Penn-Dol Development Corporation plans 40 more townhouses on the tract on Peck Avenue, where it has 10 units under construction.

The corporation's plans were revealed Monday night, when Murray Feagan, project manager, accompanied by Dan Broyles, vice president, asked the City Council for a letter of intent, which was granted, on the additional housing.

Feagan told the Council he hoped to have 70 slabs (foundations) by February. He added that by today the lots would be cleared for the additional 40 townhouses.

The Baltimore project manager also commented the townhouses under way now had been upgraded and would contain washers, dryers, dishwashers, stoves and garbage disposal units.

A quorum of the City Council was not present Monday night, raising the possibility of another meeting next Monday, but the Council, the Penn-Dol representatives and Dudley Willis, of Edward H. Richardson Associates, the City's consulting engineers, discussed street and drainage tile for Penn-Dol. Willis also told the Council about a suggestion of his on tile work on the property on Reese Avenue where a food distribution center is being built by Burris Foods.

Refrigerators Should List Capacities

Just because two refrigerators are the same size on the outside doesn't mean they will hold the same amount of food. To get the size you really want, it is a good idea to consult certification directories published by the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers (AHAM), says Miss Coral Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

AHAM sponsors a nation-wide sets procedures for precisely measuring the cubic feet of usable refrigeration and freezer space and the square feet of shelf space. The measurements are also certified by an independent laboratory and published in the certification directory distributed to dealers every six months, she says.

The newest directory, dated June 1, 1972, lists 33 brands and 1,177 models. Each certified unit is identified by a distinctive seal verifying it has been measured in the prescribed manner. Only certified capacities may be advertised or listed in product literature.

Differences in size can be considerable, Miss Morris says. The directory lists two compact, single-door refrigerators which appear to be about the

Kent Democrats Head For All-Office Sweep

Democrats last night were on their way to a clean sweep of Kent County's Levy Court races and row offices.

Leading the pack was William C. Torbert who defeated incumbent Comptroller A. Richard Barros by about 2,000 votes.

Their race was sparked by a disagreement over the amount of surplus money in the county's general fund. Torbert defended the surplus, built up by the Democratic-controlled Levy Court, while Barros attacked it.

Torbert last night attributed his victory to hard campaigning in Dover. "I worked real hard in my Dover district," he said, adding that gubernatorial candidate Sherman W. Tribbitt, "helped us a tremendous amount in Kent County."

Democrats were leading or had won the three Levy Court races.

Mrs. Frances M. Messina defeated her Republican challenger, Sherwood D. (Don) La Shomb by less than 150 votes in the 30th District.

Incumbent John T. McKenna was leading Gregory I. Kirkwood, his Republican opponent, by nearly 1,000 votes in the 31st District.

Another close race for the Levy Court took place in the 34th District where Samuel G. Thomas, a Democrat, defeated Leon Pleasanton by more than 150 votes.

Unless Pleasanton or La Shomb pull out victories in the final tallies the Levy Court will not have a single Republican commissioner.

The one Republican currently on the court, James E. Turner Sr., retired this year.

Democrats won big in two row office races. Robert J. Donaway, now deputy county sheriff, handily beat Republican E. Cowgill (Zeke) Barnard by more than 4,000 votes.

Donaway replaces incumbent Sheriff John H. Shaffer, a Democrat, who bid successfully for prothonotary. The latest count showed Shaffer leading Republican David L. Bonar by 3,300 votes.

Incumbent Raymond F. Book, a Republican, trailed Democrat Ralph R. Smith by 500 votes in his bid for re-election as county register of wills.

The three American Party candidates, two for Levy Court and one for register of wills, had drawn 446 votes out of the more than 20,000 cast late last night.

Horney said, "last year's presentation of this subject was received so enthusiastically by local businessmen that we decided on a repeat this year."

Mabel Lambden Receives 40-year 4-H Pin

In the last 40 years, Mabel Lambden has seen a lot of changes in 4-H and she's helped make a lot of them. Since 1932, she has been leader of the Cokesbury 4-H Club in Sussex County, and recently she received the first 40-year pin 4-H ever given in Delaware.

Today 4-H doesn't play the role in the lives of its members that it did in 1932 she says. Then it was the only organized activity for most of its members. They were all from rural backgrounds and 4-H was often the most exciting event the children had each month.

Today both children and their parents are too busy, she says. There are so many things for children to do that 4-H has to compete for children's time.

"Youngsters today have a pretty hard life to live if they try to please everybody," she says.

Children are victims of the problem, but parents and other adults are responsible for it. In 1932, adults felt they should spend time with children. "Now, they're too busy. But it's our duty to see children get what they want," she says.

Mrs. Lambden feels that children want is the leadership and organized activity provided by 4-H, and that is what she has tried to provide to her club members since the beginning.

