Food Prices Are Worldwide Problem
U.S. consumers who are concerned over the rising cost of food are not alone. Consumers all over the world are facing similar problems as inflation continues to increase in Western Europe, Japan and other developing countries, according to W.T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware.

In France, meat prices are 15 per cent higher than they were a year ago. Top round is retailing at $2.75 a pound. The same cut in the U.S. costs $1.79. In Italy, beef prices have increased 30 per cent. The average price for all cuts of beef is more than $2 per pound.

England has had a wage-price freeze in effect since November, 1972, in an effort to control inflation. However, since the United Kingdom became a member of the European Common Market, food prices have gone up rapidly. They are expected to continue to rise as England shares her lower food costs with other members of the Common Market.

In Chile, the consumer price index increased 243 per cent last year. Japan has the world's highest food prices, McAllister says. There, a few premium cuts of beef retail for $17 a pound, and a cantaloupe can (Continued on Page 5)

Rabies Potential Summer Hazard

The pleasures of summer are many but so are its potential dangers, like rabies.

Rabies is most commonly found in wildlife, according to Dr. E. Paul Catts, associate professor of entomology and applied ecology at the University of Delaware. You're likely to visit areas where there are wild animals during summer vacations, outdoor excursions and camping trips.

Bats, foxes and skunks are frequent rabies victims. To avoid being bitten, learn to recognize the signs of rabies in animals.

Any wild animal behavior abnormally is reason enough for caution. You should suspect rabies when animals normally seen only at night are sighted in the day time. Animals with rabies infection lose their fear of human beings, develop attacking tendencies, wander aimlessly and display depressed behavior. You're most likely to find rabid bats on the ground, trembling or in a stupor.

Don't handle sick or paralyzed animals. Report the animal to a conservation officer or game warden. They can observe suspected animals or confine them in a safe place.

If you are bitten by a wild animal, wash the wound thoroughly with soap and water and go directly to a physician, who will advise you if and when treatment should begin. Try to catch the animal if it can be done without additional danger.

All animals, except bats, should then be confined for 14 days under the supervision of a veterinarian for rabies observation and diagnosis. A bat should be sent directly to a diagnostic laboratory for diagnosis.

If it is necessary to kill the animal, care should be taken not to damage the brain, which is needed for laboratory examination. Dead suspect animals should be kept refrigerated, but not frozen, for examination.

Bruce W. Jester Elected President

Bruce W. Jester has been elected president of the Delaware Chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma. Beta Gamma Sigma is a national honorary society formed to encourage and reward scholarship among students of business administration. Election to membership in Beta Gamma Sigma is the highest scholastic honor that a student in business administration can win. The initiation ceremonies and banquet were held May 1 at the University of Delaware and the Horseless Carriage Restaurant in Newark.

During the meeting in which Bruce was elected to membership he was also elected to serve as president for the coming year. Bruce has also been elected to Omicron Delta Kappa, a national honorary society that recognizes student leaders who have contributed much to the university community and have participated in many extracurricular activities. Bruce will be a senior majoring in accounting and plans to graduate from the University of Delaware in May of 1974.

1,342 Legal Abortions In State in 1972

A total of 1,342 legal abortions were performed in Delaware during 1972, according to the annual abortion report released by the Division of Public Health. This is an increase of 213 over the previous year's total.

Abortions were performed during 1972 under a 1969 state law which permitted the operation for specific reasons, such as danger to the physical or mental health of the mother or child, danger to the mother's life, incest or rape.

Nearly 85 per cent of the abortions reported were performed in Wilmington hospitals. Wilmington General Division reported 1,052 abortions; Delaware Division, 125; and Riverside Osteopathic, 15. In lower Delaware, Kent General Hospital in Dover reported 128 abortions, Beebe Hospital in Lewes reported 21, and Milford Memorial reported one.

Three hospitals—Dover Air Force Base, Nanticoke in Seaford, and St. Francis in Wilmington—reported none.

The primary reason given for abortions—in 1,321 of the cases—was "danger of permanent physical deformity or to mental health of the mother."

Single women with no prior pregnancies led other categories in the number of abortions. Women between the ages of 16 and 20 had the highest number, 466 of the 1,342 reported abortions.

Whereas 89 per cent of the operations were reported in upstate hospitals, only 79 percent of the patients were New Castle County women. By residence, the patients were from New Castle County (excluding Wilmington), 695; Wilmington, 396; Kent County, 157; Sussex County, 58; and out of state, 63.

