

$2 Million Housing Development To Start Here Soon; Could Hit $4 Million

The president of a large Baltimore housing and industrial development corporation told The Harrington Journal Christmas Eve his firm would start work soon on a $2 million housing development here which could be extended to $4 million.

Don Schumer, president of Penn-Dol Development Corporation, said his firm was hoping to start construction on a minimum of 30 townhouses, possibly, 50 or more, in February or March. The houses would sell from $19,000 to $20,500.

If all went well, Schumer added, the project would be completed by fall. The development, comprising 10 acres at Peck Avenue and East Street, would hold approximately 100 houses and the project would be for $2 million.

The townhouses would back on East Street, with the entrance from Peck Avenue. The land has been rezoned from commercial to residential by the Planning and Zoning Commission and approved by the City Council. Construction would follow the building codes of Kent County or the City of Dover.

Mayor Burton E. Satterfield, who has been working with the city on the project, said all improvements — fire-plugs, streets, sidewalks, sanitary and storm sewers and water mains would be installed by the developer.

The 10-acre tract was purchased from Dudley Willis, of Newark, at an undisclosed price. He added Sunday, Penn-Dol had an option on 10 adjoining acres. Schumer said Christmas Eve he was hoping for a $4 million development on the 20 acres.

He told The Journal: "We are trying to create a property which will maintain the present homey atmosphere of the community and, at the same time, provide new and modern facilities."

"We will stay in Harrington until the complete needs of the community are satisfied; in other words, we will not stop at the preliminary figure which has been projected."

When additional housing is needed we will stay here until this need has been satisfied," concluded Schumer.

Besides the 20 acres connected with Penn-Dol, there are 20 acres, more or less, in the Willis tract, formerly referred to as the Trane Company land. This portion is also bordered on the north by Peck Avenue; on the east, by U.S. 13; on the west, by East Street, and on the south by lands of Ernest Killen and others. It also has facilities for a railroad siding.

No candidates have filed for city offices in the January municipal elections, City Manager Kathryn Derrickson said Monday.

Spots to be filled are those of the mayor and two councilmen.

The mayor's term of office will be two years, while the councilmanic posts will be three years.

Mayor Burton E. Satterfield has been less than enthusiastic about running for re-election and, of the moment, no prospects are in sight.

For the City Council, elections are to be held in the Fifth Ward, John Satterfield, incumbent, and the Sixth Ward, Jack Apt incumbent.

Persons wishing to file must do so by Jan. 1, explained Mrs. Derrickson. The petitions and the city's annual report will be held Friday evening, Jan. 7.

Milford Memorial Hospital Admissions Increase After Holidays

It is generally known that Christmas and New Year holidays affect stores, theatres, transportation and everyone's social life, but few people realize that hospitals are also influenced by these feasts.

According to a three-year review of its records by the Milford Memorial Hospital, admissions increase considerably following these holidays.

Joseph B. Ahlschier, Milford Memorial Hospital's administrator, attributes the post holiday admissions' jump to the fact that many patients who are not suffering from serious illnesses postpone their hospital stays until after the holidays. The same applies to surgical cases where time is not an important factor, Ahlschier says.

The administrator disclosed that admissions starting Friday, Jan. 4, 1971 jumped from a normal 15 per day to 25. The following day, 20 were admitted, while on Sunday, the sixth, it jumped to 36! In 1971, the hospital had a total of 174 beds available.

FIREMEN SAVE TWO HOUSES IN ONE-HALF HOUR

Harrington firemen had two fires going at the same time Sunday evening and extinguished both in half an hour.

The first alarm, about 9 p.m., was at the residence of Joseph Barlow, Grant Street, where Fire Chief Robert A. Wilson believed the origin of the fire could have started with a faulty gas burner.

FIREMEN FIGHT 4-HOUR BLAZE AT WYNN HOME

Harrington firemen, assisted by Farmington Fire Company, battled a four-hour fire Thursday evening at the residence of Kathryn Wynn near Delaware State Fair grounds.

Fire Chief Robert A. Wilson said he believed the fire started around a defective flue.

