

Quillen and Mrs. Torbert to go for receiver of taxes

In a comedy of errors late Friday afternoon, both political parties in Kent County filed a candidate for an office nobody knew was being contested.

Republicans filed Rep. George R. "Bobby" Quillen of Harrington to run for county treasurer and receiver of taxes about 15 minutes before the final 7 p.m. deadline.

Democrats, getting wind of the Republican filing, countered with Agnes Torbert, widow of Democrat G. Dorsey Torbert, who held the $7,000-a-year job until his death earlier this year.

But the Democratic filing may be contested, because it was done via a notarized list of candidates previously filed and amended at one minute before the deadline. Republicans claim a notarized filing can't be changed.

Republicans reportedly had planned to wait until 7 p.m. to file Quillen's name, so the Democrats could not run a candidate against him.

But the impatience of womanhood apparently queered the deal.

As pieced together from informants on both sides of the political fence, here's what reportedly happened:

Evelyn Greenwood, Kent GOP vice chairman, was to go to the clerk of the peace office, engaged clerk Sandy Biddle in conversation, and then file the list of GOP candidates containing Quillen's name at 6:59 p.m.

Mrs. Greenwood, however, handed Mrs. Biddle the list at about 6:45 p.m. and left.

Mrs. Biddle, a Democrat, then noticed Quillen's name on the list and got in touch with Kent Democratic chairman Robert Reed. Reed then got hot on the telephone and filed Mrs. Torbert's name by adding it to a previous list filed at 2:20 p.m.

"We didn't know we were even going to contest the receiver post," Reed said. "When I heard they (the GOP) had filed a candidate, I figured we had better also."

Both parties had presumed that Gov. Russell W. Peterson would appoint Quillen to the vacancy, which still has until June, 1975, to go.

However, Republican attorneys—backed up by a verbal attorney general's decision—discovered a little-noted section of the State Constitution which required that an election for receiver of taxes be held Nov. 7.

That provision, contained in Article 3, paragraph 9, states: "In case of vacancy in an elective office—a person shall be chosen to said office for the full term at the next general election, unless the vacancy shall happen within two months next before such election, in which case the election for said office shall be held at the second succeeding general election."

Since Torbert died more than two months before the election, his successor must be elected to a full four-year term this November. Had he died within two months before the election, his successor would not have had to run until 1974.

Unlike other county row office position, the term of the receiver of taxes runs from June to June.

Gov. Russell W. Peterson is expected to appoint Quillen to serve in the post until next June, when the winner of the Quillen vs Mrs. Torbert battle will begin serving a four-year term.

Had the Republican strategy worked, Quillen would have faced no opposition and would have been a shoo-in barring a successful write-in campaign against him.

Because of the opening of school, Harrington radar will pay particular attention to Dorman and West Streets next week, Sgt. Robert Faulkner, of the Harrington Police Department, told The Journal last week.

Car Kills Local Tot

A 2-year-old boy was struck and killed by a car early Sunday after he climbed out of a parked auto.

John B. McGinness, of near Harrington, was the state's 90th traffic fatality in 1972, compared to 65 at this point in 1971.

Police said the boy's father, Paul McGinness, had driven to The Den, a restaurant on U. S. 13 south of Dover, about 2:30 Sunday morning to pick up Mrs. McGinness, who works as a barmaid there.

The child apparently climbed out of the car and wandered onto the highway. He was struck in the northbound lane by a car driven by Charles Edward Martin, 24, of Flor-Sun.

Police said the child was thrown 100 feet from the point of impact. The body was taken to the Nanticoke Memorial Hospital at Seaford.

Mass of the Angels was offered yesterday morning at HolyCross Catholic Church in Dover. Friends called Tuesday evening at Berry Funeral Home, Felton. Burial was in Hopkins Cemetery west of Felton.

He is survived by his parents, Paul T. and Anna McGinness; his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Martone of Brooklyn, N. Y.; his maternal great grandmother, Mrs. Angelina Lupo of Brooklyn; his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. McGinness of Felton, and paternal great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Smith of Van Buren, Ark.

