Some Welfare Money Canceled

Gov. Russell W. Peterson announced today that approximately $400,000 of the recent supplemental appropriation for fiscal 1972 for welfare grants will not be needed. "This good news stems from a continuing downturn in the monthly expenditures for welfare," the Governor said. The expenditures for the month of April totaled $805,322, which is the lowest total since February 1971.

Also, the number of cases and the total number of people on welfare are both lower than they were in January 1972, the peak period in the past 3 years. April's figures show 16,397 cases and 41,531 people, compared to 18,227 and 43,995 in January.

The downturn in welfare costs has been consistent since last October and is the result of a number of actions taken in the welfare area. One of the most significant was the cut in the welfare rolls last January. At that time, Governor Peterson ordered approximately 2,100 recipients between the ages of 18 and 54 who were able to work should pick up their final welfare checks and be placed on the rolls of available workers of the Department of Labor.

The extension of vocational rehabilitation services to welfare recipients has also contributed to savings in the division.

Of the 3,304 persons on welfare who have been assigned to the vocational rehabilitation program in the Department of Labor, 245 are now employed and 31 are awaiting job openings.

Pick-It- Yourself Season

Pop a sweet, red strawberry into your mouth. This spring-time pleasure somehow tastes even better if you've picked the ripe berries yourself.

Nongardeners can also enjoy fruits and vegetables picked fresh at the farm, says Roger Ginder, extension crops marketing specialist at the University of Delaware. "Several Delaware farmers offer pick-it-yourself produce—everything from strawberries to corn, peas to peaches."

Due to cloudy weather, peas and strawberries are a little late this year. The season will probably start the first week in June with cabbage available in mid-June and raspberries at the end of the month.

However, if the sun comes out and it warms up for several days in a row, the crops could come on faster. Check with the farmer before you go, Ginder advises. To find pick-it-yourself locations, check your newspaper.

For top quality produce, pick carefully. Each crop has its own picking requirements; if you're in doubt, ask the farmer.

The rule for strawberries is—be gentle. Don't bruise the berries; break the stem rather than squeeze the fruit. Pack loosely in the container so those on the bottom won't be crushed. Keep all that luscious juice inside the berry.

Pick fruit that's bright red on at least half the surface. Leave the completely green or the green and white berries to ripen. On the other hand, over ripe fruit—reddish brown or moldy—is no taste treat either. Leave the green star-shaped cap on the berry until you're ready to use them.

When you pick peas, choose pods that are green and plump yet tender. Over-full, hard pods that have started to turn yellow aren't good eating. Pick the whole pod and dehull later, just before cooking.

If the pea pods are flat, don't open them to check for peas. Leave them alone so they'll grow for later picking. Handle plants carefully. Don't pull the pod loose; break or snap the stem between the pod and plant.

Raspberries need especially gentle handling, Ginder says. If you've ever picked them, you know it's a real challenge to slip this fragile berry off the thorny vine without hurting either you or it. Of course, if you break the vine, later fruit is not mature.

If raspberries are ripe enough for picking, they'll have full color and they'll slip right off the stem. Squeeze too hard and all you'll get are juicy, stained fingers.

Use shallow containers with a solid bottom so fruit won't be crushed by its own weight and so juices won't stain clothing.

Bring back country-good eating on your next sight-seeing ride; stop at a pick-it-yourself farm.

KENT COUNTY CURRENTS

by JOSHUA M. TWILLEY
Levy Court President

Kent County has been deeply saddened by the loss of Mr. G. Dorsey Torbert, the receiver of taxes and county treasurer. Mr. Torbert was not only an outstanding citizen and civic minded person but also one of our most dedicated and conscientious row office officials. He held the elected position of receiver of taxes and county treasurer for nine years, and was returned to office twice by a substantial majority of the citizens of Kent County. His friendliness will be greatly missed by not only the Levy Court Commissioners and the personnel in the county government, but also by all the many people who have known Mr. Torbert over the years. He was a warm person with a sympathetic understanding of the taxpayers problems and a willingness to listen to the other persons point of view.