During the depression, one of the biggest problems faced by 4-H leaders was finding projects which wouldn't cost much. Club dues were five cents a month, and the club often had to rely on donations from civic organizations to get by.

Early projects offered by the Cokesbury club included cooking, sewing, room improvement, gardening, swine and dairy.

The gardening project was one of Mrs. Lambden's favorites. The first year, the garden was an acre site on the Lambden farm. Seed and fertilizer were donated by local companies. All the children of the club worked in the garden. They sold their vegetables locally and in Rehoboth.

Mrs. Lambden and other leaders were always on the lookout for projects which could benefit members at little or no cost. Girls in the room improvement project used orange crates to make dressers and cheese boxes for footstools. They may not seem much by modern standards, but often they were the only pieces of furniture the girls could call their own, Mrs. Lambden explains.

The club's swine project got started with the help of a local civic group which donated a sow to the club. One member was chosen to raise the pig. When the sow was old enough to breed, he gave one pig to another club member, she explains.

The system, known as a pig chain, was used for several years and then abandoned. However, 4-H leaders didn't forget the system, and today leaders in Sussex county are trying to get a chain started again.

Mrs. Lambden feels most of the changes in 4-H have been good. Its approach has changed and it has had to conform to a speeded-up society, but it's still the most exciting and valuable group available to youngsters, Mrs. Lambden says.

Guidelines For Exercise

According to a recent publication by the American Heart Association, there are some guidelines for prescribing safe exercise levels.

The Delaware Heart Association reports that the publication entitled, "Exercise Testing and Training of Apparent-Handbook for Physicians," encourages widespread adoption of regular, vigorous exercise programs tailored to individual needs to enhance the quality of life.

The committee on exercise, who prepared the publication, said they believe that "regular, vigorous exercise enhances the quality of life, by increasing the physical capability for work and play". It added that:

"We believe that such exercise is an important therapeutic tool in rehabilitating patients who have angina pectoris or are recovering from myocardial infarction. Current knowledge points to high blood pressure, elevated serum lipids, hyperglycemia and cigarette smoking as factors of a primary concern in reducing the risk of coronary heart disease. In the hope of reducing such risk in all individuals, the committee advocates physical activity as an adjunct to the elimination of cigarette smoking and the control of blood pressure, serum lipid levels and obesity." The statement continued:

Some epidemiologic evidence supports the view that maintenance of a high physical activity level is in itself an effective preventive against the development of coronary heart disease. But this has not yet been adequately investigated in controlled research. Therefore, we do not consider it justifiable to advocate widespread adoption of vigorous exercise programs purely on the grounds that exercise alone will prevent heart disease."

"We do, however, encourage the widespread adoption of exercise programs tailored to the capacity and interest of individuals because of the probability that they will enrich the quality of life and, in combination with other measures help reduce coronary risk. At the same time, the committee recognizes that moderately high-intensity exercise embodies risk for a small fraction of the middle-aged male population. This statement contains guidelines that are intended to minimize that risk."

Immunization Urged on Polio

Delaware public health authorities are urging all citizens to make sure they have received the proper immunizations against polio.

A recent outbreak of polio in Connecticut underlines the continuing need for immunization against this disease, according to Dr. Edward F. Gliwa, director of the Division of Public Health. Three cases of polio were reported in October from a private school in Connecticut, and eight cases of paralytic illness were under investigation as possible polio cases.

Immunization levels against polio, both in Delaware and throughout the nation, are not as high as they should be, say public health officials. Among Delaware's preschool children, aged one through four, more than one of every four children has never been immunized against this crippling disease. The number of unprotected children is highest in inner city areas and areas of rural poverty.

Charles Alexander, a U.S. Public Health Service advisor with the Division of Public Health, said about 70 percent of the state's preschool children have received polio immunizations.

Among school children the figure rises to about 85 percent; but both figures are well below ideal levels, he said, and outbreaks are possible in this state.

The Division of Public Health urges parents to have all children immunized against polio. A vaccine, taken by mouth, is easily available. It is especially important for children to be protected during early fall.

To be immunized, a child simply swallows a few drops of tasteless liquid containing the vaccine. Three doses of the vaccine are recommended by the American Academy of Pediatrics. At the time the child first enters school, an additional dose is recommended.

Vaccine is available from private physicians or at free immunization or children's health clinics sponsored by the Division of Public Health.

