

City to Receive $32,335.68 In Municipal Aid

The City of Harrington will receive $32,335.68 in municipal aid funds from the State of Delaware, it was revealed last week in a report released by the Department of Highways and Transportation.

This compares with $32,679.10 for 1971-72. At least 60 per cent of the money must be used for construction and maintenance of streets not maintained by the State. The balance must be used for lighting and police department.

Fifty-four participating communities will receive a total of $2 million for the fiscal year which ended June 30.

The money, which comes from the proceeds of the State motor fuel tax, was provided by the General Assembly in 1957. The report did not say when the appropriations would be made, but Harrington usually gets its money at the end of July.

Appropriations to other area communities will be as follows: Farmington, $884.27; Greenwood, $10,957.17; Felton, $7,050.89; Frederica, $7,945.43; Houston, $5,395.86; Milford, $75,784.89; Viola, $2,060.77; Woodside, $1,396.90, and Bridgeville, $20,971.52.

Appropriations are made on the basis of population and usable streets not maintained by the State.

tion is effective at the end of July. It was submitted partially at the request of John Daniello, secretary of community affairs and economic development, and partially because Murchison was thinking of leaving anyway, he said.

State Fair Gets $25,000 Gift

J. Gordon Smith Monday night donated $25,000 to establish a fund to erect a building in memory of his son for the use and benefit of the Delaware State Fair.

Announcement of the gift was made at the annual meeting of the stockholders by Herman C. Brown, a Fair director and president of Harrington Raceway.

"He has indicated to me that each year of the remainder of his life he will endeavor to add to this fund substantially in the hope this building will be erected as soon as possible," Brown said. Smith, 80, became a Fair stockholder in 1927, became a director in 1937, and has served as president since 1958.

Smith has requested that rooms in the building be dedicated to past presidents. In addition to Smith, others to hold the post were Charles D. Murphy, Benjamin I. Shaw, and Jacob O. Williams.

Brown and six other trustees were named by Smith to administer the fund and determine what kind of building will be erected when the fund reaches a sufficient amount.

Other trustees are Charles D. Murphy Jr., (Smith's stepson), George C. Simpson, Thurman Adams Jr., Russell Kirby, Edward Taylor, and Ernest E. Killen.

James G. Smith Jr., was killed in January, 1971, in a light plane crash in Vermont, where he had gone to ski. He was 40 years old at the time of his death.

His widow and two children were present at Tuesday night's meeting.

Smith, like his father, was a member of the board of directors of the Fair, being elected in 1964.

Among other things, he was chairman of the Kent County Democratic Committee, a job now held by Killen, one of the trustees.

The trustees are considering a museum and hall of fame to the standardbred horses and people of the Delmarva Peninsula who have been associated with harness racing.

"It is Mr. Smith's thought that since Harrington has been the heart of the harness horse country in our part of the world that it is fitting and proper that a building such as this be erected on the state fair grounds," Brown said.

Harrington, historically, ranks only behind Roosevelt Raceway in night parimutuel wagering, beginning in 1946.

A portion of the land of the fair grounds was purchased from Smith's father, Will Smith.

This year the Fair will open July 20 and close July 29.

"Boxwood" On National Register

Another historic Delaware house has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places, according to an announcement from the state Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs. The colonial brick house near Clayton known as "Boxwood" is now recognized as a valuable part of our nation's historic legacy under the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966.

Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Breerer, the present owners, have restored the house to approximately its original appearance. Boxwood was built before the Revolution on the Manor of Freith, a vast tract on the headwaters of Duck Creek that had been granted by William Penn to his own family.

Welsh immigrants settled on the manor and established a congregation later known as Bryn Zion Old School Baptist Church, near the present town of Kenton. James Jones, one of these Welsh colonists, settled on part of the Manor of Freith in 1733; he may have built the Breerer's house shortly thereafter. A survey of the property made in 1792, shows the house at the center of a 717-acre property owned by Enoch Jones.

The National Register of Historic Places is maintained in Delaware by the Division of Historical and Cultural Affairs under a grant from the National Park Service. Buildings, sites, and structures that are listed on the National Register are protected against encroachment from federal projects, federally-financed projects, and federally-licensed projects. In addition to maintaining the Register list, the program also provides grants-in-aid to the state for restoration and preservation projects and for publications in the field of Delaware history.

State Fair to Open July 20 With Demolition Derby

The 1973 Delaware State Fair will have a wild opening Friday night, July 20, when George Marshman puts on his National Championship Demolition Derby.

