Phone Company Reports Decline In Earnings

The Diamond State Telephone Company today reported a 1972 decline in its earnings to $3.16 per share from $3.26 per share in 1971.

Company expenses increased during the year at a faster rate than revenues, according to the firm's annual report issued today.

Operating revenues for the year were $60,501,000, compared with $56,080,000 in 1971, the report shows. Operating expenses were $38,623,000 compared with $34,893,000 in 1971.

Diamond State's total plant investment reached a record $206,292,000 in 1972, an increase of nearly $25 million during the year and more than two-and-a-half times what it was ten years ago.

The company's investment per telephone also established a new high of $472, compared with $457 a year ago and $346 in 1962, the report shows.

William S. Cashel, Jr., company president, said construction expenditures of more than $32 million were required last year to keep pace with growing and changing demands for communications services in Delaware. Similar outlays in 1973 are expected to total $30 million, he added.

The 1973 construction budget is lower than last year's because 1972's expenditures included the cost of completing a large building and equipment addition in Wilmington. The company pointed out that this year's construction expenditures will be $8 million — or 36 per cent — more than what they were only two years ago.

The number of telephones in service in Delaware reached the 410,000 level in 1972, Cashel reported, a net gain of nearly 24,000. To achieve this gain, the company had to install nearly 96,000 telephones and remove 72,000 from former locations.

Delaware customers made nearly 1.9 million calls a day during the year, an increase of about 60,000 calls a day over 1971, Cashel said. Operators assisted customers on more than 19,000 calls a day.

"Obviously, we will need enormous amounts of capital to carry through our projected construction programs," Cashel stated. "About 60 per cent of this capital will be generated internally, while the remaining 40 per cent will have to come from outside sources."

The company has issued more than $40 million in new debt capital during the last five years, he said. This brings the amount currently outstanding to more than $61 million.

He stressed that earnings of 9.5 per cent on capital are required to attract necessary investment funds to support the construction that will meet customer needs and maintain service at high levels.

"Adequate earnings are essential to our financial health and a financially sound telephone business is clearly in the public interest," he said.

Among other statistics, the report shows that Diamond State's payroll in 1972 reached a record high of $19.6 million, an increase of $1.55 million during the year and more than double the 1962 payroll.

The Diamond State Company and Western Electric, manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System, spent more than $13 million during 1972 for the purchase of materials and services from approximately 900 Delaware firms.

Days of Our Years

Ten Years Ago

Fri., March 8, 1963

The state's welfare problem burst into flame Tuesday night at what had been billed as a "social meeting" of the Ninth District Democratic Club. Sparked by Senate Majority Leader Leon E. Donovan and Rep. George H. Exley, the club president, the blaze was fanned by numerous comments from the audience. Sen. Donovan, who seldom has anything to say, said more than he has at all the meetings within the past year. A cogent observation of his Tuesday night was that if the state would refuse federal aid for welfare, the number of recipients would drop in half. After the meeting, he mentioned the example of Indiana which has refused federal welfare aid. Rep. Exley, who applied the match to the discussion, said he was now going through a list of welfare recipients, but he couldn't reveal names. Continuing, he said the family, as a unit, received the main attention from the welfare department and that there would be as many as 15 or 20, in a related group, receiving aid.

Cub Scout Banquet

Such short, simple words as those contained in the Cub Scout motto, "Do your best," are those which will make the essential difference in life. This was the theme of a brief address by John Charlton, vice-chairman of the Mid-Del District, which climaxed Pack 78's Blue and Gold banquet last Saturday evening.

In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Charlton, other special guests were Elwood Wright, Institutional Representative for Pack 76, and his wife, the Rev. Nathaniel Miller, pastor of the Metropolitan United Methodist Church of Harrington, and Neil Russell, area commissioner. Cubmaster Raymond Blanchette presided over the banquet which was attended by many cub scouts and their families.

The program following a dinner which featured ham and a wide variety of covered dishes, included Charlton's speech, a magic show, and a number of awards and certificates of recognition. Awards were made as follows:

Den 1: Robert Benson - Denner, one year pin; Billy Stapon - Bobcat pin. Patches for participation in the Cub-O-Rama at the Blue Hen Mall on Feb. 24 were given to Robert Benson, Vincent Thorpe, and Mrs. Ralph Smith.