Felton Fire Company stood by for Harrington until it had to answer an alarm from Canterbury where a house was destroyed.

Harrington firemen answered their alarm at 6:45 p.m. and battled until 10:45 p.m. Returning to defective flues, Chief Wilson said the last three fires answered by the company at dwellings were caused by the same defect.

He warned that, instead of checking only on stoves and furnaces, residents should check the entrance of the stove pipe into the chimney area because if there is a crack in the flue at this point, heat, spark, or flame may attack any combustible material such as wood or paper in the vicinity.

The chief concluded by saying he had been warning the public about using preventive measures on fires, "but it doesn't want to fix anything until trouble appears."

Policy Holders Will Be Covered Under The No-Fault Law

If you have an auto insurance policy but have not been notified about its conversion to no-fault by your insurance company, what should you do?

Nothing, says insurance commissioner Robert A. Short. You'll be covered under the new no-fault law whether your insurer notified you or not.

No-fault insurance becomes law in Delaware on Jan. 1, under the provisions of the Delaware Motorists Protection Act. It is required on all vehicles registered in the state. The new law contains "first-party benefits," which means that you collect from your own insurance company instead of having to sue the insurer of the other car.

No-fault auto insurance is compulsory — every vehicle registered in Delaware must carry it to comply with the law. The coverage is automatically added to the policies of vehicles previously protected by liability insurance.

Commissioner Short said that the new coverage will be "rolled on" by the insurance companies. In most cases, the premiums will be the same although motorists who previously did not carry medical benefits coverage may have a small charge for the additional protection they will receive under no-fault.

"At this point, with no-fault auto insurance about to become law in our state, it is the owner of the uninsured vehicle who has to take immediate action," Short said. "In brief, he has to obtain insurance on his car by Jan. 1 or be in violation of the law."

The insurance commissioner said that in the past one out of every five Delaware motor vehicles was driven without insurance. Many of these, he said, have been recently covered as the result of the pending no-fault law. The remainder will have to be covered before new license tags are received, since the state now requires that proof of insurance is shown when vehicles are registered.

So, if you currently have liability insurance on your car, you can relax in the knowledge that you comply with the new law. If you have any doubts or questions about your coverage, call your insurance agent.

Journal to Raise Price of Paper

The Harrington Journal will raise its price effective as of Jan. 1, of its subscriptions and newsstand sales.

This price revision was made necessary by an increase in cost of newsprint and production prices.

Newsstand price will be 15c in line with similar prices of other area weeklies. Subscription prices will go up 50c per year, with in-state rates at $5 and out-of-state rates at $6.

Henlopen Conference Is Miserly In Harrier Recognition

Now is the perfect time to draft a statement about the situation faced by the courageous youngsters, who make up the cross-country teams, in the Henlopen Conference. When the league first sponsored the harriers sport, it was decided to award the best performers with "all conference" cross-country teams, in championship meets, are limited to seven members. At the first few Henlopen Conference championship meets, the first seven runners to finish, automatically won "all conference" positions. Lately, however this has been cut back to five, presumably saving the cost of printing the two extra certificates.

Meanwhile, the recent all conference football mentions contained a whopping total of 55 names, includes 14 to one school. Here we have a situation where one football team, has almost three times as many kids honored, as does a whole league of teams, in another fall sport. We believe that cross-country rates having seven boys chosen as "all conference."

We have heard another disturbing rumor concerning other possible changes in the hill and dale sport.

We've heard that the conference may restrict each team to seven entrants in dual meets. This is ridiculous. When Penn State and Villanova have a duel meet everybody runs, with the top seven finishers from each squad figuring in the scoring. This is the way it's done everywhere. With everyone being allowed to run in the dual meets, coaches can recruit more easily. Boys who would be quickly cut from the basketball, football and basketball teams can run on the cross-country team throughout the season.

It is claimed that one of the ultimate goals is to allow more kids to compete. We suggest that cross-country be left as it is now. Only a top, few runners get any recognition anyhow, so it wouldn't hurt to let the slower boys be team members and plod along in the rear of the pack.

Let these lesser talented athletes have the satisfaction of belonging to at least one school team. Many of them don't have the size, height, weight, etc., to compete in any other sport.

