

It Seams To Me

Janet Reed

Does your winter coat need a new lining? If the coat's still in good condition, it will pay you to reline it. It's much easier than you may think. You can use the old lining for a pattern, but before you remove the lining, use tailors chalk to mark points where it is joined to coat facing. You're marking notches or joining points to be used when you insert the new lining. Do this across seams of lining also. You can take the lining out in a hurry by cutting it out very close to the line of stitching. Start at the front facing and cut on the wrong side of the fabric, holding the lining in the left hand and pulling the fabric taut. Cut close enough to the seam so that the old seam allowance can be pulled off easily. Leave the old stitching in the coat as a guide for the new seam.

If the coat has an interlining which you're going to use again, rip the stitching instead of cutting the lining. Cut all the remaining lining seams on the stitching line instead of ripping them apart. If you're accurate, you'll have a pattern for the new lining. Press all the old lining pieces carefully.

Use only half of the lining for a pattern—whichever half seems more accurate. When you place these lining pieces on your new fabric, remember you've cut off all seam allowances so you'll have to add them as you cut.

It's a good idea to allow one inch seam allowances rather than the usual 5/8 of an inch, since you may have lost a bit of the fabric as you cut out the lining. Allow for the hems, also. Notice the grain direction of the old lining pieces and follow this in cutting new parts.

Assemble the lining parts, using the chalk marks as guides for joining. Insert the lining in the coat using your machine. If the facings were tacked to the coat, you may find it easier to put the lining in by hand.

You can estimate yardage for the new lining by finding a similar style pattern in the pattern books and buying the amount suggested. For a straight style coat you can usually estimate you will need twice the lining length measured at the longest length of lining and allowing for hem, then adding the sleeve length plus hem.

The satisfaction of putting a good garment back in service is well worth the effort involved.

Choosing Toys For Children

Around Christmas both parents and children spend a lot of time thinking about toys. Young children need special kinds of toys, and there are several things parents should consider when buying toys for them, says Miss Mary Ann Finch, extension family and child development specialist at the University of Delaware.

Play is serious business to a young child, and toys are an important part of play. Children learn from their toys, so it is important to choose toys which will give the child an opportunity for imaginative and creative growth.

Toys for young children should have simple lines and little detail, Miss Finch says. They should be slightly abstract so the child can express himself to a greater degree than he can with toys like wind-up toys which he can watch passively.

There are many types of toys which fill these requirements. Blocks, for example, are adaptable. A toddler carries them, leads them or stacks them. At about three years, children begin to build things with blocks. When the child is four or five he starts adding other materials to his block constructions. For example, he builds a hospital out of blocks and adds doll doctors and nurses. Dolls for youngsters should be simple and have few moving parts. The way youngsters play with dolls develops and changes as the child matures. At about five years, children use dolls to play house, imitating family life as they see it.

Many popular toys are even more abstract than blocks and dolls. Children delight in big toys like boxes and barrels. Paper and paints are always popular. Play dough is especially good for children, Miss Finch says, and can be made at home. Combine two parts flour with one part salt and water, and food coloring if desired. It provides manipulative experiences, and stimulates problem solving techniques in the child, she says.

In addition to giving children the types of toys they need, it is important for the child to have a place to play with and keep his toys, Miss Finch says. Giving sense of ownership of toys to the child supports his importance and gives him the feeling that what he needs as a person is important.

Old man winter is a mean old man

When old man winter comes around every year, he causes problems for all of us.

Your car won't start, and your nose won't stop. To make matters worse, old man winter huffs and puffs at your doors and windows, temperatures plunge, lights burn longer, the heater works overtime, and the icy fingers of winter are at your pocketbook again.

We can't exactly say that we've found a way to turn winter into a meek, well-mannered fellow, but we do have a few tips that will help you put up a good defense against his gusty winds and sneaky drafts, and keep heating costs to a minimum.

