Calvary Wesleyan Church To Show Film

"Fast Way Nowhere", a new feature length dramatic film, will be shown at Calvary Wesleyan Church, Harrington at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, June 20.

Filmed in beautiful full color in an upper midwestern setting it takes a bold look into the life and times of today's teens.

Daring to challenge the new accepted conduct, "Fast Way Nowhere," uncovers the teenage world of deceit with stunning truth. From the spinning wheels of motor bikes in a daring, near disastrous race of initiation to tragic death at the hands of party crashers, this most dramatic motion picture tells the story of the short-circuited moality of the lively ones.

This film, with a story that is different, brings forth a straight-forward and powerful Gospel presentation that is sure to cause its viewers to realize the shortness of life.

The Rev. William H. Miller, pastor, extends a cordial invitation to the public to attend.

KENT COUNTY COMMENTS

by JOSHUA M. TWILLEY
Levy Court President

Last week I discussed the reasons why the Levy Court was opposed to Governor Peterson's original coastal zoning bill. Since that time, the Governor has presented a new bill which restored much of the county's authority over coastal zoning and met most of the objections all three counties had voiced. The original bill left the counties helpless in the event the state should approve an industrial use in the coastal zone in violation of county land use planning. In other words, county residents had no voice at all in determining the development of their coast.

The new bill requires any proposed industrial user in the coastal zone to apply through the county and receive approval in the usual way required of any Kent County resident. If the county approves the use, then the proposed industry applies to the state. In other words, the state has an overview of the matter.

The Kent County Levy Court has been on record for many months in favor of protecting our coastal zone and marshlands. We have always been in agreement with the governor on this point. Our opposition to the original coastal zoning bill was misinterpreted by many people. Although we would prefer that Kent County retain all its authority over zoning in the coastal area, we are just as vitally concerned with protecting our coast as the governor.

Therefore, the new bill, in effect, places the county and the state in a joint decision on whether or not to permit heavy industry in the coastal zone. Under the new bill the state cannot approve it if the county disapproves it, and the state can still disapprove it even if the county approves it. The governor's new bill guards both the county's concern to protect our coastal zone, and the general interest of the whole state for an orderly development of the coastal zone.

4-H Public Speaking Winners Named

Clara Walton, 15, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Harold Walton, Seaford, and Edward Gibbs III, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gibbs, Jr., Camden, were first place winners in the State 4-H Public Speaking contest held June 5 at the Capital Grange Hall, Dover.

Also competing in the state event were county public speaking winners Dorothy Trimble, 15, Yorklyn; Ralph Smith, 15, Wilmington; Charmayne Pierson, 16 Clayton; and William Campbell, 15, Laurel.

Young people should not be too pessimistic about the future, said Miss Walton in her speech, "What the Future is to Me." There are many opportunities for young people today that were not available in the past.

"What is the future to me?" asked Miss Walton. "Is it the possibility of a healthier and longer life than my grandmother could expect, and a greater variety of vocational choices and educational opportunities. I look forward in the hope that we can build on the positive things former generations have done."

In his talk, "Conservation, Pollution and You," Gibbs noted that never in man's history has there been so much concern over the growing problems of pollution. But everyone can play an important role in cleaning up our environment.

"No one is too young or too old to understand and help solve pollution problems," he emphasized. "Do not look to others to find out who is responsible in our state. You may have a part in its cause and in its control. Find out what you can do, and then do it!"

Judges for the contest were Gilbert Collins, Middletown, a former state winner in the 4-H public speaking contest, and Garlan Gingerick, State Department of Public Instruction, Dover.

Flowers Need Care For Beautiful Blooms

If you take care of your annual flowers now, you will be rewarded with beautiful blooms throughout the summer, says David V. Tatnall, extension garden specialist at the University of Delaware.

Most annual flowers require extra fertilizer once they become established, he explains. Check the color of the leaves. If they turn light green or yellow, apply a side dressing of a complete fertilizer such as 5-10-10. Use about two pounds of fertilizer per 100 feet of row. Or use a liquid fertilizer about once a month during the growing season.

Tatnall says compact flowering plants are more attractive in the flower bed or border than tall willowy ones. Tall plants may also bend and break during high winds or rain. To obtain a compact plant, pinch off approximately one inch of the main stem when the plant is five or six inches tall. Several side branches will then develop and these should be pinched back when about four inches long.

This practice will produce bushy plants with numerous flowers. Pinching back is particularly useful for the taller growing varieties of aster, larkspur, marigold, snapdragon and zinnia. However, most dwarf varieties do not need pinching.

If you prefer fewer blooms but larger ones, pinch the plants only once and allow not more than four stems to develop on each plant. As the stems grow, remove the side buds which develop where the leaves are attached to the stems. This will enable the top flower to develop into a large bloom with a long straight stem.

Disbudding is a common and easy method of producing excellent blooms for a flower show exhibit. Tatnall adds, inspect the plants every few days and remove the side buds as soon as they are half an inch long. They can be removed easily if pulled sideways on the stem.

Large flowers may require extra support to protect them from strong winds. Tie them with soft twine to a stake when the stems start to bend.

Tatnall says flowers need adequate moisture to promote vigorous growth. During dry periods, apply water slowly so it can soak into the soil to a depth of at least five inches. A light sprinkling will give only temporary relief, and may do more harm than good. Mulching is also advised to help conserve moisture.

As old flowers become faded and start to die remove them immediately. This will improve the appearance of the garden and promote continuous blooming.

Milk-The Refresher

Milk is the better refresher for hot day doldrums.

Take your choice; a frosty cold glass of white milk—skim milk—chocolate milk—buttermilk—or a milk shake.

The taste is delightful, and the nutrition? Well, you've undoubtedly heard all your life that "milk is good for you." It's still true, says Miss Marguerite Krackhardt, extension nutrition and foods specialist at the University of Delaware.

Milk is the main food source of calcium; in fact, you probably can't get enough if you don't drink milk or use it in cooking. Two cups of whole milk also supplies about 25 to 30 percent in the protein you need every day.

But that's not all. Milk is rich in riboflavin, a necessary B vitamin that helps keep skin healthy and vision clear. If you have a teenager worried about skin problems, emphasize this advantage in milk.

Of course, milk has other nutrients too. Two cups of whole milk, the daily amount recommended for adults, supplies about 14 percent of the daily Vitamin A requirement. Fortified skim milk would provide about one-third the daily need.

Milk comes to you fresh; for milk at its best, keep it cold, clean, covered and dark. Flavor, odor and nutrition change easily; protect them so milk will be top quality when you family drinks it, advises Miss Krackhardt.

If the temperature goes above 50-degrees or below 32-degrees, milk will not stay fresh as long and other off-flavors may develop. Be sure to put the milk back in the refrigerator as soon as you finish using it when you're preparing meals. Don't let the milk warm up on the kitchen table.

Keep milk containers—whether in a carton, bottle or pitcher—closed when they are stored in the refrigerator; milk absorbs odors readily and loses freshness if uncovered.

Put freshest milk in the back of the refrigerator so the oldest milk is used first and for top quality, plan to use milk within three or four days. Finish using a bottle of milk before starting a fresh one, and don't mix fresh milk with some you've had several days.

Miss Krackhardt doesn't recommend storing milk in the home freezer. A flaky protein deposit will show up on the sides of the container and fat separation will make it hard to get a smooth mixture after the milk thaws. While the nutritional value of the milk is not changed, the appearance may not appeal to your family.

For a delightful drink every time, just serve milk that you've kept clean, cold, covered and dark.