Den 2: Larry Kibler - Assistant Denner; Scott McKenzie - Wolf Badge; Glenn Govatos - silver arrow, one year pin; Jeff Porter - gold and silver arrows; David Lekites - silver arrow.

Patches for participation in the Cub-O-Rama went to Randy Brown, Scott McKenzie, Larry Kibler, David Lekites, Douglas Poore, Jeff Porter, Glenn Govatos, Mrs. Richard McKenzie and Mrs. Wayne Brown. Joe Draper has received the Denner's braid due him in January, but delayed by mail. Jeff Porter, having has left Den 3 to join the Webelos.

Den 3: John Way - gold arrow; Ralph Smith - Denner; Dale Benson - Assistant Denner, Bobcat pin; Michael Moore - Wolf badge, gold arrow; Tommy Dixon - Bobcat pin. Cub-O-Rama patches went to Samuel Layton and Michael Moore. John Way has left Den 3 to join the Webelos.

Patches for the Cub-O-Rama were received by Virgil Williams, Alan Hickman and Mrs. Albert Govatos.

Certificates of appreciation for leadership went to the Cubmaster, Mr. Blanchette; to den leaders and assistants, Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mrs. Wayne Brown, Mrs. Richard McKenzie, Mrs. Larry Breeding and Mrs. Sharon Mills; to Webelos leaders Albert Govatos and William Moore, and to Mrs. Neil Russell, den leader coach; Mrs. Edith Littleton, pack treasurer; Neil Russell, area commissioner, and Elwood Wright, institutional representative.

At the close of the evening, two door prizes were awarded. Mrs. Jacqueline Williams received a floral arrangement supplied by Pitlick's Gift Shop; Mrs. Judith Way, a half gallon of ice cream donated by Pennsupreme.

This year, as in years past, many businesses and friends in and around Harrington gave table favors, milk, rolls, ice cream, and ham. Pack 76 wishes to express its appreciation for their continuing generosity which helps to make the Blue and Gold banquet possible and much more enjoyable for all involved.

The next pack meeting will be the Pinewood Derby on April 26. Cubs received their kits for their racers at the banquet and will be working on them. In the meantime, the boys will be asked to help fill bags for Goodwill Industries and take them to the firehouse for collection by 11 a.m. on Sat., April 14. Also before the next meeting, Pack 76 plans to hold and complete its annual candy sale.

NOW AND THEN

by Huck

The longest moment—that mentioned by a TV announcer just before the commercials.

The most successful commercial on pain killers, from the public's standpoint, would be the one eliminating the other TV advertisements of these nostrums.

Ernest A. Davidson resigned last Friday as director of the state Division of Highways. He will be replaced April 30 by Richard A. Haber, who twice served as chief engineer in the former State Highway Department.

The first-degree murder trial of Charles R. Derrickson on charges of killing the "Farmington Man" has been scheduled for April 9 in Superior Court.

Derrickson, 32, of near Harrington, was arrested in September, 1971, and accused of killing Carl W. McNeal, 25, of Tyrone, Pa. McNeal's charred body was found in the ruins of a burned shack in Hammonds-town Woods Dec. 12, 1970.

Gov. Sherman W. Tribbitt announced the appointment of Lemuel H. Hickman as Secretary of Public Safety. The 58-year-old appointee is a resident of Bayard. He is a former state senator and a former member of the old State Highway Commission.

Dr. E. Berkeley Tompkins announced last week he is resigning as director of the Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs for the state to become executive director of the National Historical Publications Commission.

He has had the job only two years and, as in the case of most of the outsiders appointed to lucrative state posts after getting their service pensions, he is going on to greener pastures.

On the other hand, old faithful Leon deValinger, who formerly held the post, is interested in a return to the fold. Leon, now employed by the League of Local Government, supervised inaugural proceedings for Gov. Tribbitt.

Jack D. White, new Secretary of Health and Social Services, joined the state in November after retiring from the Marines. He is registered as a "decline" but, high sources say, he indicated he will change his registration.