HOMEOWNERS CORNER Why are Phillips screws often used instead of plain screws in such things as radios, automobiles, and many appliances? It's because a slot-bladed screwdriver can slip and damage parts that may be valuable to the operation or good looks of these items. Your home tool kit should include both types of screwdrivers: you'll never know when they'll come in handy! Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

- SAY IT NOW -

How many times have you been doing a monotonous, mechanical job in a monotonous, mechanical way and your mind took flight, bringing you to the edge of a bright and joyous thought? Some little series of circumstances occurs that dove-tails into the next series of thoughts and - before you know it, you're thinking of someone you haven't talked to in a long while; then you're recalling a small moment of kindness or inspiration; then you're wishing you could share this nice feeling; and, ultimately, you're thinking "I wish others could know this person as I know him".

A tiny article in a popular magazine reported that a young man, so struck by the over-whelming joy of a reciprocal love and the compulsion to share his joy with others, rented a bill-board on the edge of town proclaiming in bright, bold letters "I love you Mary - signed John". Have you ever experienced the pleasantness of repeating to someone you like the kind words you have heard another says about him?

This poem, author unknown, found in a favorite book, will help say what is attempted here:

If you have a friend worth loving,
 Love him. Yes, and let him know
 That you love him, ere life's evening
 Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
 Why should good words ne'er be said
 Of a friend - till he's dead?

If you hear a song that thrills you,
 Sung by any child of song,
 Praise it. Do not let the singer
 Wait deserved praises long.
 Why should one who thrills your heart
 Lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you
 By its humble, pleading tone,
 Join it. Do not let the seeker
 Bow before his God alone.
 Why should not your brother share
 The strength of "two or three" in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling
 From a brother's weeping eyes
 Share them. And by kindly sharing
 Own our kinship in the skies.
 Why should anyone be glad
 When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh goes rippling
 Through the sunshine on his face,
 Share it. 'Tis the wise man's saying -
 For both grief and joy, a place.
 There's health and goodness in the mirth
 In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
 By a friendly, helping hand,
 Say so. Speak out brave and truly
 Ere the darkness veil the land.
 Should a brother workman dear
 Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness
 All enriching as you go -
 Leave them. Trust the Harvest Giver;
 He will make each seed to grow.
 So until the happy end
 Your life shall never lack a friend.

Now that you've read this, someone (maybe several ones) may have come to mind. Write to us. Let us put it in the column. It can be anonymous. Just tell us that small pleasantry or kindness someone has done. Just give us an outline - we'll do the composing and correct your spelling if you like. Wouldn't you like the rest of us to know something nice about someone you think should be appreciated in our town? What a lovely Christmas gift - just to know you're appreciated. Now really; we all try so hard to do right - not Great! or Grand! - just - nice. Say it now.

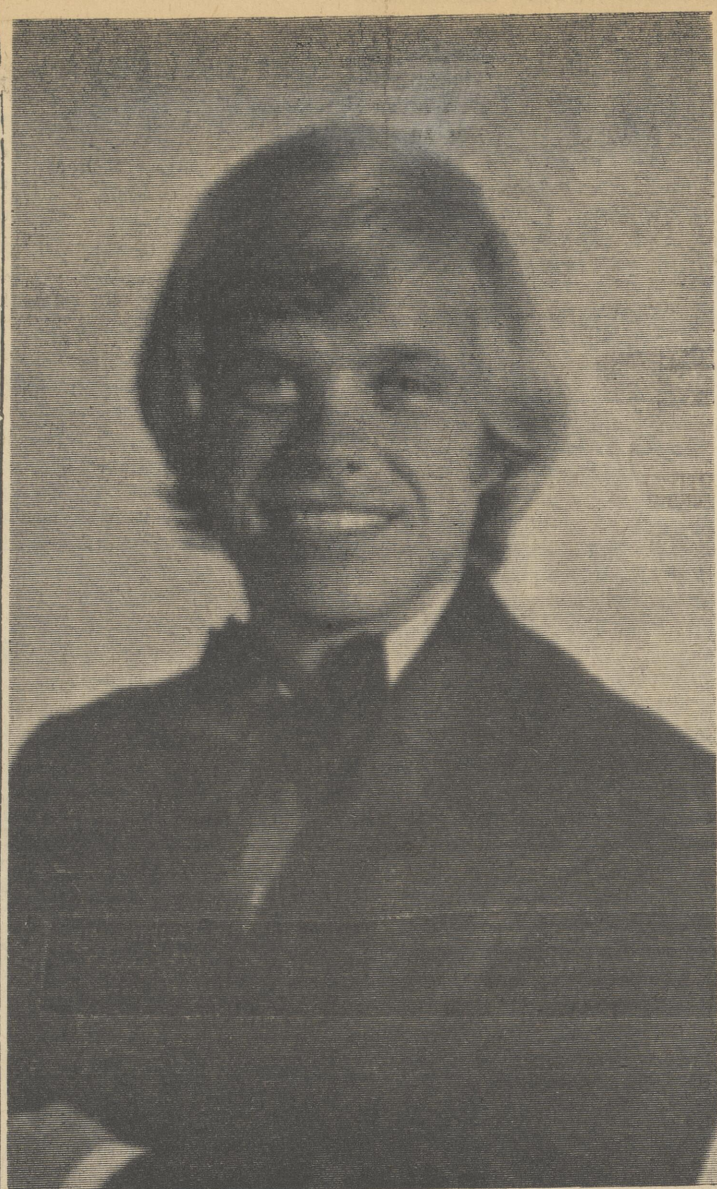

Send your notes to either Cliff Miller, R D 1, Box 207, Felton, Del. 19943, or Betty Clarke, R D 1, Box 208, Felton. Our phone numbers are 284-4019 and 284-4733, respectively. Call anytime.

