Aldermanic Court Gets Under Way

The City of Harrington again has an alderman's court, the first in some years.

The court was officially opened last Thursday night after the City Council, at a special meeting, approved rules for the court submitted by the City's solicitor, Roy S. Shiels. Some time previously, the Council had named Mrs. Anna Rose Hampton as alderman and Lawrence F. Price as assistant alderman. Mrs. Hampton, a Harrington native, has had many years experience as justice of the peace in Elsmere where she was also, at one time, a member of the city council.

Mrs. Hampton's office is in the City Hall in quarters recently vacated by a library. The schedule for court action is to be worked out by the alderman and the police department, but it will be in the evening hours. The alderman's court does not handle all cases since some, by law, have to go to state courts.

In other business, in a three-hour meeting last Thursday night, the Council acted as follows:

Authorized Chief Richard Bradley to get prices on a new police car, with or without trade-in of the present car. Hired Jack Smith as patrolman, duties to start Monday, at $115 per week. Jack Smith, a black, is a resident of Harrington. He will be on probation 90 days. He was recommended by the chief and City Manager Jack Harrington.

Mayor Burton E. Satterfield determined the outcome of the vote after Councilman James Carroll and C. Tharp Harrington voted for Smith, while Councilman Jack Wyatt and John T. Satterfield registered as not voting. Councilman William Minner was unable to attend because of business and the post of Councilman William Vincent, recently deceased, was still to be filled.

Part of Smith's salary will come from a grant of the Delaware Agency to Reduce Crime. The grant also applies to the three other full-time policemen. One of three, Patrolman Ronald Hobbs, also has a grant under the federal Emergency Employment Act of 1971.

Memorial Services At Hollywood Cemetery Monday

At the regular meeting of the C.K.R.T. Post #7 on Thursday night, Commander T. Jay Brittingham said that plans were complete for the annual program to honor the memory of deceased veterans of all wars.

Services will be held at the rotunda in Hollywood Cemetery on Monday, May 29, and will begin at 10:00 a.m.

Lake Forest's fine, prize-winning band will furnish music, and the honor salute will be fired by a squad of local National Guardsmen and veterans commanded by George Langford and Eugene Porter.

Alice Massimilla will recite "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address," followed by Darlene Mosley with "In Flander's Field," and the "Answer to In Flander's Field" will be given by Sheri Swain.

The memorial address will be delivered by Mr. William Griffin, principal of Lake Forest East Elementary School. Once again, C.K.R.T. Post #7 of the American Legion urges everyone to attend these services to pay homage to our departed loved ones. One hour of 1972 is not asking too much.

Post and Auxiliary members are asked to assemble at the main gate at 9:45 a.m.

Record Budget Features Smaller Tax Bite

Kent County residents got a double dose of good financial news Tuesday.

First, the Kent Levy Court made good on its promise to lower the tax rate for fiscal 1973 by a 5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Then, the Levy Court learned that the county's new sewer system is going to cost users considerably less than had been expected.

By unanimous vote, the Levy Court adopted a $1.8-million budget, the county's highest ever, and dropped the tax rate for next year to 39 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

The new budget becomes effective July 1 and will affect

Of prime importance was the report of the three fund raising dinners served by the organization. Mrs. Robert Erne, treasurer, announced that the profits from the dinners were far in excess of the amount expected.

Mr. Neeman and Louis Giusto, director of the band, both expressed their sincere appreciation to the members of the Booster Club, the students in the band and the many others in the Lake Forest School District who assisted, even though they did not have children in the band. It was a combined effort of many people and resulted in a big step toward the goal of funds for new instruments for the band.

KENT COUNTY CURRENTS

by JOSHUA M. TWILLEY
Levy Court President

To be wandering on a country road lost, whether you are a visitor or a resident can be very confusing and annoying. If it is dark, it can be frightening. But if the same situation exists involving an emergency vehicle, it is more than confusing, annoying and frightening, it could result in the loss of life and/or property.

Because of this situation, which probably exists on many roads, the Kent County Levy Court took action last Tuesday to combat this by approving road signs on all county roads at the intersection. They voted to install fluorescent road signs indicating the county roads by number as shown on the map, and by name where they are already samed. These signs are large and easily visible, and should result in more rapid responses of fire, ambulance, rescue and police vehicles. These signs should eliminate the confusion that now exists because of roads bearing similar names in far different locations.