The Delmarva Emergency Board, the tristate committee designed to cope with problems arising from the severing of the rail link over the Chesapeake & Delaware Canal, has instructed that all shipments on the Peninsula must receive a special permit from the Penn Central Railroad.

Gov. Tribbitt, recognizing the magnitude of the financial crisis facing Delaware, has declared a hiring freeze and also limited expenditures by state agencies for the remainder of fiscal 1973 which ends in July.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

TIME

from Psalms of Life

Lives of great men oft remind us;
We should make our lives sublime
And departing leave behind us
Footprints in the sands of time.

Time is too slow for those who wait,
Too swift for those who fear,
Too long for those who grieve,
Too short for those who care.
But for those who love, Time is eternity.

THE THIEF

"Time" is a thief
But inapprehensible
Man marks it down
Making it dependable.
What does time steal?
Each minute that is mine,
Never to return them.
Such a thief is "Time".

D.S.D.B. Purses Announced

The Delaware Standardbred Development Board is pleased to announce the new purse allocation for the 1973 race season. The total purse money of $500,000.00 is the most ever provided by the Development Fund. It exceeds the previous high established by the Development Fund. It exceeds the previous high established in 1972 by $100,000.00.

The money is provided by the horsemen and the three harness tracks, Brandywine, Dover Downs and Harrington, and is done at no cost to the tax payers of Delaware. The major amount of the money is provided by out of state bettors, who wager roughly 70% of the money at the three tracks.

The Delaware Standardbred Development Board is primarily concerned with improving the quality of Standardbred Horses in Delaware. Through the racing and promotional programs new stallions and brood mares have been added to the Delaware list of eligible horses. With an increase in horses this of course creates new jobs and increases revenue in other related fields, thus providing more tax money for the State. The Board works closely with the horsemen, race tracks and the Harness Racing Commission to insure the best possible return for the monies provided. The primary purpose of all concerned is to give the people of Delaware the finest race program in the nation.

William H. Outten, agent for Nationwide Insurance on Shaw's Ave. in Harrington, Del., has earned membership in President's Club, the company's elite sales recognition organization.

Nationwide honored Outten with President's Club membership for his outstanding performance in customer sales and service last year. Only 120 of the company's 4,200 agents qualified for the designation.

Outten will receive special recognition for his achievement at Nationwide's 15th annual President's Club conference next summer. He'll get a member's plaque and honor pin, and personal congratulations from top Nationwide executives.

Outten has been a Nationwide Insurance agent for 22 years. This is the second time he has gained President's Club membership.

New Federal Regulation On Vehicles

Effective March 1, Federal regulations will require all persons (transferors) making a transfer of a motor vehicle to make a written disclosure to the person purchasing it of the vehicle's odometer mileage and its accuracy.

According to William J. Warren, Jr., Director of the Public Safety Department's Motor Vehicle Division, the new regulations define transferor "as any person who transfers his ownership in a motor vehicle by sale, gift, or any means other than by creation of a security interest". He said, however, there are three examples and the transferor of the following motor vehicles need not disclose the motor vehicle's odometer mileage:

(1) A vehicle having a gross weight of more than 16,000 pounds.

(2) A vehicle that is not self-propelled, such as a trailer or farm tractor without an odometer.

(3) A vehicle that is 25 years old or older.
"These new regulations mean that for any vehicle traded to a dealer, the owner must provide a disclosure statement," Warren said; "and when the dealer resells the vehicle, he must also provide a disclosure statement to the purchaser."

"Dealers must also provide a disclosure statement upon the sale of all new vehicles," Warren stressed. "This disclosure must be made before any transfer of ownership documents are executed."

Warren said the Motor Vehicle Division is in the process of designing a new Certificate of Title which will include the disclosure statement. In the meantime, separate disclosure statement forms will have to be used. The forms state the actual mileage on the odometer of the described vehicle being transferred. Private individuals wishing to transfer a vehicle can obtain a copy of the odometer mileage statement form from any of the Motor Vehicle Division inspection facilities.