Thermostat settings
Keep your thermostat set for the lowest comfortable temperature and let it do the controlling. Don't move it up and back as you feel warm or cool. At night set the thermostat back several degrees from your normal daytime setting.

Furniture
Place furniture so it doesn't block the flow of heat into the room, and close registers in rooms that aren't being used.

Shut out unwanted chills by pulling blinds and curtains.

Lock windows for tighter closing and shut fireplace dampers when they're not in use.

Garage doors

Most of us know that storm windows and doors help to cut down on drafts, but did you realize that if you have an attached garage, it can help a great deal if you close the garage door? Even if it's not heated, the open garage door will make the heater work harder, and your bill goes up.

Crawl space louvers

Don't put off closing the louvers on openings into crawl spaces or you'll have a cold floor and need more heat to keep rooms comfortable.

Free booklet

There are a lot of other little things you can do and we've got a booklet that tells you how to stretch your heating dollars and make the most of all the electricity you use. For a free copy of this helpful booklet, write to us and ask for "Powerful Ways To Save Money."

If you plan well, and follow the simple cost-cutting steps we suggest, you'll be surprised how much less fearsome old man winter looks...even at his blustery worst.

Allies With Nature

In the Arctic reaches of Alaska, man is working with nature to protect the fragile tundra; a bleak, treeless area of black muck soil and permanently frozen subsoil. In the often hostile, sometimes gentle climate, the exceedingly short growing season—as little as 17 days at Barrow, on the state's northernmost point—makes plant survival difficult. When animals or men destroy the natural ground cover, tracks may remain for years as muddy scars.

The long winter sets in at the end of August in northern Alaska. By December, temperatures may drop to minus 76° Fahrenheit. Winds sometimes whip across the land at 125 miles an hour, driving a blinding screen of snow before them. And in the interior regions, snow can accumulate to a depth of 30 feet or more.

Spring comes late while snow is still on the ground and heavy frosts chill the night air. Myriad streams break through their icy coats. Plant life struggles for renewal in a seemingly barren land. The delicate layer of vegetation, built up over many years, suddenly emerges from beneath the melting snow. For a short while the ground is covered with a mass of flowers—blue lupine, wild crocus, yellow arctic poppy, saxifrage, and cotton grass.

Under the best of conditions the plants of the tundra—lichens, grasses, mosses, and sedges, with a scattering of dwarf birch and willow, raspberries, cranberries and crowberries—have difficulty seeding and taking root during the ephemeral summer. Frequently, spongy, insulating mat of vegetation is broken, warmth penetrates to the permafrost below, thawing it and turning the area into a quagmire.

It is through this delicately balanced environment that a group of oil companies seeks permission to construct an 800-mile pipeline to bring much-needed petroleum from the Alaskan North Slope, 240 miles north of the Arctic Circle, to the lower 48 states. The Prudhoe Bay field, discovered in 1968, has proved reserves of 9.6 billion barrels of crude oil, and 26 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. This represents 10 per cent of the United States' growing energy needs averaged over a decade.

However, oil men, conservationists and the U.S. Government are concerned about the ecological balance and are taking steps to protect it.

To minimize the chance of scarring the tundra, heavy-duty movements are limited to the months when the ground is frozen solid. And researchers are developing strains of grasses that grow rapidly to shield temporarily areas where past operations of man have exposed the permafrost. Both in their own research and in concert with the University of Alaska's Institute of Arctic Biology, the oil companies and the pipeline firm are developing and testing hybrid grasses which will cover the ground quickly, allowing nature time to restore the native vegetation.

The Institute of Arctic Biology has tested 20 grass species at 14 different sites along the proposed pipeline route—sites which present a range of growing conditions. An additional test of 20 varieties of grasses, herbs and shrubs has been made above a test section of heated pipeline at Fairbanks. And the Alaska Agricultural Experiment Station has investigated the adaptability of more than 40 varieties of commercial and experimental plants at six different sites in dry, wet, mineral and organic soils.

