

Lake Forest Eyes Building Program

Minutes of the regular meeting of the Lake Forest Board of Education held at Lake Forest High School Monday evening, Jan. 17.

The Board approved a petition presented by the Lake Forest Education Association to represent teachers of the district in negotiations with the Board for the next two years.

The Board accepted the resignation of Mrs. Marilyn TenEyck as physical education teacher at the W. T. Chipman Junior School effective at the end of the school year.

The Board hired Denis Curran as an English teacher at the high school, and William Goldsborough, Jr., as an elementary teacher at Lake Forest East Elementary School.

Mr. Mock outlined building program needs to be incorporated in a revised Certificate of Necessity. He predicted that educational facilities would be needed for 200 more pupils by September, 1974. Principal areas calling for expansion are academic courses, business education, shop mechanics, and drafting, food and clothing, and instrumental music. The Superintendent was instructed to request an Amend Certificate of Necessity to replace the Certificate of Necessity approved by the State Board of Education March 25, 1971. The Amended Certificate of Necessity should authorize a school construction program with a total cost of $1,125,000, the State share being $615,000 and the district share being $410,000. Additions and alterations to be authorized are as follows:

At Lake Forest East Elementary School: Construction and equipment of 14 classrooms and 3 special rooms—art, music and library. Alterations to remodel the gymnasium-auditorium; enlarge the cafeteria kitchen and dining areas; remodel office, health services, and faculty workroom areas; and expand heating and sewage facilities. The estimated cost of this part of the program is $850,000.

At Lake Forest High School: Construction and equipment of a shop, a music room, and additional classrooms (3 to 5) at an estimated cost of $175,000.

We're bowling them over! The pins that is! And who are "we"? Members of the group who meet at the Milford Bowling Lanes every Thursday morning at ten. Among these are Pearl Derrickson, Gladys Hill, Annabelle Morrow, Samuel Short, Mildred Vincent, Emo Tee, William Stalling, Freida Wilcotts, Della Ryan, and Catherine Errigo. Can you imagine a score of 126 from one of this group who has had no more than 10 trips to the lanes. It happened! Records are being kept in the hopes that a team may be formed for the tournament that has been arranged for February 11. This past week Emo Tee had both the high game and highest average score. Annabelle Marrow was second in both, and Mildred Vincent was third in each. The rest had fun!

While some of our members have been having fun, others have been unable to attend due to illness. Katie Austin had hoped to spend part of a day with us but still deems it wiser to remain at home for a while yet. Ethel Bull has not fully recovered from the effects of an operation on her eye and is not attending. Helen Collins has improved and is planning to visit with us again. Lelia Hopkins has been forced once again to curtail her activities and has been confined to her home for ten days. Leah Coleman has been unable to attend due to her husband's illness and, at times, her own. Mabel and Clarence Kemp have been prevented from attending due to his recent illness. Bernice Johnson reports that she has been gaining back her strength but still is unable to do any traveling. Florence Layton is residing with her daughter, Louise, in Faulkland Heights and has had a bout with the "bug". Elsie O'Neal is at home after having spent sometime in the hospital. Unfortunately she is still unable to leave her home. Mary Stafford, a guest now at Ingram's Nursing Home at Argo's Corner, also recently spent six weeks in the hospital but is reported as being much improved. During the past 10 days it has seemed quite strange not to see Sam Short at the Center. He, too, was "floored" by the virus. Mary Cooper is not back on regular schedule but she has on the sidewalk and shouted "holdup" several times.

Jackson was arraigned and held on $10,000 bond in Sussex Correctional Institution pending trial in Superior Court.

Nation Looks At State's Crime Program

Delaware's goal of reducing the crime rate has started to have an impact on national affairs.

This became apparent last week when Governor Russell W. Peterson was called to Washington by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew to attend a briefing on a new national program aimed at reducing street crime and burglaries. The effort will be conducted by the federal government in cooperation with local and state governments. Eight major cities throughout the nation have been selected to share $160 million in federal money over the next two years.

Ten more major cities will be added to the list later.

The idea for setting a firm goal to reduce crime by Governor Peterson when he proposed that Delaware cut its rate of violent crime in half by 1980.

This "Model State" approach was a factor in Governor Peterson's selection as Chairman of the Committee on Law Enforcement and Public Safety of the National Governors Conference. At the Governor's suggestion, the committee changed its name to the Committee on Crime Reduction and Public Safety. The entire membership of the NGC subsequently recommended adoption of a national crime reduction goal.