Warren noted any person who, with intent to defraud, violates the provisions of the new odometer disclosure requirements will be liable in an amount equal to the sum of "three times the amount of actual damages sustained or $1,500, whichever is the greater," and court costs. He said cases concerning violation of this regulation will be heard in a United States District Court.

PROPE'S MARKET

Dorothy A. Propes - Owner

There are quite a few service stations in the area. What makes one stand out above all others? It's not so much the gas they sell, although Mobil products have proved their excellence over the years for your car, but it's the extra friendly service that this station provides along with their fair prices that has given them a reputation well thought of by the people of this area.

Conveniently located at Old State Road in Ellendale phone 422-9070, Propes Market offers everyone in the area a good place to stop to pick up those extra grocery items whether for dinner that night, or to complete the food stock for the vacation. While you're there, do like so many other people do and let their friendly attendants fill the tank, check the oil, and just in general give your car the once over to make sure it's safe to travel. The authors of this 1973 Town and Country Review take pleasure in presenting our complete commendation to the management of Propes Market for the fine service they render to the people in this area. We suggest you stop in soon and fill up the tank and while you're there select the necessary groceries, snacks, and beverages you might want. We know you'll be glad you did.

Keep Eye Open For Gypsy Moths

Damage from gypsy moths is not expected to be serious in Delaware this summer. Although several hundred male moths were trapped last summer and a few egg masses were discovered, there is no heavy infestation in the state, according to Frank Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware.

He told those attending the recent Delaware Nursery and Landscape Short Course sponsored by the Co-operative Extension Service that no major spraying program is anticipated this year. If gypsy moth caterpillars are discovered feeding on isolated trees, homeowners can help to control the pests by wrapping the trunk of the tree with burlap and applying Tanglefoot under the burlap. This treatment will work only on small infestations and where gypsy moth caterpillars can be contained on one or two trees.

Gypsy moths continue to pose a much more serious problem in nearby states. The pests have now been found in all but two counties in Maryland, all of the eastern counties in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. If gypsy moths become well established in remote forest areas, they can cause severe damage before control measures can be started, said Boy.

Delaware's gypsy moth program for 1973 will focus on surveillance and census activities. An extensive trapping program started nearly five years ago will be continued. It's part of a joint effort involving the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the State Department of Agriculture and the University of Delaware.

Entomologists expect to be able to predict possible trouble spots or areas where an infestation might occur by keeping track of male activity. Traps are located every square mile throughout the state. They are yellow-brown cardboard tubes about four inches long. A concave clear plastic disk with a hole in it is positioned in each end.

These permit the moths to fly in but prevent escape.

Traps sites are marked by a strip of orange tape to warn people of their location. They should not be disturbed, however. The traps are baited with an artificial sex attractant that lures only male gypsy moths.

Boys said campers and other vacationers who travel into areas where gypsy moths are a problem should check their vehicles carefully for egg masses. They look like small pieces of chamois-the animal skin used in washing cars. If there is any suspicion that eggs or moths are present, contact the entomologists at the University of Delaware.

It Seems To Me

Janet Reed

Every new product seems to bring a new set of problems. Fusible items simplify certain techniques and are real time savers, but they can melt and stick to the iron. Time saved in sewing can be spent trying to clean the iron.

But ingenious manufacturers have helped us by introducing another new product—a hot iron cleaner to clean off any fusible residue which has adhered to the iron.

Squeeze about two inches of the cleaner from the tube onto a thickly padded cloth. Rub the hot iron over this in a circular motion until the iron is clean. Be sure all the cleaner is removed from the iron edges as well as the vents before pressing your fabric. Fabric damage can result if the cleaner is transferred to your fabric.

Complete directions come with this cleaner and, as with any product, read and follow the directions exactly.

Another product introduced to take care of a problem with some fabrics of man-made fibers is the spray-before-undressing spot remover. Some of the newer fabrics have a troublesome problem of holding grease stains which can be difficult to remove.

These aerosol spray products are effective on all washable colorfast fabrics and do not affect special finishes. They work well on any grease stain or on greasy areas, such as the collar, because of their fast-acting grease solvents.

