Diamond State Telephone Company's "Get Tough" policy on toll fraud is beginning to get results, reports James Nolan, the firm's security agent.

"There have been 17 arrests in the state in the last 6 months. We have had 13 convictions and there are 4 cases still in the courts pending action."

This stepped-up action is getting results in a drive by the company to end fraudulent use of telephone credit cards and other means of defraud. It represents a new policy of apprehension, prosecution and restitution, Nolan reported.

"The people who commit toll fraud come from all walks of life," the security man explained. "People who have been apprehended and convicted include businessmen, students, and housewives," he said.

Last month, 8 complaints in Delaware resulted in 4 convictions with 4 complaints still pending.

Some recent typical cases included:

In Dover on March 13, two male students pleaded guilty in Magistrate Court for making illegal credit card calls. They were fined and paid court costs of $17.50. They also paid the telephone company for the illegal calls.

In Seaford, in April, a woman pleaded guilty to phone fraud in Magistrate Court. She too paid a fine and court costs. She had made calls from her phone but charged them to someone else's phone.

Nolan points out that new security techniques of our modern society are making the detection of toll fraud faster.

"This includes our new use of credit card coding, tighter control of credit card distribution, and new detection tools developed by our engineers," he said.

A new Toll Fraud Investigation Unit is working with local law enforcement personnel to get convictions.

In many sections of Delaware operators are now able to detect many fraudulent calls by merely pressing a button on their switchboard computer. This same computer also has been programmed to alert the operator to a credit card number, which has a history of fraudulent use, is being used.

"Even when a person 'successfully' makes an illegal credit card call, our chances of apprehending him are getting better and better and faster because of our new techniques," Nolan added. "Awareness of the problem, cooperation of police, and college officials, and the basic honesty of most people are helping us."

Penalties can go as high as $500 and a year in prison. And also full-restitution to the telephone company for the illegal toll calls.

Among the 12 other numbers to be performed by the jazz band will be Stan Kenton's "Opus in Opalescence" and "La Suerete De Los Tontos" originally done in 1956 by Kenton's 56-piece band.

Peter Hill, a member of the university's music department and director of the band, will be featured in the concert on soprano saxophone and flute.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Lake Forest School Bond Issue Loses

Voters in the Lake Forest School District Wed., April 12, overwhelmingly rejected a proposed $457,000 construction bond issue.

The district's taxpayers voted 837 to 451 against the bond issue, which would have provided funds for construction of 14 classrooms, a library, and music, art and cafeteria facilities at East Elementary School in Frederica. Four votes were declared void.

A breakdown of vote is as follows: For the bond issue, Frederica, 160; against, 118; Harrington, for 150, against 408; Felton, for 141, against 311. Total Frederica vote, 278; total Harrington vote, 561; and total Felton vote, 453.

The bond issue would have raised the district property tax by 15 cents, increasing the rate to $1,200 per $100 of assessed property valuation.

Dr. Howard E. Henry, the district deputy superintendent, pointed out that a similar bond issue had been rejected last year.

Henry said Lake Forest is the fastest growing district in the state. He said there are more than a dozen housing projects under construction in the district.

"The kids are going to be coming," he said. "We're trying to get the schools ready for them. If you wait until you're hurting, till the kids are falling out the windows, then their education is going to suffer."

The $457,000 would have been the district's share of the construction project. Henry said the district will lose its state allocation for the other 60 per cent of the project.

"This will mean we'll have to give up the idea of doing anything under our approved building program," he said.

Henry said the bond issue lost because the voters "obviously don't want to pay any more school taxes." A school tax proposal he said, "is the one place the taxpayer has a chance to say 'no'."

U.D. Div. of Continuing Education Promotion Program in Top Ten

The Institute for Communication Research at Stanford University has designated the promotion program of the Division of Continuing Education at the University of Delaware as one of the 10 exemplary adult education promotion programs in the U.S.

The promotion program keeps the public aware of courses and other activities sponsored by the division.

The research institute's decision is based on information collected from a "Promotion of Lifetime Learning Programs" questionnaire sent to 2,000 institutions which offer adult or continuing education.

The study, conducted under the auspices of the U.S. Office of Education (USOE), is designed to complete an inventory of adult education programs and promotion in the U.S.

A two-man team from Stanford will make a one-day visit to the U. of D. campus in late April to obtain more detailed information on the university's program that would be helpful to other institutions in promoting adult education.

The university's promotion program will be one of 10 featured in a report by the institute to the USOE.

The Division of Continuing Education (formerly University Extension) is concerned primarily with structured educational activities — degree credit and nondegree courses, institutes, seminars, public lectures, concerts, plays, conference and workshops.

The division administers more than 650 degree credit courses throughout Delaware each year at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. These courses, conducted primarily in the evening, produce 15,000 registrations and deliver approximately 50,000 credit hours of instruction.

Nondegree courses with a professional or community service orientation, nonexistent a decade ago, now number 200 annually with more than 10,000 registrants. More than 400 educational conferences are accommodated each year with total attendance in excess of 80,000. Art exhibitions, concerts, dance performances, plays and public lectures in all parts of the state round out the division's varied activities.

The university's continuing education program has grown phenomenally during the past decade, John A. Murray, director of the division, said.