The soil of the North Slope lacks many nutrients. By coupling rapidly growing grasses with carefully controlled fertilizers, revegetation techniques have been developed to solve reseeding problems in the tundra. Already, a 400-acre along the road between Livengood and the Yukon River in central Alaska has been reseeded successfully.

Nevertheless, the search continues for the ideal plant-fertilizer combination, one which will provide the maximum protection to the tundra. While nature can heal itself eventually, the natural regrowth of vegetation on the tundra may take from five to seven years or more. The new grasses will cover the ground in a few weeks, and will hold and insulate the soil only long enough for the natural vegetation to take over.

Conservationists and the petroleum industry are working together to make sure that the Alaskan tundra will not be harmed irreparably by man's activities.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

TWINS

In form and feature, race and limb,
I grew so like my brother,
That folks got to taking me for him,
And each for one and other.

It puzzled all our kits and kin,
It reached a fearful pitch,
For one of us was born a twin,
Yet not a soul knew which.

One day to make the matter worse,
Before our names were fixed,
As we were being washed by nurse,
We got completely mixed.

And thus, you see, by fate's degree,
Or rather nurse's whim,
My brother John got christened me,
And I got christened him.

This fatal likeness even dogged
My footsteps when at school,
And I was always getting flogged,
For John turned out a fool.

I put the question, fruitlessly,
To everyone I knew,
"What would you do, if you were me
To prove that you were you?"

Our close resemblance turned the tide
Of my domestic life,
For somehow my intended bride
Became my brother's wife.

In fact, year after year the same
Absurd mistakes went on,
And when I died, the neighbors came
And buried brother John.

Shorthanded Spartans Lose 15-2 to Milford

Milford's Buccaneers came to Harrington on Thanksgiving Day, to do battle with the Spartans of Lake Forest.

Four plays later, the Bucs had a 15-2 triumph and possession of "The Bell", the trophy which goes to the winner of the annual battle. After four years, the jinx still holds, with the host team losing each year.

Lake Forest's speedy backs couldn't negotiate the muddy gridiron, as well as did the heavier Bucs. However, Milford's task was made much easier by the absence of a pair of Spartan two-way performers. Quarterback Lawrence Sorden, an all-Henlopen choice, was hurt in the Salemanum game. Robin Callahan, a second-team all-league pick, is a giant, defensive and offensive standout, who is scholastically ineligible. Without these two, Lake Forest was only a shadow of the team that last only once in Henlopen competition.

The Spartan defense did a good job, but the offense weapon was the Milford center, who continually sent back "grounders" to the Buc punter. The Spartan's safety came after such a snap. The same thing happened on the previous play, but a penalty saved Milford that time. Now let's get ready for that rebuilding year, 1973.

Ricon Wins Killen's Pond 5 Mile Run

Dan Rincon, of Dover, won a five mile, cross-country race at Killen's Pond State Park, Sunday afternoon. Almost thirty competitors, including one woman, completed the grind, with Rincon clocking 26:42. Dean Winslow, ex-Penn State harrier was a distant second.

Jack McCarten, of St. Marks High, was the first high school finisher. Ralph Frazier, of Middletown, was the first veteran (over 40) to finish. Brad Morris, of Harrington, was among the leaders.

Rincon, the University of Maryland's No. 1 harrier, had competed earlier in Tennessee, followed by a trip to Houston, Texas. At Houston, Dan finished 33rd of 290 harriers in the NCAA championship. Practically all of the 32 runners, who beat the Maryland sophomore, were juniors and seniors.

Spartans Lead All-Loop Team With 5 Picks

Lake Forest's 8-3 Spartans, champs of the Southern Division of the Henlopen football conference, led all Henlopen teams, with five first-team picks, on the twenty-two-man, All-Henlopen Conference team. League champion Dover had four all-stars followed by Cape Henlopen, Woodbridge, and Delmar with three each.