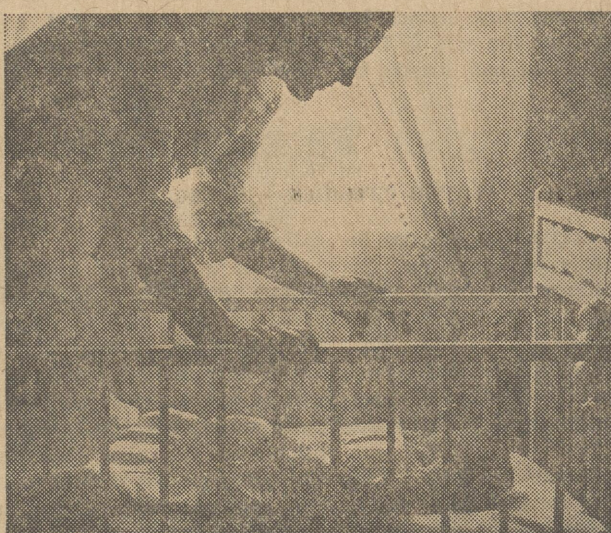

They are less effective on protein type stains such as blood and some food stains which may need to be broken down by enzyme type pre-soak products.

You'll have best results if the stained item can be laundered as soon as possible. Follow the directions on the can and saturate the stain thoroughly so that the area is still wet after the one minute wait that is recommended.

If the spot remains after laundering, you may not have used enough of the remover. Spray again and relaunder the item.

Bats And Rabies

In a few months warm weather will be here and with this warm weather, bats will start to become active. According to Dr. E. Paul Catts, associate professor of entomology and applied ecology at the University of Delaware, bats can be expected to be active from June until the last of September or middle of October.

He told those attending the University of Delaware's recent Pest Control Short Course that some of these bats may have rabies. Catts explained that the rabies virus will stay alive in some bats in hibernation. When the weather turns warm and bats become more active, those few bats still harboring the virus can transfer it to other bats or animals.

Last fall, four cases reported as bat bites in humans occurred in Kent and Sussex counties. Only one case was confirmed as a bat bite. Catts said in an attempt to control rabid bats, the State Department of Environmental Protection set up a program to wipe out known bat colonies in populated areas where these bites were believed to have occurred.

In one colony of 17 bats tested, three were positive for rabies. Further searches turned up three other rabid bats.

Catts said the recent outbreak of rabies in bats show that rabies can occur in any bat colony and it can spread from one bat to another. But he emphasized that all colonies are not generally infected and bats in the colony are not all infected. He also pointed out that if a bat bites someone and the bat is rabid, the victim will not necessarily get rabies. The rabies virus is offen very weak in bats and may not affect the mammal saliva glands, there's a good chance the virus will not be transmitted through a bite.

Of course, if someone is bitten by a rabid bat, the safest procedure is to administer a series of rabies treatments.

SLOW-LEAK CATTLE RUSTLING: High price feeder cattle costing 50c a pound has brought on a new kind of cattle rustling. The rustlers have been known to sneak into cow herds, rope out a calf weighing between three and five hundred pounds, and haul it away unseen.

In many cases, small numbers of calves like this are not even missed. If thieves can steal two calves in the weight range described, they have close to $500 for their night's work. Farmers who do not keep close check on their herds soon find them slowly diminishing before the rustlers can be stopped.

This cattle rustling has encouraged the owners to do more branding, ear tattooing, picture taking of calves, and probably some owners are armed with shotguns ready to ambush the rustlers.

Hog rustling is also on the increase with pork at an all-time high. The slow-leak rustling method cannot be detected, as I said before, and farmers should take steps to identify their animals in case the thieves do try to sell their animals.

A beneficial insect laboratory is under construction at the University of Delaware. It's being built by the University of Delaware, but will be leased to the United States Department of Agriculture.

The facility, being designed to serve the eastern half of the United States, will be used by USDA and the University of Delaware for research to find ways of controlling harmful insects without chemicals or with minimum use of chemicals.

Dr. Dale Bray, Chairman of the University's Department of Entomology and Applied Ecology, says that the only comparable facility in this country is in California.