Decorating With Pictures

Pictures are part of your home's unique personality. They can give an impression of clutter or orderliness, of calmness or confusion, of the kind of people who live there. Even the lack of pictures in a home can tell something, according to Mrs. Marjorie Poore, Poore's Country Shop, Milford.

She spoke at the Delaware Home Improvement Fair, March 16, Dover. The fair was sponsored by New Castle, Kent and Sussex Home Economics Extension Service, University of Delaware, members of home economics extension clubs and various decorating products retailers.

Pictures can be used very effectively in groupings, said Mrs. Poore. It's a good way to use several small or medium-size pictures attractively. Snapshots, tiny prints, or even postcards can be effective in groups. When they're used alone, they get lost on the walls.

Large or small, whatever the shape, wall space can be effectively filled by a grouping. A single picture may look as though it were haphazardly hung in a spot, but a well-planned group looks as though it belongs. When similar pictures are grouped and hung as a unit, there is a sense of unity and order that is missing if they're hung separately around a room, said Mrs. Poore.

In selecting art for the home, choose things you like—not what you think you should like. Choose things you're comfortable with, or if possible, things that have personal meaning.

And don't be caught in a trap by feeling that everything you own must be on display. Only choose things that seem to belong together.

To communicate that feeling of belonging, the pictures you group together should have some kind of relationship or theme. Perhaps all pictures are by the same artist, or have the same style. Maybe subject matter is similar, or size, or color tones.

One way to add dimension to a grouping is to stand one or two pictures on a desk or shelf and hang the rest on the wall behind it. Mrs. Poore suggests small pictures displayed on easels as part of a table arrangement—governed, of course, by the size of the picture and the table. An easel picture can fill in that awkward space between the height of an ashtray and a table lamp.

Framing? It's a total part of the picture. But not all frames and pictures make ideal marriages, Mrs. Poore pointed out. It may take some looking to find the right combination. This is doubly hard in planning a grouping where several pictures and frames must be compatible.

In general, simple frames look best in a grouping, the decorator said. Small pictures of small things look good in narrow frames that complete the feeling of smallness. The opposite is true of pictures that convey size and strength.

Fragile appearing pictures need frames about a half-inch wide medium pictures call for frames up to two inches. Very bold, strong pictures need bold, wide frames. A frame that slants inward will add a three-dimensional effect.

In a picture group, frames don't need to be identical, but they should be complimentary, advised Mrs. Poore. Ask yourself. Do they look "comfortable" together? Check the width, size, style and color.

"Prepare before you pound!" Mrs. Poore emphasized. Make sure you're ready to hang your pictures before you make the first nail hole.

To get an arrangement hung exactly as planned, lay it out on a section of taped-together paper. Trace around the pictures. Next, measure the back of the pictures to find where hooks should go. Mark the spots on the paper, then tape the whole paper pattern to the wall and mark the spots for the nail holes through the paper.

Sometimes plaster will crack when nails are pounded for picture hanging. To avoid this, put a piece of cellophane tape on the wall where the nail is to go, then pound the nail through it.

Pictures hooks are better than plain nails since nails tend to slip and may make a large hole in the wall. The hole left by a picture hook nail is usually quite tiny. Adhesive hooks which stick to the wall without nails may be used for very small, lightweight pictures. However, they are not practical for those covered with glass.

All hooks, nails, and wires should be hidden in a wall arrangement. To hang pictures flat against the wall with all devices hidden, place screw eyes for wires within the upper one-fourth of the frame back. If the screw eyes are lower, the picture will tip forward.

Glue small squares of foam or sponge to the lower corners of the frame to keep the picture hanging straight. This will also prevent the picture from leaving marks on the wall, Mrs. Poore concluded.

KENT COUNTY CURRENTS

by JOSHUA M. TWILLEY
Levy Court President

The residents of Kent County have been enormously enriched over the centuries through the bequests of our citizens to worthy purposes within Kent County. One of the greatest is known as the Potter Charity Trust which was created 130 years ago for the help of the poor in Kent County.

It is administered by the Chancellor of Delaware, who appointed the Farmers Bank as trustee and a local person as agent, who receives applications and referrals and distributes approximately $27,000 each year to help the poor in Kent County.

The Chancellor reports to the public each year on the operation of the Potter Charities Trust and he has just made his 1972 report to the Levy Court.

He reports that a substantial part of the income of this trust is now threatened because of the absurd action of the state tax department.

The state tax department has imposed taxes on this fund and the matter has been in courts for over two years to the greater enrichment of attorneys and at substantial loss to the citizens of Kent County.

Here is a person who left money 130 years ago to help reduce the public cost of welfare in Kent County and the state is now spending taxpayers money to try to prove that it has the right to collect tax on this trust it has already collected $3,000 in state income tax and the stupid result of this is to increase the cost of welfare in Kent County.

I call upon the governor and the members of the state legislature to order the state tax department to cease and desist from this kind of callous conduct.

State Day Scheduled For May 3

Delaware homemakers will concentrate on keeping their state beautiful at the annual State Day to be held May 3 at Conventional Hall, Rehoboth Beach. The day's events begin at 10 a.m.

James A. McLane, regional director of "Keep America Beautiful, Inc." will discuss the work of his organization, a national public service group for the prevention of litter. It conducts a year-round program of public education advocating litter prevention as a first step in environmental quality control.