Robbins' Hardware was the only team near the top that escaped unscathed as they took four points from a usually tough Taylor & Messick quintet. Harry Brown rolled a good 201 game and a real good effort for Robbins' and George Collins bowled a good 208 game with Kenny P. Outten adding a good effort for the losing Taylor & Messick team. With the big four point win, Robbins' Hardware extended their league lead to a big six and a half game margin with just two more weeks left in this first third.

Jarrell Fuel could not keep pace with the leaders and was the victim of a four point shellacking by the T & M Rejects. Although the fuel team could not score any points Tuesday night, Martin Jarrell scattered the pins for a real good 554 set. Robert Wilson sparked the Rejects to victory as each man on the squad pitched in with a very good effort.

John Forbes set the pace for Fry's American as he rolled a good 209 game and a good series as they drew a split with Big John's Son. Jerry Hayman also bowled a fine 204 game as Bill Brode added a good above average effort for Fry's as the team moved up into the third spot. Bill Kohel was the big gun for Big John's Son with a real good above average effort, and Jim Carroll and Henry Webb both added good efforts to help keep things even.

McKnat Funeral Home squeezed by Quillen's Market by just eight pins in the first game, but saw the next two games slip out of their grasp to drop three points to their opponents. Donald Wilson blasted the boards for a superb 558 set, which included a great 231 game for Quillen's, getting a full team assist from the remaining members of the squad. Harry Jack and Robert Garey both bowled well for McKnat's.

People's Restaurant thumped the Spoilers Tuesday night as they collected four points. Leonard Outten bowled very well for the losing Spoilers. Bill Manship set the pace for People's with a real fine 523 set with Norman Clough also adding a good effort as did the rest of the team.

Wally's Garage dropped three points to Butler's Fuel as the team foiled to bowl up to their capabilities. Sam Lyons and Larry Larimore bowled real good efforts for Butler's Fuel, but the team could not move in the standings. Brothers Five took three points from Penn Central as Robert Dennis amassed a great 557 series, which included a grand 226 game. Penn Central received good assists from Robert O'Brier, Ralph Milbourn and Bill Willoughby in taking one point from their opponents.

Catholics In Delmarva Schedule Poverty Collection For Nov. 19

Catholics throughout the Delmarva Peninsula will be participating in the efforts of the Campaign for Human Development on November 19. The Campaign, a national program to break the poverty circle for 35 million impoverished Americans, begins its third year with the annual collection.

Spartans Trip Delmar, Sallies Are Next

Lake Forest's football Spartans didn't have an outstanding evening, but managed to defeat Delmar's Wildcats, by a score of 30-6, at Delmar Friday night. Al Wood's charges are now 7-1 and lead the Southern Division of the Henlopen Conference. The locals may have been looking past Delmar, at fabled Salesianum, the upstate powerhouse, the locals will be tackling at Baynard Stadium, Wilmington, this Saturday night.

Don Bryant came out of the backfield, latched onto a Lawrence Sorden aerial, turned on the jets and raced 75 yards, for a Spartan first-quarter touchdown. Jim Dill caught a pass for two points and a Spartan 8-0 lead. Don Parker went over from the six in the second period and Sorden's two point run upped the margin to 16-0.

A Delmar touchdown made the score 16-6 at halftime, but two Spartan fourth-quarter scores turned a close game into a rout. Sorden ran 20 yards for the first one with Dill, repeating his first-period effort on the extra points play. Neil Travis closed out the scoring with a one-yard run. Saturday night will see the Spartans attempt to beat a rival, who regularly schedules opponents from Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, often with success. The locals hope to make a respectable showing and will be working hard this week, in an effort to cook up a few surprises for the Sallies.

money is distributed in grants and loans to self-help projects throughout the Peninsula and throughout the country. To date $19,700 has been provided to ten groups in the Catholic Diocese of Wilmington and another 350 grants have been made across the country.