The race track in front of the grandstand will be the scene of an almost unbelievable exhibition of motoring madness, beginning at 8 p.m. Up to 80 drivers with a killer instinct will seek to destroy all other cars on the speedway and keep his own running. This is a crash "EM" for cash contest with no rules - the last man running is the winner.

There will be four elimination events limited to 25 cars each, and a grand finale made up of the four elimination heat winners and four more that put on the best show or tried the hardest, as determined by the crowd.

The cars used in the demolition derby, as a matter of safety must have all glass removed except the windshield and a crash helmet for the driver is compulsory.

The most amazing part of the entire event is how these drivers can survive some of the terrific crashes without serious injury. The engineers tell us that a head-on crash at 50 miles per hour has the same impact violence as driving a car off a ten story building.

If excitement is your dish and you can stand the thrills, don't miss this one. A thousand thrills and a million laughs.

Revenue Refunds Sent out

"Ninety-nine per cent of all revenue refunds, due Delaware taxpayers, were sent out by June 30th," Governor Sherman W. Tribbitt announced last Tuesday.

"And it is with great delight that I can say that I kept my campaign pledge to get the refund checks out on time," the Governor said. "I said those checks would go out during this fiscal year, or heads would roll." With better management practices and a commitment on the part of every employee, we succeeded."

As of June 30, 146,000 revenue refund checks were mailed out by the State, 3,000 of them in the final week of the fiscal year. That represents a mailing totaling $13,187,403.93.

About 147,500 refund checks were due Delaware taxpayers. But according to Acting Finance Secretary Clifford B. Edwards, another 1,500 remain to be paid. About 800 involve taxpayer error (such as incomplete information, an incorrect Social Security number and so forth); those individuals have been notified, he said, and their checks will be mailed out as soon as the missing information is supplied.

The remaining 700 are in stages of processing, Edwards said, and will be mailed shortly. Many of those 700 represent former problem cases, and the checks for those individuals are being processed.

"We've learned our lessons from prior years," Edwards said, in explaining the efficiency of the Division of Revenue this year. "This is our third year under computerization and things functioned more smoothly and orderly."

"I believe this is the beginning of a new trend for our State in returning refund checks to its citizens," the Governor said. "No longer will we have millions of dollars worth of checks carried over into the next fiscal year."

"We are paying the checks in the proper fiscal year," he said. "And the citizens and taxpayers of Delaware are benefitting from the proper management of State Finances."

Veterans Administration News

Q -- My husband died of service connected disabilities while in military service. Am I eligible for Veterans Administration assistance to take correspondence courses or on-the-job training?

A -- Yes. Public Law 92-540 (Oct. 24, 1972) extended these benefits to wives and widows of veterans whose permanent total disabilities or deaths were service connected.

Q -- I still carry my World War II "V"-prefixed National Service Life Insurance. Can I get additional coverage?

A -- Yes. Public Law 92-188, enacted in December 1971, allows veterans with these policies to use their insurance dividends to buy additional paid-up life insurance protection.

Q -- The Veterans Administration guaranteed $7,500 of my home loan, based on my World War II service. Since VA now guarantees more, do I have more entitlement coming?

A -- Yes. VA currently guarantees up to 60 per cent up to a maximum of $12,500 of home loans. Since you received a loan guarantee of only $7,500, you are eligible to apply for an additional $5,000 in loan benefits.

Q -- I lost my certification of attendance card which my employer signed. What can I do about this?

A -- Call VA and provide them with your enrollment information. Upon verification with your employer, VA will take action to issue your check. Q -- Are VA doctors up to date on new medical knowledge? I see the doctors generally have to take continuing medical education courses.

A -- Yes. All of the VA hospitals are affiliated with medical schools, colleges or universities, or other educational institutions, and many VA doctors are on the medical school staffs. This gives VA a great advantage in continuing medical education. Q -- If a lender turns down a veteran's application for a G.I. loan, what should the veteran do?

A -- He should see another lender. The fact that one lender is not interested in making the particular type of loan the veteran wants does not preclude the possibility that another may be interested.

Q -- I am receiving a 60 per cent service-connected disability compensation. I have a wife and two children. My 17-year-old child was married in January. When will my compensation payments be reduced?

A -- At the end of the calendar year in which the child was married.