In respect to the memory of Mr. G. Dorsey Torbert, the Levy Court will hold only a brief session Tuesday morning and adopt a resolution of condolence and sympathy to Mrs. Torbert and the family in their time of sorrow.

ASSISTANT KENT COUNTY AGENT

Horses are athletes and they need special grasses for top health and performance. Bluegrass is the basic forage in most horse pastures, but alfalfa, Ladino clover, timothy, fescue and trefoil can boost your pasture feed production. Also, the fact that whether your ground is drained well or poorly drained indicates what type of pasture you should plant.

Horses are a lot different from cows, besides physical appearance. As athletes, they are judged by their performance—Walking, running, and jumping. The only way you care how fast your cow can run is when you're chasing her back into the pasture.

Horses are finicky grass eaters. They spotgraze good tasting pasture plants and leave less palatable plants completely alone.

For many horse owners, the pasture is just a place to keep the horse, where they can exercise, look attractive, and maybe find some grass. Of course, these are important reasons because horses are raised for pleasure. So, you have a choice to make. If you want your pasture as a "place" make it attractive and safe for your horse and plan to buy your feed. But, if you are a "businessman," you have land available and wish to get every bit of feed you can, you should treat your pasture as a crop and a place.

Dr. William Mitchell, Extension Agronomist at the University of Delaware, has an excellent fact sheet entitled, "A Pasture for Your Horse." In it, he discusses horse pasture management and pasture seeding mixtures are recommended for Delaware. Suggest you contact the University of Delaware Cooperative Extension Office, 736-1448, and we will be glad to mail you one of these fact sheets.

High quality hay makes first-rate horse feed. However, when buying or selecting hay for your horse, you should break open one or two bales and look closely for these quality factors.

1. Earliness of cut. If it is truly early cut legume hay, alfalfa or clover, you should find dried flower buds, but few fully developed flowers. The fewer flowers, the better. If the hay is loaded with dried flowers, it was cut later than ideal.

2. Lots of leaves. This shows good hay-making practices and generally indicates that the hay wasn't damaged by rain. Leaves are high in protein, calcium, and phosphorus.

3. Green color. Another indication of early cutting and good curing practices. Green hay is an indicator of high protein, calcium, and phosphorus.

Weeds, sticks, or other foreign material—horses won't eat this, so why buy it? Don't feed hay that's dusty, musty, or moldy. Stick your nose down into the hay and get a good whiff. Dust or molds frequently stir up respiratory disturbances in horses. Be sure the hay has a fresh, pleasant odor.

To those horsemen who wish to grow their own hay—be careful not to invest in a lot of hay making equipment to harvest a few acres. Put a pencil to these facts. How many bales of hay will you

University Field Day Date Set

The University of Delaware's annual Farm and Home Field Day will be held August 9 at the Georgetown Substation. Major emphasis of the event will be tours of the crops research plots located on the 310-acre farm, according to Ed Ralph, Field Day chairman and director of the Substation. Activities start at 10 a.m. and conclude at 4 p.m.

In addition to one-spot research reports, there will be a number of agricultural exhibits, a homemakers program and a fried chicken dinner. A plant diagnostic clinic will operate throughout the day for the convenience of Field Day visitors.

Additional information about Farm and Home Field Day is available by contacting the Substation office, phone 856-2553.

need? How much will the hay harvesting equipment cost? Don't forget repairs, fertilizer, life, and the amount of time devoted to good hay making. Just because you have the ground and hay making equipment, you don't always have the weather on your side. So, your entire hay crop could be ruined if inclement weather catches you with your hay down.

Suggest you consider purchasing hay if you only have one or two horses. You can be as picky as your horses, and you are guaranteed a good quality forage, probably cheaper than you could raise yourself.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne W. Holberton

On the side of a cave in the Pyrenees is a crude drawing of a cow. Archaeologists say it is 20 thousand years old. Among the oldest writings still preserved are the Vedic hymns of India, inscribed four or five thousand years ago. These hymns are records of Hindu folklore. The cow is praised as the greatest benefactor of the human race in a number of these hymns.

