Schaeffer, Wilmington, grand guardian; Walter Janowski, grand instructor.

American Legion Auxiliary News

The C.K.R.T. American Legion Auxiliary met at the Post Home Nov. 16 with Mrs. Cyde Tucker presiding. Business of the evening included reports by Mrs. Tucker on the national president's official visit to the State of Delaware and Mrs. Dale Roth's attendance at the Middle Atlantic Area Youth and Americanism Conference held in Philadelphia. Both reports were of interest to the members.

Mrs. William Outten had this week arranged a Thanksgiving basket to be given to a family in the Harrington area. A donation of money will be made to the Lions Club Christmas basket fund to help that organization with their program of gifts at Christmas.

The juniors, under the leadership of Miss Susan Brown and Mrs. Bud Camper will be planning several activities at Christmas time. A party for a group of children and a carol sing and visit to a nursing home are being set up.

A total of 6 gift packages for overseas servicemen was reported by Mrs. Outten. These packages, a gift from the unit, contain items that are useful and welcomed by the men and women in the service.

The Christmas gift shops at the veteran's hospitals at Brack-Ex, Perry Point and the Bissell Sanatorium, Bacon Health Center and Farnhurst will be held during the first two weeks of December. Gifts are supplied for the veterans in these hospitals to send to the members of their families. This is a combined effort of all the auxiliary unit in the state, with each group supplying a variety of gifts for the shops. C.K.R.T. will be responsible for 100 gifts of all kinds for the shop.

Finding A Livable Home

The model home's a beauty, luxurious furniture, colorful appliances, beautiful carpeting. You fall in love with it, move it — and then sadly discover — all the beauty was only skin deep.

The true beauty of a house is not its furniture or carpeting — you can change them. What makes a house beautiful to live in are such prosaic things as "traffic patterns," "work triangles," and "room relationships," according to Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Check these when you're buying, renting, building or remodeling a home even though your eyes are dazzled by lovely furniture and accessories.

It's aggravating when everyone must pass through the middle of the living room whenever they want to go from kitchen to bedrooms. It's maddening when the kids trail dirt throughout the house on their way to wash up for supper. And it's unsafe and unsanitary to have people walking directly through the area where food is prepared. But these things happen in many houses — those with poor traffic patterns.

Trafficways that connect one part of the house with another are sometimes confined to halls or stairs. If, however, these paths must go through rooms, the normal activities should not be disturbed by people passing through. The most direct route or passageway through a room should channel traffic along one edge or across a corner.

Every house has activity areas — places where the family works, lives and sleeps. But some houses can have more satisfactory areas than others, Miss Morris stresses. Does the noisy kitchen or laundry area of a house interfere with living room company? Does living room company interfere with children trying to sleep in nearby bedrooms?

The relationship between rooms is important, too. How do you get the food from the kitchen to the dining area — or outside for a picnic? How close to the bathroom to the bedrooms? How private is it from the rest of the house?

You spend much of your time in the kitchen, so it should be convenient and well-planned. This is where the work triangle comes in. Measure an imaginary triangle, using the distance between the center front of your sink, range and refrigerator. The sum of the three sides of the triangle should be between 16 and 26 feet for greatest step saving.

A house that's fun to live in — and truly beautiful — will have good traffic patterns and room relationships as well as attractive furniture. Even if they are prosaic.

Harriers Relayed 11 1/2 Miles Before Saturday's Parade

Twenty well-conditioned youngsters, all but one from W. T. Chipman School, had an interesting run-for-fun on Saturday. The starting point was the Woodside-Rising Sun road and Route 13, within sight of the Vo-Tech School. The distance to be covered was 11 1/2 miles, including the route for Saturday's parade in Harrington.

Rudy Bordley, a lanky, 15-year-old from Felton, the lone high school runner, covered the first quarter mile, then passed off the baton to the second runner. The other 18 lads were spaced at one-quarter mile intervals, along the wide, grassy strip which separates the north and south-bound lanes. As each of these athletes finished his stint, he was picked up and transported five miles down the road, to the location of his next effort.

The runners moved so swiftly, that a car and a 10-passenger, station wagon were kept busy. Motorists tooted and waved at the harriers. Slightly less than one hour after Bordley scorched the first 440 yards, nine-year-old Mark Miller carried the baton on the anchor leg from Taylor's Hardware to the judges stand, at Quillen's Shopping Center. Each boy ran at least three times, some of the older ones had four efforts. The boys were from nine to fifteen years old.

Injury Cost Bowers All-Loop Spot

Lake Forest's Vernon Bowers, a great, 14-year-old long distance prospect, was the fifth best cross-country runner in the Henlopen Conference, but an injury kept the Spartan freshman off the All-Henlopen Conference team.