The funds to install these signs are available through the Bombay Hook Wildlife account which is a federal grant gives to the county each year but can only be used in connection with roads.

The Junior Broiler Program started on March 17 when contestants were each given 50 chicks to grow to maturity. Birds were fed and cared for by the youngsters until May 10 when the seven best broilers from each flock were sent to Harrington for competition. Of the 91 4-H'ers and F.F.A. members who received chicks, 86 entered birds in the finals.

At Harrington, the broilers were leg banded for identification and dressed by a commercial processor. Judging was based on conformation, appearance, uniformity and weight. Judges for this year's program were D. Ernest Matthews, Salisbury, and Dr. Lloyd Littlefield, Georgetown.

Rabies Potential Summer Hazard

The pleasures of summer are many, but so are its potential dangers—like rabies. Rabies is most commonly found in wildlife, according to Dr. E. Paul Catts, associate professor of entomology and applied ecology at the University of Delaware. And you're most likely to visit areas where there are wild animals during summer vacations, outdoor excursions and camping trips.

Bats, foxes and skunks are frequent rabies victims. To avoid being bitten, Dr. Catts advises that you learn to recognize the signs of rabies in animals.

Any wild animal behaving abnormally is reason for caution. You should suspect rabies when animals normally seen only at night are sighted in the daytime. Animals with rabies infection lose their fear of human beings, develop attacking tendencies, wander aimlessly and display depressed behavior. You're most likely to find rabid bats on the ground, trembling or in a stupor.

Don't handle, paralyze or sick animals. Report the animal to a conservation officer or game warden. They can observe suspected animals or confine them in a safe place. If you are bitten by a wild animal, wash the wound thoroughly with soap and water and go directly to a physician, who will advise you if and when treatment should begin. Try to apprehend the animal if it can be done without additional danger, advises Dr. Catts.

All animals, except bats, should then be confined in a safe place for 14 days for rabies observation and diagnosis under the supervision of a veterinarian. A bat should be sent directly to a diagnostic laboratory for diagnosis.

If it is necessary to kill the animal, care should be taken not to damage the brain, which is needed for laboratory examination. Dead suspect animals should be kept refrigerated, but not frozen, for examination.

Homeowners with wet basements can take some preventive steps to minimize the problem, according to Ernest W. Walpole, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware.

His mother, Mrs. Jane E. Bailey, lives at 106 S. New St., Dover. His wife, Malvina, lives at 1062 Rulnick St., Fayetteville, N.C.

John F. Hoehne, Jr., 21, son of John F. Hoehne, 412 N. Delmor Ave., Morrisville, Pa., recently was promoted to Army Specialist Four in Germany, where he is serving with the 3rd Armored Division.

When gravity drainage is impossible, a sump pump may be necessary to raise the water to a level where it can be carried off through a drain-line, says Walpole. Sump pumps are simple, compact units that are installed in the low corner of the basement and are designed for automatic operation.

Another frequent cause of dampness in basements is condensation. It may be partially eliminated by insulating basement cold water pipes and outside walls.

Condensation can also be controlled by installing a dehumidifier and keeping basement windows closed. Walpole says basement windows should only be opened when it is cooler outside than inside.

When warmer air enters a basement, it carries excess moisture with it. As soon as the outside air cools to the basement temperature, this moisture will condense on cool surfaces.

For more information on ways to maintain a dry basement, ask for the USDA's Home and Garden Bulletin No. 115, "Making Basements Dry." Copies are available from the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark 19711.

LAKE FOREST NINE WINS LOOP DIVISION TITLE

Lake Forest's baseball team is once again the Southern Division Champion, of the Henlopen Conference.

Pitcher Jim Dill remained undefeated by beating second place Indian River 7-3. His freshman brother, Russell, was beaten 3-1, by Smyrna in the regular season finale.

Spartan bats have spoken only sporadically this season. When Russell Dill, is on the hill, the Spartan attack is nil. In the young righthander's two defeats, his mates could manage only one run, in the second contest, onne in the first.

Against Indian River, Jim Dill helped win his own ball game by hitting safely thrice in as many trips. Mike Atkinson and Jim Hughes had two hits each. Lake Forest led 6-0, got a little careless as the Indians tallied three times, then settled down to win the crown.

Lake Forest had five hits against Smyrna's six. Jim Dill again was the leading stickman for Coach Bob Young. The junior, cleanup hitter had two hits in three trips to the plate. Lake Forest actually won 10 times in 12 starts, this season, but had to give up one of the victories because of the inadvertent use of an ineligible player.

