Rev. Parker To Speak At Asbury Church

"We Christians need to show the world we really care", says Garry Parker, missionary to Indonesia, with the Oriental Missionary Society. He will be speaking December 12 at 11 a.m. at Asbury United Methodist Church.

Mr. Parker has been practicing this philosophy since his college days at Taylor University. "It was then," he says, "I learned that people are tired of mere words, they want action." In putting this faith into action, Mr. Parker began to work with high school students in church and in volunteer work in a local V.A. hospital. "As the implications of God's love for the whole world got through to me," he says, "I realized I had a responsibility for those who had never had opportunity to know Jesus Christ in a personal way."

This led to Mr. Parker's involvement during his vacation ties as a short term missionary. He was able to visit Italy and Mexico in foreign mission work, and to work in the streets of New York with delinquent boys in home mission work.

During his time as Asbury Theological Seminary, he worked in short term ministry projects as a social worker, youth worker, and pastor. "In my last year of seminary," Parker says, "I traveled to Guatemala, to study methods of pastoral training there. It was through working with an OMS missionary on this trip, and later contact with other OMS people that my wife and I

City Manager to Retire At End of December

The city manager plans to retire at the end of December. Furthermore, there will be the usual changes in elected city officials in the January elections.

Mrs. Kathryn Derrickson, who has continually informed the council of her intentions to retire, Monday night, presented a letter of resignation effective as of Dec. 31.

Despite requests to stay on temporarily until new help could be broken in, Mrs. Derrickson stuck to her guns and the council accepted the resignation, agreed to pay her for three-weeks' vacation. Since she was also entitled to 100 days sick leave, the council agreed to pay this obligation by June. The city manager's pay is $20 per day. Mrs. Derrickson started out as city clerk 15 years ago and has been city manager since 1967 when Alfred G. B. Mann, resigned to accept a position with the City of Dover.

Turning to elected positions to be filled, Mayor Burton E. Satterfield warned the council, "You'll have to find someone else to take my or Jimmy's place."

The mayor, serving out the unexpired term of the late Fulton J. Downing, has repeatedly said he would not run for re-election to the two-term because of the press of work at his job in Dover.

The "Jimmy" he referred to was Councilman James Carroll, Third Ward but he answered he wasn't the least bit interested.

The outcome is a mayor and two councilmen will have to be elected at the January elections. Councilman Jack Aptt is not expected to run again in the Sixth Ward. In the Fifth Ward, Councilman John T. Satterfield's post will be up for grabs. He did not declare Monday night if he would run again, but some time ago he intimated he might be influenced by the candidate for mayor. No out-and-out candidate have been identified for any post.

House Temperature Controls

You turn it up—your husband turns it down. All winter long.

The thermostat, of course, what else?

But, a thermostat is intended to keep your house at a steady temperature. It's not an off-on switch, says Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware. "You shouldn't need to adjust it very often."

Forget about the numbers on the thermostat dial and set it to the most comfortable temperature. Leave it there. Too-frequent dial changing may overtax the heating system.

To discover the best setting for you, raise or lower the dial temperature by only one mark until you're comfortable during the day.

Sometimes, however, you can save five to eight percent of your fuel bill by setting the thermostat back 5 to 10 degrees during the night. Williams recommends lowering the house temperature this way if you have warm air or hot water systems. Don't try it with a radiant panel system.

When you want to warm the house up next morning—or after you've been away and the heat's been turned down—just set the dial at a temperature than usually comfortable say 75 degrees.

Don't turn the dial all the way to the top of the scale, Williams says. The temperature won't warm up any faster. How fast the house gets warm depends on the way your house is built, how cold it is outside and the efficiency of your heating system.

If you keep forgetting to set the thermostat back at night, you can get an automatic timer that will do the changing job, morning as well as night.