Chas. Horn, native of Rehoboth Beach and authority on Delaware's changing coastline, will present an illustrated lecture featuring his collection of photographs showing those changes.

Other speakers include Dr. George M. Worriolow, chairman of the State Coastal Planning Commission, and Representative Andrew Knox, author of Delaware's Coastal Zoning Bill.

Awards will be presented to home economics extension club winners for beautification projects and club scrapbooks.

The Delaware Home Economics Clubs sponsor the State Day. Sessions are open to all Delaware homemakers.

Make reservations before April 23 with the extension club treasurer from each county. In Sussex county, contact Mrs. Dale Mears, R.D. 1, Georgetown; Kent county, Mrs. James Vaughn, 201 Washington Avenue, Clayton; New Castle, Mrs. Robert Gehrmann, 33 Augusta Road, Newark. No tickets will be sold at the door.

U. of D. Offers Lawn Publication

To help homeowners manage their lawns rather than have the lawns manage them, the University of Delaware's Cooperative Extension Service is offering homeowners two publications on lawn maintenance.

"The Art of Lawn Care" and "Spring Lawn Care" contain many suggestions on how you can obtain and keep a healthy and attractive lawn throughout the summer. The publications cover such topics as liming and fertilizing; how to control weeds, disease and insects; the value of different grass varieties and lawn mixtures; spot seeding; and the proper cutting height for your mower.

Copies of "The Art of Lawn Care" and "Spring Lawn Care" are available from county extension offices in Newark, Dover and Georgetown or from the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark 19711.

Of Local Interest

Bob White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry White, will observe his birthday Friday, April 21. He is stationed in Cuba.

Mrs. Josephine Collison, of Burrsville, is a patient in Milford Memorial Hospital.

Early Signs Of Deafness

Early identification of hearing problems is a major goal of the state's Hearing Conservation Program, operated by the Division of Physical Health.

According to Jack Fisher, the program's coordinator, "The public still finds it difficult to believe that we can identify hearing problems in children under two years of age."

"The truth is," he adds, "we can identify hearing loss in children under three months old."

As with every other health problem, the earlier a hearing problem is discovered, the easier it is to treat and to lessen its effects on growth and development. Fisher offers some guidelines to help parents judge the hearing of their young children.

Deaf infants do not babble and coo. They frequently must be awakened physically, rather than verbally. A deaf child will not startle, cry, or show a "listening face" when unexpected noises occur. Parents often describe them as quiet babies.

Hard of hearing children may seem inattentive at times. They may not hear the telephone at a distance, and they sit close to the television set or stereo. A child with a hearing loss may speak loudly and be more visually oriented than other children. Parents may find themselves having to shout to get their child's attention.

Some speech problems, and frequent occurrences of earaches or running ears, also may indicate a hearing problem.

If parents or teachers recognize any of these symptoms in a child, health officials recommend that the child be taken to an otologist, a physician who specializes in the treatment of ears; and to an audiologist, a specialist who tests hearing, as soon as possible. Early attention may eliminate the problem or lessen its effects.

In Delaware, every resident child, up to age 21, is entitled to a free diagnostic evaluation through the Hearing Conservation Program. Information about hearing clinics is available from any County Health Unit, or the state office of Speech and Hearing Services, Division of Physical Health, in the Cooper Memorial Building, Dover.

If a hearing loss is discovered, treatment, hearing aids, and rehabilitation are provided for children whose families cannot obtain or afford private care. Children with severe hearing losses or deafness are referred for special academic instruction.

Fisher added that Delaware was the first state in the nation to develop a statewide, comprehensive hearing conservation program. The program is now 21 years old and screens about 87,000 children each year.

During the last fiscal year, 1500 of those children were seen through the program in 400 clinic visits. About 300 received surgical care, 25 hearing aids, many others received speech and language therapy, and counseling on special educational instruction.

Delaware Food Market Report

Onions have been making strong men weak for many thousands of years. But despite their tears, or amidst them, the strong men and ladies, too, have appreciated the onion's unique personality. The Egyptians paid the onion more homage than has been accorded to any vegetable before or since. They made it sacred because it represented their idea of the universe; its concentric circles duplicated their concept of the relative positions of heaven, hell, and earth. They also engraved pictures of it on their monuments, drew it on one of their coins, and fed incredible quantities of onions to the pyramid builders.

The onion is a member of the lily family, which first grew somewhere between India and Israel and proceeded on the westward march that many other fruits and vegetables followed. It had its place on Noah's Ark; it traveled with Alexander the Great, who believed it would make his soldiers courageous. The Romans and Greeks believed onions could bring strength, too, to all who labored.

By the time the 16th Century rolled around, the onion was well established all over Europe; but the opinion about its merits had changed. Now it was used for medical purposes, curing health ailments, helping deafness, clearing vision, as well as counteracting muddleheadedness! Today it's the ingredient that can make an ordinary meal taste deluxe and a low-cost one taste expensive.

Onions are especially plentiful now and are reasonably priced. When selecting dry onions, choose those that are well shaped and dry enough to crackle. Thin necks and bright, hard bulbs are two other indications of quality. Avoid those with a wet, soggy feeling at the neck as this usually indicates spoilage is on the way.

Store onions in a dry place because they can pick up moisture easily and decay quickly. For this reason, never store potatoes and onions together.