Al Wood's Spartans placed Frank O'Neal at center, on the offensive unit, along with back Lawrence Sorden.

Bruce Burton, at defensive end, Don Parker, linebacker and Jim Dill, defensive secondary, were first-team choices on the defensive unit.

To add icing to the cake, Jim Miner and Robin Callahan made the second team. Only Miner will return in 1973, of the seven all-stars.

First team offensive unit: Offensive ends - Clayton Townsend, Indian River; Jeff Pratts, Woodbridge; Tackles - Dave Rierck, Dover; Layton Drayton, Seaford; Guards - Mike DeLoy, Cape Henlopen; Steve Williams, Smyrna. Center - Frank O'Neal, Lake Forest. Backs - Henry Briscoe, Cape Henlopen; Mike Andrus, Dover; Lawrence Sorden, Lake Forest; Bill Elzey, Delmar.

Second team offensive unit: Offensive ends - Tom Marvel, Sussex Central; Robin Callahan, Lake Forest. Tackles - Glen Rhoads, Smyrna; Keith O'Neal, Laurel. Guards - Ross Trader, Dover; Jeff Tull, Woodbridge. Center - John Rohrback, Dover. Backs - Jake Fidderman, Sussex Central; Henry White, Cape Henlopen; Lou Guisto, Milford; Kevin Taylor, Laurel. The ceremony will feature choral singing with the accompaniment of the university's Brass Choir, under the direction of Dr. Peter J. McCarthy, assistant professor of choral music at the University of Delaware.

During the singing, choristers and persons attending will hold candles and gather around a large lighted tree. The evening of music is free and open to the public.

 DAVE WOODWARD
 ASSISTANT KENT COUNTY AGENT

Delaware 4-H youth attended Maryland's 4-H and FFA Dairy Conference on Nov. 3-5th.

Delaware delegates to the conference held at the National 4-H Center in Chevy Chase, Maryland, were Brinton A. Hopkins, Lewes; Char-mayne Pierson, Clayton; and Ned Williams, Hockessin. They were accompanied by Dave Woodward, Assistant County Agent, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension Service. Other delegates to the conference represented Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia.

On Friday, the group toured a dairy processing plant, an ice cream plant, and a retail dairy store. On Saturday, they participated in seminars on the roll of cooperatives, the importance of quality milk, and the pricing system used in the sale of milk. Leading the seminars were Boyd M. Cook and Jane W. Neilson of Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, Inc., of Baltimore.

Sunday's program was devoted to workshop discussion of ways in which delegates would report back to their groups. These sessions were led by Dorothy Emerson, a consultant to the National 4-H Center.

More than 40 members and leaders of 4-H and FFA groups from the four states gained a better understanding of the steps that bring milk from the cow to the store at this 5th Annual Dairy Conference.

November 9th and 10th marked the date of the annual beef tour when a group of fourteen Delaware cattlemen visited farms near Harrisonburg, Va.

Calls were made in Rockingham County and Augusta County, Va. County Agents from these counties met the Delaware group and took them to the farms of several live-stock producers. An Angus cow-calf operation on the farm of Russell May was very unique in the fact that he was using artificial insemination on his beef-cow herd. This required a lot of labor, but Mr. May thought it certainly had its benefits.

The farm of Leonard Dove & Son near Timberville, Va., featured two sealed silos and a feedlot operation feeding 500 pound steers to finish. The farm of Colonel Bradson featured a cow-calf operation using tall fescue in a program to pasture cows through the winter. It seems that the sugar content of tall fescue increases after frost, making it a very palatable roughage. Labor cost is kept to a minimum because the cattle harvest the frost-killed grass by grazing through the winter. Stocking rates per acre must be managed carefully to prevent overgrazing. Colonel Bradson's cows were scheduled to calve in mid-November so as to take advantage of the abundance of grass in the spring to boost milk production in hopes of weaning heavier calves.