Allen Parker Runs Well In Newark 5-Miler

Allan Parker as a 13-year-old, novice, ran on a state champion cross-country team for Harrington High School in 1966. He lost interest in the running game and retired until 1970, when he returned to fill the No. 3 spot on an undefeated Lake Forest cross-country team. This past spring, in track, he recorded personal bests in the 440 and 880 yard runs and ran on several, school-record relay teams.

After a six-month layoff, Parker returned to competition in a 5.2 miles cross-country race, at the University of Delaware's Polly Drummond Hill course.

Thirty-eight runners competed. Most of them were college, ex-college and veteran distance runners and had been competing steadily for several months. Yet the talented Harrington runner was ninth and missed eighth place by one second. His 33.38 clocking was an excellent effort on the rugged, muddy, hilly course.

Vic Zwolak, the best distance runner in Delaware history, was an easy winner in 28.11. He competed in college for Villanova and ran for America in the Tokyo Olympic games.

Mike Wilson, Delaware State College's No. 1 harrier was second. Jim Waldbusser, ex-Caesar Rodney standout now competing for Delaware State was third. Ken Williamson, former University of Delaware harrier was fifth.

Brad Morris made his second start of the series. Though failing to make the top ten, he beat some of the runners, who finished ahead of him the previous week.

Competitors included a woman and a ten-year-old boy.

1. Vic Zwolak 28.11; 2. Mike Wilson 30.02; 3. Jim Waldbusser 30.28; 4. Ed Voeght 32.02; 5. Ken McLaughlin 32.42; 6. Ken Williamson 32.59; 7. Steve Cimo 33.14; 8. Tom McLaughlin 33.37; 9. Allen Parker 33.38; 10. Tom Coulson 33.48.

This Sunday, at a course within sight of the new Dover High School, the fourth race of the five race series will be held. Starting time is 1:30 p.m.

Norman Clough and Shanley Smith gave People's Restaurant the extra scoring power the team needed to sweep three games from the Honey Dippers Tuesday night. Frank Collins added a fine 201 game to People's output as they moved up on top of the pack. The Honey Dippers, who started the season very strong, has had trouble lately putting together a winning combination. Sam Powell and Dave Martin bowled well enough to give the Honey Dippers one game to their credit.

Butler's Fuel, enhanced by a full team effort, swept all four games from Robbin's Hardware Tuesday night. All team members surpassed their averages in the fuelers bid for a share of the top spot. Robbin's Hardware received a good effort from Wallace Wootten and Herb Robbins in a losing cause.

McKnaft Funeral Home slipped from first to third place in the standings as they split four games with Gallo & Stevenson. The McKnaft quintet had an off night and could not offset the fine showing by Snooky Gallo as he paced the construction boys in their two game win.

The Spoilers are out of third place by total pins only as they rolled over Wally's Garage in three games on Jack Sapp's superb bowling. Sapp's grand 254 game and great 555 series coupled with a good effort from Carl Wright was all the extra strength the Spoilers needed to stay close to the top. Jack also took over the lead in the individual high game category for the league. Wally Ryan was the only bowler to hit his average as the garage boys managed to salvage one game.

Taylor & Messick hit their winning form once again and moved closer to the front as George Collins started them off with a grand 235 game as he amassed a superb 591 series and Tom Brown added a very good effort as the team squashed Penn Central in all four games. Paul Baker, Ray Baker and Bernie Coffman rolled very good for the Railroaders in defeat.

Martin Jarrell, Bob Jarrell and Howard Tibbitt paved the way as Jarrell Fuel took three games from Quillen's Market. Donald Wilson rolled a great 201 game and a real good series and Earl Quillen and Donald Butler added fine efforts enabling their market team to salvage one game to break into the win column the second week of this third.

Fry's American and T & M Rejects rolled to a two-two stalemate in Tuesday's contest. Stan Johnson, John Forbes and Hank Wheeler (200 game and 558 series) bowled very well for Fry's. The Rejects received full individual support to give them enough power to take their two games.

The bowling output seemed

Viola United Methodist Church will have a Christmas program Sunday evening at 7 p.m. and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

Manship Church will hold its administration meeting on Friday evening in the Fellowship Hall. The church school Christmas program is being planned for the evening of Dec. 23.