Bowers ran in the loop title meet against the advice of his doctor and posted a very good clocking of thirteen minutes, fifteen seconds for 2.4 miles. A month earlier, he had placed second in 12:58, in the Lake Forest Invitational over the same layout. If healthy, he could have been in the neighborhood of 12:45. This would have put him in fifth place, at least. Vernon had beaten every Henlopen runner this campaign except Seaford's Phil Shuler, Dover Air's Bob Baca, Dover's Rich Carney and Smyrna's Larry Ford. But for his leg ailment, Bowers could have joined the above quarter on the All-Henlopen team, as the only freshman to win that honor.

Dover's Air's Falcons, easily won the team title, under the tutelage of Coach Charles Bell, a Felton resident.

Delaware Sports Club To Hold Winter Cross-Country Races

The Delaware Sports Club is sponsoring its fifth annual winter program of cross-country races. This series of races is restricted to Delaware Sports Club members only. There will be a series of five cross-country races on the program.

- 1st race, 1:30 — Rockford Park, Sunday, Nov. 21
- 2nd race, 1:30 — Killen's State Park — Sunday, Nov. 28
- 3rd race, 1:30 — Poly Drummond — Sunday, Nov. 5
- 4th race, 1:30 — Dover, Sunday, Dec. 12
- 5th race — 1:30, Banning Park, Sunday, Dec. 19

Each race will be from four to five miles long. There will be trophies given at the end of this series of races to three divisions - (1) Trophies to the top five high school finishers (2) Trophies to the top four non-high school finishers and (3) Trophies to the top three Masters division finishers. Winners of the trophies will be determined by a point system based on the place of finish in the best four out of five races. The scoring system will be like that in a cross-country meet, i.e., the person with the lowest total of points wins.

- 1. There will be no entry fees or entry forms - simply show up at the starting line.

2. Delaware Sports Club membership is required in order to be able to run.

Greenwood

by Pat Hatfield

Don't forget the 192nd anniversary and home coming service at St. Johnstown United Methodist Church in Greenwood, Nov. 28 at 2:30 p.m. The Rev. Edwin E. Thomas Jr., pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church will be the guest speaker.

Join with your friends in singing "O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing" in the old Methodist Hymnal published in 1849. There will be guest soloists. The Hand Bell Choir of Milford Presbyterian Church will ring a hymn prelude at the first of the service which begins at 2:30.

The Greenwood Wesleyan Church invites you one and all to its annual Thanksgiving morning service from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

They also invite you to their revival services from Nov. 25-28. The guest evangelists are the Rev. and Mrs. Floyd Banker. Rev. Banker spent 35 years in India. He plays Hawaiian guitar and the autoharp. They sing together and nightly before the evangelistic service, will show slides of mission fields. Services are 7:30, Sunday School at 10 a.m., preaching at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

The Greenwood Kiwanis Club meeting on Thursday evening drew a disappointment in the last-minute cancellation of the two guest speakers that were to be present. What was not a disappointment was the turkey dinner with all the trimmings prepared and served by the ladies of the Tressler Menonite Church.

Visiting Kiwanians from the Easton Club were Herman Millkie, Earl Foley, Dave Bent and Lon Sands.

President Charles Elliott will head an inter-club group visiting the Milford Club Tuesday, Nov. 23. Others going are Ebe Reynolds, Sr., Lawrence Meredith, Nelson Meredith and Clarence Ocheltree.

There will not be a dinner meeting this Thursday, but a round table from 6 to 6:30. Next meeting, Dec. 2 will be director's meeting night.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Meredith Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Meredith were recent Sunday dinner guests of Mrs. Minerva Wheatley at Seaford.

The Lawrence Merediths will be Thanksgiving dinner guests of her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hodge of Dover.

Mrs. Ellen Keith has returned home after participating in the Mill Creek Antique Show. Todd's Home Economics Extension Club met Wednesday, Nov. 17, at the home of Mrs. Emory Williamson. Eight members were present with two guests, Mrs. Mary Meredith and Mrs. Dorothy Webb.

Mrs. Williamson demonstrated making Martha Washington candy and this was followed by an exchange of Christmas gift ideas.

The next meeting will be Dec. 5 at 1 p.m., which will be a covered dish and gift exchange with Mrs. Ida Wooters as hostess.

U. Of M. Developing Oyster Shucking Machine

Engineers at the University of Maryland are developing a three - component oyster shucking machine.

The mechanical shucker is designed to do the work now by a dwindling force of human shuckers. By itself, any component could simplify the process enough to allow less skilled labor to be employed where skilled shuckers are scarce.

Dr. Fred W. Wheaton, a research associate at the College Park campus, showed slides of his experimental machine at the Delmarva Advisory Council's Seaford committee meeting Nov. 17.

The first component of the machine is a conveyor belt which transports the oyster under infrared burners. The oyster's bill is cooled under a water spray while the adductor muscle, which attaches the oyster to its shell, is loosened on one side by the heat.

The second component trims the end of the shell to expose the hinge which is then forced onto a conical pin and broken. During this operation, the loosened adductor muscle is completely severed and half the shell is ejected.