Most of Delaware's 1969 abortion law was invalidated by this January's decision on abortion by the U.S. Supreme Court. A ruling by the Delaware attorney general's office provides that abortions in the state now must be performed under the Supreme Court guidelines. A major part

The Music Program At L. F. South School

Due to breakdown of photo-lathe machine, picture will be run next week.

Elementary students taking dictation from band and orchestra instruments and sixth grade students improving their own pieces are two facets of an innovative music program developed and pioneered by Donald

L. Bansbach of Lake Forest South Elementary School.

The program is being used in many American cities and was singled out by the American Music Conference as one of the nation's more creative and innovative school music programs. On any given day visitors to schools using the program might observe one of the following activities: Fifth grade students working on a composition for four instruments. Their piece will have two parts and will include an introduction and an ending section.

Meanwhile, first grade students are listening to notes played on the piano and marking with vertical, horizontal, or diagonal lines the tonal direction of what they heard.

By the end of the school year these first graders will be able to notate music they hear in the classroom. Their notations will be simple, maybe just seven or eight notes in one or two directions, but during the summer months they will retain at least 80 per cent of what they've learned.

When they return for second grade, they will add more directions to their tonal memory and by the end of the third grade they will take dictation from virtually every instrument in the orchestra. Students who can hear tonal direction played on the piano will recognize it two octaves higher on the piccolo and two octaves lower on the bass clarinet. Then through rhythmic dictation students learn of note value, pulse, and time signature.

Due to breakdown of photo-lathe machine, picture will be run next week.

Harry Hallock, vice president; Jeff Coltrain, secretary; Raymond Blanchette, treasurer; Paul Scovil, historian; and Lisa Callaway, public relations. The club was officially named the Quill and Scroll Society, in honor of Mrs. Phelps, who founded the Lancer in 1969. She previously worked on the Felton School newspaper, and served as Lancer advisor for three years. Mrs. Phelps remains a friend and benefactor to the new Lancer staff.

Tentative plans for the club include a car wash. They also hope to host the 1973 Fall Workshop of the Delaware Scholastic Press Association.

Teachers are usually assisted by fellow musicians or students in giving the instrumental dictation. Bansbach, who plays the piano, trombone, and baritone horn, as well as gives voice dictation, said he recently tried giving one class dictation with the clarinet and trumpet. "Things weren't going quite right, and I heard one boy say, 'I wonder what'll come out next.'"

Basically, students are taken through six types of dictation, depending upon their needs. Each type introduces a new concept early, followed by repetition. Each new stage contains more detail and meaning.

In these programs students discover that sound is shaped not only by the composer but can also be shaped by themselves. Fifth and sixth grade students will often discover the composer's means of writing a suite for orchestra through critical listening. They may immediately apply this discovered knowledge to similar works improvising freely an instrumental suite of their own making.

Through all of these efforts the students learn that they have musical ideas, musical thoughts, and that these thoughts can be molded into a musical improvisation or composition.

The program has evolved over the past ten years and has had as its prime concern aural perception. "We're not teaching students 'what' to think about music but 'how' to think about music," states Bansbach.

While traditional general music classes are song-oriented and involve looking at the printed notes and transferring them into sound, this program takes the opposite approach and is based on a philosophy of transferring sound into symbol. Musical literacy is then measured by the student's ability to translate sound into symbol.

The hearing of musical sound, aural perception, is a prime factor in understanding music. A composer's ideas have no import for the general public until they become an aural experience.

In this curriculum the student is completely involved through an aural experience in the language, meaning, and nature of the art. The program provides insight into the total musical process.

Bansbach's instructional rationale lies in behavioristic research and he does a continuing series of studies establishing Student's retention of what they have learned.

Any innovative program, Bansbach believes, requires first, an original idea; second, the stamina to see it through; and third, support from research. And when these innovations are made public, there are three possible responses: violent opposition, changeovers by those with open minds, and lip service.

Response to Bansbach's program has primarily been in the second category. Shortly after his perceptual learning classes were begun the program was cited in A Study of New Concepts, Procedures, and Achievements (Continued on Page 5)

LAKE FOREST LANCER STAFF INDUCTED INTO QUILL & SCROLL

On April 4, six members of the Lancer staff were inducted into the Quill and Scroll, an honorary society for high school journalists. Ladder Safety

You want to get something off a shelf and it's just a little too high. What do you do? Get a ladder, of course. But if you aren't careful with that ladder, you just might end up in a hospital.

Ladders are easy to use if you take the time to be careful, says Miss Coral Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware. For example, check it over each time you use it. Just because it was safe last time doesn't necessarily mean it will be this time.