The Governor is also Chairman of the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals, which currently is studying the crime reduction concept.

At last week's meeting in Washington, Attorney General John Mitchell said that the program "is not a pilot project or a study program. While there will be some research, the primary emphasis will be applying the research that we have already completed. This is a priority program to achieve early and noteworthy results." The program is aimed at violent crime: murder, manslaughter, rape, robbery, and aggravated assault.

The federal program calls for a 50% reduction in the growth rate of violent crime by 1982. The cities selected are Baltimore, Newark, N. J., St. Louis, Atlanta, Dallas, Cleveland, Denver and Portland.

KENT COUNTY COMMENTS

by JOSHUA M. TWILLEY
Levy Court President

Of prime concern to myself and the other Levy Court Commissioners is the safety of the lives and property of the people living in Kent County.

As you know, minutes saved in emergencies can save the life of yourself or a friend, or some member of your family. It can, in the case of fire, also save your property from total destruction.

Because of this, the Levy Court included in its budget, as a priority item for 1972, the establishment of an Emergency Call Board for Kent County to be operated in conjunction with the Kent County Volunteer Firemen's Association, and designated five jobs for communications specialists and dispatchers under the Emergency Employment Program, to man this Call Board.

Last Tuesday evening, the Levy Court Commissioners, representatives of seventeen of the Volunteer Fire Companies in Kent County, and the State and County Civil Defense Director held a joint meeting to research and discuss the most economical and quickest method to implement this much needed service.

As a result of this meeting, the project application for the available grant funds to assist the Kent County Levy Court in the purchase of emergency communications equipment is being reviewed in Olney, Md., at the Region Office of Civil Defense.

In preparation for the operation of this system, dispatchers and communications specialists are scheduled to be hired and trained as soon as possible.

The Kent County Levy Court stands ready to assume the responsibility of the safety and protection of its citizens, and will work with the firemen, the citizens, State Police, Civil Defense, and other safety oriented organizations to provide as rapidly and efficiently as possible the best emergency communications facility for you and your family.

New Century Club Notes

The Harrington New Century Club met on Tuesday, Jan. 11 at 12:15 to drive up to Dover where we were privileged to have a conducted tour through the Historical and Cultural building. We were shown the original Charter of Delaware and the original deeds of Delaware. England had offered a high sum of money for these, but the owner gave them to the State of Delaware, under the condition they would be well preserved. A new vault was built to house these documents. We were taken over to the underground archives, where we could browse around and see many interesting records and pictures.

We then entered our cars and our guide led us to the Octagonal School House. This was the first public school opened in Delaware in 1836; after - in 1930 the law was passed to have public schools. We saw the pump, lunch pails, the text books, work books, teachers qualifications, the stove in the center of the room—the desks and benches, and many other interesting things.

We were shown the American Flag used in this school when it was built; showing 13 stripes and 25 stars. The school, which is a stone building was in service from 1836 to 1930. The original window sills are still in use—they were painted celery green. The walls were white-washed and certain sections painted black—so chalk could be used. The floor was of the wide boards flooring. This is the only school, left in Delaware of this design.

The school was built for $1,000.00, it took care of children up to the 8th grade. At times they had as many as 85 students. The ground which is an acre was sold for the school for $1.00 under the conditions they put up and maintain a good strong fence.

The program was enjoyed by all, and we plan to meet again at 8 p.m. at the Club House - the program "Community Improvements."

Second-Hand Appliances

Buying a major appliance such as a stove, refrigerator or washer can be a major family investment.

But you can reduce the cost if you buy a second-hand appliance. They're usually available from a second-hand dealer, a new or used appliance store, individuals or at an auction, according to Miss Coral K Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Of course, the difficult part is determining whether the appliance is worth the selling price. This problem comes up because many of the things that should be checked on the appliance are hidden behind doors or inside walls and panels.

When you're considering buying a used appliance, remember that original manufacturer's warranties no longer apply after a second sale, even if the specified time has not elapsed.

Sometimes you can find a dealer who will give some kind of a warranty—30 days, 90 days or a year. This would reduce your risk in buying the appliance. It's important to choose a reputable dealer who backs legitimate claims against warranties, Miss Morris cautions.

You face the greatest risk buying from an individual or at an auction. You get no warranty and you'll have to pay for any necessary repair. Many times, however, you may be able to get a satisfactory or nearly new appliance from a friend or neighbor who's moving and prefers to sell a large article rather than move it.