Have you ever had that "I ate too much feeling?" The progressive dinner of the Willing Workers group was great and plentiful. An appetizer at the home of the Hammonds, then a salad at the Dills, followed by a turkey dinner at the Hughes and dessert at the Sherwoods with Christmas spirit all through the evening. Each home was beautifully decorated and there was an exchange of gifts.

Mrs. Dale Hammond has an interesting hobby. The hand-made candles in their entrance hall and living room show much originality.

On the sick list are Annabel Morrow, also Stella Brittingham, both hospitalized in Wilmington at Delaware Division. Mrs. Clarence Hurd is a patient at Kent General Hospital. Ann Sharp is at Delaware State. Your cards and well wishes would be appreciated.

Girl Scout Troop 248 and Troop 829, together with Cadette Troop 365 had their court of awards Wednesday, Dec. 1, at 7 p.m. at the Lake Forest North Elementary School.

A lifelong resident of Felton, John Andrew Kelley will be 103 years old on Dec. 10. His wife Mary died in 1954. He has five living children, all Delaware residents. They are Walter Kelley, Dover; Clara Begley, Wilmington; Elva Schmick, Camden; Florence Outten, Camden; and Sara Moore, Felton. Mr. Kelley has fourteen grandchildren, 38 great-grandchildren and 24 great-great-grandchildren, which makes a total of 81 descendants.

Besides many years of farming in the Felton area, he was also employed by a plumbing concern in Wilmington and also spent some years working for the railroad.

He is a member of the Felton United Methodist Church, and he has read the Bible through 17 times.

He resides at Fletcher Nursing Home in Felton. With an active mind and good appetite, he looks forward to mealtime and is able to get up and feed himself. There will be a birthday cake and visits from his family.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller
 CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

As the time of Christmas draws near,
 Selfishness and greed tend to disappear;
 Love and charity take over their place,
 In greater degree as we retrace

The story of our Savior's birth;
 Him who emphasized Peace on Earth —
 Gracious God who gave us his Son,
 Who died that eternal peace might be won.

So, at Christmas time, no wonder we sing —
 The church-bells and chimes merrily ring.
 And wouldn't it be good if such spirit could carry,
 Not just for December, but on into January.

And on through the other eleven months too,
 The world's many troubles would reduce to a few.
 Loving one another would eliminate all fuss,
 And the love of Christ would abide in us.

So, face up to Christmas
 With love and good cheer
 And try to carry this love
 Into the New Year.

Gus says, "You can get along at Christmas without mistletoe but you gotta have the berries."

KENT COUNTY COMMENTS

by JOSHUA M. TWILLEY
Levy Court President

Last Tuesday morning the Levy Court invited the Kent County Archaeological Society to set up a display of county artifacts in the Courthouse Hall. In this way citizens coming in and out of the courthouse building will have a chance to learn more about the ancient history of Kent County. Many people do not realize just how many Indians once lived here or how they organized their communities.

The oldest Indian tribe in the United States, known as the mother tribe, came from Delaware. They were known as the Leni Lenape. From this tribe came the Mohawks who were a larger tribe in the northeast.

Sometime after the Revolutionary War the Delaware nation was given a large tract of land near St. Louis and presumably some of those tribes moved there. Old maps in the St. Louis museum show an area about one-half the size of Delaware as the Delaware Nation.

Nevertheless, some remained and even today some people in Sussex County are descendants of this tribe.

Many residents of Kent County have found arrowheads, and almost every old-time farmer in Kent County has a collection. Some of these private collections are small museums in their own right.

The county should have an interest in this public treasure and in encouraging an appreciation and understanding of this chapter in our local history. The Kent County Levy Court recognizes this and will continue in the future to encourage and co-operate in programs to develop an interest in Kent County archaeology.

Light Affects Holly Berries

Holly without red berries is like Santa without toys.

Yet, even growing wild in southern Delaware woods hollies can't always be counted on to produce berries.