A good ladder shouldn't shake. Open it and climb up a few steps, then shift your weight from side to side. If the ladder shakes, get down and figure out what's wrong with it.

The rungs of an old ladder may not be as strong as they were when the ladder was new. So, before you climb, check each rung for cracks and looseness. You should also check over the braces and hardware. If they are rusty, clean them off. If they are loose, see if they can be repaired, and don't climb on the ladder until they are.

Children's Farm Tour

A thousand insects swarming over crops, a thousand chickens or animals roaming his land are commonplace to many farmers—but a thousand children?

Recently, in just three days, more than 2,500 school children many of whom had never been on a farm, bussed to the Thaddeus Warrington farm near Georgetown.

All the traditional animals were there, plus a few things many Delmarva farms no longer have. But, the most popular animal was the pony. And the children exhibited quite a variety of imaginative techniques for getting into the saddle. Fortunately, the pony was patient.

Youngsters were allowed as much freedom as possible. They climbed fences, watched a young foal and mare romp, and touched the wet nose and bristled back of pigs. Most of the larger animals were kept in pens where the children could still see and touch them.

The farm tour was a natural learning experience for these Delaware youngsters. And, who knows, the real benefit may show up when they are adult consumers trying to understand the food production system.

Arrangements for the students were made by the Sussex county extension staff and Mr. Warrington.

Don't miss that spot under the left ear, exclaimed this burro, as youngsters gave him a good rubbing.

"Oh, that tickles," explained the first grader as this young calf decided to nibble on her fingers.

Smoking Can Affect The Unborn

Though the mother's womb is generally considered a refuge of safety and security for the unborn, a report recently received by the Delaware Tuberculosis and Health Society contains information which might dispute that idea.

In an experiment with pregnant rats, cigarette smoke was blown toward the animals five times a day for a daily total of 40 minutes. In carbon monoxide exposure, this experiment simulated the intake of a human mother smoking a pack of cigarettes a day or slightly more. The day before anticipated delivery, the rat fetuses were surgically removed from the womb.

Not only did fetuses from the "smoked" mothers weigh less than those in a control group, but they also had smaller brains.

Evidence demonstrates that carbon monoxide is damaging to embryos even if, as in the case of baby chickens, they are protected by eggshells. Dr. James McGrath, associate professor of environmental physiology at Rutgers University, constructed an incubator to test the effect of carbon monoxide on hatching chicken eggs. Into the incubator he pumped air that included a tiny portion, less than a fraction of one percent, of carbon monoxide. Of the eggs not exposed to the gas, 79 per cent hatched. Of those exposed, 13 per cent hatched.

The chick embryos found dead in the shell showed the red discoloration, hemorrhaging and blood clotting associated with carbon-monoxide poisoning.

Obviously, human mothers cannot be used in experiments like these. However, we know that pregnant women who smoke do have significantly more stillbirths, spontaneous abortions and premature births than women who don't smoke. The more an expectant mother smokes, the more carbon monoxide she absorbs into her blood stream. One study indicates that when a pregnant woman smokes two packs a day, it is the equivalent of blocking off 40 per cent of the baby's oxygen supply.

The Delaware Tuberculosis and Health Department can provide more information about carbon monoxide and cigarette smoke - and it may be a matter of life and breath to the next generation.

Delaware's Entries on National Register of Historic Places Total 109

Delaware's entries on the National Register of Historic Places now total 109, according to a list released this week by the Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs.

One of the new entries is the New Castle and Frenchtown Railroad right-of-way southwest of Glasgow. Although this pioneer railroad has been abandoned for more than a century, its roadbed and some of its stone bridges have survived. In recent years, a bicycle trail has been proposed to utilize sections of the old railroad.

St. James Church, near Stanton, was established to serve the settlers along White Clay Creek who had formerly attended Immanuel Church in New Castle, and Old Swedes in Wilmington. Both English and Swedish ministers served the congregation during the Colonial period. The first church was established in 1716, and was replaced by the present structure in 1822.

The Lindale House, on the south edge of Magnolia, was built in the Queen Ann style around 1887 by Charles Fisher, a Milford architect. John B. Lindale, for whom the house was built, was a prosperous peach grower.

Newark's Andrew Fisher House served as quarters for a Hessian general after the Battle of Cooch's Bridge. Although General Washington urged the militia to attack the house the general remained undisturbed. The house was occupied in more peaceful times by Andrew Fisher, a miller who had bought the former Abington Iron Works property along White Clay Creek.

Eden Hill Farm, in Dover, has sheltered the Ridgely family since 1749, when Colonel Nicholas Ridgely built the first portion of the house. He was Caesar Rodney's guardian and a justice of the provincial court. His widow, Mary Vining, planted the avenue of trees that still stands on the property.