If the appliance is advertised by a store as "reconditioned," exactly what he has been done to it? First, Miss Morris explains, the working parts of the appliance have been replaced or repaired if needed, and they've been tested to be sure they're in satisfactory condition. The appliance has been cleaned inside and out.

Some dealers repaint the outside of a reconditioned appliance. However, many find this painting too expensive, so they'll only start with a used appliance that has a good outside finish.

Features such as oven clocks, lights, outlets and timers may not work on a reconditioned appliance. If they do, they may not be guaranteed by a dealer.

If you're buying a used appliance "as is" before reconditioning, try to determine if the appliance works satisfactorily, advises Miss Morris. Check to see how many flaws in either the operation or appearance of the appliance can be corrected by cleaning it, or how many are repairs. The better the appliance operates and looks, the more it is worth the selling price.

For more detailed information on what to look for in such appliances as gas and electric ranges, refrigerators and clothes washers, write for a copy of the "Used Appliance Fact Sheet" from the Agricultural Editor's Office, 139 Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, 19711.

Greenwood

by Pat Hatfield

At the Greenwood Kiwanis meeting last Thursday evening, Roy Rowe, using a tape recorder, presented excerpts of speeches and newscasts dating back to the 1930's. He refreshed our memories of those trying days during the depression, leading up to the second World War. The once-familiar but long-since silent voices of President Franklin Roosevelt, Nevill Chamberlain, Adolf Hitler and Mussolini were again heard. Our thanks to Roy for this program.

Next week another good program is promised by program chairman, Roy Lloyd.

Consider Cordless Appliances

You can go anywhere, do almost anything electrical today—providing your batteries are charged.

The list of cordless electrical appliances and gadgets appearing on the market is constantly growing. One advantage is the complete mobility, says Miss Coral K. Morris, University of Delaware extension home management specialist. Your work area is not limited by cords and outlets.

Safety is another important factor, Miss Morris indicates. Cordless appliances require lower wattage compared with the plug-in variety. They virtually eliminate any electric shock hazard which makes them safe to use in damp areas.

Disadvantage of cordless appliances vary with each item. The main complaint, generally, is the limited power of rechargeable batteries. You can only operate the appliance for a certain length of time. And the added weight of the batteries sometimes makes a unit uncomfortable to work with, says Miss Morris.

Cordless appliances usually cost more than the plug-in models. However, the cost of operation varies. For example, appliances using rechargeable batteries generally cost less to operate than those using disposable batteries.

"A disposable battery," Miss Morris explains, "is a self-contained power plant that eventually uses up all of its energy." You'll find three types available—carbon-zinc (flashlight batteries used in novelty items); alkaline (like those used in phonographs and movie cameras); and mercury (a small battery found in hearing aids and electric watches).

Rechargeable batteries, Miss Morris illustrates, are used in products that require a great deal of power. Their energy is restored by connecting directly into either a wall outlet or a recharger. You'll find these batteries in toothbrushes, shavers, knives, vacuum cleaners and power hand tools. If the appliance utilizes a built-in or separate recharger, check it for the Underwriter's Laboratory's seal of approval, cautions Miss Morris. The U. L. tag signifies that the recharger meets standards that guard against electrical short hazards and fire.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

RAILROAD RAILARY

Come all you Rounders if you want to hear,
 A story about a brave Engineer.
 Casey Jones was the Rounder's name,
 On a "four-six-wheeler" where he won his fame.

These first lines of a once famous poem "Casey Jones" brings to mind the story about two young college men with railroad-ambitions, and wanting to start at the bottom, hired out as freight-brakemen.

After passing required examinations they were told by the yard-master, to report to Conductor Smith at the south end of the freight yard. Decked out in new pin-striped overclothes, cap and gauntlet gloves, they tell Conductor Smith; "We are your brakemen for today, what do you want us to do?" Smith tells one of them to get a bucket of water, and scrub out the cabin. Then started showing the other, how to couple the train-line air hose between each car, said; "When you get up to the front end tell the Engineer to cut-in." By the time the Rokey reached the engine he began to feel he knew his way around, calling up to the Engineer; "hey Buckey, cut-er-in." Engineer; "Cut what in?" Rokey; "the water, so they can scrub out the cabin".

Coach McDonald Is Honored In Wilmington

Once upon a time there was a high school baseball coach whose main strategy was to bunt and run. Since his school had no track team, that running was as close as this coach could get to track... until a track nut on the school board got track and cross country added to the school's sports program. Then this coach's talents really began to shine. Within a few years, his school created a reputation as a running power; and what's more important, the other schools in the area followed suit by upgrading their track and cross country programs.