Play is Business Of Children

Play is such a simple word. But it has as many different meanings as there are children to understand it, according to Miss Mary Ann Finch, extension family and child development specialist at the University of Delaware.

Play to one child is a game, to another child it may be a toy. Play to one youngster may be as real as hitting a ball, but to another it may be as fanciful as a trip to the moon.

Each child may see play as something different, but to all of them it is highly important, says Miss Finch. It is a serious occupation—a way of learning about life around them. It provides avenues for growth and development.

Then there is a type of play described as manipulation of toys. This play helps develop coordination. Using a large crayon develops hand muscles and prepares the child for using the muscles in other tasks. Just putting a puzzle together is a task of development, explains Miss Finch.

Another type of play is creative activity. The extension specialist says building objects out of play dough or using paints to reconstruct a picture helps a child develop his creative abilities and serves as an enjoyable experience. "It is very important that this phase of play not be left out of a child's growth," she stresses.

Stories are also important in the child's world of play. Most children like to have stories read to them and to look at colorful pictures. But stories can also illustrate events and happenings they have not experienced. For example, a story about a farm may be a new learning experience for a child who lives in the city. Or, a story about a train may open a new world of adventure for the child who has never seen a train.

Playing house or fireman is a type of dramatic play. Often inner-feelings, fears and misunderstandings come to the surface when the child engages in this type of play. But it may just be joy and happiness that the child displays as he acts out what he sees around him.

The last type of play is social play. This is the play that involves action and interaction among several children. Miss Finch says three two-year-olds may play together in a sand pile together without saying a word, but they are learning social play just the same.

Social play prepares the child to face life with different people.

These are a few of the types of play. What is your role as a parent? You must help and encourage your child to experience each type of play as he is ready for it. Guide and direct your child, but be willing to step back and let him try out new adventures of his own, says Miss Finch. Remember, "play is the business of children."

COURTHOUSE RAISES AWAIT LEGALITY MOVE

Raises granted Kent County courthouse custodians and their supervisor have been help up until it is decided whether the raises are in fact legal.

The county personnel commission earlier recommended the custodians be reclassified for the purpose of making them eligible for a pay raise at their anniversary date.

David G. Jones, a member of the personnel commission, said the anniversary date for most county employees is Jan. 1.

However, Levy Court notified the county personnel director Aug. 9 that the commissioners had approved a pay raise for the custodians and their supervisor effective immediately.

Jones said the pay grade of custodian supervisor Jack Haggerty had not been changed by the personnel commission because, unlike his men, he can still be given a raise in his present grade.

Jones said he thought the pay raise was illegal because the custodians have already received a raise this year.

But in his letter to Personnel Director William Cavanagh advising him of the pay raises, Levy Court President Joshua M. Twilley said the anniversary date shall be changed to the date of this new raise.

The personnel commission has asked the row office attorney for an opinion on the legality of the raises before taking further action.

Cavanaugh is in no hurry to give the raises because by law he is personally liable if he grants an unauthorized raise.

Jones said it is not right to give some county employees a raise while neglecting others.

"We must enforce the rules on all of the people," Jones said, "not just part of the people."

Twilley said Haggerty is appointed by Levy Court and serves at the commissioners' pleasure.

Jones, on the other hand, says Haggerty is under the merit system.

The custodial pay raise issue first made the news when Kent Comptroller Richard Barros held a press conference recently accusing Levy Court of granting the raises behind closed doors.

Control Food Costs

The bureau of Labor Statistics recently announced that the cost of living in July rose .4 per cent over June, an increase largely attributed to an increase in red meat prices. Does this mean that the cost of each family food market basket also increased? Not necessarily, states Connie Parlay, home economist for Delmarva Poultry Industry. The wise consumer who exercises freedom of choice in the market place can, to a certain extent control the cost of family food. A plentiful supply of high quality protein foods is available at budget prices. Freedom of choice permits the consumer the option of selecting these items right at the food store's meat counter.