The size of the onion and kind you buy should depend on their intended use. Medium onions are good for chopping, boiling, and stuffing. Large yellow onions are "all purpose" but excellent for stuffing and slicing for hamburgers. Jumbo onions are excellent for hamburgers and French fried onion rings; small white boilers are a good choice for boiling in stews and casseroles. Peckers or Pearl onions, less than 1 inch in diameter, are fairly mild and good for pickles and relishes. Red onions are good mostly for salads and other garnishes when rings are used because the outside is the only part that is red.

Sometimes peeling can be a chore. To help keep your eyes from watering when peeling, try holding a crust of bread between your teeth with one end projecting outward. Pouring scalding water over onions before you begin peeling will help as well as peeling them under running water.

What about onion odors? They can be removed from a knife by running the blade through a raw potato. If you don't want your breath to reek onions, try eating a half dozen sprigs of parsley which have been dipped in salt or vinegar.

Onions also can help do household jobs such as cleaning tin and brass. It's a well-rounded vegetable!

Veteran's Administration News

Q - May I withdraw my insurance dividends which I left on deposit with VA?

A - Yes. You may withdraw all or any part of your dividends at any time.

Q - I am married, have two stepchildren who live with my wife and me, and I attend school full-time under the GI Bill. Will I have to adopt the children to draw additional allowances for them from VA?

A - No. But to qualify for the additional allowances, you should submit to VA the birth certificates for the children showing names of the parents and proof of your marriage to the mother of the children.

Q - Does VA pay dividends on paid-up life insurance?

A - Yes. However, when a policy is surrendered for reduced paid-up insurance, dividends will be based on the reduced amount. When limited payment policies such as 20-payment life have all premiums paid-up, they continue to draw dividends.

Q - As the widow of a World War I veteran drawing a VA pension, can I also receive Social Security benefits?

A - Yes, so long as you do not exceed income limitations. Q - I'm going to college under the GI Bill and having trouble with one of my courses. Is it true that VA provides tutorial assistance in such case?

A - Yes. VA will pay up to $50 monthly in tutorial fees for a maximum of nine months to prevent a veteran studying above high school level from failing in a subject essential to his educational objective. If you need this assistance, get an application form from your nearest VA office which has your educational records.

Q - A few years ago, I was receiving compensation from VA based on the death of my husband who was killed during World War II. These payments were discontinued when I remarried. Since my second husband died recently, I am wondering if VA compensation can be reinstated?

A - Yes. There is a law which allows reinstatement of this benefit if the remarriage of the veteran's widow ends in death or divorce, provided she is otherwise eligible.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

Old vs New

New things are important, to progress, I'm told
 But you take the new things and I'll keep the old.

Old houses with beams that are dark with age
 Old friends that are dear and call me their sage.

Friends who know when, to be silent, or gay,
 Who, when they talk . . . have something to say.

Where Is That Country We Used To Know?

In the America of yesterday, you paid your debts as quickly as possible, and went without things to do it.
 You disciplined your children - but you disciplined yourself first.

You spent less than you earned, and demanded your government to do the same.

You went to church, your children to Sunday School, you held daily prayers—and no court would have to interpose any law into your private religion.

You would have been horrified (and quick to change) men in high places who made "shady deals".

You expected to prosper only by doing a better and better job.

You obeyed the law — but took active part in government to see that the laws were just.

And that was the character which brought this country victory in our lifetime, built it back from a shattering depression, and fed and saved the civilized world.

Is there enough of it left to do it again?

Kind People

The neighbors of a young bride in our rural neighborhood chipped in and bought her a coffee percolator.
 One of them had heard her say she got up every morning and made coffee in her pajamas.

Letter To The Editor

It was a sad defeat for our children when the referendum was defeated last week. How discouraging it is for these children to not have library books, lab equipment, industrial arts equipment, classroom space and the opportunity to receive closer instruction and supervision.

All the voters who voted against the referendum must have resented the tax increase enough to leave their comfortable nests to come out to block the progress needed. They failed to see beyond their noses and probably set the education plan of our district back several years. How else are we to help our children in school if we don't support them financially?

Those non-voters are the real culprits—indifference is becoming a national disease. To all the victorious "No" voters, congratulations. You won. But our children will virtually have to do without the facilities they deserve and lost.

Mrs. David Ryan

Drawings and Water Colors To Be Shown

Drawings and water colors by some of America's best known artists of the 19th and 20th centuries will be shown at the Downtown Gallery of the Delaware Art Museum, located in the Bank of Delaware, 901 Market St., from April 28 to May 22. The collection of 25 works is on loan from International Business Machines Corporation.

Drawings share with water colors an immediacy and personal quality rarely found in other mediums. Always intimate in scale, they may be finished works in themselves, as in Alexander Robertson's "Hudson River" in this exhibition. Or they may be studies for larger projects, like John Vanderlyn's "Sketch for Ariadne," a sensitive figure study and important preparatory sketch for the first successful painting of the nude in American art, the "Sleeping Ariadne" of 1812, now in the collection of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

The show contains six drawings executed in a variety of techniques, including pen, pencil, charcoal and chalk, alone or in combination.

Water color, used for centuries by both amateurs and professionals, was long considered a minor medium, but in the 19th century, and especially in America, many serious artists turned to water color as a major means of expression.