Christ Church, in Milford, was begun by Parson Sydenham Thorne in 1791, but was not completed until 1835. Renovations in 1863 and 1894 completely changed the building's architectural character. As it stands today, the church is example of the neo-gothic style that prevailed during the second half of the nineteenth century.

The Louis McLane House, at 606 Market Street in Wilmington, now a store building, in former days, it sheltered such well-known personages as Martin Van Buren, Gunning Bedford, Jr., and Stephen Van Rensselaer. Louis McLane, who owned the house, served in both houses of Congress, was Jackson's minister to England, and served as Secretary of Treasury and State in Jackson's cabinet. After his resignation from the Cabinet in 1834, McLane was president of the Morris Canal and of the B & O Railroad.

The Sutton House in the village of St. George's, has been occupied by the builder's family since its erection in 1792. It has served at various times during the past 180 years as a post office, doctor's office, a drugstore, and as a residence. The present owner is the fifth generation of the family to reside there.

Greenlawn, better known as the Brady House, in Middletown is distinguished for its well-preserved mid-Victorian architecture and plantings. It was built in 1810 by Outten Davis and remodelled in 1860 to its present appearance by an uncle of the current owner.

South of Middletown stands the Aarold Naudain House, a stuccoed brick structure built during the eighteenth century. The hipped roof, which is unusual in early Delaware architecture, is one of the distinguishing features of the house. The property is owned by St. Andrew's School and occupied by the headmaster of Broadmeadow School.

Barratt Hall, near Frederica, was the home of Philip Barratt, builder of Barratt's Chapel. It was the scene of several meetings that led to the establishment of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mordington, near McColley's Pond, was built around 1790 by Walter Douglass, who had extensive interests in the Sussex County iron industry. The house is distinguished for its architectural style, even though much of its original panelling has been removed to the Henry Francis duPont Winterthur Museum.

Ivy Dale Farm, southeast of Smyrna, was the home of two members of the U.S. House of Representatives, John H. Hoffecker and his son, Walter O. Hoffecker. Both were engaged in canning and other business around Smyrna.

The McCoy House, near Saint George's is best known for its red tile roof, which weighs 90 tons. Dr. John Cresap McCoy, who built the house between 1892 and 1895, made his fortune marketing a patent remedy. He retired to Delaware, where he established a racetrack on his property that was said to be one of the fastest in the nation. The house is an example of the arts-and-crafts style fostered by William Morris in England but rarely seen in America.

Bannister Hall, in Kent County near Smyrna, has been occupied by the Anthony family since its construction in 1866. It was sold earlier this year. John Anthony, the builder, moved to Delaware from Troy, N.Y. to enter the peach business. He assembled the building materials in Troy, and had them shipped to Delaware for erection. The property is well-known for the grove of exotic trees, collected by three generations of the Anthony family from all parts of the world.

Wheel of Fortune, near Leipsic, is a brick, two-story house with several interesting early outbuildings. According to the Historic American Buildings Survey record, the house was built before the American Revolution, and is a significant example of a Delaware county house. Particularly notable are the exceptionally large first-floor windows.

Wooddale Bridge, one of Delaware's two surviving covered bridges, spans Red Clay Creek south of Ashland. It is built on the Town Truss principle popularized by Ithiel Town, a noted New England engineer.

The Coffee Run Mission site was the location of Delaware's first Catholic church. Father Patrick Kenney, who built his house there in 1812, is regarded as the founder of the Diocese of Wilmington. Today, the site of the church is marked by an outdoor altar, surrounded by a cemetery.

Red Clay Creek Presbyterian Church, sometimes known as McKennan's Church, stands on the site of an earlier church built in 1761 by a congregation established in 1722. The present building was erected in 1853, partly from materials salvaged from the old building.

The Ruth Mansion House is a large brick structure on the south side of Leipsic. It was the home of William Ruth, a pioneer in the public education movement, who was a trustee of Delaware's first free-school fund. Although the house has been divided among several apartments, it retains a considerable quantity of the original woodwork.

On the Woodland Beach Wildlife Area stands the Thomas Sutton House, a typical Kent County farmhouse of the early eighteenth century. The house now serves as a staff residence and office for the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control.

The Draper-Adkins House, on Federal Street in Milton, is a well-preserved example of a frame Sussex County town house, erected during a thriving period when Milton was a thriving port at the head of navigation on the Broadkill. The house was built around 1840 by Joseph Adkins, whose daughter sold it to the present owners in 1949. Because the house has had so few owners, it has been little altered from the day it was built.