Watch for nitrate toxicity. Cattle should not be grazed where small grains have been top-dressed with solid forms of nitrate fertilizers until the granules have been dissolved.

Cattle may consume amounts that will approach toxic levels, especially if the forage is grazed short. Generally, the nitrate poisoning is not related to the fertilizer application, but to its uptake by the plant.

During periods of overcast weather or severe drought, forages do not grow rapidly, but unless the temperature of the soil is very low, the root system continues to pick up nitrates and store it. Cattle feeding on forage with high nitrate levels may die within hours. A mild day with sufficient sunlight stimulates plant growth and quickly restores conditions to normal within the plant.

When in doubt about whether or not your small grains will cause nitrate poisoning, turn one or two scrub animals on the suspected forage and watch them closely to see if it causes sickness or death.

The lush spring grass can also create other management problems. Many animals when first turned out on grass will eat too much, especially dairy animals. They do not leave room for the high energy dairy concentrate that's needed to maintain body weight and high milk production.

Spring pastures sometimes cause grassy flavors in the milk. Remove cows from the pasture two or three hours prior to milking to control the grassy flavors.

When animals are first put out on pasture, let them graze for a short time at first, then graze longer as the pasture becomes more mature. Continue feeding hay or silage until the grass loses some of its succulence.

Remember, the ration must contain enough fiber to slow down passage of the materials so the cow's rumen can digest nutrients in the pasture grasses.

Panelists Discuss Soybean Practices

Insect damage to soybeans can be kept to a minimum, but it takes the right management practices, according to five Delmarva growers.

Ralph O'Day, Seaford; Joseph Hughes, Felton; James Johnson, Linkwood, Md.; Clarence Laird, Princess Anne, Md.; and Ota Stevenson, Salisbury, Md.; described how they handle insect problems and other yield-reducing factors at the recent Delmarva Soybean Meeting in Salisbury, Md.

Mexican bean beetles have caused the most extensive damage to soybeans during the last few years, pointed out the growers. Spider mites, thrips, green clover worms and corn earworms have also caused serious problems for some farmers.

Timing may be the most important factor in controlling insects, said Johnson. If you have a problem with Mexican bean beetles, you have to be ready to control them during the larval stage, he explained. This means growers must frequently take a close look at their fields to be sure a build-up of insects isn't missed.

Laird said 1971 was the worst year for Mexican bean beetles in his soybeans. Last year he applied Di-Syston at planting and obtained full-season control.

Other yield-reducing factors in soybeans include weedy fields, poor quality seed, nutrient deficiencies, improper planting and plant damage from improper use of herbicides, noted the panelists.

Good weed control is essential for maximum soybean yields, stressed Stevenson. He uses a combination of Lasso and Lorox at planting and cultivates his fields once.

O'Day said morningglories can be a serious problem on land used in a three-way rotation—corn, small grain and soybeans. He has found that planting soybeans in narrow rows after small grain can reduce the morningglory problem and insect populations, too.

Poor fertility programs will also decrease soybean yields. Hughes said he applies a little extra fertilizer to corn and then lets his soybeans take up the unused nutrients the following year.

The Felton grain farmer added that obtaining a good stand of soybeans takes careful management. "Many growers still plant soybeans on the basis of pounds of seed per acre. But with various varieties of soybeans producing different size seed, we can no longer expect uniform plantings with this practice. We have to put down a uniform number of seeds per foot of row," he explained.

Last year some Delmarva growers ran into problems with poor quality seed. The panelists agreed that all seed should be treated with a good fungicide to help the plants get off to a good start. They also said producers who intend planting soybeans on new land this year, or land that has not been in soybeans for a few years, should inoculate the seed.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne W. Holberton

The latest Bureau of Labor Statistics food estimates claim it will take an average of $33.30 per week to feed a family of two adults and two school children on the low cost plan. The moderate plan will average about $43 and the liberal plan will cost about $10 more or $53.

Actually, many consumers can manage quite well yet feed their families as they should on less. Yet with all the publicity given to shifting prices of foods in recent months it has left many of us wondering if we are using our money wisely.