Early and prominent among them was Winslow Homer, who is represented in this exhibition with a still life, "Two Trout." Others in the show, who worked primarily with water color, include Charles Demuth, J. Wells Champney, John Marin and Charles Burchfield. Artists better known for their work in other media are also represented, among them are George Inness, John Singer Sargent, John LaFarge and Contemporary artists included are William Thon and Ogden Pleissner.

The exhibition is one of 9 touring art shows and four touring science shows that IBM lends to museums, colleges, universities and other nonprofit institutions throughout the country in more than 100 locations annually.

The exhibition is open to the public, without charge, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday to Friday, except bank holidays. The Downtown Gallery is operated under the auspices of the Women's Committee of the Wilmington Society of the Fine Arts.

Archers Host Spring Shoot

Sunday, April 16, the Mid-Archers hosted the annual Spring Shoot at their range near Coursey's Pond.

A field of 46 archers from throughout the state competed for the 19 medals awarded. When the final scores were tallied, downstate archers had posted 6 individual winners and 4 others who placed for a total of 10 awards. Upstate archers were awarded 4 individual winners and 5 who placed for the remaining 9 awards.

Pete Goffinet of New Castle and Larry Hix of Dover won top awards in the Men's Freestyle while Ted Mariner of Seaford and Tom Teed of Mid-Del won in the Men's Barebow.

Mentally Ill

trists are often sought for specific diagnosis of the child's illness.

Others lend their specialties. The psychologist uses tests to estimate the child's intelligence and how his illness obstructs his functioning. The social worker gathers information about the child's background and growth. A neurologist may examine for suspected brain damage or other organic factors.

The knowledge of the child, added to the background which the family supplies, can help professionals come up with a careful, fully documented determination of the child's illness. Once the illness has been pinpointed, the course of treatment can begin.

Only a few years ago, parents of mentally ill children had but two choices. They could keep their child at home doing the best they could with no help from any source or perhaps they could have him admitted to the only facility available — the state mental hospital. There the children got only custodial care. The situation was difficult for parents; the outlook bleak for the children.

Concerned parents grew reluctant to accept isolation and seclusion for their sick children and so began trying to improve the situation.

Today, most parents have somewhat more of a choice, although in many geographical areas the choice is severely limited.

The Mental Health Association works with and for children. It even admits to a particular fondness for them. Perhaps it is because it finds them naturally attractive human beings. Perhaps it is because it feels it tragic that they will not know the same carefree joys of other children. Perhaps it is because it feels that they are salvageable, that there is time to work with them and build them into happy, worthwhile persons.

The association really doesn't analyze the reasons. It just tries to do this job because it has to be done.

If you feel the same way, you might care to join them because YOU CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE serving through the Mental Health Association — an organization of citizens who do make a difference.

the nation in total number of continuing education registrations," he explained. "On a per capita basis, Delaware citizens have greater access to continuing education opportunities than the citizens of any other state."

The university is building a new home for the Division of Continuing Education, to be known as John M. Clayton Hall. Completion date for the building is Nov. 3, 1972, although there is a possibility of an earlier ready date.

The center will contain modern case study and seminar rooms designed for adult professional studies programs, and conference rooms of varying sizes for groups and organizations that previously have used the Student Center and other campus buildings.

The principal components of the new addition to the North Campus will be a 503-seat lecture hall and auditorium, a large conference room where more than 800 can be seated comfortably, a lounge and registration area, more than a dozen conference rooms, and a two-story section containing small conference rooms downstairs and administrative offices upstairs.

Jolly to Intern at U.D.

President E. A. Trabant announced today that Richard T. Jolly, 24, a student at Andover Theological School in Andover, Mass., will join the University of Delaware staff during the 1972-73 academic year as an intern in the President's Office and counselor to the Vice President for Student Affairs.

Jolly, who received a B.S. in political science from the University in 1970, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Jolly, of 2028 Longcome Drive, North Graylyn Crest, in Wilmington.

He is completing his second year at theological school where he is studying for a career in the American Baptist ministry.

During his one-year internship at the university, for which he will receive credit for the practical experience of the third year of Andover's four-year program, Jolly will coordinate programs with spiritual, religious, and humane concerns by working with all university chaplains and developing a program of lectures, discussions, forums, and other events dealing with values and the human condition.

Also, he will reside in a dormitory, where he will be available for discussion, counseling, and activities designed to enhance the humanizing aspect of the residence hall experience for students.

Lake Forest 82, Milford 58 In Track

Lake Forest's track and field Spartans had a couple of obstacles to overcome, but still managed to win rather handily, at Milford, on Friday afternoon. The 82-58 victory was achieved without nine Spartans, who could not make the trip, for various reasons. Six were key men. In two events, Coach Jim Blades was missing both his best men and the No. 2 performer.

To add to his troubles, the Spartans lost ten points, in one event, when their winning 440 relay team was disqualified. Later Don Parker appeared to win the 220, but the verdict went to a Milford lad. Some Buccaneer supporters thought the Spartan was the victor. Fortunately, Lake Forest did not need these points.

Lake Forest had a host of heroes. Don Bryant set a school record in winning the 120 high hurdles and led off in the 440 and 880 relays.

Don Parker won the 100 in 10.2, tying the Lake Forest standard set by Ken Tribbett in 1970.

Bob Smith switched to the 440 yard run and clocked a swift 55.3, his best ever. Smith ran with Bryant, Herm McBride and Don Parker in a 46.2, 440 relay.

