refrigerator-freezer.

You don't need to pull plugs on electrical appliances, but be sure controls are set at "off" on those which aren't supposed to run.

If you decide to turn off the refrigerator, empty it and clean it thoroughly. Leave the door open slightly to eliminate musty odors.

Give yourself a nice welcome home present—a clean, ready-to-go house.

the opposite of what the present Levy Court wants for Kent County.

The best interest of Kent County and the state of Delaware lies in the present county governments who are, by far, the closest to the people.

We also feel that regulations in regard to the coastal zone would be better handled if they are administered by the county planning office in conjunction with the regional planning and zoning commission, rather than placed over the exclusive control of the state planning office.

The basic problem seems to be that the governor is given very broad powers when it is he that appoints all the members of the proposed state zoning board. Some amount of local control must be assured the respective county governments in planning for these regions that are contained within them. Kent County for one is already developing a comprehensive plan for the county which is very much in tune with the contents of the bill. Yet such a bill would give any governor extensive power to plan for the economic and industrial development of Kent County in any manner he saw fit, even if it did not happen to coincide with local desires.

In representing the people of Kent County, the Levy Court has an obligation to study and consider proposed state legislation affecting the county, and wherever possible make its feelings known to the legislature.

Understanding Modern Forestry

Myths die hard. Sometimes they can do a great deal of harm in the dying process. An official of a major timber company has described how widely-held myths about forests in the United States threaten both efficient conservation and utilization of the nation's major renewable resource.

Among the myths blasted by this timber official is the belief that when a small section of the forest is harvested each year by man instead of nature, it is lost forever. Actually "the harvested, stagnant section of mature timber quickly becomes a green and growing new forest", providing food for wildlife that a dying wilderness denies.

Another myth is that it takes forever to grow a new tree. The timber forestry can now grow two forests in a man's lifetime, while nature without help requires two or three lifetimes. "We already are approaching the 40-year cycle for merchantable timber", he says.

A third popular myth is the notion that old-growth timber has been living almost since time began. This is, perhaps, the most erroneous

Remove Clippings To Improve Lawn

Give your lawn a healthy, well groomed look by removing grass clippings immediately after mowing, reminds Dr. William H. Mitchell extension agronomist at the University of Delaware.

Contrary to popular belief, clippings do not make a lawn green and fertile, he explains. In fact, they may actually harm the grass. Clippings left on the lawn may add to the accumulation of thatch, the dead material around grass roots. This in turn, interferes with air and water movement and encourages disease.

A thick layer of thatch may prevent rain or irrigation water from reaching the soil, says Mitchell. Under these conditions, grass will grow poorly and will probably become brown and unattractive by midsummer.

Clippings may be particularly serious early in the season when grass is making active growth. If the grass is unusually tall before mowing and if clippings are overly thick, they may even smother the grass.

To prevent an over accumulation of thatch, attach a tray or bag to your lawn mower to catch clippings, advises Mitchell. If grass is exceptionally tall and the bag fills rapidly, it may be easier to rake the lawn after mowing.

Use clippings as a mulch in your flower or vegetable garden and around ornamentals, he adds. This will conserve soil moisture and help promote vigorous growth. Spread clippings evenly, taking care not to apply a heavy layer that might prevent water from reaching the soil.

If your lawn has already developed a dense layer of thatch, remove it immediately. In most areas, thatch removal tools may be rented at a nearby hardware or garden center. This implement has vertical cutting blades which move thatch to the surface where it may be raked and removed. Thatch, like clippings, may be used as a mulch.

Thatch removal should be done when grass is growing vigorously, says Mitchell. For bluegrass and fescue lawns, the best time is in the spring or late summer. In bermuda and zoysia, thatch should be removed in early or midsummer.

Veteran's Administration News

Q—I am a Vietnam serviceman hospitalized pending discharge. I recently applied for vocational rehabilitation, and unders and I will be rated for service-connected disabilities by the VA before I am discharged. Will this rating set the one year period that I will have to apply for service disabled veterans' insurance?

A—No. The one year allowed for applying for service-disabled veterans' insurance begins with the date of the first notice of disability rating sent to you by VA after discharge.

Q—Are there any income and credit requirements a veteran must meet in obtaining a VA loan for a mobile home?

A—No. There is no set income requirement. The terms of repayment of the loan, however, must bear a proper relationship to the veteran's or serviceman's present and anticipated income and expenses, and he must be a satisfactory credit risk.

Q—May a veteran who is receiving compensation from the VA arrange to pay a policy loan on his National Service Life Insurance out of this monthly benefit?

A—Yes. It is a most convenient and relatively painless way to accomplish this repayment. VA Form 29-888, Insurance Deduction Authorization, available from any VA office, should be completed and sent to the office which your insurance records.