That evening, the group met with E. B. Craun, County Agent from Rockingham County; E. B. Morse, County Agent from Augusta County; Martin Strate, President of the Virginia Beef Producers Association; K. C. Williamson, Extension Specialist of Feeder Cattle Marketing; and Dr. James Moore, the agricultural economist for small beef farmers. Also present was Russell May, a producer visited earlier in the day. This panel discussion proved very worthwhile in that a lively exchange between Delaware producers and the Virginia Extension people labeled it as one of the better teaching sessions to date.

The next day, the group visited a dairy beef feedlot where silage and high moisture corn finish dairy steers for about 24c per pound of gain. The last stop on the tour was at Sugarloaf Farm, Staunton, Va., home of Colossal Breeding. The group was able to see about ten young sire prospects that had been sold at the November 2 sale. One of these bulls sold for one-half interest at $25,000, a truly magnificent animal. Several other top young bulls also caught the eye of the Delaware visitors.

The group returned home Friday evening tired, but felt that the trip to Virginia, the heart of many cow-calf operations, had been worthwhile, and hoped to return to that area for a visit again.

Buy Certified Soybeans

Delaware soybean seed growers produce 50-75,000 bushels of certified soybeans each year. According to Dr. William Mitchell, University of Delaware extension agronomist, this is enough to plant one-third to one-half of the total soybean crop in this state.

Mitchell says Delaware growers will be better off by buying locally-produced certified seed, since it is usually a little cheaper than certified seed produced in other states. He notes that the most recently developed varieties such as Wye, Essex and Cutler 71 are being grown by Delaware seedsmen along with the old reliable soybeans such as York, Delmar and Kent.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne W. Holberton

A cornucopia of good foods will be in plentiful supply in time for the festive holidays of December. Heading the list of good foods will be the traditional favorite, turkey. There are so many turkeys on hand that it is predicted that consumption of this meat will be pushed to an all time high of about 9 pounds per person. The growth of the year-round market and the proliferation of turkey products are largely responsible for making turkey an outstanding item on dinner tables all over the country. From the way it looks now the Christmas turkey will cost less this year than it did last, but any savings on the turkeys cost will be offset by higher prices for most of the trimmings for the holiday meal.

Broiler-fryers are plentiful with marketing's continuing to increase right through 1972. Prices will run about as they have been and a bit higher than last year. However, when on special sale there will not be a more economical protein choice at the meat and poultry counter.

Although egg production is expected to be slightly below last year's high level, eggs will continue to be in ample supply. So plan on lots of eggs - rich deserts and main dishes.

Production estimates for many fall vegetables indicate that supplies will be smaller for most than it was last year. Forecasts are down for cabbage, celery, lettuce, onions, and tomatoes. Potato output for the fall will be about 7% less than last year. Cauliflower will be plentiful.

A moderately larger supply of canned vegetables is likely, due mostly to heavier tomato processing activities in California. Peas, and probably sweet corn, will be in slightly larger supply as well. The frozen vegetable situation looks pretty steady as of now. The early season orange crop is expected to be 30% larger than last year and 13% more than the large 1972 crop. Valencia output will also be heavy so that total production will probably set a new record, barring a freeze or some other disaster. Grapefruit production will be about the same as last year. Tangelos and tangerines will be good supply. Florida's crop of both will be down but thanks to Arizona and California the difference will be made up and make this year's crop a good one.

Dry beans, an inexpensive source of protein and other nutrients, will be plentiful. Many an excellent meal can be made from navy and or pinto beans.

Now to end up with good news. With larger supplies of beef, the same or slightly more pork, and plentiful marketing's of turkeys and broiler-fryers, wholesale prices for meats should decline some during the last month of the year. This decline will definitely be welcome but it will be of short-term duration.