Broiler-fryers head the list of high protein, low-cost foods. In 1950 the average production worker could purchase 1.79 pounds of beef with one hour's pay. Today one hour's pay will purchase 2.06 pounds of beef. In 1950, the same hourly wage would buy 2.24 pounds of chicken, but today an average hourly wage will buy 8.53 pounds of chicken. In an age of rising prices, chicken is a dramatic example of a food item which has dropped in price, costing less today than in 1950. While low in cost, chicken is packed with nutrition. It is hard to find a food as high in protein, vitamins and minerals, yet as low in fat as chicken. A three ounce serving of breast meat, baked or broiled, contains only 9 grams of fat and 65 per cent of this is unsaturated fatty acids. For weight watchers chicken is great. Chicken boasts the lowest calorie count of any meat and its endless versatility permits frequent service without monotony. To keep calories at a minimum, remove the skin before cooking. Baking and broiling are the suggested method for low-cal treats. Fretting about the cost of food doesn't lower the price. Exercising freedom of choice in selecting high protein foods available at reasonable prices can result in nutritious meals without added cost. Chicken is the best meat buy in the market today; wise consumers take advantage of it.

Coming Events

The City Council will meet at 7:30 p.m. today at the City Hall. This will take the place of the regular monthly meeting the first Monday.

Homes for Foster Children Needed

There are approximately 425 families in Delaware who have opened their homes to foster children under the age of 18 who require temporary shelter or care. Many more of these foster families are needed, however, to accommodate the more than 1,400 children who require this type of care each year. Foster families are needed for children of all ages, but the greatest need is for foster families who will take teenagers into their homes. Foster homes provide care for children who are committed to the custody of the Division of Social Services through court action or who are voluntarily placed by their parents for temporary care. Foster care is provided to children on both a short and long term basis. Stays may be as brief as overnight or as long as several years. According to recent statistics, over half of the children now living in foster homes have been there for at least three years. Single adults are also eligible to take in foster children. Foster parents in New Castle and Kent Counties have formed Foster Parent Associations in order to exchange ideas and information, share common problems, and plan programs that will help them become better foster parents. In Sussex County foster parents are also planning a Foster Parent Association which should be off the ground in the next few months. Anyone interested in providing foster care to children is asked to contact the closest regional office of the Division of Social Services.

The Future Of Farming

Young farmers, or those aspiring to be farmers, often wonder about the future of farming. Although no one can predict the future with a high degree of accuracy, it is important to look at the trends and changes in farming before deciding to get in or stay in farming.

Winslow Knapp, of Paradise Alley, returned Sunday from Milford Memorial Hospital, where he had an operation, after four weeks.

Will also use more professional services. Professional farm consultants, geneticists, veterinarians, and nutritionists will be called on more frequently.

McAllister adds that larger farm businesses will be highly competitive so profits on each unit of output will not be much different from today. Larger total profits will come mostly from larger output from each unit of input -- acre, bag of fertilizer, hours of labor, dollar invested in machinery, etc.

For young farmers with management and business skills and access to enough capital to get started or to expand with the trends, McAllister says farming in the future can be very rewarding and satisfying.

1. Large size farm operations, those with gross sales over $40,000 will get substantially larger, but they will decrease in number.

2. The number of middle size or one-man farms, $20,000 to $40,000 in gross sales, will suffer a major decline. The number of part-time and residential farms will increase as more and more people live in the country and work in town.

3. For the large commercial farms, less emphasis will be placed on land ownership. Management of larger commercial farms will often be separated from land ownership. Farm operators will use their capital to support a large farm business, while outside investors will own more of the farm land.

4. More commercial farms will be incorporated into the closely held family corporations, because it is the most accepted way to own, use, and dispose of capital.

5. As farming operations become larger, there will be more joint arrangements between farmers and marketing firms. More farm produce will be produced under terms of contract negotiated on a group basis with some form of government supervision over contract arrangements.

6. Large commercial farms W.T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware, notes some trends expected during the next quarter century:

Sussex Arts Council Project

The Sussex County Arts Council will sponsor a three-month arts and crafts project for youth detained by the Division of Juvenile Corrections at the Stevenson House in Milford beginning Sept. 5.

The arts and crafts classes will meet on Tuesday and Thursday nights through December and will be conducted by Carl Morrison, an elementary school art instructor in the Milford School District.