The area I'm speaking of is central Delaware; the school is Harrington (now Lake Forest); and the coach is the gentleman on my left — Harold McDonald.

In June, Mac will retire after 30 years in teaching and coaching. In that time he has done a great deal for track and cross country—and thus we are honoring him tonight.

We can look at a teacher-achievements such as TWO 30 meet winning streaks in cross country, 12 conference titles in cross country and four in track; three state titles in cross country, and a record of 147 wins and 13 losses in yC.

We can look also at a teacher of stature who chaired his department and was president of teachers associations in Harrington, Lake Forest, and Kent County. Mac further served on the Legislative Committee of the Delaware State Ed. Assn.

Now we understand that Mac will retire and live in Harrington. Perhaps in those leisure years he'll even find time to be a member of our officials organization. We hope so. Officials appreciate teams that are well-coached and well behaved, and Mac's teams have been tops in both areas.

I know that all the officials here join me in wishing you a happy retirement. And we'd like to add one more plaque to your trophy case.

Comments by Sports Editor: The above remarks were made by Bob Behr of Tower Hill School, at the University and Whist Club, Wilmington. Behr is one of Delaware's better-known figures in track and cross-country circles.

Hosts of the evening were the Track Officials Division of the Delaware Sports Club.

A co-conspirator with Behr was J. Norman Cotter of Tannall School. Cotter was a highly-talented French teacher at Harrington High School and was also a bicyclist of note.

Lake Forest Cagers Lose To Woodbridge and Dover

Lake Forest's losing streak reached three after away defeats at Woodbridge and Dover. The Spartans are 3-3, at this writing.

At Woodbridge, the locals were outscored in every period, enroute to a 76-61 defeat. Jim Dill and Frank Daniels seem to be able to hit double figures against anyone in the conference, but they aren't getting enough scoring help.

Dill had 19 markers, including 9 of 10 from the free throw line. Daniels had 15.

Nottingham and Solomon of Dover have been ailing, but such is the Spartan's luck, both of them were hale and hearty and chipped in a total of 27 points, as Dover triumphed 69-42.

In Dover's only loss, to Caesar Rodney, Nottingham didn't play. Solomon had a sprained ankle and was very ineffective.

Lake Forest hung tough for two periods, then were outpointed 36-16 in the second half.

Dill (16) and Daniels (14) had 13 of the Spartans 18 fields goals, while totalling 30 points.

Chipman Matmen Crush Opponents

The Chipman wrestling team opened its season on Jan. 6 by crushing Laurel 88-0. Thirteen of the 16 starting wrestlers win by pins.

Jerry McGinty got the Spartans rolling with a 15-0 victory, followed by a 3-0 victory by Mike Smith. Then the roof fell in on the Bulldogs as the Spartans pinned the next 11 Laurel wrestlers. The consecutive pins and the time of the pins are as follows: Don Baynard (1:55), Robert Richard (2:50), Arthur Wilson (1:53), Terry Stewart (1:35), Don Smith (2:37), Tommy Knapp (1:19), Larry Tibbett (2:20), Ronald Berry (3:2), Walt Benton (1:41), Bill Jackson (1:25), and Gene Lemmons (2:9).

Richard Wright captured a 4-0 decision. Mike McGinnis gained a 25-second pin and Dennis Paulson put the icing on the cake with a pin in 2:22.

In scrimmage matches, Russell Knaub whitewashed his opponent to the tune of 5-0. Francis Maloney flattened his opponent in only 21 seconds, while Bill Jackson returned to nail another Bulldog to the mat in 1:33.

Everyone has heard of "cowboys and Indians," but never "Spartans and Indians." Anyhow, the Spartan wrestlers of Chipman waged a "battle royal" with the Indians of Selbyville on January 13.

After the dust had settled, the Spartans were sitting on top of a 53-20 victory.

Jerry McGinty got things started with a 6-0 victory. Donald Baynard set a new Chipman wrestling record with a pin in only 15 seconds.

The remainder of the action was as follows: Robert Richard won by a pin in 1:54; Terry Stewart battled to a 2-2 tie; Larry Tibbett punished his opponent unmercifully but finally had to settle for a 14-0 decision; Ronald Berry won by a pin in 1:52; Bill Jackson flattened his opponent in 2:58; Gene Lemmons scored an 11-0 decision; Richard Wright won by a pin in 2:31; Mike McGinnis wasted no time in dumping his opponent in only 44 seconds, and, finally, Dennis Paulson killed the last Indian with a 12-0 decision.