More than $16 million was contributed nationally to the Campaign in 1970 and 1971. The diocese where the collections take place are permitted to retain 25% of the total collection for local grants. At the national level, 350 grants have been made to assist poor people in all parts of the U.S. Campaign Director for the Catholic Diocese, the Rev. Msgr. Paul J. Schierse, said, "We are proud of the generosity of the people in the Peninsula. I'm also encouraged by what we've done to dispel the myths about poverty, the idea that the poor are a lot of lazy, shiftless people who don't want to work."

"We're telling people that the nature of charity has changed: it should no longer be seen as a gift, but rather self-help--help people to help themselves so that they, in return, can help others." In all its communications, the Campaign is attempting to change men's thinking and to transform hearts. Through its multifaceted educational program, the project is trying to create a new moral climate of compassion and charity. The long-range goal of the Catholic effort is the development of human potential, on every level.

Girl Scout News

Felton Girl Scout Junior Troop 248 is making November a banner month. They started it off Friday with a day at Petersburg, learning outdoor skills, including lashing, fire building and compass, and finished with a five mile hike. 18 girls and 4 adults attended. They were Sharon Blackman, Delores Perry, Denise Jacobs, Christine Morrow, Karen Wothers, Connie Harrington, Terrie Delong, Lisa Stubbs, Gina Harding, Tracy Fisher, Marcie Reed, Kim Jones, Lisa Beddle, Abby

Betts Diane Boynton, Tammie Hinson, Robin Kashner, and Crystal Smith. The four adults were Mrs. Robert Morrow, troop leader, Mrs. Amos Jones, Mrs. Carroll Hinson, and Mrs. Thomas McFry. The skills they learned will count toward their Gypsy or Foot Traveler Badges.

Next Friday, the troop will begin a weekend stay at Girl Scout Camp Nansanawago, in Fruitland, Md. Approximately 24 girls are expected to attend. They will be laying a nature trail, polishing up their compass skills and cooking most of their meals out of doors. Sand painting and bread-clay sculpturing will be done along with tree identification. These skills will help them obtain their Troop Camper, Observer, Rambler, and Outdoor Cook Badges.

On Nov. 21, they will be holding an Appreciation Night for those parents and friends of scouting, who have helped the troop during the past 3 years. The guests will receive certificates of appreciation and the girls will receive all badges they have earned since last March. Pins will be presented to two new girls and transferring scouts and Brownie Fly-Ups will be welcomed. Our troop now has 28 members.

In addition to all of these activities the girls are busy selling Girl Scout Calendars and will sell refreshments at the end of the month at the Lake Forest North play "Cinderella". These funds will help defray expenses of our camping trip.

The end of the month will bring the beginning of work on their needlework badge. They will begin by learning four embroidery stitches and use them to embroider a pot holder.

Remember to support the Girl Scouts whenever possible. We are trying to make them useful and reliable young people and any assistance you can render is deeply appreciated.

state supervisor of human relations, who will monitor the department's progress in reaching its goals.

Myers will also lead an Affirmative Action Committee in the department, composed of five supervisors and two secretaries.

The State Board called for an affirmative action program last February as a step toward improving intergroup relations throughout the public school system.

A committee is also working to develop similar plans for Delaware school districts at the request of the State Board.

The State Council for Women and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have alleged to the Board that blacks and women are denied a share of educational positions that matches their proportion of the state's work force.

Last August, Mrs. Helen Thomas of the Council for Women said that 83 per cent of women but 91 per cent of school principals are men.

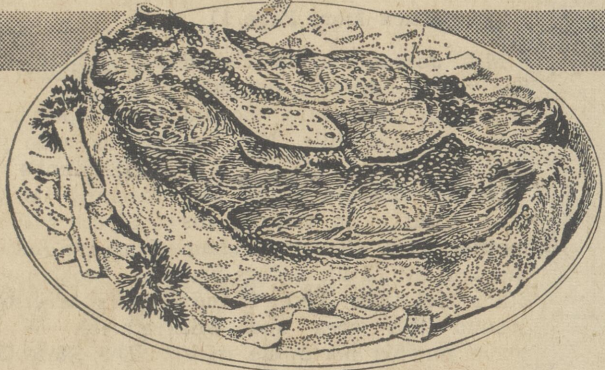

A recent study by the department showed that 14 per cent of Delaware instructional personnel are blacks, while Negro students makes up 20 per cent of public school enrollment.

Thousands of pines are seemingly dying. This is the idea many Delawareans now have when traveling around, taking specific notice of many of the short and long needle pines throughout the State.

Pines are probably showing more brown needles this year than in previous years because of the extreme wet spring. This browning of the foliage is not only happening with pines, but with most evergreen plants. The dropping of the needles or foliage is a natural phenomenon, the same as deciduous trees drop their leaves in the fall. During late September and October, the inner or older foliage of most evergreen conifers dies and falls away.