According to Raymon E. Lloyd, superintendent of Stevenson House, this will be the first time an arts and crafts project has been offered to the juveniles at Stevenson.

The project will focus primarily on crafts such as leather working and macramé so each youth will have a hand-crafted article to keep.

"These youngsters are here for short periods of time," Lloyd says, "so it would be difficult to set up a rigid class program through which the individual would begin at a certain level and progress to more difficult projects."

Mrs. Fleur Lasloky of Harrington, a member of the Sussex Arts Council's board of directors, has been instrumental in getting this project started, Lloyd says.

Stevenson House is a detention facility for Kent and Sussex County juveniles awaiting disposition of Family Court cases. Although a total of 20 youths can be housed at Stevenson-14 boys and 6 girls-their average daily population is 15. The average age of these juveniles is 15.

Requeening The Colony

How do you introduce a new queen to 30,000 or 40,000 honey bees? Very carefully, says Rossy Adkins of Elkton, Md., a commercial bee breeder who has more than 15 years of experience raising honey bees.

Requeening a colony is a risky business. Not only do you have to protect yourself from being stung, but you must protect the queen from the other bees.

One method of introducing a new queen is to place the queen in a small wooden cage that has an opening at both ends. Once the queen is inside the cage, the ends are sealed with a hard core of sugar. When the cage is then placed in the hive, the worker bees will eat the sugar seals until the new queen is free. The object is to protect the queen long enough that she acquires the odor of the colony. Then, the other bees will accept her.

One disadvantage of the cage method of introducing a new queen to a colony is that it may take a couple of days before the queen is free and can start to lay eggs. Adkins says this can be a serious problem because each colony retains only one queen and she must lay all of the eggs -- up to 1,000 each day. Since the average life-span of a worker bee is only six weeks, the colony cannot be without a queen long before honey production drops.

Adkins recently demonstrated a new method of requeening at the University of Delaware.

This method features the use of chloroform which quieted the colony before the new queen was released.

With this system, the old queen is removed four days before the new queen is introduced. Just before the new queen is placed in the hive, Adkins inserts sponges, that have been treated with chloroform, at the base of the hive. Most of the bees are temporarily stunned by the chloroform which gives the breeder enough time to place the queen in the hive. When the effects of the chemical wear off, the colony accepts the new queen.

The major advantage of introducing new queens with the chloroform method is the time saved. Within a few hours the new queen can start laying eggs.

The honey bee is man's most useful insect. In the United States alone, honey bees produce about $50 billion worth of agricultural crops.

CIVIC ACTION GUEST EDITORIAL

How many times have you heard teenagers in our community complain, "There's nothing to do-no place to go?" It seems that this lament is all too common and it is all too true.

Several communities in the area have done something about this. Laurel and Delmar, for example, have established very successful teen activities centers. The question arises - Can an activities center for teenagers be established and operated successfully in Harrington? If so, the benefits to our children and to the whole community will certainly be worth the effort.

Can such a facility be started? Let's find out. On Tues., Sept. 19, at 8 p.m., a meeting is being held at City Hall to discuss the question. An invitation is hereby extended to parents, civic organizations, churches, businessmen, city, and school officials, and others interested in taking some positive action.

If you are interested, please plan to attend. Don't let George do it because YOUR ideas and support are needed.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

COMMOTION IN THE COURTHOUSE

Gleaned from an ancient recording of a sporting "Father's Plea For His Son"

One morning in the courthouse A boy stood up for trial, His father stood beside him On his face there was a smile.

The old man told the jury I'm not sure this is my son But I have got three more like him And I'll bring them one by one.

The boy spoke to "His Honor" And said: "now Judge, you see Just let my father here go home And bring the other three.

The other ones are so crooked They can't lay straight in bed, They'd steal the whiskers off your chin And put hair on your head.

The jurymen all fainted and The Judge called out for air The Foreman stood upon his head And the wind blew through his ear.

Now there's thirteen funerals, The Jurymen are dead. The Judge lived twenty minutes And before he died he said;

My boy you are a dandy, Acquittal, you have won. No matter who your father was You are your mother's son,

And if ever you get married, Just have a boy for fun, And if he's a sport don't go to court, Just shoot the son-of-a-gun.