The locals will now play the Northern Division kingly for the Henlopen Conference title, followed by competition in the state tournament.

The report does not include highway fatalities, but includes motor vehicle deaths on private property.

Fires led the list, causing eight deaths. Five persons, mostly elderly, died in falls; and three persons died from overdose of drugs. Two of the drug deaths, both in Wilmington, involved heroin.

Other causes of accidental death included carbon monoxide poisoning, railroad accidents, exposure, motor vehicle on private property, drowning, electrocution and crushing.

tares due next June. The county's $1.25 capitation tax, which cannot be set by law until June 1, is expected to remain the same.

The new tax rate means that a homeowner with a home assessed at $10,000 will pay $39 next year in county property tax instead of the $44 he paid last year.

Also County Engineer Walter L. Fritz Jr. told the Levy Court that the county's $12.5-million sewer system will only cost the county half of what originally was projected.

When the project was conceived, Fritz said, it had been estimated that at least 30 per cent of the sewer system would be paid by federal grants.

Since that time, he told the Levy Court Tuesday, 62 per cent in federal and state grants has been committed with an eventual 75 per cent expected by the time the project is completed.

The result, he explained, is that the sewer system is going to cost the county $3 million instead of the initial $6 million.

This will result in a rate reduction to sewer users of 25-30 per cent when the sewer goes into operation sometime next year.

TOWN AND COUNTRY TOPICS

FRANCIS WEBB
KENT COUNTY AGENT

How about a true fish story? Most fish stories usually end with some version of the "one that got away." For a change, here's one that didn't get away and may have possibilities for production in farm ponds and lakes for this area.

The one that didn't get away is a vegetarian called the white amur, a fish of the carp family that is native to China, Manchuria and Siberia. You will really be able to tell some fish stories if this fish proves adaptable and desirable for game fishing in this area. Under ideal conditions, it can gain one-half pound a month and reach a top weight of over sixty pounds. Can you imagine telling that fish tale in the country store and to top it off, tell them it came out of your farm pond?

Extensive research is being conducted by the Agricultural Research Service in Florida at the Agricultural Experimental Stations. Its outstanding appetite for aquatic vegetation may develop into one of our most effective biological control agents. Weeds that presently choke off waterways, ruin recreational activities and cause loss of irrigation water through transpiration may be effectively controlled by the white amur.

Some researchers have indicated that this fish also looks promising as a source of dietary protein, as well as a desirable and challenging sport fish. Of course, to maintain this fish in a pond or lake, you would have to tolerate a certain amount of weed population in order for it to survive; however, population explosion is not anticipated because studies indicate that this species will not spawn unless artificially injected with hormones. This could effectively provide a check against exploding populations.

With further research on the white amur, we may find that it is adaptable and desirable for the north Eastern Shore area; however, most of the primary research is being conducted in Florida.

It may be just a matter of years before you will really be able to tell a fish story that's a real whopper, and out of the ordinary, it be true! While we are dealing with the topic of water, I would like to mention the tremendous hold that many of our tax ditches have provided for both the farmer and small communities throughout the county. With the spring weather like we have had this year, (I must admit, a little out of the ordinary), where drainage is needed, it is certainly prevalent.

It is sometimes easy for a person to stand back when he does not live in such an area and say that drainage of such areas is not necessary. But if you really want to find out what advantage this drainage is making, stop and talk with the people who do live there.

Much of the land that is being drained is not only for agricultural purposes, but is greatly benefiting many of the communities in the area. In large areas that are still undrained in the county, drainage is a major problem for any type of future development, be it agriculture, housing, or industry.

Your Soil and Water Conservation District in Kent

County is working diligently to assist the land owner with good conservation practices. One of these certainly includes drainage.

As will be defended by many wildlife experts, draining such areas actually increases wildlife population—both numbers and species. As your Soil and Water Conservation District and the SCS cooperate fully with the Fish and Wildlife Division, newer and better techniques are being developed to encourage increased wildlife habitats.

Drainage, no doubt, has some complications, but if advantages and disadvantages are weighed, more times than not the advantages will prevail.

It Seems To Me

Janet Reed

Do the clothes you make have a home-made look? Or do your clothes say "hand-made" rather than "home-made"? Hand-made implies a professional appearance with a "styled to you" perfection. The home-made look tells the world you tired but missed at some point along the way.