By virtue of their inclusion on the National Register, these properties are protected as a matter of public policy. No federal project, federally-licensed project, or federally-funded project may encroach upon these properties without consideration of the historical values involved. In Delaware, the National Register is administered by a State Historic Preservation Officer, who is the Director of the Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs.

The Defeatists Have Been Defeated, Harrington Is Growing

Harrington is achieving a long overdue growth in housing and industrial development. This is in spite of the advocates of defeatism. These prophets of doom were vicerious in their omens; inactive when it came to doing anything about curing the ills of the community.

"I'll believe it when I see it," whined a small businessman when told Penn-Dol Development Company of Baltimore was going to build townhouses on Peck Avenue. "How can we sell houses without industry?" he asked.

We now have 10 townhouses completed, with lots laid out for 30 more.

Then there was the matter of industry. "How can we get industry without housing?"

When we mentioned the prospects of a $2 million food distribution center here by Burriss Foods, we encountered this comeback, "Burriss is just playing Harrington against Milford. I'll believe he will build here when I see it."

Burriss' plant started receiving food this week and will start shipping it out Monday.

Consolidated Thermoplastics is getting ready to build on 42 acres next month. It is part of the nation's largest conglomerates. It investigated Harrington nearly two years before deciding to settle in one of Delaware's best locations for industry.

Two large tracts have been acquired here for apartment houses and condominiums. The prices paid for this land rule out the possibility it was acquired for speculation and, in any case, speculators do not buy in areas without prospects.

Senators Trip Spartans In Baseball Title Clash

Lake Forest's baseball Spartans can handle almost any Henlopen Conference rival, but are clearly in too deep when Dover High Senators are the opposition.

For the fourth straight season Lake Forest won the Southern Division crown, then met Dover (Northern Division winner) for the overall championship. The Spartans were beaten 6-1 last week to drop their third straight title game.

Losers Jim Dill and winner Rene Martin gave up five hits each. Dill had two safeties, while Mike Atkinson, Jerry Steerman and Bob Nored also made the win column.

The Spartans will compete in the state tournament, which begins play June 2.

Del. River And Bay Authority News

Traffic on the Delaware Memorial Twin Bridges increased 146,492 vehicles or 9.6 per cent in April over the same month last year. The sharp increase in April traffic was partially attributed to the fact that Good Friday, which is normally a heavy traffic day, fell on the last Friday in March last year.

These statistics were made public by Theodore C. Bright, general manager, and are included in his monthly report to the Commissioners of the Delaware River and Bay Authority.

Bridge traffic for April 1973 was 1,667,314 vehicles compared to 1,520,822 for April 1972.

Bridge traffic for the 12-month period ended April 1973 was 18,719 vehicles compared to 17,921,210 vehicles for the 12-month period ended April 1972, and increase of 797,984 vehicles or 4.5 per cent.

Since August 16, 1951, a total of 262,141,321 vehicles have crossed the Delaware Memorial Bridge.

Don Bryant Wins State Title With Record Leap

Don Bryant, state champ and new record holder.

Lake Forest junior Don Bryant, is a state champion in track and field, Saturday at Wilmington's Baynard Stadium. Bryant won the triple jump with a record-breaking leap of 44 ft., 8 3/4 in. The old Division II (small schools) mark was 43-10, set by Bob Johnson of Smyrna, in 1970.

The Division I record of 44 ft., 6 3/4 was set by Harry Thayer of Milford, in 1969.

Bryant, for the third time this spring, improved the Lake Forest standard in the triple jump, which stood at 41 feet, 9 inches, at the beginning of competition in mid-April.

Bryant also was fourth in the long jump, last Saturday. He is Lake Forest's second track title, list, Chris Wetherhold was a two-time mile champ.

Ron Mosely, also a junior, was responsible for the final Lake Forest points. Mosely finished fourth in the half mile with a new personal best of two minutes, two and two-tenths seconds. Ron now ranks as the fastest junior half miler in Spartan history and should get the Lake Forest 880 record in 1974. Chris Wetherhold holds the present standard of 2:01.5.

Other developments saw freshman Harry Benson and sophomore Kit Tilghman finish last in their heats, yet both established lifetime bests. Kit had a 2:12.9 half mile, while Harry did 4:54.8, in the mile.

Letter To The Editor

Members of the American Legion:

I want to take this opportunity to tell you how disappointed my family is that you are not opening the pool for the second year in a row.