Whenever you draw the curtain from the past, in whatever time or place, you will find some reference to the animals who produce milk. Five hundred years ago there were no cows on the western continent, or there were no records of them. The first records show in 1524 De Soto left some in the Mississippi valley. In 1549 Coronado, seeking the Seven Golden Cities, left a few somewhere along the Rio Grande. Later, the English colonists brought cattle on their boats in the 17th century. There were some at Jamestown in 1611 and at Plymouth Rock in 1624. As the pioneers moved westward, so did the cow. Walking behind the covered wagon, she represented one of the most dependable food sources for the pioneer family.

Today the United States is the greatest dairy country in the world. The milk industry, including all its products, represents one of the largest in the nation, with an output valued at billions of dollars each year. June is Dairy Month and well it might be, for supplies of milk and dairy products are bountiful.

With interest in good nutrition important these days, remember that milk belongs in everyone's diet each day. Why? Because milk contains a wealth of important nutrients, as well as it does taste so good. Milk is an excellent source of calcium needed for bones and teeth. Milk protein builds and repairs body tissues, helps fight infection, and supplies energy. Milk is rich in riboflavin, a B vitamin that helps keep skin healthy and vision clear. Besides these, milk contains other vitamins and minerals as well as fat and sugar.

When planning menus, count on enough milk to meet everyone's needs. Children under nine should have two to three cups daily. Children nine to twelve should have three or more cups, teenagers four or more, and adults two or more. There are many ways to meet these requirements since milk and dairy products combine with most all foods.

To get the greatest enjoyment from your milk, know how and how long to store it. Always refrigerate and cover fluid milk as soon as possible. For best flavor, use in three to five days. Evaporated milk, unopened, store at room temperature and use within six months. After the can has been opened, cover tightly and use the remainder within 3 to 5 days. Unopened, store at room temperature and use within six months. After the can has been opened, cover tightly and use the remainder within 3 to 5 days. Unopened dry milk should also be stored at room temperature, but use within a few months. Once the package has been opened store in the refrigerator and use within a few weeks. Frozen desserts should be kept hard frozen in airtight containers. Use in two to three days for best flavor especially if left in cartons. When stored in airtight containers, use within a month.

Join in the celebration of National Dairy Month. Try a dairy product that's new to you and watch for specials in your grocer's dairy case—most stores will be in on the celebrating, too.

The home sewer's greatest problem seems to be fit. With the current interest in sewing, it's about time that pattern companies develop some improved guides to help her.

The woman with a larger than average bust size has one of the most common fitting problems. If she buys a pattern by bust measurement as suggested by most companies, the pattern will be much too large elsewhere and will need adjustments at neckline, shoulder, chest and armhole.

It's easy to lose the style lines of a garment when you have to make extensive alterations. It's easier to buy a pattern to fit the body frame and make bustline alterations. In recent studies at Iowa State University, it was suggested that misses patterns be bought as a woman buys a bra. This means buying by a high-bust measurement which is taken under the arms rather than an over-bust measurement. The pattern can then be adjusted according to bra cup size.

Misses patterns are designed to fit the woman who wears a bra cup size no larger than a B, but they do not take into account the fact that women may have the same body frame size with different bust size.

Various methods were tested in the Iowa study to develop a standardized alteration which would be easy and accurate.

There are a number of ways to achieve a similar result, and the Iowa method is similar to methods used in some classes, but they have attempted to determine amount of alteration needed based on bra cup size.

It's difficult to describe an alteration without a picture, but try to visualize a diagonal slash from the notches on the armhole seam down to bust point. (Bust point is determined when lines drawn from points of underarm dart to bust point. Next, slash on a line parallel to the waistline dart about midway to the side seam. This slash is the length of the waistline dart, but continue diagonally up to the bust point.