And home gardeners are well aware of the holly's unpredictable habits, according to Dr. Charles Dunham, professor of plant science at the University of Delaware.

Sometimes one side of a tree will be red-berried enough for any Christmas wreath while the other side of the same tree will be solid green.

Some years a holly will be well-berried; the next, it may not be.

Or, often, holly trees deep in the woods will be sparsely-berried while those at the edge will be beautifully fruited. This fact gave Dunham a clue.

He began investigating wooded areas near Georgetown and Greenwood. Both have grown up wild after being cut for lumber in the 1830's; ten percent of each is wild holly.

Holly is especially sensitive to the amount of sunlight, Dunham found. Trees in full sun are more likely to produce berries than those in shade. The effect is particularly obvious when a single tree is part in sun, part in shade.

So, for best results—compromise, Dunham advises. "Plant hollies where they'll get some shade, but not too much."

Light is not the only factor to consider, he found. Hollies are a very conservative tree.

They store up reserve energy for several years, producing a few berries. Then they produce a bumper crop.

Dunham explains that the holly to grow under many different soil and climatic conditions. However, he adds, if you want berries every year, add nitrogen fertilizer to the soil. It will help the leaf color also.

All the mysteries of the native Delaware holly aren't yet explained. But, if you make sure your backyard tree has the right amount of light and fertilizer, you'll probably have all the red-berried branches you need for Christmas decorations every year.

Indoor Christmas Decorations

Have years of accumulated Christmas decorations begun to overtake you? Or does your first home need to be dressed up for Christmas?

A few Christmas decorations, thoughtfully planned to express the spirit of the season, are better than many cluttered ones, according to Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware. Plan your Christmas decorations with the color, style and size of your home in mind.

Don't overload your home with too many items sitting around. You may need to take down some of your usual accessories at Christmas time so the added Christmas decorations won't create a crowded look.

The colors in your home may limit the choice of colors used for an arrangement, says Miss Morris. For example, a gold brown bow is better than the traditional bright red in a room of brown and orange.

Don't feel that you're limited by the reds, greens and white, she adds. Bright and dark shades of most colors are pretty for Christmas decorations.

The style of your home suggests what materials are best suited for decorations. Older traditional homes or those with a rustic appearance need the beauty of natural materials — evergreen, pine cones, berries and dried plants.

However, modern homes can use these natural materials in addition to objects in bright and gay colors. Artificial trees and decorations of vivid golds, silvers and blues are often used instead of the greens.

The size of the decoration is also important; relate it to the size of the area where it's used. Otherwise, Miss Morris says, the beauty of the arrangement is lost and it may look out of place.

If your memories of Christmas-past include mantle decorations—but you don't have a mantle—you can carry on your tradition by using a low chest or table in the hall or living room. They invite an arrangement of several candles or perhaps just one large candle with some greenery. This could be the place for your traditional nativity scene.

If you have a large tree in the living room, you may not need any other decorations. Or you could use a rope of evergreens over your door frame, mantle or along a stair rail.

Make an evergreen wreath by using a wire hoop or coat hanger bent into a circle. Wire pine needles to the hoop with short pieces of wire. Add pine needles until the foundation wreath is at least two inches deep. Then wire on pieces of evergreens and berries.

Burlap, heavy muslin or felt are possibly Christmas wall hangings, Miss Morris says. Cut the heavy fabric to an appropriate size. Let Christmas cards suggest ideas for the picture on the hanging. Then pattern the design with yarn, other pieces of materials and miscellaneous findings.

Start your decorations by creating a festive mood at the front door. Gather up some of the children's toys—a small horse, give a drum a fresh coat of paint, add some plastic toys. Tie with greenery and a red bow and you'll have a pleasant welcome for all children—as well as the young in heart.

Another door decoration—a huge bouquet of candy canes—can be made from decorated mailing tubes. Add a few Christmas greens, a perky bow or other decorations for a cherry greeting.