Harriers To Get First Tests This Week

Lake Forest's young cross-country team, will get its first tests this week. By Friday night Coach Jim Blades will have an idea as to how far his first varsity harrier team might go.

The first time trials will be held Tuesday. Each lad will be attempting to get as near as possible to their best clockings of 1971. This will be followed by a non-conference meet with a powerful Christiana High Viking team from the big-school Blue Hen Conference. The up-staters are coached by former Caesar Rodney Coach, Bill Caldwell, who has already warned his charges to be wary of the locals. Caldwell managed a tie and a victory over Harrington and Lake Forest teams and suffered more than a dozen defeats, while at C.R., in contests against the Lions and the Spartans.

Leading for the other three spots in the top seven are: Harry Benson, Jim Guyton, Rick Right, and Barry Doherty, all freshmen.

Mosely is the only one of the top eight runners who was not developed by Blades, when the latter was W.T. Chipman School's first cross-country coach.

Others with a chance to get one of the coveted top seven spots are; sophomore Rick Sullivan, junior Howard Caskey, senior Tom Clarke and freshman, Kit Telghman.

School starts Wednesday. Blades expects to have 35 or 40 Spartans running cross-country by the end of this week.

We hope to have some information next week on the Chipman (grades 7 and 8) team. The new coach is Glenn Paul Webster, a native of Delmar, who was a high school all-American, in track, at Hamburg, N.Y. He was a long distance runner and should be just what the doctor ordered. Some of his top runners should be John Moffett, James Simpson, Don Baynard, Eric Hamsher, Arnold Sudler, Purnell Stratton, Stanford Smith. All have had at least a year's experience.

Spartans Host Cape Friday

Cape Henlopen's Viking football squad, led by ex-Lake Forest coach Bill Muehleisen, comes to Harrington Friday night to meet Al Wood's Spartans. The Henlopen Conference opener for both squads will see Wood attempt to go two up on his former boss. Lake Forest beat the Cape 7-0, at Lewes in 1971.

The Spartans had a practice scrimmage with North Carolina (M.D.) Bulldogs and handled the Denton, Ridgley, Greensboro combine with ease. Since the locals have many lettermen back and are playing at home, they must be rated as favorites, Friday night.

TAYLOR & MESSICK WINS SOFTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

Taylor & Messick completed its sweep of the Kent County Softball League Championship Monday night at Canterbury with an 8-3 victory over defending titlist Flying Dutchman.

Taylor & Messick took both ends of a doubleheader last Thursday night 5-4 and 9-1 winning the best of five series, 3-0.

The National League winners with a 25-6 record scored four runs in the fourth and fifth innings.

Larry Larimore doubled with one out in the 4th and scored on Dave Adams' single. Adams took second when Dutchman defenders ignored him and scored on Ron Cannon's single. The latter took 2nd on the throw.

Denny Cannon, a big bat against Dutchman with seven hits in 10 at bats, stroked a single scoring Cannon and took 3rd when a relay went into left field.

He scored what proved to be the winning run on Ron Kelly's single.

Buddy Sipple hit a 3-run homer in the top of seventh with two out.

Taylor & Messick's Manager Bob Collins, who won all three games with his pitching, said, "The whole team played good. They're a tough ballclub, but we played good defense and never gave up."

HAPPY SEWING!

Have you heard the latest shirt-tale? His and Her shirts in western style. See our patterns and fabrics.

Is your sewing machine your right arm? This is the best time to dust it off, oil it good, and shift into high gear—now that the kids are back in school.

Be an artist with trim. Look over our stock and prices first. Zippers are still 10c and 20c. Can you beat that anywhere? Joyce says the seersucker is a good buy at 95c a yard. She oughta know; she works here!

CARD OF THANKS We wish to express our thanks to all our friends, neighbors and relatives for their many acts of kindness shown us during the loss of our loved one, mother and grandmother, Gertrude Hicks. For the many cards, letters, food and flowers brought to us. May God bless all who took the time to care. Daughters and sons.

John R. Marshall

John R. Marshall, 67, of the Lakeland Trailer Court died Saturday in Milford Memorial Hospital after a long illness.