The pool was built with much effort, time and money and I don't understand why it wasn't kept in repair. I'm sure the pool membership would have paid a little more in fees to see that this was done. These families were told two years ago that the pool would be repaired. Then last year the pool wasn't opened so that "repairs could be made". As of this date nothing has been done. I also question as to why the repair estimate of $21,000 is so exhorbitant. This price would almost cover the cost of a new one.

I would like to note at this time that a couple of years ago renovations were made to the interior of the American Legion building and a few thousand dollars was spent on the bar. It seems to me that the membership is more interested in having a beautiful bar for "Adults Only" than having a pool for "families to enjoy together".

The community has nothing for the young people in the summer and I felt that the Legion did provide recreation for some of these youths. There is very little for these children to do - they can't even see a decent movie.

Isn't there something that can be done to save the pool and also once again encourage families to do things together? Many good times have been enjoyed out here. Could this be a community project? Surely someone has a solution to this problem. I wonder - "HOW MANY FAMILIES ARE INTERESTED IN FINDING A SOLUTION TO SAVING THE POOL?"

Eleanor Homewood

Letter To The Editor

I appreciate the opportunity on behalf of Post No. 7, the American Legion, to respond to Mrs. Homewood's letter regarding the post's swimming pool. Her family's disappointment is shared by many, including myself. Many enjoyable hours were spent at the pool by my family and me during the last summer the pool was open.

As I read Mrs. Homewood's letter, I cannot help but feel that her criticisms are not constructive and are based on a general lack of knowledge of the purpose of the American Legion, Post No. 7, and the problems we are facing with the pool. Her decision to make the pool a public issue, without first having expressed her concern to the Legion, could be considered imprudent. However, it does afford an opportunity to explain the pool situation to the many people who share her disappointment.

Mrs. Homewood questions why the pool was not kept in repair. The problem with the pool is not one that can be corrected by a few patches of cement. When the pool was built, concrete was poured over a cinder block base. Over the past several years, the post has been operating the pool for our enjoyment, the block has been disintegrating and the concrete veneer, without support, has been sagging and cracking. Until the pool was closed, these sagging and cracked areas had been patched but the situation reached the point where patching would no longer do the job.

Don Dell, our pool chairman, had been doing an excellent job of operating the pool prior to its closing. When the pool was closed, Don did not stop his activity. He has been searching for reliable people to bid for various alternatives to properly repair the pool. Through his efforts, we finally concluded that our only alternatives were: to resurface the pool with gunite (at a quoted cost of $21,000); build a new pool (at a quoted cost of $35,000); or discontinue operating the pool. The active members of the post, at a general meeting, concluded that we could not obligate the post to either of the first two alternatives without the assurance that we could raise sufficient funds to fulfill that obligation.

In regard to Mrs. Homewood's reference to the post's beautiful "BAR", I ask her to understand that it is not a bar - it is the post's "HOME", the center of all activities of the post and auxiliary. It was purchased and maintained by many hard working Legion and Legion Auxiliary members who have had enough pride in their membership to work for a decent and presentable facility.

Please, Mrs. Homewood, don't feel that the Legion is not interested in providing activities for children and families. As I mentioned above, our problem is one of funding. You ended your letter by asking if there is a solution to saving the pool. Well, there is. If you and enough other disappointed people are willing to assist with fund raising activities, there will be a pool at the post - one we can all be proud of and enjoy for many years.

Grand National Driver At Little Lincoln

Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N.J. presently enjoying his finest season in Winston Cup Grand National competition will take time out of his busy schedule to meet fans and drivers Friday night, June 1, at Little Lincoln Speedway. Campaigning a 1972 Chevrolet Monte Carlo, Parsons comes to the Eastern Shore with a second place finish in the Rebel 500 at Darlington and a third in the Talladega 500 which gave him the lead in the Winston Cup Grand National point standings.

Local interest on the Delmarva is centering upon Milton's Eddie Pettyjohn who will have a well deserved ride in the upcoming, third annual Mason-Dixon 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway Sun. June 3. In 1972 Pettyjohn won a record 38 features, ranking him fourth in the nation for races won in one season. Junior Donlavey of Richmond, Va., will field a 1971 Mercury for the Sussex County short-track champion. Donlavey's cars have finished second, third and fourth in previous Grand National races at the world's fastest one mile super-speedway, Dover Downs. Pettyjohn began his racing career some six years ago at Little Lincoln Speedway.

Stone's Softball Defeats Firemen

The first scheduled game of a softball league saw Stone's Hotel beat Harrington Volunteer Fire Company, 8-7.

Played on the Burrsville diamond, the game was rained out after 6 1/2 innings. Other games were rained out.