The oyster is then turned over and onto a second motorized chain conveyor belt. The meat dangles and the shell is exposed to another set of infrared burners. When the other half of the muscle detaches, the meat falls out.

When completed, the machine will turn out perfectly raw, undamaged oysters. Wheaton's project is being funded in equal shares by the Fish and Wildlife Administration, Maryland Department of Natural Resources and the National Marine Fisheries Service, U.S. Department of Commerce.

Peach Blossom 4-H News

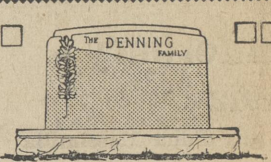

Linda Newnom

The Peach Blossom 4-H meeting came to order at 7:30 p.m. Wed., Nov. 17. Devotions were led by Judy Back, Linda and Laura Newnom. Terry Bowman read a poem in memory of Mike Collison. Mark Belcher played taps. Rochelle Messick and Kathy Hopkins led the group in a song.

Mr. Mesibov gave a talk on "what it means to win the silver cup." He also gave out year pins.

Dave Mesibov gave a demonstration on "Soil Testing."

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

— THANKSGIVING —

We are thankful we have not lost our capacity for Thanksgiving.
 We are thankful for the abundance of everything we have in America.
 We are thankful for the friends like you whom we have tried our best to serve.
 And above all, we are thankful to our God for his many wonderful blessings.
 Yes, we are thankful for Thanksgiving.

I'm just another millionaire . . .
 With a mansion on a hill . . .
 I like things just the way they are,
 And I guess I always will.

For I receive a million blessings,
 I'm as rich as I can be,
 And I always say when I kneel to pray:
 "God, you've been good to me."

Canterbury - Viola

by Edna Massimilla

While visiting with Rev. John, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Pardee of Viola, Willard told us he will celebrate his first birthday Nov. 23. First is correct, as he is starting his second century, being 101 on that date. We could feel the warmth and love that is present in their home. Mary, who was 91 on Oct. 10, has a wonderful hobby of making patchwork quilts, and she has her work table in the living room with all kinds of colorful cotton squares. The quilts are hand-sewn and it takes about a month to complete one. It was interesting hearing about his years of hauling grain and other products, via his own sailing vessel called "The Alice Barnes." He was the lighthouse keeper at Fenwick Island in 1909. Then later they had the general store in Viola where his wife became postmistress in 1939. For fifteen years the store was part of their lives. Mr. Pardee also had boats at Bowers Beach and ran fishing parties.

 The Pardees have lived in their present house since 1914. When asked if there is anything particular that he enjoys, he said he used to like to watch TV but now his pleasure is eating. And, what is his favorite menu? Willard's reply is "I like almost everything. Can't complain at all." Aside from a bit of rheumatism in his left hand and some hearing difficulty, Mr. Pardee seems bright and cheerful. He doesn't smoke, and he gave up chewing years ago.

They have one daughter, Mrs. Helen Ely of Clayton. Their grandchildren are Earle Ely, Jr., of Clayton and Mrs. Carl Conley of Clayton. They have four great-grandchildren, Linda Elaine, Kimberly and Barbara, and two great-great-grandchildren and William. On January 16 Mr. and Mrs. Willard Par-

The first half-century's progress in the state school system was celebrated Thursday, November 18, as former and current members of the State Board of Education met with members of the 1921 staff of the Department of Public Instruction and current DPI officers including (first row, left to right) Mrs. Nellie B. Mousley, 1921 visiting teacher; Harvey E. Stahl, 1921 director of research; Wilbur H. Jump, 1921 assistant state superintendent; (2d row, l. to r.) Algot B. Anderson, 1921 supervisor of trades and industries; Mrs. Searles Grossman, current board; Dr. Kenneth C. Madden, state superintendent; Richard M. Farmer, current board; (3d row) Mrs. Edgar W. Buchanan, 1955-57 Board president; Charles C. Brown and Joseph J. Crowley, current Board; Mrs. Joseph W. Ennis, 1959-65 Board; (4th row) J. Ohrum Small, 1953-55 and 1961-65 Board president; Robert H. Dear Sir:
 Just a few lines to let you know how much I enjoyed your Christmas parade. My husband and I were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wilson R. Poore of Harrington. The bands, floats and everything was just wonderful. I would like to also take this opportunity to wish everyone a Merry Christmas. Incidentally Harrington is Mr. Sharp's home town.

I remain Mrs. Lewis F. Sharp Sr.

KENT COUNTY COMMENTS

by JOSHUA M. TWILLEY
Levy Court President

The Kent County Levy Court has been considering ways to improve air transportation for the county. Joint use of the Dover Air Base is the least costly to construct and has the best possibility of making ends meet.