Without changing armhole length, pivot and spread the pattern at bust point to add 1/2 inch for a C cup, 3/4 inch for a D cup and 1 1/4 inch for a DD cup. Also, spread the pattern this same amount at the slash parallel to the waistline dart. Next, spread the underarm dart slash to increase the size of the dart, but pivot the pattern section below this dart slightly toward center front to decrease some of the spread at the waistline. There will still be extra width at the waistline which can be taken up with a second dart or as gathers.

This sounds much more complicated than it is. Draw a sample bodice on paper and see if you can figure it out.

Test all alterations you are trying for the first time in muslin or inexpensive material to perfect individual fit.

The Iowa study suggests that pattern companies include on misses patterns alteration lines for adjustments for different bust sizes.

Many women find half sizes or other figure types fit well, but the choice of styles is rather limited. If you know how to adjust a misses pattern to your particular figure variations, you have a much wider style choice.

The Iowa study sounds like a good idea that merits further consideration.

pleasure riding, however, the breed is not important.

Parents buying their young son or daughter a first horse often are tempted to buy the cheapest animal. This can be a costly mistake, explains the equine specialist. The lowest priced animal may be young and only half-trained. If a young child cannot handle this animal, he may develop a fear of horses and the family ends up with an animal that isn't used and a potential horseman who is no longer interested.

In most cases, a few dollars extra may be necessary to obtain the kind of horse that a child or other inexperienced rider can enjoy for a long time.

Spartans Score In Three State Track Events

Saturday's Delaware Interscholastic Track and Field championships held on Alexis I. duPont High's all-weather composition track, produced 13 new state records and tied another.

Lake Forest's Spartans scored in three events and set 4 new, Lake Forest records, in the process.

George Turner's leap of 41 feet, 8 inches in the triple jump was good enough for third place, as he improved his own school mark.

Don Bryant set a Lake Forest standard of 15.9 in the high hurdles, in the trials.

A Spartan foursome of Don Parker, Bob Smith, Neal Travis and Don Bryant, had at least one bad pass of the baton, but scorched the 440 yard relay in 45 seconds flat, a full half second under the best previous Lake Forest effort and only one-tenth of a second off the state mark. The locals won their heat easily, but had to be content with fourth place, as Cape Henlopen won the other heat in new state record time.

In the 880 relay, Herman McBride, Don Parker, Neal Travis and Bob Smith were clocked in 1:33.8, a new Lake Forest mark. State champion Laurel did 1:33.5 with Woodbridge at 1:33.7.

Eddie Thompson, a promising freshman two-miler, was sixth in the two-mile run, in a career-best time of 10:52. His previous low of 11:05 was set in the qualifying race at Dover on Wednesday when the slender Spartan finished second. Only Spartan record-holder Chris Wetherhold, was able to run better than 10:52, as a freshman, in 15 years of track here.

Finally, the Lake Forest two-mile relay unit of Vernon Bowers, Howard Kaskey, Kit Tilghman and Ron Mosley finished sixth in 9:01. This was an excellent performance when it is considered that Bowers and Tilghman are freshmen and Kaskey and Mosley are sophomores. In addition all four distance prospects are running track for the first time. Bowers and Mosley were in the 2:10-2:11 neighborhood. Tillman and Kaskey did 2:18 and 2:20 respectively as each local turned in his finest 880 yet. These boys are key performers in Coach Jim Blades' plans for the 1972 cross-country season.

With the high school season at an end, it is expected that some of the best area trackmen will participate in summer competition, in Dover, Wilmington and in any other arena, in which the opportunity arises.

work. Some exercises can even be done while you're in bed. They can help you get up in the morning or relax and help you get to sleep at night.

If you combine isometric exercises with isotonic (calisthenic-type) exercises that extend and contract muscles, you can begin to tone those muscles, develop endurance, begin slimming, and generally look and feel better. But it must be a combination of the two types of exercise.

Miss Morris recommends that you choose a few built-in reminders for exercise when you're doing housework. For example, when you see a certain doorway in the house, let it remind you to pull-in, tuck under and think tall. Or when you finish dishes or some other bentover job, grasp your hands behind your back and pull your arms down and away from your body. Hold six seconds.