Looking for a special holiday tablecloth? Doesn't your regular one cover your extended Christmas table? A cotton bedspread or colorful sheet can make a large easy-to-laundry cloth. Top a white sheet with place mats or bands of red and green washable shelf paper to provide an inexpensive background for holiday foods.

fabric of contrasting color. You can make a quickie tablecloth from two lengths of red and white candy-striped cotton fabric. Use green fingertip terry cloth towels as napkins.

Wide red burlap, edged with green fringe, can become a Christmas table covering. Accent with an arrangement of pine boughs and Christmas balls. Or use holly and candles for another inexpensive holiday idea.

Now about covering your table with metal foil? Then place a wide width of nylon net or tarlatan (thin, stiff, transparent muslin) over the foil. Fasten holly or tinsel at the corners.

Tiny tree lights can be added to almost any kind of small table decoration to bring "sparkle" to your holiday table, Miss Morris concludes.

FRANCIS WEBB
KENT COUNTY AGENT

Of course, this is not a very pleasant subject just before Christmas, but income tax will soon be here. For the farmer, this is a very critical period because he still has time to adjust his taxable income through management decisions. These decisions must be made now and are very important, in some ways, regulating the amount of income tax to be paid.

Many of the farmers in Kent County will realize a decrease in gross income; however, a few, I am sure, will realize an increase. Tax management decisions that are made between an increase in income and a decrease in income are considerably different. We recommend that farmers total their income and expenses to date, and then estimate and add expected additional income for the remainder of 1971. You, as a farmer, should also meet with your tax consultant on classification of income and expense items and treatment of depreciable property.

You are, of course, making these management decisions not to just minimize taxes but to maximize after-tax income. Thus, business decisions that reduce net income more than they reduce taxes should be avoided. Farmers with higher earnings can utilize some of the following suggestions to maximize after-tax income.

Bills can be paid and supplies bought and paid for in advance, as well as occasional expenditures, such as painting and repairing buildings, can be accomplished before the end of the year.

Maximum depreciation allowances by using the optional first year 20 per cent and double declining balance can be elected.

One of the biggest decisions that you can make, particularly the grain farmer, is planned sales can be postponed until 1972.

Further suggestions for those with higher 1971 earnings are to consider income tax averaging, which has been simplified and liberalized. Just briefly, this is if your 1971 taxable income exceeds the 1967 to 1970 average by 20% plus $3,000, it would pay to consider this option.

In the case of selling some of your property, a real tax advantage would be installment payment agreements. Sometimes trades can be worked out to both property owners' advantage.

I would be the first to admit that the farmer with an increase in income has a few more choices in regulating tax to be paid than the man with a decrease in income. For the less fortunate, your 1971 taxable earnings can be increased by making additional sales before the end of the year, or by securing a CCC loan if eligible. You can also delay expenditures on some segments of your farming operation, as well as minimize the depreciation taken on items acquired during 1971.

Be it to your advantage or not, many farmers often overlook paying wages to their children for work performed by them. This is, of course, provided a true employer-employee relation exists. With the present regulations, a child can earn up to $1700 per year, not be subject to taxes, and still be claimed as a dependent if the parents provide more than one-half of the child's support. This also holds true for children nineteen and over if they are enrolled in school five months or more of the year.

Tax management is just one segment of the total farming management job. This, of course, should not be taken lightly, because through tax management decisions considerable increase can be obtained on your after-tax income.

For more information on tax management decisions, call your nearest county extension office.

In previous news columns, I have talked briefly about organic gardening as well as organic farming. I would like to mention that there is a very interesting article in the December issue of the "Farm Journal."

Towards the end of the article, a very important fact is brought out about people and their ideas on food purchases. I really think that this concept of organic farming boils down to the following statement as given in this article: "If some people are willing to work hard to produce organic food and some people are willing to pay for it, why get up tight? If organics can convince people that food quality is more important than the color of their television sets, that's what agricultural marketing is all about." This statement brings out a very important concept that the people who are willing to pay the higher price for organic foods (be it better or not) are more concerned about their nourishment and livelihood than a new automobile or the clothes they wear. We all know that this type of food can be supplied, but people are going to have to spend more than 16% of their disposable income on their grocery bill.