Estate Planning

Should property be held in joint ownership? Are wills necessary? Should a family-owned farm be incorporated? Answers to these questions will be provided at a meeting on "Farm Property Ownership and Estate Planning," Jan. 11 at the Capital Grange Hall in Dover. The meeting, sponsored by the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service, will start at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public.

The program will feature a panel discussion of state and federal inheritance laws and taxes; ways to provide financial security for a retiring farm owner; and the use of trusts in estate planning and management. Panel members Robert L. Bamberger, a certified public accountant in Dover; Robert B. Rickards, trust officer with the Bank of Delaware, Wilmington and William Vaughn, a Dover attorney, will also be available to answer audience questions.

Lake Forest In 2nd Straight Romp

It's two romps in as many starts for Jim Blades and his Lake Forest basketball Spartans. Lake Forest jumped out to a 19-1 bulge over Laurel, then coasted to an easy 76-42 victory as twelve players saw action.

This past football season saw quarterback Lawrence Sorden pitching to Jim Dill. In the cage sport, the reverse is true. Dill passed to Sorden for six of the latter's nine buckets. Sorden tallied 19 points. Dill had 22 by sinking nine field goals, augmented by a 4 for 4 night at the free throw line.

Frank Daniels netted 13 points. Neal Travis (12) and Don Bryant (6) round out the starting team.

It Seems To Me

by Janet Reed

Who would think plain everyday sheets would become a fashion item?

But they have — even to designer signed sheets and coordinated colors in bed and bath accessories. There are designs for every taste — wild colors, feminine flowers or masculine tweeds. Fashion merchandise supposedly improves sales, which is the purpose of the whole thing.

Some of the designs are beautiful. Recently, I saw a gorgeous set and decided I had to have it — until I saw the price. It has not yet become that important to me to have high fashion bed linens.

And I still prefer to wash bed linen in hot water. Repeated washing in hot water will fade the best of dyes. Also, if you wash in a laundromat and like to use a chlorine bleach as a disinfectant, your fashion investment may not be so attractive after awhile.

Colored and white clothes should be laundered separately. This may or may not be a problem but should be considered when making a choice.

A pretty print can distract you from looking for fabric quality. A printed fabric involves extra labor, so everything else being equal, it will always be more expensive. In some cases, to keep the price more competitive, a cheaper quality fabric will be used. Since we tend to buy with our eyes, we may select something pretty and forget about quality.

Maybe this isn't important. You may tire of the design before the sheets wears out.

But if you need to watch pennies — and we all say we do, your best buy will be a finely woven white sheet.

Look for the thread count which should be printed on the package. This is the total number of threads — lengthwise and crosswise — to the square inch. Therefore, the higher the thread count, the firmer, finer and more expensive the fabric.

Percale sheets usually are sold in 180 and over thread count. Medium weight muslin has a thread count of 128 or more threads per square inch. However, this is a heavier sheet and will take a longer time in the dryer.

Permanent press is important if you like the feel of smooth sheets without the work of ironing. You can economize though, by buying untreated fitted sheets, since they will stretch out pretty smooth anyway, and use the more expensive "no-iron" sheets for the top.

It came, and we hope it has not gone! The spirit of Christmas was shown throughout the area and as Rev. John said in his message, "it is our prayer that it will continue throughout the year."

The folks at Manship went all out for Christmas on the 23. Following the nativity pageant, led by Miss Cheryl Shulties, who is a student at the University of Delaware, gifts were distributed by Santa (Elwood Jester); then refreshments were served by the ladies of the church.

If you haven't yet visited Dot and Olin Dill's residence to see approximately eight thousand Christmas lights, you should make certain you get there this week. You can't possibly miss it, just west of highway 13 north of Viola, because it can be seen for miles. The house, barn, shrubbery and pear tree are full of colorful lights and it is the Olin Dill's way of saying "Glory to God also thank you for your valued patronage." Mr. Dill is a plumber and electrician in the area. It takes several weeks to assemble the display and many members of the family help. The display lasts 20 days and after that it is all labeled and stored in barrels. When you drive through, you will hear Christmas carols and see a large Santa with reindeers. This has been a delight to children who come from miles away to see it with their parents. The Dills have nine grandchildren ranging from 19 months to 17 years who are on hand to wave to the visitors and talk about the lights.