Mr. Marshall was a retired electrician. He was born in Virginia and had lived in Delaware 25 years and in Dover since 1966. He was a former resident of Harrington.

From 1955 to 1966, he was field director for community centers of the Methodist Church's national board of missions. Survivors include his wife, Mary E., two daughters, Mrs. Jacqueline Sullivan of Harrington and Mrs. Mary Jane Stewart of Dover; a sister, the Rev. Margaret Marshall of Charleston, W. Va., and three grandchildren.

Services were held yesterday at Watson, Melson and Gray Funeral Home in Frankford. Burial was in Carey's Cemetery.

TOWN AND COUNTRY TOPICS

DAVE WOODWARD
ASSISTANT KENT COUNTY AGENT

For good tips on landscaping in your area, start near home. Neighbors, the County Extension Agent, a garden club, and your local newspaper's garden column can all be helpful to you.

The 1972 Yearbook of Agriculture entitled, "Landscape for Living," contains an unlimited amount of practical, basic background information valuable to homeowners and gardeners, and it's FREE. Send your request to our congressman or one of our senators, and they will provide this book to you free of charge.

This Yearbook contains basic material for skilled and novice home gardeners. Several chapters contain a short list of suggested additional reading. Most of these are U.S. Department of Agriculture publications and may be obtained free from the USDA or your local extension office. In some cases, you may need to purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. The Kent County Cooperative Extension Office will be able to provide publications designed for Delaware.

"Landscape for Living" was produced by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to tell Americans about improving our environment with plants and to give background information and "how to do it" advice to home gardeners. It discusses land planning, designing downtown shopping areas and also new towns. It covers the vast subject of plants in action, helping raise the spirits of inner-city residents and teaching youth about environment.

Homeowners can learn how they can contribute significantly to a better environment by helping control soil erosion and water pollution with grass and other ground covers on their yards, using mulches and terracing. Civic, business, and environmental groups can also control erosion by advocating roadside planting and other planting techniques to curb erosion at new construction sites.

The 1972 yearbook discusses how our scientists are finding new ways to combat plant diseases and pests. Among recent developments is a fungicide injection technique against Dutch elm disease and wilts of oaks and maples. The USDA has programs to guard against

It Seams To Me

By Janet Reed
Sew your own furniture?
It's enough to make you wonder when the home sewing boom will taper off. Creative minds dream up new sewing projects for anyone with a sewing machine and a piece of fabric.

One pattern company has developed patterns for sew-and-stuff furniture and patterns are available for a chair, a sofa and a bed. Naturally, they are in line with the modern trend of low furniture with no legs. They should be as comfortable as the inflatable furniture.

It would take a young and agile body to adjust to using the furniture, and it is not designed for permanent use. It might fill the need for a first apartment, or for a teen room.

It should not be difficult to make if you can handle the yardage necessary for making a bed. The idea is to make a heavy muslin body which is stuffed with shredded foam rubber, then covered with a fabric of your choice for your decorating plan.

It would take a lot of foam rubber to stuff any of the pieces to the firmness necessary, so check on the price and availability before starting on a furniture making project. You may be surprised at the cost. But if you want individuality and a conversation piece and have plenty of time on your hands, it may fill a need.

Another unusual sewing project is making your own sleeping bag. Sleeping bags are now available in kits. The filling is in small packets which are inserted into pockets made into the covering. Add the zipper and you have your own sleeping bag.

What project will be next? It's interesting to observe this trend. For years we were told that home sewing was dead, but look at it now.

introduction of plant pests and diseases into the United States and to control or eradicate those within our borders.

Varieties of plants with built-in resistance to diseases and pests are being developed. The USDA plant researchers have found ways of improving flower seed germination, changing flower color, controlling stem length, extending flowering periods, and increasing plant hardiness against extremes of temperature and moisture.

Our plant explorers have travelled all over the earth collecting plants that are new to the United States in hopes that one day they will beautify our home gardens. All of these actions are good and our only need is for many more of them.

America's landscape for living is far from complete, but this book points to a multitude of ways of achieving a better environment for our generation and future unborn generations. As the title of the book's closing chapter points out, "hope for tomorrow's landscape depends on our acting now."