Girl Scout News

By Kay Sylvester
Girl Scout Troop 829 of Felton has been busy so far this year. Along with our weekly meeting on Friday, we have had a Halloween party at Scout, Shelly Candler's house. We had a wonderful, but spooky time. Then we had a cycling party. We met at one of the girl scouts house, Delane Breeding's. We took a day trip from Viola to Deary's Pond. At the end of the day we had completed our cyclist badge. Then we had a service, helping set tables for our sponsors the Ladies Auxiliary.

Our next event is planned Nov. 21, it will be our first court of awards for this year. Each patrol has planned a part of the program. Troop leader, Mrs. Nolan Sylvester, and patrol leaders, Delane Breeding, Robin Dill, and Lea Ann Sylvester, will hand out the badges the girls have earned since our last court of awards.

Do you know that you can re-use nails? This, of course, is only possible if you can get them out of whatever they're holding together at present in good condition. To pull a nail out without bending it is an art: you must know exactly what to do. Use a claw hammer. Place the hammer head on a piece of wood or block laid against the surface of the work. Then pull slowly and carefully. This also will prevent marring your work with the hammer head.

Mrs. Clyde Tucker, presided at the meeting. Many interesting projects are being planned for the year in every area and department.

Mrs. Dale Roth, State President, reported that 10 members of the Unit and Post attended the reception and dinner for Mrs. T. G. Chilton, National President. She expressed her appreciation for their attendance at the affair.

C.K.R.T. will be responsible for 50 gifts at the Christmas Gift Shops in December. As has been the custom for the past few years the gifts will be purchased with funds from the Treasury, but anyone wishing to donate a gift may do so. Mrs. Tucker would be delighted to receive them. The gifts will be made available to patients at Brack-Ex Veterans Hospital, Elsmere. Gifts from other units will be used at Brack-Ex, Perry Point, Delaware State Hospital and Bissell Sanatorium. Mrs. Harold Fry is in charge of the gifts.

Mrs. Outten reported that she had sent five boxes to servicemen from this area who are overseas. This has been a project at Christmas time for several years.

Two interesting and informational pamphlets "How A Thought Becomes a Bill" and "How a Bill Become a Law" will be ordered by Mrs. Wilhena A. Minner, Legislative Chairman for the use of Girl's State delegates next year. The pamphlets will be presented to the History and Social Studies instructors at the High School also.

TERESA RICH, Bridgeville, has been named one of six national winners in 4-H dress revue at the National 4-H Congress being held this week in Chicago. The 16-year-old daughter of Mrs. Nellie Rich will receive a $700 scholarship for her award.

Delaware Girl Named National Dress Revue Winner

A 16-year-old Bridgeville girl has been named a national winner in 4-H dress revue at the 51st National 4-H Congress this week. Teresa Rich, daughter of Mrs. Nellie Rich, will receive a $700 scholarship in addition to an expense-paid trip to the Congress in Chicago.

Sewing is important in Teresa's family. She has been sewing since she was nine. Her mother, leader of the Bridgeville Pioneers 4-H club, of which Teresa is a member, has also been sewing since she was a girl. Teresa's cousin, Nancy Cephas, was a state dress revue winner from the Bridgeville club two years ago.

Teresa likes to sew so she can "have something nobody else has." Her desire for a unique wardrobe forces her to be creative in her sewing. She isn't content with clothes just made from different fabrics, so she often alters patterns so her clothes can be uniquely her own.

Teresa says she is excited about her trip to Chicago. "To find out in the end that you were among one of those judged the best is not only exciting and joyful, but also encouraging. By this, I mean it encouraged me to work harder and put more effort into next year's challenge, as I prepared from year to year."

Teresa is now in her eighth year in 4-H and has participated in clothing projects every year. She has been in dress revue five times. Dress revue participants are chosen from top clothing project in each county.

Both Teresa and her mother believe it is important for girls to learn to sew. Mrs. Rich teaches basic sewing to beginning 4-H members and teaches more advanced techniques when girls get ready for them. Some 4-H members sew in her home if they do not have a sewing machine at home. However, in order for a girl to be successful in learning to sew, she must have support and encouragement at home, she says.