In some species, like white pine and arborvitae, the dying of the foliage takes place rather suddenly and the trees present an alarming appearance. However, this shedding of old foliage usually lasts only two to four weeks. Of course, no harm is done to the trees by the loss of this foliage. The amount which is dropped depends somewhat upon the condition of the tree.

This is where we get back to our wet spring conditions. Many of these conifers cannot stand so called "wet feet," particularly the arborvitae. These conditions have made the trees less vigorous and they, therefore, are losing a greater proportion of their leaf area.

In general, though, it may be assumed that as long as the new, terminal, or current year's growth is fresh and vigorous, the life of the tree is not in danger.

Now, for just a couple of quickies--

Many of you have probably bought, or will buy sometime during the winter, decorative Indian corn. It is very attractive and can add that extra inside or outside the home, especially through the holiday season.

Some of you may buy this corn every year, but by following a few simple steps, this corn can be used for many years.

Deterioration of Indian corn usually comes from insect infestations of the whole kernel. This is the Angoumois grain moth. Corn that has been outside up till now is most likely infested with the eggs of this pesty insect. You should immediately place this corn in the deep freeze at zero degrees F. for four or five days to kill these insects. It can then be removed and displayed.

Upon storing your corn, place it back into the freezer for four or five days, then place the ears in a thick plastic bag that will seal tightly or in a glass or metal container with tight fitting lids. These containers should protect the corn from insect attack until you are ready to use it again next year.

Poinsettias are certainly a decorative plant. Many received poinsettias during the holiday season and have grown these plants throughout the summer. Now you are wondering how to get them to re-bloom.

Your plant should be taken indoors and placed in a sunny window. Keep it in an area where night temperatures are around 60° F. You must protect it or seal it off from artificial light during the night. This has to be controlled if reblooming is to take place. The plant should be placed in a dark area at 5:00 p.m. and removed at 8:00 a.m.

After forty days of this light treatment, the plant can be kept in normally lighted rooms with adequate water and fertilizer, and will bloom during December.

Special attention should be given to the watering, making sure the plant does not dry out and that adequate fertilizer is given. Generally, fertilize with a 20-20-20 analysis at the rate of one teaspoon per gallon every seven to ten days. The plant desires low night temperatures around 60° F. throughout its indoor growing period.

The importance of the sweater look has brought forth a number of rib trims for finishing at neckline, wrist and waist. You can find narrow rib trims by the yard or individual turtle neck ribs. They come in basic colors or colors to coordinate with fabric by the yard.

Turtle neck ribs are versatile. The turtle band stretches to go over the head and is sewed to the neckline of the garment with zig-zag or straight stitching. It also may be sewed to the neckline with elastic thread.

This same turtle neck can be used to make a pair of cuffs. Cut along the ribbing at each side of the band to make two even pieces. Fold in half and make a narrow seam. Then apply the raw edge to sleeve edge. Fold over and finish the under side.

For a midriff insert on a dress, you'll need two turtle neck trims. Cut along a rib of each and open out flat. Sew the cut edges together to make one continuous band. The raw edges of the band are then sewed to bodice and to skirt. Position the ribbing so that the center of the ribbing is at natural waistline.

This versatile trim can also be used to finish the waistband of a sweater. Again, you'll need two. Prepare the ribbing as you did for the midriff insert. Next, attach to the waistline of the sweater, stretching as you sew to the sweater. Fold over the ribbing and stitch to wrong side of sweater, making a double band.

Knit trim by the yard is used for finishing edges on any knit fabric. Take accurate measurements to determine yardage needed.

Eliminate facings and hem allowances if trim is to be used on edges. Also trim away seam allowances where edges are to be bound. Distribute fullness evenly by dividing the edges to be bound and the trimming into four equal parts. Pin in place and stitch, keeping trim as flat as possible. Use ball point needles and polyester thread and a straight or zig-zag or stretch type stitch.

Where possible, apply trim to garment area before closing the last seam. For example, stitch trim to armhole after joining the shoulder seam and before completely the side seam.

Most trims come with directions and suggestion for achieving a flat, neat, professional appearance as the trim is applied.

If you haven't yet used one of these knit trims or ribbings, consider it the next time you sew on a knit fabric.

New Soybean Variety Released

A new soybean variety suited to Delaware conditions will be available for 1973 planting, according to Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware. The new variety, Wye, is being released jointly by the Delaware and Maryland Agricultural Experiment Stations and the United States Department of Agriculture.

Wye is similar in maturity to Lincoln, Wabash, and Perry, all varieties used in breeding the new bean. It will mature about four days later than Clark or Cutler, according to Mitchell, is about four inches shorter than Cutler and holds its seed much better than Kent.

Wye has proven to be higher in oil and lower in protein than either Clark or Cutler and has outyielded them by 3-4 bushels per acre.