"Put Your Hand in the Hand of the Man who Stilled the Waters". That's the name of the selection sung by Sunday's Child at Felton United Methodist Church during the 11 a.m. worship on Sunday. They also had a musical presentation on Christmas eve.

NEW YEAR PRAYER

Thank you, Lord, for all the gifts,
 The old year brought to me —
 Good health, good friends and fellowship
 With all I get to see.

Thank you for the tolerance
 Of the kindly sun,
 That shines alike to rich and poor,
 And heartens everyone.

Strengthen me to do my work,
 With joy and brotherhood,
 And may I, with each passing day,
 Know that life is good.

THE POWER OF PRAYER

(Quotable Quote from the Scandal Sheet)

"The spectacle of a nation praying is more awe-inspiring than the explosion of an atom-bomb. The force of prayer is greater than any man-made power because prayer is man's greatest means of tapping the resources of God"

J. Edgar Hoover

NEW CAPE MAY-LEWES BAYLINER—Delaware River and Bay Authority will seek bids for up to three new bayliners, illustrated in architect's rendering, for the Cape May-Lewes Ferry. The new vessels would carry 100 autos and 800 passengers each, be diesel operated, cruise at 16 knots and have maximum draft of seven feet, eliminating need for annual dredging at each terminal area. Target date for placing first vessel into operation is Summer, 1973.

Ferry Eyes New Vessels

The Delaware River and Bay Authority voted to advertise for bids to construct one, two or three new vessels for the Cape May-Lewes Ferry which it operates.

The commissioners heard a report from the naval architect which designed the new vessel that all plans and specifications are complete and awaiting approval of the U.S. Coast Guard and the U.S. Bureau of Shipping. He added that advertisements had been sent to leading marine publications advising that proposals to build the new vessels would be accepted from shippers.

Describing the new vessel from an artist's rendering, the architect said the new ferry would carry 100 autos and 800 passengers, approximately the same cargo as the present vessels. They will be propelled by two 2000 horsepower diesel engines and have a cruising range of 16 knots. Average speed of the present vessels is 12 knots.

Theodore C. Bright, facilities manager, said the increased speed of the proposed vessels, and their faster and quicker terminal turnaround design, would allow an added round trip daily without an increase in crew, whenever traffic demanded.

Other advantages of the new vessels is the diesel operation which reduces the fuel requirements of the present steam driven vessels, and eliminates the omission of sulphur into the air. Authority director William J. Miller Jr., said the target date for placing the first vessel into operation is the summer of 1973. He indicated the construction costs would determine the number of vessels to be built, or in fact, if any new vessels will be built.

"We are keeping our options open," he said. Miller said bids would be requested for building one, two or three craft. He said it is conceivable that one vessel might be built, each in three different shipyards.

A feature of the new vessels would allow foot passengers to load and unload directly from the second deck by special boarding ramp. At present, foot passengers must board from the same bridge by which vehicles load on and off the ferry.

Meanwhile, the need for periodic dredging of the terminal areas continued to be the single costliest item in the ferry's annual operational deficit. Miller announced the awarding of a bid of $358,000 to the American Dredging Co. of Philadelphia for dredging at the Cape May Terminal.

This cost, he said, when added to the $80,000 appropriated for a study of the effect of dredging on marine life to be shared by Rutgers and the University of Delaware, has shoved the total cost above the $400,000 appropriated in the current budget for this week.

The new vessels, with a maximum draft of seven feet, will eliminate the need for dredging. The present vessels require a depth of 12 feet to maneuver.

At the close of the meeting chairman Albert F. Smith presented a framed resolution to Miller for his service as president of the International Bridge, Tunnel and Turnpike Association which recently held its worldwide meeting in Barcelona, Spain.

The resolution said in part

C. C. KING DIES; WAS STATE REP.

A native of Milton, Mr. King had lived in Smyrna for the last 32 years, most recently at 303 W. Commerce St. He was a member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Smyrna, a life member of Endeavor Lodge 17, AF&AM, and a member of the Delaware Consistory.