Mrs. Rich credits some of her success in sewing to extension classes she has taken from Janet Reed, extension clothing and textiles specialist at the University of Delaware.

Dress revue scholarships are given by the Simplicity Pattern Company, Inc. The program is arranged by the National 4-H Service Committee and supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service. Simplicity Pattern Company has sponsored the dress revue program for 26 years.

In addition, two other Delaware 4-H members have been chosen as alternative winners in national 4-H judging. William Campbell of Laurel was named sixth alternate for the trip to Chicago for his public speaking project. Richard H. Kroeger of Bridgeville is eighth alternate for a scholarship for his automotive project.

About 1,600 delegates from the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico are attending the Congress. There are 267 national winners sharing in $186,700 in educational grants.

Implants For Beef Cattle

Tests on three Delaware farms have shown cattle implanted with growth stimulants grow faster than untreated cattle. The growth stimulant (Ralgro) was implanted near the base of the ear in a 36 milligram dose. Cattle were weighed at time of implanting and again 60 days later. Gains ranged from 5 to 15 per cent higher for treated cattle than for untreated ones.

The Food and Drug Administration will ban the use of a growth stimulant, diethylstilbestrol (DES) in feeds for livestock after Jan. 1. The use of ear implants will probably not be discontinued. The improved growth occurs with DES implants as well as with the DES mixed with feed. Residues of DES have been found in the livers of cattle fed DES but so far, not in the livers of implanted cattle. There are several types of implant, all with about the

HIGH MOISTURE CORN FOR CATTLE FEEDING

Tests indicate cattle gain more efficiently on high moisture corn than on dry corn.

Storage varies with individual conditions. Corn stored in bunker silos should be cracked to improve packing and quality. Cracking also improves the feeding value of high moisture corn. Levels of high-moisture corn fed and moisture content do affect the feeding value of whole versus cracked corn. Under most feeding conditions cracking or rolling high moisture corn is advisable.

A project now under way at Delaware State College uses high moisture and treated corn same effect. Implant effectiveness is 65-100 days depending on the product. Cattle may not be implanted within 65 days of slaughter. Breeding cattle should not be implanted and proper location of the implant is necessary for maximum effect.

Cost of the 36 mg Ralgro implant is $60 per head. The cost is more than offset by increased gains. Treated cattle should have all the feed they want.

as feed for dairy steers. The acids are like those produced in the rumen and pH of the corn to stop mold and preserve the corn. The acid is applied to the whole grain as it is augered into storage. Acid treated corn can be stored in piles without use of a bunker or trench silo. The corn must be protected from rain either by covering with plastic or storing within a building.

L. F. Band Boosters Meet

The Lake Forest Band Boosters met on Tuesday evening in the High School. Donald McKnatt, president conducted the business meeting.

A number of projects were discussed. Currently the Boosters are selling "Swingers", stadium cushions to sports and fans in the Lake Forest District. They will be available at the Basketball games and Wrestling matches beginning after the first of the year. Anyone wishing to purchase one for a Christmas gift may call Mr. McKnatt at 398-3228.

Mr. Voshell, of B. and B. Music Company, Dover, was present to explain the leasing program for the purchasing of additional instruments for the High School Band. He answered a number of questions from the group. It was agreed to follow through on the suggested leasing program.

Each family of a band member in any school in the district is urged to join the Band Boosters. The $1.00 per year membership fee would greatly assist in the work of the Boosters. It is the desire that all bands will eventually benefit from the group's activities. Within the next two months Membership cards will be available. Interested citizens of the Lake Forest District may also become members of the Boosters by the $1.00 fee. It is hoped that former band members and band parents will join.

A donation was received from the Harrington High School Alumni Association to be added to the Instrument Fund. A vote of thanks to the Alumni was unanimous.

There will be no meeting of the Boosters in December, but the regularly scheduled meeting for the 4th Monday in January will be held.