The most common reasons for the home-made look are: poor fabric choice for the style, poor sewing and pressing techniques, unbecoming choices in style and fabric and poor fit.

Most pattern envelopes suggest appropriate fabrics for the style. The more experience you gain, the better you can judge this for yourself. In general, a good guide is to choose a soft, drapable fabric for a soft style. For more crisp and tailored lines, choose a fabric with more body and stiffness.

A pattern with many seams or intricate detail appears to best advantage with a plain-colored fabric. Prints show off better with a pattern of few seam lines.

Polish up on sewing techniques for a professional appearance. Factory techniques are taught in most sewing classes today. If you haven't had a recent sewing course, why not enroll to learn some of the newer methods? Or, examine ready-to-wear to see the techniques being used by industry.

Try to assemble a garment as quickly as possible so it won't have that worn-out look before you wear it. Press as you sew. You'll end up with a better looking garment and won't be faced with the difficult press job after the final stitching.

It's difficult to see ourselves as we really are. The more you learn to analyze your own figure in terms of average proportions (whatever they are), the easier it will be for you to determine garment proportions most becoming to you. If you have worn certain styles that seemed to be becoming, look for similar styles in patterns.

Wild prints are extremely difficult to visualize on the figure, put the print on it—before you cut—to get an idea how it might appear on your figure. Or hold it up to yourself in front of a full length mirror.

Don't be afraid to try something new. But, do try on a few ready-to-wear dresses in similar style and fabric to get an idea if it does anything for your figure before you go to the time and effort of making something you won't wear.

If you can just cut out a pattern, sew it up and get a good fit, you're a lucky soul. Most of us have to make some fitting adjustments. To perfect the fit is difficult to do on yourself. Maybe you and a sewing friend can trade fittings. Learn the styles which fit you best and which provide seam lines for easy alterations.

One final point—keep up to date on style trends. Fashions change rapidly these days. Even if you do a fine job of putting the garment together, you might as well have the latest style rather than one which looked good on you several seasons ago.

Check Now For Armyworms

Delaware small grain farmers should be checking crops regularly this spring for armyworms, advises Frank E. Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware.

This destructive insect appears somewhere in Delaware every year in the spring. Some years many acres of crops are destroyed by this pest. But it is totally unpredictable; areas with large acreages of small grains are most affected but no field with small grain is immune.

Check your fields often in May, recommends Boys. Hunt carefully on the ground; the armyworm feeds at night and hides during the day. The newly hatched caterpillars are frequently found in barley with heavy growth.

Young armyworms are thin, active, up to one and a half inches long, are hairless and green to black with a pinkish or brick-colored line on the sides. Some of the full-grown worms in Delaware have a decided pink cast.

In small grain, the worms first eat all foliage, then climb the stem and cut off the seed head. If worms are numerous, they can destroy a field in two or three days. Controls should be applied in small grain if there is an average of three worms per square foot, Boys says.

The worms will attack other crops such as pasture and alfalfa; apply controls if you find five or six worms per foot. If they run out of food in a field, armyworms will migrate in armies to other fields.

Armyworms are difficult to control once they are large. Therefore, if your fields are infested, apply treatment as soon as possible to catch the worms while they are still small.

Malathion, carbaryl or trichlorfon are available for you to read the labels for proper use. One application usually controls an armyworm infestation, Boys concludes.

Clover Mites Make Annual Appearance

Delaware is now suffering one of the annual outbreaks of spring pests as countless thousands of clover mites invade lawn, home and garden, reports Frank E. Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware.

Clover mites are smaller than a pin head, says Boys. But they often become household pests, especially where there is a newly established lawn or a growth well fertilized grass near foundation walls.

These pests also feed on lawn weeds, particularly dandelions, he says. And they attack a variety of ornamental plantings such as daffodil, bleeding heart, poppy, primrose and phlox, as well as seedlings of many weeds and ornamental plants.

Clover mites first appear around windows on warm, sunny days in early spring when temperatures remain above 60 degrees for several days. However, they are relatively inactive during summer and winter months.

These mites will migrate indoors, but they are not harmful to humans or pets and do not attack household goods or structures. When crushed, however, clover mites leave a red stain that is difficult to remove.

To control clover mites, remove grass and seedlings of other plants 18 to 24 inches from foundation walls. A barrier of stones or gravel near the walls provides best protection.