The Chipman wrestling team was arrested by the game ward on January 13 for hunting out-of-season. It seems that the Smyrna Eagles flew into the Chipman gym and were shot down by the Spartan guns 45-32. Let's hope that the Spartans get out of jail in time for their match at Caesar Rodney.

Here is a review of the events of the crime:

Jerry McGinty fired the first shot, dropping his opponent by a score of 9-2; Mike Smith followed with a pin in 1:36; Donald Baynard scored a 2-1 decision; Robert Richard flattened his Eagle in 2:34; The fastest pin of the day was a 48-second victory by Arthur Wilson; Terry Stewart whitewashed his opponent by a score of 12-0; Brian Manges was a 6-4 winner; Larry Tibbett dished out his usual amount of punishment before making the "kill" in 1:54; Walt Benton buried his feathered opponent "from the north" in 1:36; Richard Wright battled to a 4-4 tie.

In scrimmage matches, Jimmy Simpson gained a pin in 2:58; Mike Benson scored his victory in only 1:20; Donald Murray captured a 3-1 decision; Robert Mullans was victorious by the pin in 2:48; and Delmer Freeman finished the day with a 2-42 pin.

The young Spartan's next match at home is on Tuesday, Jan. 25 at 3:30 p.m. Their opponents will be St. Andrews. Good Luck Spartans!

Spartan Matmen Are 3-1 After Split

Remember that old cry "Break Up the Yankees?" New York's pin-tripped baseballers, at one time, so thoroughly dominated the diamond pastime, that fans wanted to see those combs broken up, in an order to get competition back in the game.

This is about the size of it, in the Henlopen Wrestling Conference. Year after year, the same three schools, Smyrna, Sussex Central and Caesar Rodney, are perched atop the standings. If the powerful trio were in a loop of their own, the remaining ten Henlopen schools would then win the titles.

Actually the Eagles, Knights and Riders deserve everything they have achieved. We feel that wrestlers have to work harder than any other scholastic athletes. When the whistle blows each grappler is on his own. Teammates, coaches, etc., can't help. It's sink or swim by your own efforts.

Caesar Rodney's unbeaten powerhouse won 11 out of 12 bouts, in handling Lake Forest its first setback. The Spartans have no unbeaten matmen after only three meets. Usually, one or two locals last until mid-season or later, before suffering their first losses.

The Riders appear to be weak in only one weight class and might go all the way this campaign if they can get by Smyrna.

Skip O'Neal was the Spartan hero, at the locals beat Dover 28-18. Going into the 180 pound match, the Spartans had a shaky one-point lead. With 73 seconds left, the Harrington Manor redhead flattened Adams of the Senators, to clinch the team victory for Lake Forest. Robin Callahan's 10-4 verdict in the heavy-weight division, put the icing on the cake.

Prior to O'Neal's timely triumph, Dover had won three straight bouts and were, no doubt, thinking positive. Martin Miller, the Vernon strong boy recorded the fastest pin of the evening, as his rival lasted only 61 seconds.

Canterbury - Viola

by Edna Massimilla

Entertainment and refreshments for shut-ins was the agenda Tuesday night when the I.O.O.F. Lodge 30 and Rebekah Lodge, Sarah No. 16 went to the Delaware Hospital for the Chronically Ill in Smyrna. There were four full cars driven by Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, the Kates and the Haldermans. Rev. John went along, also the members of Sunday's Child who furnished an evening of music for the patients. Charlotte Stevenson and Billy Halderman with other members of the Lodge and Auxiliary were on hand to socialize and help with the refreshments. Benny Moore, a former resident of Felton, and now a patient at the hospital was pleased to visit with many of his friends. Mrs. Lulu Knox, too, a Manship Church member who lived in the Felton area enjoyed seeing the visitors.

Babies are wonderful people, especially to grandparents. As for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kates, they enjoy little Scott and Kurt when they come to visit. The Furlongs, Peggy, Gary and the children spent the weekend with her parents, coming here from Island Park, Long Island.

On January 13 the Camden-Wyoming Women of the Moose Chapter 1546 met at 8:30 p.m. at the Moose Home on Kitts Hummock Road.

Sunday's Child sang a special selection during the morning service at Felton.

Congratulations to the Lake Forest High School cheerleaders who were awarded best in the state trophy in the Delaware competition on Saturday at Lake Forest High School. In spite of many difficulties such as Kathy Massimilla's laryngitis and Laura Gross' inflamed eyes, the wrestling cheerleaders carried on. Viola people congratulated Barbara and Valerie Blackman, and among others, Faye Neeman, Peggy Phelps, Terry Bell, Kevin Fletcher and Wanda Tucker.