The new variety develops seed pods close to the ground. For this reason, Mitchell advises planting in narrow rows. This is especially important if it is to be grown after small grains in a double cropping system. Crowding the plants, which results from narrow row planting, will cause the pods to grow higher on the stem. This, in turn, results in reduced seed loss at harvest.

Wye has tawny pubescence, brown pods and black hila. It is resistant to frog-eye leaf spot and slightly more resistant to purple stain and pod and stem disease than Clark and Cutler.

Interested growers should contact their local seedsmen for a supply of the new variety.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne W. Holberton

We are rapidly approaching that season of the year when family tradition and customs figure perhaps more importantly in menu planning than at any other time. For many a family there will be a golden brown turkey on the table for holiday enjoyment. Although anytime can be turkey time, nearly half of the nation's turkeys are marketed during November and December. For those of us who prefer turkey for the Thanksgiving feast, the news that large supplies are available this season is good.

To enjoy a turkey dinner in grandma's day, you had to buy a big bird and start preparing it in the wee hours of the morning. But today, because turkeys are produced in a wide range of sizes, from 6 to 24 pounds, you can find just the size to suit your needs. However, if a whole bird is too much, then buy turkey parts or a boneless turkey roast.

A big turkey, one weighs 16 pounds or over, looks good on the table, provides plenty of tasty leftovers and is your best buy. Why? Because these large birds usually are cheaper per pound and there is a larger proportion of meat to have.

How do you pick out a good turkey? Be sure you look for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's grade shield. This official grade shield means that the turkey has been quality graded by a trained Federal grader. Only turkeys which have just passed Federal inspection for wholesomeness can be graded.

The top grade for turkeys, the one usually found in stores, is U.S. Grade A. This grade of turkey has good over all shape and it looks good. It is meaty, has a well-developed layer of fat in the skin, and is practically free from defects.

When selecting a turkey, you will also want to know the age of the bird. Age is your key to tenderness and suggests ways to cook your turkey. There are four classes of turkeys. The first class is fryer-roaster, which are young turkeys under 16 weeks of age, either sex and have tender meat with soft, pliable smooth textured skin. These turkeys are best suited for frying, barbecuing, broiling or roasting. The next class is called young hen or young tom turkey, these turkeys are usually 5 to 7 months old, have tender meat with good skin, however, the breastbone cartilage is somewhat less flexible than the very young fryer. These turkeys are excellent for roasting and are also good for frying and barbecuing. Yearling hen or tom is the third class. These turkeys are fully matured and are usually under 15 months of age. Their meat is reasonably tender and their skin fairly smooth textured. These birds are best suited for stewing and baking or in soups or salads. The labels on these turkeys will usually read "mature turkey," "yearling turkey," or "old turkey." The last class is rarely found on the market for they are truly mature birds over 15 months of age and their flesh is tough. Next week we will discuss how much to buy and how to cook this regal bird.

Waterfowl Festival To Be Held Nov. 10-12

One of the nation's most colorful artists, Milton C. Weiler, of Garden City, N.Y., will be one of the featured artists in the second annual waterfowl festival in Easton, Md., Nov. 10-12.

Weiler has hunted and fished extensively throughout the United States, Canada and its provinces all his life, and he credits the authenticity of his art to having done the things he paints.

His watercolor subjects are for the most part gunning and fishing scenes and wildlife.

He is an accomplished carver as well as painter, and is called on to judge most the nationally important shows and competitions related to decoys and carving. Weiler is a recognized authority on wildfowl decoys and has recently published limited edition portfolios--"The Classic Decoy Series" and "Classic Shorebird Decoys".

Many of the leading sports magazines have used his art for many years.

Smarter Politicians

Some of our candidates are wishing up. No longer are they mailing out three pieces of identical literature and using three different stamps, now they are mailing out three pieces of identical literature, but they're putting them all in one envelope and using one stamp. At least that's some progress.

Importing Animals Or Birds? Fine -- But Don't Import Their Diseases.

Tucked away in the quiet suburban town of Clifton, N.J., and separated from the town by a tall wire fence, sprawl 30 peaceful, grassy acres, dotted with brick barns.

If you were authorized to visit on official business, you might possibly find a bongo or a dibtag in one of those barns, amid cows, horses, chickens, and other animals.

What is this high-security barnyard -- a farm? A zoo? A secret military installation? Not at all. It is the only animal quarantine station owned by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the continental United States.

Through this deceptively tranquil facility pass several thousand animals and birds each year, held from one to 60 days for tests and observation. The objective is to keep any diseases of foreign origin, especially exotic diseases, from penetrating our borders and wreaking havoc in livestock or poultry.

Thus, all the animals here are either imports or "U.S. goods returned," such as thoroughbred horses sent to race in Europe.