Spray the barrier strip and foundation walls with one cup of "Spectracide" 25 percent emulsifiable concentrate; or two tablespoons of Kelthane 18.5 percent emulsifiable concentrate; or 4.5 tablespoons of chlorobenzilate 25 percent wettable powder in three gallons of water. If no barrier strip is present, treat foundation walls and grass for a distance of 10 to 20 feet from the wall. Apply these treatments at two week intervals if necessary. At the first sign of indoor mite entry, paint or spray window channels and frames with a 1 to 10 dilution of outdoor spray. Control indoor mites by regular vacuuming and synergized pyrethrin sprays.

No-Till Corn Tested at U. of D. Substation

A system of no-tillage corn production is being tested on a 17-acre plot at the University of Delaware Georgetown Substation. Project supervisor is Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer in the College of Agricultural Sciences.

Although the no-tillage technique has been widely used in the Midwest, its value on Delaware's coastal plain soils has not been determined. According to Williams, the fairly large scale research demonstration will give growers an opportunity to see how no-tillage production is done and its economic potential.

The corn was planted May 4 in a stand of rye that had been killed with a spray application of Paraquat (1 1/2 pints/Acre) made on April 26. At that time, the rye was about three feet tall. By planting time, it appeared dead but was still standing.

Fertility for the corn was provided by broadcast applications of murate of potash (200 pounds/Acre on March 20) and ammonium nitrate (580 pounds/Acre on March 27). A soil test prior to fertilizer treatment showed the sandy loam soil to be high in magnesium and phosphate and low in potash. Soil pH was 6.0 to 6.5.

The seed corn was treated with Arasan and Marlatee and planted in 30-inch rows at the rate of 18,500 seeds per acre.

Pre-emergence weed control included 1 1/2 pounds of Atrazine and two pounds of Lasso actual ingredients per acre. Williams says the rye will flatten out and provide a mulch for the corn crop. In addition to some weed control, it will also help conserve moisture during the growing season.

The no-tillage corn demonstration is located across the highway from the substation office and is marked by a sign. Farmers and others interested in this production technique are encouraged to visit the plot during the season to monitor its development. A report will be issued after harvest, according to Williams.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne W. Holberton

Few foods will be in plentiful supply as we move from spring to summer, but those that are will be seasonally pleasing. The price of foods has been fairly stable the past few weeks, but increases seem inevitable during the summer months to come. Seasonal factors, brisk demand, and some tightening in pork supplies will account for most of the expected advance. By late summer and fall, prices will level off or may even edge downward.

Reports now coming in of the number of livestock on farms indicate that pork marketing will continue to be lower than last year by 5 to 10 percent. The number of hogs kept for breeding purposes is also smaller. This indicates a continued decline in pork, so any decrease in prices of this meat can not be expected. The number of beef cattle on feed is greater than last year, but the strong consumer preference for beef will likely keep demand and prices of beef at a high level. There is little change in the outlook for lamb and veal. Wholesale and retail prices for all red meats are expected to be under strong upward pressure during the summer.

Broiler marketings continue a bit above average but only by a small margin. Despite these larger supplies, demand is and will continue to be strong; so prices will probably be higher. This increase in prices will be small — not great enough to cause any serious buying problems for us. Specials will remain abundant and at about the same price level. This all adds up to broilers being one of our most economical protein buys now and throughout the summer.

Egg prices will be a bargain through June, but higher prices are in the future—during the summer and fall. The number of laying hens is being cut back, and replacements are not sufficient to maintain the level of egg laying flocks. June is the month to enjoy fishery products since they are so plentiful then. Finfish supplies are at a peak with shellfish supplies nearing the high level for the year. Fishery product prices have declined some and are expected to go lower in June. The most abundant kinds will be butterfish, flounder, halibut, mackerel, bluefish, porgies, cod, sea bass, hard and soft clams, hard and soft crabs, lobster and scallops. Even though many of these will decline in price, it will not be enough to make them low-cost choices. Many fresh vegetables will be in season during June. Those to check will be asparagus, spinach, lettuce, summer squash, beets, cabbage, celery, sweet corn, green beans, carrots, onions, and potatoes. Fruits to include on your shopping list include bananas, strawberries, blueberries, cantaloupes, and cherries. The June plentiful foods as reported by the USDA include hard and soft clams, hard and peas, broilers, and eggs.