When the question was asked, "What do you like about being a cheerleader?" the following answers were received by our correspondent:

Donna Wetherhold, Harrington, 1st place winner of individual cheer. It's the activity itself that I like. Of course, knowing that it is promoting school spirit and giving excitement to the game, makes me very happy to be a cheerleader. Debbie Wyatt and I are co-captains and we are very pleased that Lake Forest was awarded best in state.

Bobby Cordray, Milford High School: The purpose of the cheerleaders is to get the people to back up the team. I like being a cheerleader because I feel we are helping the cause.

Debbie Layton, Milford High School: Win or lose, cheerleaders back up their teams. I enjoy it for the school spirit and for the friends I make.

Faye Neeman, Lake Forest High School: You have a chance to meet many new friends, and besides having fun, you have the satisfaction of supporting the team.

Kay Lynch, Milford High School: I'm a senior and on the varsity. I'll say the same as Debbie Brittingham, also a senior, that cheering is great fun, and add that "win or lose" it's a pleasure to cheer and keep up the school spirit.

It Seems To Me

by Janet Reed

Do you have a list of pet peeves? One of those on my sewing list is the amount of waste in screen printed fabrics. I wouldn't mind the waste so much, but I have a feeling we often are paying for unusable portions of fabric at the same rate as an expensive created design.

Then there's the problem of how much of a screen printed fabric to buy. These fabrics are labeled by fabric width—not design width—and these are two very different things. Some designs may have as much as two or three inches of white unusable edges on one or both sides.

The unwary customer who is accustomed to buying by fabric width notices the width on the bolt and buys yardage for that width. When she lays out her patterns, she realizes she may have only 40 inches of usable width instead of 45 inches and she doesn't have enough yardage. If she's lucky, the store might still have the same fabric so she can buy enough to complete her garment.

But screen prints tend to have larger designs and larger repeats. This requires extra fabric for matching at important design areas of a garment.

So, if you have to buy additional yardage, there is likely to be additional waste if you want the design to match.

Screen printing processes have long been recognized as producing high-quality designs. For many years, it was essentially a hand printing process. Hand printing still is done in some manufacturing plants and labeled as such. It is expensive because of the hand labor involved.

Automatic and semi-automatic printing machines have adapted the process so that production is faster and therefore less expensive. The design size is somewhat limited to the size of the equipment. Some of this equipment was designed for standard size looms. As we have moved into the use of more and more knitted fabrics which can be of much wider and varying widths, printing machines have not always been adapted for this wider fabric.

This may be no earth-shattering problem, but it's an aggravation and easily corrected. If fabric is labeled by design width instead of fabric width, it would be a help to consumers. Also, if store personnel would call this fact to the attention of customers before cutting fabric from the bolt, they would have some grateful customers.

Robert Raley of McNichols Plant Nursery in Lewes was inspired by recent balmy weather to check on plantings of beachgrass in the Henlopen Dunes area here. The nursery was awarded the soil stabilization contract by First U.S. Army Headquarters at Ft. Meade, Md. When spring comes liquid fertilizer will be sprayed on the grass from aircraft to complete what the First Army Engineers call "Phase One" of the dune conserving project.

TOWN AND COUNTRY TOPICS

FRANCIS WEBB
KENT COUNTY AGENT

Those of you that have lived in Delaware for the last ten years leave, I am sure, recognize the number of farm ponds that have been constructed. Most of these ponds are located so as to accent the landscape of the farmstead as well as, in many cases, to provide swimming, fishing, and an all important fire protection resource.

Your Kent County Soil and Water Conservation District has been very active in assisting the landowner in constructing these ponds. Your Soil Conservation Service has also been outstanding in the technical services provided to the landowner to insure proper location, size, and construction techniques.

Upon constructing your deep water type ponds, you can run into several problems with the use of the water after construction, and in some cases, for years later. The one big problem encountered immediately after reconstruction is known as muddy water, which is clay particles suspended among the water molecules. In some ponds, this will take care of itself over a three to eight month period. However, in some ponds there continues to be a problem for longer periods.

The one method that has been used to some degree of success has been the application of gypsum to the water. This collects the clay particles and holds them tightly, then settles to the bottom. There are other materials under test now which may be used with greater success in the future.