However, good sharp dressmaker shears are essential. Maybe you could ask Santa for a replacement. Shears, too, differ in size and smaller ones are easier for smaller hands. There are also shears for left-handed people. Fancy sewing boxes abound at gift giving time. Personally, I have found many of these of questionable value and difficult to store. My favorite is a sturdy cardboard box covered with firm cotton fabric left over from a sewing project. The box is the correct size for my supplies, easy to carry and flat for easy storage.

It Seems To Me

by Janet Reed

Sewing items are likely to be under your Christmas tree on Christmas morning. This year the stores seem to have more than ever because of the home sewing boom.

Some are useful—others less so. Many sewing gadgets are designed to catch the eye of someone who probably doesn't sew. If the seamstress had an opportunity to choose, she might select a more practical item.

So, if you have a preference for sewing items, pass along a few hints. It is better than returning the item later.

Electric scissors are often promoted as a gift item. They are fine if one cuts many garments or if ordinary cutting is difficult because of physical limitations. But if electric scissors are bought for these reasons, it's especially important for the one who will use them to try them out for comfort, weight, balance cutting ability and convenience.

Brands of scissors differ but all have improved since the earlier ones were introduced. Unless you do a great deal of sewing, you may find that ordinary shears are just as useful.

How, good sharp dressmaker shears are essential. Maybe you could ask Santa for a replacement. Shears, too, differ in size and smaller ones are easier for smaller hands. There are also shears for left-handed people. Fancy sewing boxes abound at gift giving time. Personally, I have found many of these of questionable value and difficult to store. My favorite is a sturdy cardboard box covered with firm cotton fabric left over from a sewing project. The box is the correct size for my supplies, easy to carry and flat for easy storage.

The gadgets to attach buttons reappear at Christmas time, too. This is one that seems to appeal to men. But sewing on buttons isn't that big a chore, and the "button-gadget" doesn't always have the correct color or size of button.

The sewing items that are the most useful are not always the most eye catching. Good dressmaker pins are always needed—and some what expensive. A good tape-measure, accurate and sturdy, is another essential. A folding cutting board is most useful if cutting space is a problem. Good pressing equipment also is expensive but necessary.

So—if you need sewing items, why not drop a few specific suggestions to Santa. He probably will be grateful to know he can give you something you really need.

Farm Problem Can Be Solved U. Of D. Vice President Says

Although small, Delaware can serve as a typical example of the progress—and problems—of U.S. agriculture, according to Dr. George M. Worrilow, vice president for university relations at the University of Delaware.

For example, there are fewer farmers in Delaware but they have larger farms, he told delegates to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Tri-State Conference. The two-day event was held in Newark, Dec. 1 and 2.

Worrilow added that this kind of progress has led to problems. Workers no longer needed in agriculture must not be neglected.

"We could utilize the vocational facilities in our high schools in the summer to give rural young people new vocational skills."

Another side to the farm labor problem are the low wages and few fringe benefits farm laborers receive. If the labor that handles our food is as important as that which produces cars and if they are paid accordingly, the result will be greatly increased food prices, Worrilow stated.

He added accelerated research programs are needed to increase yields and efficiency to combat these higher costs. Also, farms must change from seasonal production so they can provide uninterrupted, well-paid employment all year round.

Worrilow, also called for a national policy on land use. "What has very properly been called the 'rape of the land' must stop."

"We have the foresight and technology to establish industries and cities in areas of poor agricultural productivity."

"The one invaluable resource is agricultural land and it is a reusable resource when properly managed. But we lose over 4,000 acres of cultivatable land each day to various public developments."

We need research on the best size for cities; we need national legislation to slow the movement of cities into farmland, Worrilow stated.