True, the price of meat, poultry and fish, as a group, increased more than other groups of foods over the past two years. And it looks as if they may be going even higher, the trick is to know how to make the least amount of money go the longest way. First thing to remember is the protein in a porterhouse steak is no better than that found in ground beef. Next always buy by cost per serving not cost per pound. A rib roast may cost only a dollar per pound on special sale but it will be expensive when you realize a rib roast yields only one or two servings per pound when round steak will yield four servings per pound.

When replacing expensive cuts of meat with inexpensive protein foods, be careful of your choices. The alternatives that provide protein, B-vitamins, and minerals (for which meat, poultry and fish are valued so far) are egg, dry beans and peas, peanut butter, and cheese.

Here is something else to remember also. A three ounce serving of cooked lean meat from beef, pork, lamb, veal, turkey, chicken or fish provides at least 20 grams of protein. This is a third of the recommended allowances for the 20 year old man. However, larger amounts of some meats and meat products are required to provide 20 grams of protein: ten slices of bacon, one half pound of sausage, 3 one half frankfurters, or six ounce slices of bologna. As you can see, these foods aren't protein bargains, even though the amounts ordinarily served cost less than a three ounce serving of most meats. Check this out when you shop next.

Dry beans, eggs, canned bean soup and peanut butter are all "best buys" as alternatives for meatless days. Remember though, the amounts of these foods needed to provide 20 grams of protein are larger than the usual serving. For example, it will require three ounces of American processed cheese, 4 one half tablespoons of peanut butter and a bit more than a cup of cooked or canned dry beans to give the 20 grams of protein. To use these vegetable proteins more effectively combine them with milk or some other animal protein.

For those of you who enjoy coffee, prices are due to go up. This is due mainly because Brazil will produce less this year because of bad weather. The International Coffee Agreement has broken down and prices and quotas have not been set. So, an open market and fluctuating prices have resulted. Use coffee until its last drop and save.

List of Vegetable Varieties Available

Delaware home gardeners have a choice of growing many types of vegetables, ranging from such common ones as corn and carrots to more unusual types like collards, chard and leeks. A list of vegetable varieties well adapted to Delaware growing conditions is now available from the Co-operative Extension Service.

Included on the list are two fairly new varieties of sweet corn which are outstanding in several ways. Silver Queen is a white corn which produces high quality ears. This is the first year large quantities of seed for this variety have been generally available.

Buttersweet is a yellow corn variety which matures from mid-season to late in the season. It is resistant to disease and produces two good ears per stalk.

In order to obtain seed for new varieties, it is generally necessary to order from seed catalogues.

Copies of "1973 Vegetable Varieties for Delaware Home Gardens" are available in county extension offices. They may also be obtained by calling the agricultural editor's office in Newark, 738-2500, or by writing to Mail Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, 19711.

Canterbury-Viola

By Edna Massimilla

The sermon title at Viola and Manship United Methodist Churches on Sunday was "Who Am I?" The Scripture was Matthew, Chapter 6.

The Rev. Robert Appling, of Clarksville, was a guest during the 11 a.m. worship hour at Felton. He sang some of his favorite sacred melodies. Other singers included Jimmy Passwater, with his guitar, and a new quartet called Two-Plus-Two.

Congratulations to Debby Schmidt, a senior at Caesar Rodney High School, who has been named Delaware's nominee for the Daughters of the American Revolution $1,000 Good Citizen Award. Miss Schmidt had earlier won a $100 bond in the State competition. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Schmidt. She has been president of the C-R chapter of the National Honor Society and served as secretary of the school's French Club. She has edited part of the school year book and has a part in a production by the Glee Club called "Finian's Rainbow".

On Saturday there was a dance at the Camden-Wyoming fire hall for the benefit of the ambulance fund.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Moore, of Wyoming, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Debra Sue, to T. Sgt. Gerald J. Belisle, Jr. the son of Mrs. Gerard J. Belisle, Sr. Of Hudson Falls, N.Y., and the late Mr. Belisle. The bride-to-be is a graduate of Caesar Rodney High School and is employed with the Division of Public Health. Her fiancé, who attended Adirondack Community College, is stationed at Dover Air Force Base. A May wedding is planned.