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne W. Holberton
Despite the rising food prices, today's average working man can buy more food with an hour's wages than ever before. For instance, in an hour he can earn money enough to buy nearly 9 lbs of chicken, just about twice as much as he could have bought say in 1958.

Here are some more examples. In 1958 the pay from an hours work would buy 2 1/2 gals. of milk, today we can buy a bit over 3 gallons. In 1958 one hour's pay bought 11 loaves of bread, today it buys 14.2 loaves. We can buy a half pound more choice grade beef today, even at our high prices, than we could in 1958. And a pound and 3/4 more pork can be bought today for an hour's pay. This list can go on and on.

While we are thinking about yester year what about the types of meals served. Let's look back.

At the turn of the century, about the time the Wright brothers were starting to fly. Americans were eating quite a different diet than they are today.

People of moderate means ate mostly solid filling foods—meats, poultry, fish, potatoes, bread and other starchy foods. Fresh fruits were expensive, hardly anyone ate salads. In fact because of the different growing seasons it was almost impossible to have tomato and lettuce at the same time. Vegetables were limited to what ever was in season locally, with the exception of those that could be stored in a cold cellar, such as cabbage, carrots, and onions. Of course there were canned vegetables as well as dried ones, however, they were mostly home canned and dried.

Here is a typical dinner for a city family of average means —pea soup, beef stew, boiled potatoes, and bread. This menu was also limited somewhat by cooking facilities. Just about all foods were prepared at home. So even in the city in hot summer, it was necessary to fire up the coal or wood stove in order to bake bread, cook a roast, etc.

What if we turned the clock back only 40 years to see the change. There's no frozen orange juice, margarine hasn't caught on yet. There's no canned baby foods, no frozen vegetables, no sherbert. And chicken is still a Sunday dinner treat.

You'd have about a 70 percent chance of being served fresh, or home prepared fruits and vegetables. Commercially canned foods were just beginning to "catch on." Frozen foods were being experimented with but did not come to market much before the 40's. However, the biggest change in the past 40 years is in meat consumption. It's up 45 pounds per person to 168 pounds a year. Beef accounts for about all of this increase too.

Today we all eat much better. There's a wide choice of meats, fruits, vegetables and processed foods all year long from which we can choose at prices we can afford. Let's not look back but look ahead.

Johnsongrass Control Information Given

Johnsongrass robs more farmers of more dollars than they realize and, according to a University of Delaware plant expert, it is found throughout the state.

Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist, recommends that growers institute Johnsongrass control programs on fields where they have harvested small grain crops. The small grain has actually been beneficial in the control of Johnsongrass. It has proven to be as effective as tillage during the winter. And, farmers can wisely take advantage of this situation by starting control programs as quickly as small grain crops are harvested, he says.

Johnsongrass is a competitive perennial causing severe yield reductions in the crops it infests. It spreads rapidly by seed and by rhizomes. Once established in a field, its control is difficult and costly.

To control Johnsongrass, plow or disc before its growth reaches 8 inches. Then, disc or field cultivate the field thoroughly at 2 to 3 week intervals. This will kill most of the Johnsongrass top-growth. The rhizomes that are worked to the surface will be killed by drying.

Should it be desirable, another winter small grain crop can be sown this year and the tillage treatment repeated following harvest next summer. The treatment can also be of value if it is repeated for even a third time, according to Mitchell.

Don't give Johnsongrass a chance to restore a food supply to its underground stems, or a chance to develop new rhizomes. Stop its progress with a rigorous tillage on a hard and fast time schedule.

Mitchell explains that chemicals often give better control of Johnsongrass rhizomes and add little to the cost of control.

Allow the weed to grow in the spring and early summer until it reaches 8 to 10 inches in height. This could be after the small grain harvest and straw removal. At that point, spray the Johnsongrass infestation with dalapon at the rate of 6 or 8 pounds combined with a pint of non-toxic wetting agent in 40 gallons of water per acre.

Repeat the application 10 to 14 days later, but at right angles to the first treatment. Plow the area about 3 weeks after the second chemical treatment, and be prepared to disc the field if any of the Johnsongrass foliage grows over 8 inches tall before the first frost.