McBride took the long jump with a leap of 19-4 tying his school mark.

Ron Mosley, in his first year, of running, switched to the mile and surprised with a 5:05.5 victory. Though he did win a letter in cross-country, he has not trained for the mile, yet turned in an excellent effort in an unfamiliar event.

Ron was out trying for a double win in the half mile, but was tripped by a Spartan and knocked out of the race. Mosley is a hard worker and should make a great trackman, for Lake Forest.

Dave DeMora's ten foot leap in the pole vault was his best competitive effort yet. Sven Osmundson was runner-up.

Neal Travis recorded a fine 22.4 win in the 180 yard hurdles.

Chris Adamo and Tom Clarke were second and third in the two mile run.

Phil Thomas tossed the 12 pound shot 42 feet, to win the shot put and threw the discus 102 feet, for second place. Mike Kohut was third with 92 feet, six inches. Matt Burgess, the youngest and lightest of the competitors had an 88 feet throw, some 13 feet better than his best eighth grade throw in 1971.

Reggie Guinn placed in three jumping events and as a sophomore, has plenty of time to become a fine, all-around performer.

Norman Baynard cleared 5 feet, 6 inches, in the high jump, his best effort in two years. We don't think he is that tall, either. Baynard was second in the triple jump, as well.

We got a kick out of the Lake Forest's mile relay triumph. Four inexperienced Spartans, new to the sport of track and to the quarter mile distance, recorded a fine 3:55.2 effort. Jeff Blakey and Jerry Johnson, aided by freshman Ron Dunlap and Kit Tillman led off the way and averaged under 59 seconds per lap. Only one of these newcomers had broken 60

Age-Group Track Set For Dover Area
At a recent meeting held in Dover, it was proposed to start a summer track program in the Dover area. Efforts are being made to line up sponsors, so that some inexpensive awards may be given.

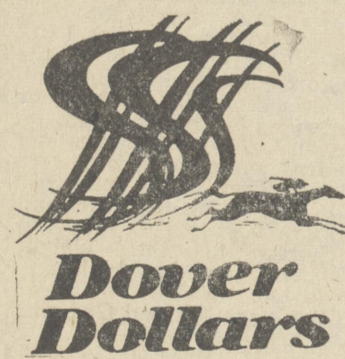

It is planned to hold events for all ages and both sexes. There probably will be at least one sprint and one distance race, in each age group, if enough participants are on hand.

Field events will be limited to the equipment and facilities available. For example, it is not anticipated that hurdles, high jump or pole vault will be included. Long jump, shot and discus could be held. Relays are a possibility.

All meets will be held in the Dover area, if permission is granted to use the high school tracks. It is anticipated that some competitors from the Lake Forest School District will be in action. Transportation problems will limit the number of local kids, if past experience can be used as a guide.

Spartans Split In Baseball

Lake Forest High's baseball team edged Caesar Rodney 3-1, then suffered its first loss of the campaign, as Delmar blanked the Spartans 3-0.

The locals continue to get good pitching from Viola's, Dill brothers, but have managed only ten hits in the last three games. Obviously, more punch at the plate is needed. Coach Young may have to go to his bench in the near future.

Caesar Rodney outit Lake Forest 6-5, but the Spartans broke a 1-1 tie with two runs in their last time at bat. Jim Dill started and Russell Dill finished.

Russell Dill, a poised freshman, has played a lot of baseball, despite his tender years. At Delmar he pitched well enough to win most games, giving up five hits. However, Lake Forest managed only three safeties.

2-1, at this writing, the Spartans hope to sweep Milford and Dover AI this week.

Norman Woodall's great effort propelled Wally's Garage into the top spot Tuesday night as the team took all four points against Gallo & Stevenson. The construction boys went into the fray with just four men, and just couldn't seem to put forth a very strong output. With Wally's Garage moving into the top spot, the stage is set for a showdown of the two top teams next week as Wally's will meet head-on with Jarrell Fuel. The winner of that match will take the last third title.

Robert Garey amassed a 552 series with a good 209 game included, as McKnatt Funeral Home squeezed by Penn Central to take three points. Bernard Coffman rolled a real good effort, which enabled the railroaders to take one point for their credit.

The Spoilers, who had been rolling pretty strong the first part of this third, saw any slim chance they may have had for the title slip away as they dropped all four points to the T & M Rejects. Bruce Harrington and John Shaffer bowled very well for the Spoilers in defeat. The Rejects put forth a full team effort, each man rolling over his average, with Bob Wilson leading them on a great 515 series effort, which included a 211 game.

The Honey Dippers, led by George Elliott, who rolled a 212 game and 523 series and Bob Annette's good 213 game and 549 series, took three points from Butler's Fuel, Tuesday night. Jim Carroll and Sam Martin added a 200 game for a full team effort. Ralph Butler bowled well for the fuelers as they managed to eke out one point.

Taylor & Messick are priming themselves for the championship roll-offs as they took three points from Fry's American, with each man nearing or bowing over their average. Snooky Collins hit a 211 game and a great 541 series, with Tom Brown rolling a very good above average effort for the farm boys.

Fry's American went into the fray with four men and each man bowled very good above average efforts. Setting the pace for Fry's was LeRoy Wheeler, who rolled games of 200 and 216, as he scorched the boards for a superb 584 series.