Soybean Varieties Named For 1972

Many Delaware soybean growers were hurt by generally low bean quality in 1971, according to Dr. William H. Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware. Spot checks at harvest time indicate that Cutler and Clark varieties were particularly susceptible to moldy bean disease. Farmers marketing these varieties took substantial cuts from buyers.

Mitchell says the best varieties for 1972 appear to be York, Delmar and Kent. York requires a fairly long growing season and is therefore best suited to southern Delaware. Both Delmar and Kent can be grown throughout the state. The agronomist report that York has proven particularly well-suited to a double cropping system in combination with barley.

According to Mitchell, a lot of soybean seed harvested in the fall has low germination ability, and he cautions farmers to be sure to test any seed they plan to keep for use next year. He says seed can be treated to improve germination. In one instance, the Delaware Seed Testing Laboratory in Dover was able to raise the germination of a sample of Kent beans from 69 percent to 89 percent through treatment. A Cutler sample went from 55 percent to 82 percent and a Delmar sample went from 40 to 77 percent.

In addition to a test this winter, Mitchell says growers should plan on treating suspected seed with a seed box application of a recommended fungicide.

 county committeemen from their respective communities and if either of them serve on the county committee in the coming year, on a full time basis, they will no longer serve on their respective community committees.

The County ASC Committee is responsible for the local administration of government farm program such as the set-aside for feed grains and wheat, commodity loan programs and the Rural Environmental Assistance Program (REAP) conservation cost sharing program.

Kent County farmers showed increased interest in the ASC election this year voting in higher numbers than ever before and the delegates to the county convention turned out 100% in support of the Kent County farmer of their choice to the county committee.

County ASC committeemen serve staggered three year terms so usually only 1 vacancy occurs each year. However, alternates to the County Committee and Community Committeeman are elected every year.

All newly elected county and community committeemen will take office Jan. 1.

Tentative Sites Listed For Modular Units

Tentative sites for 200 units of modular housing were announced Tuesday and the Kent County Levy Court agreed to allow construction of the dwellings for low-income families.

The agreement is with the State Division of Housing, the state agency involved in the federally assisted project. Under terms of the proposal, the 200 units would be spread over the county on eight sites with each site containing 25 units.

According to Housing Division Director Robert S. Moyer, the tentative sites are located:

East of Smyrna. Between Smyrna and Clayton.

East of U.S. 13 and north of Towne Point outside the Dover city limits.

At Baker's Choice, near Little Heaven.

West of U.S. 13-A in Camden, near South Street.

South of Camden, near the Star Hill School.

North of Harrington, near West Street.

East of U.S. 113 in Milford, near the Banneker Heights area.

According to Levy Court President Joshua M. Twilley, the Levy Court would have "complete control" over the Division of Housing in the project. The division would be subject to the same subdivision regulations as "any other developer."

The housing will be built by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Moyer said that construction tentatively is set to begin in July.

Still needed, however, is HUD's approval of the state's application for the housing and agreement by the manufacturers of the modular housing to the federal government's "prototype cost" per unit.

The cost would range between $12,000 and $20,000 per unit for a three bedroom house in the Dover area, Moyer estimated.

2 Juveniles Charged With Burglary

Two juveniles were arrested by Harrington police last Thursday morning and taken to Court No. 7, Dover, where they were charged with burglary.

Released in the custody of their parents, they will appear in Family Court Jan. 13.

The juveniles were charged with theft of approximately $350 in cash, a revolver, and a radio at K & S Transport, Inc., on U.S. 13, according to Chief of Police Robert Faulkner. The chief added most stolen property was recovered.

Safe Ways Of Using Ceramics

Safe ways for students, teachers and hobbyists to use ceramics glazes have been listed by James R. Gervan, supervisor of art and music education, the State Department of Public Instruction.

No cases of lead poisoning in a school ceramics workshop has been confirmed in his thirteen years' experience in Delaware, Mr. Gervan says, although the question was raised recently when a state teacher was hospitalized after working with a ceramics kiln.