It is the least costly because we do not have to build a runway or any other airport facilities. A small building and taxi-way are all that are needed. There is even a public road in existence at the proposed site. Because the air base already has the personnel and equipment, we would have a very nominal cost in maintaining our small facility at the airport.

There is no comparison between the New Castle Airport and what we would construct. Even the Georgetown Airport will be two to three times as costly as what we could do with joint use.

The construction cost to the county would be approximately $100,000. The annual operation costs would be nominal, and the income could easily recover the total construction investment in five years.

A recent letter to the Delaware State News asked some important questions which I will try to answer.

The first question was, "wouldn't the airport have to close down in the event of national emergency?"

The answer is yes it would. But such a national emergency is a declaration of war and all airports would be immediately incorporated in the national defense when only the defense industry would be entitled to air transportation anyway.

The second question was, "Isn't it dangerous for small planes to be near a C5A?"

The answer is yes. Small planes would not be permitted on the air base. Small plane facilities already exist in Kent County.

The third question was whether the traffic conditions make the base inaccessible?

The answer is that the Dover base is the most accessible airport in Kent County. No other location for an airport could be constructed this accessible because it would have to be farther away from people.

The next question was, "If Wilmington cannot support a major airline service, how can Dover?"

The answer is that Dover probably cannot support a major airline service. There is a successful commuter service from Salisbury Airport to Baltimore with nine flights each day. The Wilmington airport is forty miles closer to Philadelphia than we are. Too close for a commuter service, and too close to the major airline services out of Philadelphia to justify an extensive major service. Don't forget that the Wilmington airport is totally maintained by the county. That is, they maintain the runway, lights, control tower, multi-million dollar equipment and have other overhead one thousand times more expensive than we would have.

The industrial airplanes of General Foods, ICL and Standard Brands can take off and land at the air base. They cannot even stay there an hour. With our facility, they could park in Dover, get their there and maintain minor service facilities. This would be a great attraction to other industries which might locate in Dover. Because of the low cost of our facility, we could offer this service at a very competitive price.

The final reason for joint use is safety. No matter what the weather conditions, or the airplane malfunction, any airplane landing at the Dover Air Base would have the very best of runway radio navigation, fire fighting equipment, ambulance and hospital facilities and the other things that can make the difference between life and death.

Catfish - A New Crop For Delaware Farmers

Delaware's newest crop needs lots of water. It takes water to grow catfish — plus quite a bit of know-how.

But grain-fed channel cats can be a profitable crop with a ready-made market, according to Kenneth Lomax, assistant professor of agricultural engineering at the University of Delaware.

His small-scale retail test showed that an enthusiastic market does exist. Consumers wrote him, "It's better than cut, mild no fishy taste." As one old-timer put it, "This fish compares to channel cats I caught off Bowers Beach in the 1930's."

The test catfish sold for $1 a pound. Lomax says this price would allow for a profit of four to six cents per pound for the farmer — slightly more if he cleans and dresses the fish himself.

Farmers who already have a pond can grow catfish in a cage in the pond either for sport or as a source of a little extra income, he says. Before putting in a pond, however, check the soil type.

However, tank-raising offers several advantages to growers who want a more substantial profit.

Catfish can grow all year round in tanks because temperatures can be controlled. Lower pond temperatures during Delaware winters don't kill the fish; they merely stop growing or lose weight. In a tank, it takes 10 months for a catfish to grow to eating size from a fingerling — 12 months from eggs.

A search for inexpensive temperature control methods led Lomax to his work with "catfish under glass." He put a plastic greenhouse structure over the tanks. Two layers of plastic are inflated over steel ribs; similar greenhouses are used for growing plants. "This keeps the fish cooler in summer and warm enough in winter."

An adequate oxygen supply is a vital factor in tank fish farms, although it's rarely critical in ponds unless they're too heavily stocked. In Lomax's research, an electric pump cycles water through a filter and bubbles it back into the tank. The bubbling supplies oxygen.

A standby generator and an alarm system that signals electric breakdowns are needed. Tanks should be without pumps for no more than two hours.

Lomax has designed an ingenious filter system that removes waste products so efficiently that tank water doesn't need to be changed at all during the 10 months the fish are growing. The small filter tank sits above the large growing tanks.

Three layers of gravel in filter act as a mechanical sieve to remove uneaten food and other solid wastes.

Bacteria on the gravel break down the liquid fish wastes to the point where they can be used by plants. For instance, Lomax has duckweed and watersprite, two water plants, growing in the filter tanks. Watersprite could even be sold as an aquarium plant and duckweed might be dried and used as fish food.

"That's really recycling," Lomax laughs. "From fish to plant to fish food."

His tanks are concrete, set in the ground and hold 4,000 gallons of water each. However, for farm systems he recommends wooden tanks holding 1,000 gallons each. Each tank, with the necessary pump and filter, would cost approximately $200. About one fish per gallon could be stocked.

One man could care for as many as 52 tanks by himself even without a fully automated system. And, 52 tanks could produce 1,000 pounds of catfish each week — year round.