He said intensified research is also needed in a number of areas where agriculture contributes to pollution, specifically pesticides and animal waste disposal. "Agriculture is the very fabric from which the strength of America is woven." Anyone who wants to eat is involved in its problems.

tural economist at the University of Delaware.

However, the hog market may be showing signs of improving. McAllister says sharp adjustments in production have been made for the first half of 1972 and corn prices have dropped substantially. This combination will assure hog farmers of moderately good returns for the next 8 to 10 months.

He points out that it seems certain more hogs will be held for breeding than farmers indicated earlier and more hogs will be fed to heavier weights. But there will still be a significant reduction in pork marketings to push hog prices back into the $20 to $24 per hundredweight range by late winter or spring.

What happens after that depends on whether pork pro-

Machinery Needs Winter Storage

Storing farm equipment properly during the winter will give you a head start on field work next spring, reminds Tom Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware. Don't take a chance on bearings that fail, belts that slip, balers that won't tie a knot, plows that won't scour or fertilizer mechanisms that won't turn.

Each of these problems adds to your repair bills and shortens machine life. They may also cause loss of time during crucial operations, says Williams.

Proper storage means protecting metal parts of a machine from rust and corrosion and preventing deterioration of rubber parts. An engine can lose more of its usefulness from rust and corrosion when it's not being used than from normal wear-while it's running.

Williams suggests cleaning the machine thoroughly and storing it in a protected location — inside, if possible. Lubricate all bearings which normally need lubricating; remove roller chains, clean and store in oil.

Unprotected metal parts should be coated with a rust preventive. Most oil companies carry these in their industrial oils. Liquid rust preventive can be sprayed on.

Remove machine belts and store in a dark, cool place, continues Williams. If you can't remove the belts, at least loosen them during off-season storage.

Machines should be blocked up during the winter to take the weight off tires. And don't let weight hang on hydraulic cylinders—lower the combine heater onto blocks. Store tires at normal operating pressure.

For special storage recommendations, consult the manufacturer's instruction manual. And when cleaning and dismantling farm machinery, note all the repairs that need to be done, advises Williams. These repairs should be finished before the equipment is needed next spring.

Food A Tradition At Christmas

Christmas is a holiday of religious observances, gift giving and family customs. Many of these customs are associated with food, says Miss Krackhardt, extension foods and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware.

During the Christmas season, your family probably uses special recipes and traditional ways of serving food. All over the world, people carry on their own special Christmas customs. And, of course, part of the fun can be adding a "new" tradition now and then.

Traditional foods should be a part of Christmas in all our homes. Many ethnic groups have gone into the melting pot that is America. Each one has brought with it the food habits of native lands. We all spring from some ethnic background — and from it we can adopt the foods or customs of our ancestors' land. What better time to do this than at Christmas?

In these hectic and mobile times, it is important for our children to have an anchor. And that anchor could well be an understanding of the heritage of their forefathers. One way to keep this heritage alive is preparing and serving traditional foods at holiday time.

Perhaps your child's cherished memories will be those of the Norwegian breads and cookies he helps mother make at Christmas time. By preparing them for your children, you can help them to understand their Scandinavian background. As you prepare and serve the traditional foods, relate to the children the things your mother told you about the land of their ancestors.

If your family does not follow any Christmas food tradition, Miss Krackhardt suggests you start one this year. Even something as simple as special cookies for holiday time, or oyster stew on Christmas eve, can grow into an observance your family members will look forward to each year.

If you can adopt some food from your ethnic background, this will be a special way to give your children a link with the past.

Some families serve oyster stew on Christmas eve. It's easy to prepare after the rush of last minute holiday preparations, Miss Krackhardt points out. And, oyster stew is a welcome contrast to heavy meals served the next day.

Serve the stew with a vegetable relish tray. Top it off with fruit, nuts and other Christmas goodies, Miss Krackhardt suggests.

The Christmas morning meal is sure to be late because few children can wait 'til after breakfast to open packages. Many families serve a rather heavy breakfast so everyone has enough food to last until the late Christmas dinner is served.