The other major problem encountered in farm ponds, and this always comes shortly after construction, particularly if done in the summer time, is algae and water weeds. Algae, the biggest problem, makes the pond unattractive, unsuitable for swimming and recreation, and plugs the suction screen when drawing water for irrigation purposes. Algae are small primitive plants that do not have leaves or roots and are usually found floating or attached to underwater surfaces.

There are three types of algae in farm ponds—plankton, which makes the water a soapy green; filamentous or water scum, which consists of long stringy hair-like strands; and chara, which is often mistaken for underwater weeds such as coontail or milfoil because they look so much alike. All three types can be eliminated with algicides and after application usually takes about four days for it to eliminate growth.

The one algicide used most often in pure copper sulphate. However, a newer material which is a chelated copper sulphate (Cutrine) seems to be more effective on the algae as well as being safer for fish and somewhat easier to use.

Although less prevalent, water weeds can also be a serious pond problem. There are approximately 32 important water weeds which can be identified as submerged, surface, and standing. There are also as many herbicides for their control as there are weed species. However, no one herbicide will destroy all weeds. Before application of any materials, definite identification of the weed or the algae should be made.

An algae problem may require application of materials a couple times a season; whereas, with water weed control it would only be once a season and in many cases once in two or three years.

Algae and some weeds will always be the natural enemy of private ponds. The remedy is full control by knowledgeable owners handling the proper chemicals, applying them at the proper time in the proper amount. I might add that lakes, lake fronts, and, in some cases, rivers can be treated in similar fashion with very good results.

Kent County alone has 270 deep water ponds which are used for irrigation and recreation, and approximately 250 shallow water ponds which are primarily for water fowl. Most of these ponds beautify our landscape, supply recreation facilities, and, in most cases, give quick access to large volumes of water in case of fire.

If you have a pond with either the muddy water problem or pest problems such as algae and weeds, you can contact the Soil Conservation Service at 697-3376, or the County Extension Office at 736-1448. If you do not presently have a pond on your property and are thinking about constructing one, contact the Soil Conservation Service for technical assistance. They always stand ready to help.

Dairy Production Can Be Increased

Practically any dairyman can operate his system more efficiently.

Changes in management practices, attitude and labor use can often save more time than buying additional labor-saving equipment, according to W. T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware.

The best 20 percent of all mechanized systems produced 620 lb. of milk per hour of milking time; the average of all mechanized systems produced 395 lb., and the lowest 20 percent produced 260 lb. of milk per hour of milking time. The best of the non-mechanized systems averaged 380 lb., which nearly equalled the average of the mechanized systems.

How can you produce milk more efficiently from your dairy herd? McAllister reported on possible solutions at the Delaware Winter Dairy Meetings recently.

Milk your cows faster. Train machine operators to recognize when cows are finished milking. Keep machine time under 4½ minutes.

Establish a routine, McAllister recommends. Have all tasks planned and carry them through in sequence when you're ready to milk. Keep your machines as close together as possible to decrease wasted motion.

Do no other job while milking, McAllister continues. Have a relatively regular schedule for milking. Chore time takes even longer when your schedule is irregular.

Keep milking equipment reasonably up-to-date and in good condition, McAllister advises.

Application of these suggestions can help you increase the performance efficiency of your dairy operation, McAllister concluded.

1972 Forecast

The picture for agriculture looks brighter in 1972 than it has been recently.

Nationally, the outlook is for substantial gains in gross farm income, at least into the middle of the year, according to W. T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware.

Consumers are expected to use more farm products this year—another reason for optimism, McAllister states. Tax reductions, increased participation in the food stamp plan and a decline in unemployment will encourage food sales, he says.

Stabilized costs add another bright note. Farm costs have climbed rapidly for several years, but 1972 may be the "low-down" period. Costs will continue to rise, McAllister predicts, but at a slower rate.

The most dramatic change in 1972 farm costs will be reduced feed prices. "That will be primarily due to larger supplies of grain," says McAllister. This means prospects are generally good that profits for beef, pork, broiler, turkey, egg and milk producers will improve.

For many of these farmers, it would take a substantial improvement to offset the income losses they experienced in 1971 when feed costs were sent soaring by the 1970 corn blight epidemic. "However, this larger supply of grain means that grain farmers have received lower prices," McAllister reminds.

More blight-resistant corn varieties will be available and prices for this seed should be reduced. Other seed prices should average about the same to slightly higher. Fertilizer prices may rise slightly but less than in the past year, the economist advises.

Wage and price controls may slow down the rate of increase in farm wage rates and farm machinery prices. Short-term interest rates will probably remain about stable after declining during 1971. The spread between long-term and short-term rates is likely to decrease.