Southern growers have had a problem making acceptable profits because they all tend to harvest between September and November. Then, the market is overloaded and prices are low. Tank systems can avoid this problem.

Disease can be a problem, Lomax admits. And, disease can sweep very quickly through heavily-stocked tanks or ponds. Some chemical controls are now approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

However, the biggest problem for interested Delaware catfish farmers will simply be getting ponds or tanks stocked economically. Catfish eggs can be shipped by air from Louisiana; fingerlings are only available from the Midwest or South. Lomax predicts both may be more easily available within two to three years. Then production may rise.

Veteran's Administration News

Q - Some years ago, VA denied my claim for a disability pension and now I am becoming progressively worse. What can I do to have my claim re-considered?

A - Submit to the VA office which studied your claim, or the one nearest you if you have moved, a statement from your doctor as to the current status of your disability.

Q - Two years ago, I was studying under the G.I. Bill, but dropped out at the end of the semester. I now plan to enroll in the same school and program. How can I start my education benefits again?

A - Notify the school to submit a re-enrollment certification to VA. This will start your benefits again, provided the school and program are currently approved, and you have not exhausted your entitlement.

Are widows of World War II veterans who died of active duty or from service-connected disabilities still eligible for G.I. home loans?

A - Yes. A recent law revived unused, expired, entitlement for unmarried widows of WW II veterans as well as for veterans themselves.

Local Broiler Industry Hurt But Fighting Back

Delmarva broilermen are facing stiff competition from other areas — nationwide overproduction and depressed prices — but they're not throwing in the towel. This observation was made by W. T. McAllister, assistant director of the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Delaware.

Speaking to a combined service club audience in Georgetown recently, he commented on the announced cutback in broiler production by two of the area's major processors, and the importance of the poultry business to the area.

According to McAllister, about two-thirds of Delaware's farm income is tied to broilers — this includes the chickens and the corn and soybeans needed to feed them. In Sussex County, farm income from broilers, corn and soybeans amounts to about four-fifths of a $108 million total.

He said that's why "It isn't any wonder that when we read headlines that suggest the local broiler industry is having financial trouble the merchants, doctors, lawyers, preachers and politicians get about as excited as the grower with an empty house and no contract in sight."

Looking behind the headlines the economist said there is ample reason for concern about the future of the broiler industry in the area. He said there are strong economic reasons for some of the major producers to shut down or shift their operations to the south:

Broiler firms have experienced a year or more of bad prices with little hope of rapid recovery.

Union contracts signed recently increased local labor costs 10-15 percent.

It costs about 1.2 cents more per pound dressed weight to produce and market broilers in Delaware than in Alabama or Georgia.

McAllister said that after considering these facts, at least two companies, Wilson-Laurel Farms and Ralston Purina, decided to pull out.

But while some are abandoning Delmarva, other producers are strengthening their operations. He offered these evidences:

Perdue Foods and Bayshore Foods recently opened modern processing plants on the Peninsula.

The Eskay plant that closed last summer is being readied for operation by a new owner in January 1972.

Possibilities exist for the the Ralston Purina and Wilson-Laurel Farms plants to be taken over by other processors.

The economist said the broiler industry goes through a period of low prices and heavy losses every 3-4 years. In the past, these cycles have forced adjustments, usually for the good of the industry, and have been part of the economic evolution that has caused many smaller independent feed companies and processors to merge with national firms, he noted. "To some of us, it was sad to see the independent firms that built our great broiler industry lose their autonomy and become part of a bigger company." But as a result of these changes, broilers continued to be a major contributor to the area's agricultural economy.

If the broiler industry is to fight back again, it will require dedicated people who believe the industry is needed on the Peninsula and who are willing to work hard to keep it competitive, according to McAllister.

Even though Delmarva can no longer claim to be the largest broiler producing area with the greatest economic advantage, McAllister said he is hopeful broilermen will find ways to capitalize on Delmarva's nearness to one-fifth of the nation's population and its experience, history and leadership in broiler production to further improve efficiency and reduce production costs.

4-H Team Competes In Horse Judging Contests

The Delaware state 4-H horse judging team has participated in recent judging contests at national and regional levels.

The four-member team competed at the National Quarterhorse Congress in Columbus, Ohio, October 28, and the Northeast Regional 4-H Horse Judging Contest, November 6 at Harrisburg, Pa.

This year's Delaware 4-H horse judging team included Mary Crisco, 19, Bridgeville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Crisco; Sue Kelley, 16, daughter of Mrs. Florence Kelley, Dover; Giner Keeler, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Keeler, Smyrna; and Theresa Shahan, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Shahan, Dover.

To qualify for the horse judging competition, each member had to carry a horse project in her 4-H work and never have participated in the national and regional contests previously as part of the official team. During the contests each member judged halter and performance classes for both a team and individual score.