Nut and fruit-filled stollens or other sweet breads or rolls are often served. You may have your own special sweet bread recipes you use only at Christmas.

For many American families, Christmas means turkey dinner; for others, the traditional meat dish is goose or ham.

Steamed pudding is to Christmas what pumpkin pie is to Thanksgiving. To many, old-fashioned English plum pudding is a traditional Christmas dessert.

Whatever your tradition, long before Christmas, Miss Krackhardt suggests you plan your menus, buy food and make cookies, fruit cakes and puddings. Then you'll be better able to cope with last-minute preparations, such as making Christmas breads and rolls, mixing dressing for the roast bird and making sauce for the pudding.

Whatever you do, you'll find the special foods—those that take long and loving preparation—are a part of Christmas that will be remembered. And you will realize of what simple ingredients priceless memories are made.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne Holberton

Living rooms throughout the nation will soon be resplendent with holly wreaths and Christmas trees, and inviting dishes of nuts complete the picture that gives the final festive touch for the family and is welcome sign for holiday guests.

But it might be a good idea to have those nuts handy long before the actual holiday week. December is a busy month, filled with Christmas shopping, gift wrapping, parties, and visiting as well as the usual household routine.

The many kinds of nuts, broadly speaking, are marketed in just a few forms: in the shell or as shelled kernels and raw or roasted.

Since three-fourths of the nut sales occur during the last three months of the year, a price comparison between unshelled and shelled nuts may be of great interest. To buy shelled or unshelled nuts depends on how you use them, how much you need, cost per pound, and how much time you have. Remember shelled nuts are ready to use. To get a pound of nut meats you will need to buy the following amounts of unshelled nuts: 3 1/2 pounds of almonds; 2 1/2 pounds of pecans, 2 1/2 pounds of filberts; 5 pounds of black walnuts; and 2 1/2 pounds of English walnuts.

When selecting nuts do it with care. Like the cover of a book, the shell of a nut may be deceiving. Fully developed shells can contain defective or poorly developed kernels. Price cannot be a reliable guide either. The best aid is a statement on the label which shows that the nuts are of a certain U.S. grade or they have been subjected to USDA inspection, or both. If this is not available, then select nuts with clear, bright shells. The weight of the individual nut is important, for the heavier the nut the meatier the kernel.

Choosing shelled nuts may be just as confusing because of the large assortment of small packages. As a rule, broken kernels or "pieces" are less expensive than whole kernels or halves of the same kind of nut. Exposed flesh of broken or chopped nuts should be light-colored and look fresh. Yellowish, oily appearance indicates aging with probable stale flavor or possible early stages of rancidity.

Del-Tech Funded For Training Program

Del-Tech South has been awarded a new grant for a second manpower development training act skill training program which will run through Oct. 30. Jack F. Owens, college executive director announced last week.

The grant is expected to provide training for 110-150 applicants in the construction trades — heavy equipment mechanics and operators, truck mechanics and truck drivers and will be administered by Delaware Tech in conjunction with the Department of Labor. Special consideration will be given to Vietnam veterans. In previous programs administered by the college, placement results have reached almost 98 percent — trainees have been placed in jobs compatible with their training.

Training will be given on

The keeping quality of nuts depends on the nut. You can keep all nuts fresh for a while if they are stored in airtight containers and refrigerated. For longer storage, package in usable amounts and freeze. Nuts in their shells keep better than shelled nuts, and whole nutmeats keep better than chopped or ground nuts.

PORK OUTLOOK

ducers understand what happens when over-expansion occurs, cautions McAllister.

"Many people are surprised when they learn that a small supply of a farm commodity generally sells for more total dollars than a large supply," he explains.

"Most foods have a comparatively inelastic demand. That means the quantity and type of food products the average family prefers doesn't change much from year to year. Therefore, to get the consumer to buy less beef or chicken and use more pork, the price must decline quite a lot.

"On the other hand, if pork supplies are short, consumers will bid against each other for the small supply and the price goes up," adds McAllister.