Cloyd Bushey rolled a real good series although People's Restaurant could only manage to take one point from Quillen's Market in Tuesday night's clash. The market boys have a chance to move out of the cellar spot if they can maintain their momentum one more week. Donald Wilson, Dennis Pase and Earl Quillen bowled very good efforts for Quillen's.

TOWN AND COUNTRY TOPICS

DAVE WOODWARD
ASSISTANT KENT COUNTY AGENT

Outbreaks of exotic Newcastle disease, the foreign viscerotropic, velogenic type, (VVND), have now been reported in Florida and southern California, as well as New York City, Texas, and New Mexico. Outbreaks have recently been reported in southwestern Ontario involving commercial chickens. Layers, fighting cocks, and pet birds have been stricken with mortality rates approaching 100%.

The disease was tentatively traced to imported pet birds such as parrots, parakeets, and mynah birds. The New York City outbreak was fortunately confined to a pet shop.

Importation of potentially diseased exotic fowl into the USA continues due to federal importation loopholes. Fighting cocks are highly suspected in spreading the disease from Mexico and Puerto Rico to the United States.

In California indemnity payments have been used to stamp out the disease.

Solid waste disposal is such a problem with many folks that they take it out into the country and dump it along the road, or throw it over the fence into a wooded lot or pasture field. Besides being an eye sore, it is dangerous!

Livestock producers that have grazing land near public highways should go over the area and remove all the junk; this junk may contain poisonous waste. Paint cans, glass, and pesticide containers are all harmful to livestock. So, take time to pick up this junk and dispose of it in a proper manner.

After the cans and other junk are cleaned up, the pasture should be ready for livestock, but be extremely careful when introducing livestock to grass for the first few days. Bloating, scouring, and grass tetany could occur. Cattle should first get a feeding of dry matter such as hay or silage, then be allowed to pasture for a short time.

With dairy cattle, off-flavored milk is always economically dangerous if the herd is not removed from the new pasture at least four hours before milking. The onion scented weed known as wild garlic has been responsible for the rejection of more milk than any other plant we can think of. Some dairymen permit only their heifers and dry cows to graze in the area known to have wild garlic. Otherwise, a spraying with 2-4D will do a good job on wild garlic early in the spring.

I mentioned grass tetany—it appears most frequently on farms that have good management and usually some type of land improvement program. Animals of all ages and both sexes may be affected; there is general agreement that pregnant mature cows are most susceptible.

The exact cause of grass tetany has not been determined; however, it is associated with a drop in serum magnesium. Problem herds with a history of grass tetany can be fed a magnesium containing supplement. The use of magnesium oxide is generally recommended as an effective and economical product.

We advise you to contact local veterinarian and get his advice before adding anything to your cattle ration.

Watch For Corn Diseases

Be on the lookout for two corn diseases—maize dwarf mosaic and corn stunt—that are new to Delaware.

These diseases have been found in Maryland and Virginia. Although neither have yet been definitely confirmed in Delaware corn, they probably will also appear here, says Dr. Robert Carroll, extension plant pathologist at the University of Delaware.

Mosaic first appears as yellow spots or streaks between the veins on the youngest upper leaves. As the diseased leaves mature, they have a finely-stippled mottle or mosaic of light and dark green. Plants may be shorter and more spindly than normal, Carroll adds.

A faint yellowish streaking in the youngest leaves is the most striking sign of corn stunt. The yellowing increases as the plant matures. By the time ears begin to form, the streaks are turning red gradually.

Both diseases may occur on the same plant, Carroll says. Insects are primarily responsible for spreading the diseases; there's no evidence that seeds or soil are involved.

The mosaic disease virus overwinters in johnsongrass rhizomes. In the spring, aphids spread the virus by first feeding on infected johnsongrass and then on nearby young corn. Controlling johnsongrass is an important step in preventing mosaic spread.

If you see possible signs of either maize dwarf mosaic or corn stunt in your fields, report them to your county agent, Carroll advises.

Vaccinate Horses Against Encephalitis

Delaware horse owners should have their animals vaccinated against eastern encephalitis before June 1, according to Dr. C. Melvin Reitnour, extension equine specialist at the University of Delaware.

Eastern encephalitis is usually fatal to animals infected and is often transmitted by mosquitoes. So it is important to have animals vaccinated before the mosquito season starts.

Encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, is a virus-caused infection that affects the animal's brain and central nervous system, explains Reitnour. The early stages of the disease are characterized by fever, nervousness or depression. You may also notice your horse walking into objects.

As the disease progresses, an animal becomes greatly depressed and stands in a sleeping position with its head down and, frequently, with its front legs crossed. He may grind his teeth and be unable to swallow. Paralysis of the lips and throat and blindness may also develop.

Owners should make arrangements with their local veterinarians to have their horses and ponies vaccinated as soon as possible, Reitnour stresses. He says a bivalent type of vaccine should be used, giving protection against both the eastern and western strains of encephalitis. Both strains are found in Delaware, although the eastern form has a higher mortality rate than the western.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne Holberton

A flower bud that's more delicious to eat than for the eyes to see—that's the artichoke. This thistle-like plant is believed to be a native of the western and central Mediterranean lands and was carried to Egypt and farther eastward some 2,000 to 2,500 years ago.