FRANCIS WEBB
KENT COUNTY AGENT

With farmers continually being pressured by the cost price differential, they are constantly looking for new ways to better utilize labor and services. Many farmers are adapted to applying all of their fertilizer in the early spring either through plow-down, banding in the planter, or both.

With further research on fertilizer solubility and movement in the soil, soil scientists are now encouraging farmers to consider spreading required amounts of phosphorus and potash in late fall and throughout the winter. This practice would be better suited for maximum labor use as well as getting better service and price from your fertilizer dealer.

In our silt loam and sandy loam soils here in Kent County, fertilizer leaching would be nominal using this practice. There is a possibility of losing a small portion of your potash if applied in early fall, but little or no chance of this with the phosphorus applied.

Naturally, at times changed and new developments and techniques are developed, all farmers should seriously consider their potentials and their farming operation. I am sure some of you are troubled each year getting your fertilizer spread in the spring before everyone else wants the same service. By applying some of your plant nutrients in the winter, you may be able to utilize hired labor, or even your own, more efficiently.

This practice is certainly not encouraged on nitrogen application for crop production. Nitrogen is highly soluble and will leach readily from your soil. Nitrogen should be applied close to planting, at planting, or shortly thereafter.

If any farmer would like to try this different timing for fertilizer application or would like to have more information on fertilizers, your county extension office of the University of Delaware would be glad to work with you. The phone number for Kent County is 736-1448.

The Kent Soil and Water Conservation District is holding its annual cooperators' dinner Tuesday, Nov. 30 at the Felton Fire Hall. There will be a fried oyster dinner at 7 p.m., followed with a program on the new Kent County soil survey maps.

The survey maps are now ready for distribution, but to give you a complete background on the history of soil surveys, how soil surveys are made, and the most important, interpretation and uses of the Kent County maps, we have designed a program featuring Leo Cotnoir, soil specialist, University of Delaware and Robert Shields, soil scientist, soil conservation service.

All landowners should certainly be interested in this program for a better understanding of their soils and their potential for agricultural, residential, or industrial development.

Everyone is invited to attend the annual cooperators' dinner and I would certainly like to see you there. The tickets can be obtained from any of the district supervisors (Isaac Thomas, Charles Blendt, Merritt Camper, H. Parker Fifer, or William Paskey), the district office, Soil Conservation Service, or the county agent's office.

The Kent County research committee has been active the last few months in developing new services for individuals, as well as for communities. This committee, made up of USDA, state and county agencies, as well as some private individuals, has initiated a tree planting service for reforestation purposes.

As we all realize, trees are very useful for their esthetic value as well as for use as a cash crop. Tree planting should certainly be encouraged throughout the state in order to maintain open space as well as supplementing what it can in the forest needs for other products.

Help that is needed to plant large areas in trees has been one of the major drawbacks in moving ahead in tree planting in this state. Through the efforts of the resource committee, with direct appreciation going to Walter Gable, county forest management supervisor, State Department of Agriculture, and the late Fred Myer, this program is a reality. Anyone interested in obtaining trees for reforestation a section of their property should apply for seedlings from the State Nursery at the Department of Agriculture, Dover. You may also apply for cost sharing through your County ASCS Office under the REAP, Practice A-7, if desired.

Once trees are obtained and you would like the service of having them planted, contact George Matthews, Sussex Voc-Tech Center, Georgetown, or Willis Kirk, Laurel High School.

Your Kent County Resource development committee is proud of their accomplishments and will certainly pursue new services for communities and encourage better utilization of our natural resources.

4-H Club Talk

with Marion MacDonald

Kent County 4-H leaders attended a recent leader training program organized by our state 4-H leader, James Baker, University of Delaware cooperative extension service. Co-sponsoring this event with the university were the Delaware Bankers Association and the Delmarva Power and Light Company. Speakers were R. O. Monosmith, consultant, 4-H Foundation and Rudy Prudden, program leader, USDA.

Attending from Kent County were Mrs. Mary Thomas, Barbara Roos, Lola Gibbs, Doris Waldbusser, Ethel Duke, Mollie Cahall, Johanna Masten, Grace Tinley, Delores Dion, Pauline and Clifton Hufnal, Ruth Ann Messick, Freda Mesibov, Edna Mae Gallo, Paul Garey, Jean Donovan, Mrs. Harold Carlisle and Bea Gooden.

Nov. 29 will find Kent County 4-Hers at the Capitol Skating Arena for one of their county-wide recreation programs. 4-Hers and their friends will skate from 7:30 to 10:00 p.m.

Our county public speaking contest seems weeks away as it won't be held until January. However, 4-Hers should be selecting their topic and researching for their material. This event is divided in three age divisions, so all 4-Hers may participate. It's another educational part of 4-H, providing members the opportunity to experience the preparation and presentation of a talk before an audience. More than 60 county 4-Hers participated.