Some glazes may be safely brought into contact with food or drink and some may not, Gervan explains. When ceramic cups or dishes are coated with certain glazes, food or drink may cause the glaze to release harmful substances. A particular danger occurs when such vessels are used for acidic fruit juices.

Gervan sent a memo to all public schools advising teachers on the use of ceramics glazes in December. He points out that a list of glazes that are labeled as releasing harmful amounts of lead or cadmium was circulated to school districts in March, 1971, in the newsletter of the Delaware Association for Art Education.

Although school districts are free to purchase other products, the current state bid list, distributed by the Division of Central Purchasing, includes only those items that are so marketed if they are not suited for use in food or drink containers.

Apart from selecting proper glazes, Gervan recommends these cautions in the use of ceramics glazes.

1. Check the contents of all ceramic glazes and follow the manufacturer's instructions in using them.

2. Discard any glaze that comes without recommendations for use.

3. Wash down all containers, storage areas and work stations where ceramics are made.

4. After glazing, students must wash any skin touched by the glaze, particularly under the finger nails.

5. Do not eat, drink or smoke in a ceramics workshop.

All ceramic objects being sprayed with glaze must be sprayed in a direct exhaust booth.

7. Check kilns for leaks around the lids, doors, or firing chamber; repair or replace kilns that have air leaks.

8. Have adequate ventilation around kilns and allow no one near the kiln while it is firing.

9. Do not use copper oxide on surfaces glazed with lead and touched by food.

10. For a surface used with food and drink, use no glaze that releases lead or cadmium in amounts that exceed the limits established by the Federal Drug Administration.

Questions about ceramics glazes and requests for copies of guidelines for their use may be addressed to Mr. Gervan at the Department of Public Instruction, Dover, 19001.

Devaluation May Expand Markets For Ag Products

Devaluation of the dollar may open new markets for U.S. agricultural products, according to W. T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware.

He explains that devaluation is accomplished by raising the price of gold used to back the dollar in world trade. The short-term effect of this action is to increase the price of imported goods in relation to domestically produced goods. U.S. exports will also be lower priced in foreign markets which will improve our competitive positions in world trade.

Overseas markets are an expanding outlet for American agricultural products, says McAllister. Devaluation may increase this demand and increase farm prices at the same time. It may also discourage importation of such items as specialized dairy products and processed meats; and more importantly, it may strengthen the United States' bargaining position in the negotiating better terms of trade with other nations.

To the average person, the impact of devaluation will hardly be noticeable and in a few months, most people will have forgotten about it. McAllister notes that the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, in a statement on devaluation, says this is unfortunate.

The council claims Americans don't realize that the import - export problems aren't all the result of cheap foreign labor, government export subsidies and unfair trade policies. Many of the problems are caused by featherbedding, make work and restrict work practices and other production inefficiencies found in the U.S.

Windbreaks Can Increase Your Indoor Comfort

When strong winter winds howl against your windows, it's easy to recognize the value of a well designed windbreak planting. A properly located windbreak can be a real asset to suburban homeowners as well as to rural families, says Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

A windbreak can decrease your heating costs, reduce drafts, decrease winter injury to outdoor plants and increase the usefulness of your outdoor living area. Stevens also points out that a windbreak planting may serve other purposes such as screening out undesirable views, reducing noise from highways, as a boundary divider and shrub boarder.

Even a small windbreak will make outdoor living and working conditions more enjoyable during the winter months. And when carefully designed, windbreaks won't reduce your ventilation during the summer.

This time of year is ideal for planning your windbreak, even though planting should wait until spring, says Stevens. Locate the planting in relation to the prevailing winds. For ideal winter protection, use the windbreak to screen north and west sides of the area to be protected. Evergreens make the best windbreaks, since they will reduce the wind more than leafy plants. But many broad-leaf evergreens windburn easily, so it is best to stay with needled varieties, he adds. Canadian hemlock, spruce, pine arborvitae and upright yews make excellent plantings.

If space is a limiting factor, your windbreak may be planted as a hedge. A double row of evergreens will be more effective, however, if ample space is available.