Carpenter Bees

If you have noticed large black and yellow bees flying near the eaves and gables of your house, or if there are holes about a half inch in diameter being drilled in wood surfaces around the house, chances are your home has been invaded by carpenter bees. These pests are out now, according to Frank Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware.

Carpenter bees are about an inch long and resemble bumble bees. They have a bare, shiny, black abdomen, and no pollen baskets on their back legs. Bumble bees have yellow, hairy abdomens. The females can sting, but the males cannot. However, to be on the safe side, it's best to assume they will sting.

The bees attack all types of dry seasoned wood, but especially soft woods like cedar, redwood, pine and fir. They may damage porch and shed ceilings, railings, posts, porch furniture, wood shingles, wood siding, window sills and wooden doors. They may also attack dead tree limbs.

They bore holes an inch or more into the wood at right angles to the surface, then turn sharply and bore in the direction of the wood grain. The tunnels, or galleries, are divided into individual cells with cross walls made of cemented, macerated wood.

An egg is deposited in each cell which contains pollen and nectar. The period from egg to adult takes a little more than one month. The bees produce only one generation per year. Adults overwinter in the galleries.

There are a number of measures you can take to control the bees and prevent damage to wood surfaces. Keep all wood surfaces well painted, since painted wood is less frequently attacked by the bees. Aluminum, asbestos, asphalt and other non-wood materials are also safe from attack.

To control the bees, direct insecticide sprays or dust into the holes and onto adjacent wooded areas. A dust of 5 per cent chlordane or 5 per cent sevin is recommended. Soaking cotton balls in liquid chlordane, malathion or sevin, then inserting them into the galleries with tweezers and sealing the holes with putty or caulking material is also effective.

Or, if you prefer, you can put liquid chlordane, malathion or lindane into a machine oil can or a sprayer and squirt it directly into the holes. It is best to use any treatment at night when the bees are calm and less active.

Covered Windows Reduce Air Conditioning Cost

As temperatures rise, owners of homes with air conditioning find their electricity bills rising too. You can cut down on the amount of electricity used by your air conditioner if you follow a few rules to help keep the heat out, says Miss Coral Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Windows are the biggest barrier to keeping the house cool in the summer. Depending on which side of the house the window is on, as much as 15-35 per cent more energy can be required to cool a room with uncovered windows.

Using almost any type of window covering will keep a room cooler. Window shades, draperies and venetian blinds all help. The important factor is to keep the curtains drawn or shades down during the hot part of the day.

The larger the window, the more heat can come in through it. So, if you can't keep all the windows in the house covered, at least try to cover large picture windows and sliding glass doors.

Your iron is one of your most important sewing tools. In fact, you may use it more when you sew than for ironing. Permanent-press clothes don't need much ironing, but just because our fabrics don't wrinkle doesn't mean they don't require careful pressing as you sew. Careful pressing can do as much for a professional appearance as good sewing techniques.

Many of our fabrics are made in whole or part with man-made fibers. Most of the man-made fibers require low heat so there is a tendency to exert too much caution and underpress these fabrics. When you sew, test first a swatch of your fabric before pressing the garment. This will help you determine the amount of heat and steam needed for a smooth appearance. Your steam iron may not give enough moisture for permanent-press fabrics and synthetic knits, so use a dampened press cloth in addition. The press cloth also will protect the surface of the fabric and prevent the shine and flattening that can develop from too much high heat.

The areas that need the most pressing attention are those that happen to have more than one fabric thickness—seams, facings, hems. Seams should have an even press for the length of the seam. Too often one part of the seam is well pressed, but another area has not had enough pressure. Most of the pressure should be exerted at the line of stitching if possible, rather than at seam edges, so the marks of the seam allowance don't show through to the right side. This is best done with the use of a pressing cloth and at the very edge of the ironing board. In some cases, a seam roll or board will be a great help.

The edge of facings should always turn under slightly to the wrong side so they will not be seen on the right side of the garment. Sewing techniques, such as seam grading and understitching, will help, but careful pressing can complete the professional appearance.

Some teachers suggest that the hem needs little or no pressing and advocate a roll-hem appearance. This will depend on the fabric and style of dress, but I have never seen a hem that didn't look better with proper pressing. You do not want the fabric line at the top of the hem to be visible from the right side, but the bottom of the hem should receive enough steam and pressure to give a smooth look. A circular or flared skirt will need careful pressing to shrink out as much fullness as possible. The fullness of a set-in sleeve should be steamed, then shaped with the fingers. Do not touch the iron to this area of the sleeve. Do not press a crease down the center of a set-in sleeve. It is a simple matter to press the sleeve at the edge of the ironing board, or a sleeve board may be used if you prefer. When the fabric has been folded on the bot, a crease is sometimes visible at this fold. When you cut out a garment try to avoid this crease line, for it may be extremely difficult or impossible to remove.