It Seems To Me

by Janet Reed

If you're setting up your date book for 1972, mark January 12 and 13 on your calendar. These are the days for the spring sewing spree at the student center on the University of Delaware campus.

The event is sponsored by the Home Economics division of the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Delaware and is open to everyone at no charge.

Fifteen companies making supplies for the home sewing market will present demonstrations, exhibits and instructions for a variety of sewing projects.

Demonstrations will be presented every 45 minutes on Wednesday, January 12 from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 13, the demonstrations will be repeated between 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. Exhibits will also be open during these hours for a closer look and more personalized information. Participants may come and go as their schedules allow, or stay for all sessions.

Demonstrations will include home furnishing ideas using Conso trims; sewing on modern fabric by Coats and Clark representatives; decorating clothing and household articles by Bondex; sewing on banlon fashion fabrics; sewing your own lingerie, Armo Co.

Additional topics are the luxury and elegance of qiana today; spring fashions and fabrics and sewing techniques, Pellon Corp; sewing modern fabrics, Singer Co.; fashion in sewing — sewing in fashion by Talon Co., sewing on leather, vinyl and fake fur by Unique Zipper

Co., clothing for handicapped and use of touch grip fasteners by Velcro; how to fit pants by Vogue Butterick. In addition, sewing teachers from home economics extension classes will demonstrate making men's sport jackets, and making men's ties.

So — save the dates of January 12-13 and plan for a refresher to bring you up to date on new ideas and techniques.

Mrs. Barbara DeMesse, home economist for New Castle County, worked in the commercial fashion field before joining our staff and contacted many sources to participate in this event.

Safer Toys For Christmas

'Tis the season to buy toys — but will all these toys in Santa's pack be safe? Last year the answer had to be "probably not;" this year it's "maybe."

There is some progress in insuring safe toys for your children. The Toy Safety Act, passed two years ago, is finally being enforced by the Food and Drug Administration.

"Notwithstanding, not all toys on the market this year are safe," says Miss Mary Ann Finch, extension family life specialist at the University of Delaware. As of Mid-September, 150 toys had been banned by the FDA as being unsafe, and two or three more are added to the list each week.

The FDA list of banned toys includes certain rattles, dolls or stuffed toys and lawn darts. Other toys with parts that could puncture or cut, be swallowed or inhaled were also declared unsafe. In most cases, once the manufacturer was notified, according to FDA, production, or the toys were redesigned.

In addition to the bans, the FDA has set up a national surveillance system to obtain daily reports from hospital emergency rooms. These reports can be very helpful in identifying dangerous toys, since an estimated 700,000 youngsters are injured by their playthings each year.

Under the provisions of the Toy Safety Act, the FDA is given the power to set standards for toy safety. Most of the standards are still in the future, but a guide for paper caps for cap guns was issued last summer. This is a result of hearings by the National Commission on Product Safety which established that certain caps produced noises loud enough to damage hearing. The regulation forced two major U.S. manufacturers to make quieter caps.

FDA is developing regulations to ensure the safety of clacker balls, baby walkers, paint on toys and pacifiers. FDA's Bureau of Product Safety has set up a Toy Review Committee which has examined about 600 toys for mechanical hazards. Flammability and chemical hazards of toys are continually tested in the agencies' laboratories.

Heat-producing and electrical toys have come under fire from some sources as being unsafe, and one set of proposed standards will apply to them. Maximum allowable temperatures will be set for various surfaces, such as the inside and outside of toy ovens. Ovens would also be required to have automatic locking devices.

Electric cords will be required to withstand a pull of 40 pounds without loosening internal connections and causing short circuiting and possible shocks.

Of course, a toy that is safe for a 12-year-old may be very dangerous for a toddler. The FDA plans to require all toys be labeled; certain potentially hazardous toys would be clearly marked as unsuitable for small children.

But even if the standards were approved tomorrow, they wouldn't affect this season's toys much. And even when standards exist, you'll still need to shop with safety in mind. The safety of a toy depends a great deal on how it will be used, so know the age and abilities of the child.

It's a good idea to save cash register receipts, too, advises Miss Finch. Under the Toy Safety Act, if a toy is declared to be unsafe, you can be reimbursed for the purchase price and the costs of returning it. You may need proof of purchase.

Miss Finch also suggests that you write the FDA right now if you are in flavor of action to ensure toy safety. Any experiences with unsafe toys should be described, with the toy and manufacturer named.

She has a fact sheet describing safety factors in toys. You can get a copy by writing to the Agricultural Editor's Office, 139 Agriculture Hall, University, Newark, 19711. Miss Finch also says

Non-Farm Jobs Stressed At Ag College Careers Day

Career opportunities in agriculture include much more than food production, according to University of Delaware president Dr. E. A. Trabant. Speaking to approximately 300 high school students, parents and teachers attending the college of agricultural sciences careers day recently, he emphasized the many employment possibilities outside of productive agriculture. "We must face the reality that agriculture is no longer a synonym for farming." Only a small share of the agricultural college students come from farms, he said — only 14 percent of the freshman class. Placement records show even fewer return to farming.