For Delaware vegetable producers, the 1972 outlook also looks good, barring unfavorable weather. The decrease in per capita supplies of processed vegetables in the country should benefit Delaware growers.

McAllister also points out the risk involved in making predictions about supplies of future crops. "Not only are the weather and fields unpredictable, but farmers can switch crops at the last minute," he says. So planting intentions that farmers report may not actually develop.

Predictions must also allow for the threat of a disease outbreak, a new government program or an unexpected demand from a new overseas customer, McAllister concludes.

New Lima Bean Announced

A new downy mildew-resistant bush lima bean has just been released in the Delaware-Maryland-New Jersey area.

The release of Bridgeton, a high-yielding, green-seeded bean, was announced by the Plant Science Research Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture along with the Delaware and New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Stations.

Bridgeton resulted from a cross between Dover, a green-seeded baby lima, and S 33a, a breeding line from the Emerald variety, according to Dr. Vernon Fisher, associate professor of plant science at the University of Delaware.

The Bridgeton plants are shorter and more compact with shorter flower clusters than those of Dover. A heavy crop of pods is produced below the foliage. This reduces excessive flower drop caused by abnormal heat, drought, wind and rain.

Bridgeton's pods reach prime marketable conditions three to eight days earlier than Dover. Pod length, thickness, width and shape are similar to Dover and Thaxter beans.

The prime marketable green-shelled Bridgeton beans are the same size as Dover, but greener in color and of better flavor and texture. These characteristics develop under normal weather conditions when beans are maturing.

Bridgeton is resistant to downy mildew strains A and B but susceptible to strain C.

The new lima bean was developed in cooperation with the Delaware and New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Stations, the Wheatley Canning Company and Seabrook Farms Company. It has been tested extensively in the Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey lima bean production areas and in the seed producing areas of California.

Approximately 28,000 lbs. of Bridgeton seed are available for distribution to producers upon written request to Dr. J. P. Meiners, Bean and Pea Investigations, Plant Science Research Division, Plant Industry Station, Beltsville, Md. 20705, before March 1, 1972.

Delaware Food Market Report

What vegetable is a true food bargain—for budget and nutrition? Dry beans and their close cousins, the dry peas and lentils, are the answer. All are hearty foods because of their carbohydrates, which the body uses for energy. They contain some B vitamins. They are nuggets of mineral value for iron and calcium they contain; and with all this, they provide useful protein which the body requires to build and repair its organs and tissues.

You can get the most good from these bean family foods if you have in the same meal some grain food, like bread, or some meat, cheese, or other protein from an animal source. Baked beans with brown bread, pork and beans, and chili con carne are good teams for nutrition as well as for flavor.

The reason? Proteins in foods are made up of different combinations of amino acids. Some of these proteins are more complete than others, thus more useful to the body. There are especially good proteins in meat; and when even a little of this protein is combined with bean protein, it makes a strong protein team.

There are many varieties of beans found on grocery shelves these days. Among them are the black beans (or turtle soup beans) used for thick soups and in Oriental and Mediterranean dishes. Garbanzo beans known as "chick peas" are nutty in flavor and usually pickled in vinegar and oil for salads. They can also be used as a delicious main dish vegetable without pickling.

Great Northern beans are used in soups, salads, and casserole dishes. They tend to break up and become mushy when baked. Kidney beans are popular for chili con carne and add zest to salads and many Mexican dishes.

Pea beans are small, oval, and white to cream in color. They are a favorite for soups and home baked beans because they hold their shape when cooked.

The term "navy beans" is a broad one, including Great Northern, pea beans, and small white beans. So when the recipe you are using calls for navy beans you are safe in using any of the above named.

When buying beans you can figure that a pound will measure more than 2 cups and when cooked will give from 7 to 9 servings of beans, depending on the size of serving. As you buy, look for USDA Choice Hand-Picked dry beans; then you are sure to get the best. This is the top grade issued and to be worthy of most classes, beans must be 98.5 percent free from defect. Other grades include U.S. #1, U.S. #2, and U.S. #3.

Many people avoid beans because of the length of cooking time. If you can't remember to soak beans overnight, why not try the quick soak method or use pre-soaked beans. For a quick way out, sort beans and boil 2 minutes using 1 part beans for every 2½ to 3 parts of water. Remove from heat and let stand 1 hour. Then proceed with final recipe directions. Never use baking soda when cooking beans. It robs them of vitamins and minerals; and if you do remember to soak the beans over night, always cook them in that water so you won't throw away any nutrients.