Pressing requires time and patience. It also requires good pressing equipment. Check the condition of your ironing board. If it is warped, or if the cover or padding are not smooth, you will have a more difficult time achieving professional results.

A good press job camouflages poor sewing techniques, but even the best sewing job will look better with careful pressing. It is often the pressing that makes a garment a prize winner.

Worldwide Meat Shortages Reflect Consumer Revolution

We used to hear a lot about farm surpluses and government programs to limit farm output. Some such programs are still in existence, but more and more farmers are electing to depend on an expanding domestic and world market rather than on government programs. And here's the reason, says W.T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware.

A worldwide rise in standard of living has resulted in a worldwide demand for more food—especially meat—in consumer diets. There just isn't enough meat to satisfy the demand. And as livestock producers all over the world rush to provide more meat, they're competing for and using up available feed grain and soybean supplies.

Mexico, for instance, now has a livestock industry growing faster than her ability to produce the feed needed to support it. Last year, she had to import a million tons of feed grain from the United States. This is the first time she has needed such a major import. And she'll probably need more this year.

Taiwan is another developing country whose agricultural production has been affected by a rising standard of living. Higher incomes from a booming electronics industry mean more Taiwanese are eating well. Consumer demand for pork has caused hog production to double. Taiwanese pigs used to be fed on sweet potatoes; now, to help increase production, they're fed on feed grains and soybean meal imported from the United States. With the demand for pork still rising, the United States and Taiwan have signed an agreement guaranteeing a minimum of $800 million dollars in sales of wheat, feed grains and soybeans over the next three years.

Why are industrial booms in Mexico or Taiwan or any other of a number of developing countries of importance to the American consumer? Because we are directly affected by their growing demands for agricultural products. There's a limited supply of meat (especially beef), and Americans aren't the only ones bidding for it any more. There's also a limited supply of feed for livestock.

Agricultural products move worldwide on a free market. The highest bidder gets what's available. And we aren't always the highest bidders anymore for the feed grains, fertilizers and other basic agricultural commodities. For the first time, many other countries share the demand and have the income to back their demand.

We saw this recently when shortages in nitrogen fertilizers developed in this country because foreign buyers were competing with American farmers for available supplies, and outbidding them. It could also happen with feed grains, points out McAllister.

One of the main reasons food prices—especially meat prices—are as high as they are is because of this consumer demand. The consumer revolution has encouraging implications for the American farmer though. The United States is getting a major share of the growing world market in feed grains and other agricultural products. For the first time, emphasis is less on surpluses and more on production as this world market (which includes the United States) eats up all the American farmers can produce.

Use a layer of mulch to reduce soil crusting, water evaporation and weed competition. Peat moss, leaves or chopped straw can save you a great deal of work. You can add more mulch as the flowers grow.

Many flowers including zinnias, snapdragons and chrysanthemums will benefit from pinching out a terminal part of the plant. This creates a more compact, wind resistant plant. Make the first pinch when the plants are about three inches high. Remember that dwarf varieties do not need pinching, Tatnall says.

Light, frequent fertilizer applications are better than "one shot" heavy applications. Dissolve one-third cup low analysis fertilizer in five gallons of water. Water with the solution about once a month, or oftener if the leaves show fertilizer deficiency.

It is a good idea to inspect plants for problems. Catch the plants before insects and diseases become serious. Also get rid of weeds before they take over, Tatnall says.

Flowers Need Care After Planting

Too many flowers suffer from neglect after planting. The first three or four weeks after planting are the most important if your plants are going to get off to a good start, says David Tatnall, extension garden specialist at the University of Delaware.

Young plants need to be watered often until their root systems become established. After that, you can water less often, but soak the soil deeper. Apply water slowly for a long time so that it will soak past the deepest roots. Then, let the soil surface dry between waterings.

HOMEOWNERS CORNER

by HARRY JACK There are several ways to attach shelves and hinges in your home. You can use a butt hinge — easiest to install, it is screwed to the edge of the facing and to the edge of the door (drill pilot holes first to prevent splitting). A semi-concealed hinge is used with a lipped door. Install it by fastening the hinge to the back of the door, then attach it to the face of the cabinet. A surface or H-hinge fastens to the front of the door and the face of the cabinet. A concealed pivot style hinge screws into the top and the bottom edges of the doors. Use dado joints for the best shelf support. Adjustable supports are easy and convenient to use.