When you're sitting, tense the muscles in your thighs and legs. It's good exercise for toning muscles and slimming. You can find many inexpensive pocket books on isometric exercises which can help you with more specific bulges, Miss Morris says.

Mowing the lawn and raking are good times to improve posture. Since you're already spending that time in the yard, why not make the time double in value? Improve the yard and your appearance at the same time. Concentrate on isometric exercises and good posture as you work.

As you grow older, you need to be even more conscious of exercising, Miss Morris points out. Your muscles will increasingly be resisting exercise, and they'll begin to lose strength unless you make them work.

If you have a sound heart, you won't injure it by regular moderate exercise. And the aging process is slower in a physically fit body. Ask your doctor about exercise that's just right for you.

You should be able to do a few calisthenics, play physical games, or just walk for isotonic exercise. Walking, when done properly, is a wonderful overall exercise for slimming, circulation and breathing.

A comfortable walk is a rhythmic, graceful movement with no unnecessary motions. Keep your shoulders relaxed so that your arms can swing easily. Find a moderate walking rate that seems right for you.

Where's the drumstick? Sussex county first graders examine fluffy young chickens on the Thaddeus Warrington farm near Georgetown.

"It's only a pony; it won't bite." Thaddeus Warrington reassures a Sussex county first grader during her visit to his farm near Georgetown.

Next they'll want one of these for a house pet. This young calf patiently endures the affections of Sussex county first graders on a visit to the Thaddeus Warrington farm near Georgetown.

Children's Farm Tour

A thousand insects swarming over crops, a thousand chickens or animals roaming his land are commonplace to many farmers—but a thousand children?

Recently, in just three days, more than a thousand school children, many of whom had never been on a farm, were bussed to the Thaddeus Warrington farm near Georgetown, Delaware.

All the traditional animals were there, plus a few things many Delmarva farms no longer have. But, the most popular animal was the Welsh pony. And the children exhibited quite a variety of imaginative techniques for mounting the saddle. Fortunately, the pony was patient.

Dozens of little hands reached for the baby chickens. Hundreds of eyes watched everything in wonderment.

Many feet climbed and jumped on the farm wagon, and the small flatbed parked in a pasture soon became a favorite spot.

Youngsters were allowed as much freedom to discover as possible, and they climbed fences, fed ducks and touched the wet nose and bristled back of pigs. Most of the larger animals were kept in pens where the children could still see and touch them. However, one small calf, gentle from the start, became a real pet. He lay quietly beneath a tree as the children cuddled, watched and petted him.

The farm tour was a natural learning experience for these Delaware youngsters. And, who knows, the real benefit may show up when they are grown-up consumers trying to understand the food producing system.

Arrangements for the students were made by the Sussex County extension staff and Mr. Warrington.

Window Boxes Can Add Color To Your Landscape

Window boxes and planters can brighten your summer landscape.

But before you rush into planting one, Bob Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware, says you should consider some basic points.

Window boxes require considerable care. They should be watered at least each day, especially during hot, dry periods.

Stevens notes that just any old soil is not suitable for window boxes. You should use either an especially prepared commercial mix or mix your own. If you mix your own soil, use three parts rich garden loam, two parts peat moss and one part sand or vermiculite. This mixture should vary according to your type of garden soil and increase sand or vermiculite when using a heavy garden loam.

Since most window boxes are located close to the panes in the window, it may be a good idea to mulch the surface of the soil. Then when it rains, the soil will not spatter onto the glass.

Good mulches include pine bark, licorice root, cocoa bean hulls, pebbles or grass clippings. Apply the mulch about one inch deep after the seedlings are set.

Finally, select the right flowers for your window box. Geraniums, dwarf marigolds, ageratum, petunias and most other annuals need full sunlight for proper growth. Tuberosus begonias, impatiens, verbena, ivy and pansies will tolerate shade.