But not all imported or returning animals must come here. To begin with, several entire classes of animals do not fall under the jurisdiction of the quarantine station or its parent agency, the Veterinary Services of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). Questions on importing wild birds and migratory game birds, for example, should be addressed to the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, Department of Interior, Washington, D.C., 20240.

If you want to import or bring back a cat, dog, or monkey, you can get information on requirements from: Foreign Quarantine Program, U.S.

Public Health Service, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Atlanta, GA 30333. You can also obtain a free booklet called "So You Want to Import a Pet" from the Customs Bureau, Washington, DC 20226.

However, if you are importing a purebred animal for breeding purposes, then you're back in the APHIS field of authority. Such an animal -- be it cat, dog, or whatever -- can be entered U.S. customs duty-free if you have the proper certification. For information, write to: Veterinary Services, APHIS, USDA, Federal Center Building, Hyattsville, MD 20782.

The legality of importing some animals depends on their birthplace. If you have a yen to import a cow from France, you're out of luck. Certain animals are completely prohibited from entry due to their origin in countries not certified as free of foot-and-mouth disease, African swine fever, or rinderpest. Cattle from France (and from most countries) and swine from Italy are among the outcasts.

But if your dream is a cow from Ireland -- a foot-and-mouth-free country -- then import away. Contact APHIS in Hyattsville to learn what health certificates you will need. Upon arrival, the animal must stay at the Clifton Quarantine Station for at least 30 days, to be tested for animal diseases and those transmittable to humans, such as tuberculosis. If it flunks, it must be destroyed or exported. If it passes, you know you have a healthy animal that can safely mix with others.

Horses, zebras (there were 36 of them at the station recently), and other equines are allowed to come from anywhere. The length of their stay in quarantine depends on where they come from. Horses from Canada generally do not require a quarantine period.

Returning racehorses -- like all other animals sent abroad -- in the first place must meet the import laws of the country to which they are heading. It's a good idea to check entry requirements with the local consulate, or embassy in Washington, of the destination country.

Exotic-sounding "wild zoological ruminants" also face quarantine at the station. Ruminants are animals with four stomachs, like the domestic cow. The wild species include deer, giraffe, and antelope, such as the two rare African varieties -- the bongo and the dibtag -- mentioned earlier. Unlike the cow, these ruminants can enter from foot-and-mouth infected countries, but they must be kept 60 days at a USDA-approved quarantine station in the country of origin, and 30 days at the Clifton station. Then they remain in "post-entry quarantine" for the rest of their lives; that is, they can live only in USDA-approved zoos in this country.

Finally, poultry importers can obtain permits from APHIS in Hyattsville. Chickens, ducks, partridges, quail, and many other birds are quarantined in Clifton for 30 days. (Or they could be sent to a small USDA Quarantine Station in Honolulu, or one in Miami owned by the Miami Port Authority, both of which handle only poultry and horses).

Strict new regulations were imposed in late August on the import or return of all species of pet and exotic birds. Commercial imports of such birds are banned. Bird owners will be allowed to bring in one or two personally-owned caged pet birds if they supply the required notarized statement of health. Check with APHIS for other requirements. Regulation of these birds is essential due to a lingering outbreak in this country of exotic Newcastle disease, a virus disease which can tear through poultry flocks.

APHIS has veterinarians and inspectors available round-the-clock at certain airports and piers to check the health of incoming and outgoing animals. They also have authority to check transport conditions to see that an animal's welfare is being safeguarded.

The two veterinarians and 12 caretakers at the Clifton quarantine station follow care spread there. They change their workclothes between barns when handling animals. They dip their rubber boots in a disinfectant foot bath upon entering or leaving any of the 14 barns. Arriving animals walk through a milky disinfectant bath.

The importer pays the "hotel bill" for his animal. Such fees provide operating expenses for the station and range from $13.50 a day for a horse down to 20c for a pigeon. Pigeon? Indeed -- for legions of pigeon fanciers, imported new varieties are just the thing to round out a collection.

Dr. Paul Lanphear, with USDA for 30 years, is veterinarian-in-charge of the quarantine station. He, his assistant, and their families have a most unusual homestead: the grounds of the station itself, where they can be available for emergencies 24 hours a day. Their rambling white houses have stood there since the station opened 70 years ago.

Dr. Lanphear is proud of his agency's record. Its forerunner, the Bureau of Animal Industry, was established in 1884 to eradicate infectious pleuro-pneumonia of livestock, which it accomplished. The last outbreak in this country of the dread scourge of cloven-hoofed animals, foot-and-mouth disease, was in 1929. And, says Dr. Lanphear, animal tuberculosis, hog cholera, and cattle brucellosis are now approaching eradication.