Trabant said more people are involved in food transportation, distribution and marketing than are involved in food production. There is a growing demand for trained agriculturalists in environmental protection and utilization of natural resources. "Soil must be saved; crops must be abundant; timber must be preserved and wisely utilized."

The university president praised the college of agricultural sciences for its flexible curriculum and advisement system that permits a student to prepare for a specific career objective. He also praised the system of joint appointments for faculty within the college involving teaching, research and extension. He said, "Not only are they developing new knowledge, they are also conducting informal educational programs and consulting with agribusinessmen in the field." This enables them to bring the latest in both basic and applied research to the classroom, according to Trabant.

SCLB Costly - Plan To Control It In '72

Southern corn leaf blight (SCLB) had little effect on most of the nation's corn this year. But on the Delmarva Peninsula, SCLB was severe and corn losses were high, according to Dr. Robert B. Carroll, University of Delaware extension plant pathologist.

Conditions for the rapid spread of this disease were ideal, explains Carroll. "There were large plantings of susceptible (T cytoplasm) corn, the fungus was carried over from the previous year in corn debris and stored infected corn, and weather conditions during the growing season encouraged disease development."

The plant pathologist feels SCLB is less likely to be a serious problem with the 1972 corn crop.

"The major seed companies have indicated there will be enough resistant (N cytoplasm) seed for next year," he says. "Although some growers will probably still plant T cytoplasm seed, it is unlikely this acreage will be significant."

This does not mean there won't be SCLB in Delaware or neighboring states in 1972, adds Carroll. But the disease should not be as serious as it has been the last two years.

Farmers can help reduce the chance of SCLB in their corn next year by following these practices:

1. Plant normal cytoplasm corn. Order your seed early.
2. Plow under as much of this year's corn residue as possible. Remember, the fungus that causes SCLB can overwinter on corn stubble.
3. Destroy volunteer corn as soon as it comes up. This corn played an important role in the spread of SCLB this year.
4. Maintain a good weed control program.

USDA Announces Revised School Lunch Funding Regulations

The Food and Nutrition Service announced recently the U.S. Department of Agriculture's regulations for the funding of the national school lunch program in 1972.

The regulations were published in the Federal Register Wednesday, Nov. 17.

Principal provision of the regulations are:

The minimum Federal Section 4 reimbursement rate guaranteed from general cash for food assistance funds is a statewide average of 6 cents a lunch. Additional funds will be provided to any state to enable it to maintain a statewide average Section 4 rate of assistance for Type A lunches served in 1972. Section 4 funds are used to help schools purchase food for lunches served to both needy and non-needy children. Some states will have sufficient funds from their initial share of apportioned Section 4 funds to maintain a statewide average rate in excess of 6 cents in 1972 and those states will be able to pay higher average rates. States have the authority to use variable reimbursement rates to meet the needs of individual schools.

Additional fundings provided from special cash assistance (Section 11) funds for free lunches is at a minimum of 40 cents or the cost of providing a Type A lunch, whichever is the lesser.

Reimbursement for reduced price lunches is at a minimum of 40 cents less the highest price charged for a reduced price lunch, or the cost of providing a Type A lunch less the highest reduced price charged the child for the lunch.

For a free lunch in especially needy schools up to 60 cents or the cost of providing a Type A lunch, whichever is the lesser, will be reimbursed. For a reduced price lunch in especially needy schools, the reimbursement rate shall be either 60 cents less the highest price charged for a reduced price lunch in the school or the cost of providing a Type A lunch less the highest price charged for a reduced price lunch in the school. In no case, regardless of the rate of reimbursement can the Federal reimbursement exceed the cost of the lunch or 60 cents, whichever is the lesser.

Reimbursement will be paid to schools for free and reduced price lunches in accordance with the eligibility standards established by the school and approved by the state prior to Oct. 1. Eligibility criteria approved for schools entering the program after Oct. 1, must fall within the state agency's eligibility standards announced before Oct. 1.

The states are required to hold 50 per cent of their non-food assistance money in reserve for the "no program" schools in their area, through January of the school year, unless the states can show cause that such amount is not needed for no-program schools. This provision has been included to use nonfood (equipment) assistance funds to begin programs in those needy schools now without a food service.

The regulations also make clear states cannot authorize blanket approval for schools to receive Section 11 special cash assistance for lunches unless all children in the school meet promulgated eligibility criteria for such lunches.

James Harrison, Jr., 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Harrison, Sr., Goldsboro, Md., has been named the 1971 state 4-H winner in petroleum power. A member of the Westville 4-H Club, he is currently enrolled in a leadership project and has won county awards in petroleum power and automotive. Harrison will receive an all-expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago November 28 to December 2.