Meanwhile, efforts should be made to prevent the spread of the weed. Johnsongrass seeds have been brought to clean fields on corn pickers, balers, combines and other implements. Rhizomes have been carried on plows, discs, and harrows. Some seeds have moved on contaminated straw and hay. Even flood waters have brought Johnsongrass seeds and rhizomes to clean areas.

Mitchell reminds land owners that it is illegal to knowingly allow Johnsongrass to go to seed. For example information on control, contact your county extension office for a copy of the publication, "Johnsongrass Identification and Control."

State Land Judging Contest September 30

The ninth annual Delaware State Land Judging Contest will be held Sat., Sept. 30, on the Howard Wilson farm one mile east of Smyrna on Route 12. The contest will start at 10 a.m., according to Leo Lott, associate professor of plant science at the University of Delaware.

Cotnoir says 36 youths -- representing 4-H, FFA and the Boy Scouts -- are expected to compete in the state contest. Each participant must qualify for the event by finishing among the top four in his division during one of the county land judging contests. This year's county contests will be held Sept. 14 (New Castle), Sept. 21 (Kent), and Sept. 28 (Sussex).

The Delaware land judging contests are designed to provide learning experience for young people interested in soil and water conservation. Contestants judge land on drainage, texture, structure and its ability to support a productive agriculture.

Awards in the state contest include $20 each for the four highest scores, $15 each for the next four scores, $10 each for the third set of four scores and $5 each for the next four scores. The best county teams representing 4-H, FFA and the Boy Scouts will also be eligible to compete in the Tri-State Land Judging Contest to be held in New Jersey during October.

The Delaware land judging program for youths is sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Delaware, Future Farmers of America and the Delaware State Association of Soil Conservation Districts.

4-H Tractor Winner Picked

A 17-year-old boy will represent Delaware in the eastern U.S. 4-H tractor contest scheduled for Sept. 24 through 26 at Richmond, Va. Paul Feucht, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Feucht Jr., won the honor in competition with 11 other Delaware 4-H'ers. He will compete with top 4-H tractor drivers from 21 other states.

Feucht is in his eighth year of 4-H club work, including four years in the tractor program. He has also carried projects in dairying, veterinary science, field crops, personal accounts, automotive and junior leadership.

The state driver's contest, held at the University of Delaware farm in Newark, included a two and four wheel driving event, a written examination on tractor care and safety, and general tractor handling abilities.

Other winners in the contest include Joseph Hopkins, Lewes, second; Wayne Pierson, Chestnut Grove, third; Richard Harrington, Newark, fourth; and Doug Vanderwende, Bridgeville, fifth.

The regional championship will be scored similar to the state event with emphasis on operational safety. The contest is sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service in the participating states. Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware, will accompany Feucht to the event and serve as his coach.

George Alexander (Alex) Thorpe

George Alexander (Alex) Thorpe, 63, of Harrington, died last Thursday in Milford Memorial Hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Thorpe was born in Farmington and had lived in the Harrington area most of his life. He was a barber and a member of Metropolitan ME Church, Harrington. He was a trustee and a member of the steward board of the church and a past member of the board of the former Harrington School District.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edna V. Thorpe; three brothers, Leon of Harrington, Noah of Philadelphia and William R. of Chester, Pa.; and a sister, Mrs. Helen Caldwell of Philadelphia.

Services were held Monday afternoon at the Metropolitan ME Church. Interment was in Williamsville Cemetery.

Ag Careers Day Set for Nov. 11

The College of Agricultural Sciences at the University of Delaware will hold its annual Careers Day on Sat., Nov. 11. The half-day event will be held in Agricultural Hall with registration beginning at 9:15. High school students, parents and guidance counsellors will cover curriculum options in the college and career opportunities in the broad field of agriculture. In addition, those participating in Careers Day will tour the research and teaching facilities in the college and see a number of special exhibits.

Complete registration information is available by writing or calling Dr. Ralph Barwick, assistant dean, College of Agricultural Sciences, University of Delaware, Newark 19711. The telephone number is 738-2508.