The artichoke was first cultivated at Naples in the middle of the 15th Century and gradually spread to other sections of Europe. It was well enough established in Florence in time for Catherine de Medici to take it with her to France. Under her sponsorship, the artichoke assumed the "cachet" (of distinction) among gourmets that it has never lost.

Today the artichoke grown in the U.S. are produced on the central coast of California where the sea breezes and cooling fogs are ideal. These plants need a frost-free area with cool foggy summers to produce compact, tender buds all year round. April and May, however, are the months when supplies reach their peak.

Size has little to do with the quality or flavor of artichokes. Instead, select those that are compact, heavy, plump globes which yield slightly to pressure and which have large, tightly clinging, fleshy leaf scales of a good green color. These are your best artichokes. A few brown flecks on the leaves are nothing to be concerned about; but allover browning may mean old age, injury, or frost, all adding up to a less tender vegetable and one to avoid.

Artichokes should be stored in the refrigerator for very short periods since they wilt and dry out readily. To prepare them for cooking, wash well, trim stems, and pull off and discard tough outside leaves at the base. Cut off one inch of the top of the artichoke or snip off all the thorny tips. Stand artichokes upright in a deep saucepan just big enough to fit snugly or tie them with a string so they will retain their shape. Add 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice, and boiling water to cover. Cook covered for 45 to 60 minutes or until the base is soft. Lift out with two spoons and let drain upside down.

If a whole artichoke is served each person, place it on an individual salad plate or in a rice bowl. A half artichoke may be served on the dinner plate. Each person should have easy access to a sauce, whether it is a smooth hollandaise, spicy vinaigrette, bechamel, or melted butter with a dash of fresh lemon.

Now for the real treat—eating this delicious and different vegetable. Just pluck off each petal and dip in a savory sauce. Then pull the leaf through your teeth to get the meat. You eat only the meat-like part on the leaf. The remainder of the leaf is discarded. When the prized heart is reached after all the leaves have been removed and the fuzzy thistle discarded, eat it with a fork. This part of the vegetable is quite tender and so delicious. You have now finished your artichoke.

Tent Caterpillars Building Nests

Eastern tent caterpillars are beginning to build their unsightly nests again this spring, reports Frank E. Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware.

A group of several caterpillars spin the tent-like nests which are made of layers of silky web. You'll see the nests in trees along the roadside and in neglected orchards, he says.

Wild cherry trees are the favorite host for tent caterpillars. But apple trees are also high on their list of favorites. Various shade trees and forest trees are also susceptible, as well as plum, peach, pear, rose and hawthorne.

The nests of tent caterpillars and the caterpillars themselves are disgusting to roadside, orchard and yard trees. When caterpillars become abundant, they often eat all the leaves on a tree. Although this may weaken the tree, it almost never kills it outright.

You can control tent caterpillars with Sevin—use two pounds of 50 percent wettable powder per 100 gallons of water or three tablespoons per gallon. Spray enough to wet the foliage thoroughly, even to run-off point, Boys advises.

Farmers Plagued By Johnsongrass

Farmers plagued with Johnsongrass are urged by the State Department of Agriculture to plant crops that will permit proper control of the perennial weed.

In a letter to state landowners, entomologist Richard W. Goerger suggests that soybeans rather than corn, for instance, is a better crop to plant in Johnsongrass infested fields.

"By using a recently approved pre-emergent herbicide at a double rate," Goerger said, "we feel satisfactory results in seed and rhizome control can be obtained in infested areas planted in soybeans. Corn is not recommended for Johnsongrass infested acreage since it is doubtful satisfactory control can be achieved."

He pointed out that the department has charted most Johnsongrass infestations in the state and will enforce the state law requiring landowners to prevent the weed from setting seed. In the past, he added, some landowners have made only token efforts to control this weed pest.

Any landowner needing assistance in planning proper control methods is urged to contact Goerger at the State Department of Agriculture, in Dover.

It Seems To Me

by Janet Reed

You may not remember wearing seersucker, but some of us do. It used to be a summer fabric favorite because it didn't need ironing.

Seersucker is back on the fashion scene, but it is more carefree than it used to be. Today's combinations of cotton and polyester, or man-made fibers gives us a fabric that keeps a neat appearance on hot, humid days.

Today, we prize seersucker for texture interest and the colorful blending of stripes, as much as for its easy care. Seersucker originates from a Persian word, shirushakar, meaning a puckered or blistered surface. It's a light-weight cotton fabric with crinkled stripes woven by setting some warp yarns tight and others slack. The woven seersucker will retain the crinkled appearance for the life of the fabric.

Another method of obtaining a similar effect is to shrink certain parts of the fabric. This can be done in two ways. One method is to print the cloth in stripes with a preparation that will resist the action of caustic soda. Then, when the fabric is passed through a concentrated caustic soda solution, the unprinted stripe areas will shrink to give the appearance of puckered or blistered stripes.

More commonly, a similar effect is obtained by a reversal of this process. Wet caustic soda stripes or patterns are printed on cotton cloth; the caustic soda portions shrink and the dry portions pucker.

Plisse crepe is the name given to these shrink methods. These fabrics may not keep the puckered effect for the life of the garment and have a tendency to flatten out in time. Since the process is cheaper, the fabrics are less costly.

If you haven't worn or worked with seersucker before, try it. You'll like it.