Kisses All Around

By: Dorothy Graham

Kisses all around - It's reunion time (July 4), of the Wiggins held always at Walt and Kathleen Wiggins, Downingtown, Pa. (Aunt and uncle of Richard Dennis.) All exchanged ideas - happenings of the year - marriages to be - ailments - new babies - settled the world situation - took care of the economics and all the while eating (everything you can imagine and then some), drinking and smiling just in case Richard got you on camera. He got some good shots of legs - got me trying to sneak degrees of chicken, or was it thirds? One of son, Troy, enjoying a piece of watermelon like you wouldn't believe, a great picture of Uncle Walt at his huge out-door fireplace cooking the sixty-seven pounds of chicken and twelve pounds of hot dogs (never got a spot on himself!).

Barry Wiggins, son of Coates and Lone Wiggins (only one left to carry on the Wiggins name and he is handsome and courtly!) kept declaring that Pennsylvania would beat Delaware this year when they played their yearly game of ball. Ralph, Richard and Buck protested just as loudly that "it was wishful thinking". The players were called together - boys, girls, men and women ages from 6 to 54. Theresa was the youngest to bat the ball and she did make it to first base. Robert, the oldest, made it all the way. Score was 7 to 4 and so ended the 7th defeat for Pennsylvania relatives. Delaware again remains first state.

The children enjoyed just roaming over the beautiful shaded eight acres. Would like a name for the home at the entrance to the drive - perhaps as "Shiny" said, "Pheasant Haven" as the pheasants do hide in the foliage when the hunters come to the mountains so close by.

The only mishap of the day was when Jerry Thompson and Janice Dennis ran head on over second base. Janice was knocked down - carried close to the wishing well (with an old oaken bucket) there under a huge maple tree Barry Wiggins' girl friend, Lynn Letfus, (training for a nurse) rendered first aid to a badly skinned and bleeding nose and not so beautiful black eye - Ralph, Janice's husband came out and held her hand as did the very gallant Barry Wiggins - making the mishap not quite as miserable as it could have been.

Those present, that I recall, were: Richard's mother, Clara Wiggins Dennis Darling and her husband, John Darling; Richard, Penny, Richie, Todd, Troy and Penny Sue Dennis; Buck, Nancy, Jerry, Susie and Barry Thompson; Tubby, Barb, Robin and Robin Dennis; Ralph and Janice Dennis; Walt and Shiny Wiggins; Coates and Barry Wiggins and Barry Wiggins; Lynn Letfus; Florence Wiggins and daughter Bonnie Ford.

and son, Todd; Bob and Helen Wiggins; Steve, Eleanor, Terry and Lynn Gonsorick; Kathy, Joe and Debby Nash; Joan, Dominic, Nick, Dave, Danny, Doug and Theresa Castaldi; E-gee, Earl, Pam, Ticky and Kelly Myers; Dorothy Graham; Lester Hobbs Jr.; and the Browns, Sheehans, McLucas and Myers and others I just did not get.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

Would that I could paint a scene, And wield a magic brush, To paint the open road and woods, And rivers as they rush.

Not a picture just to view, But one that had a heart, That carried all the nature truths As each one played a part.

To picture dusty country lanes, All hedged with tangled vines, And shady forest corridors, Between the lofty pines.

And let the picture be so true, I'd hear the roundelays, Of feathered songsters in the trees, Above the wooded ways.

I'd hear the distant rumble Of the mountain waterfall Or catch the plaintive answer To the partridge mating call.

I know the picture can't be made, Nor if it could, would talk, But all this panorama's yours, If through the woods you'll walk.

Federal Assistance

security income, as it is called, is not the same as social security. The funds for the supplemental security income payments will come from general revenue funds.

Not Social Security

What this means is simply that the Social Security Administration will be responsible for two different programs. The one program is Social Security, as in the past, while the other is supplemental security income for the aged, disabled and blind. Social Security funds will not be used to make the supplemental security income payments.

Within a few weeks social security offices will start taking applications from people who aren't getting state assistance, but who think they may be eligible for Federal payments.

It's important to note that no Federal payments can start before January 1974. Delaware will continue making payments under their programs of public assistance until January 1974.

People who need cash help before the end of this year should go to the State of Delaware Division of Social Services Assistance payments office.

For further information on the new program of supplemental security income for the aged, blind and disabled, contact your nearest local Social Security office.

Farm Official Explains Export Policy

During the 12 months ending in September exports of soybeans, cottonseed and related products will be larger than exports for the corresponding period last year despite the licensing system that has now replaced a June 27 embargo, reports a farm program official. However, these shipments will not be as large as they might otherwise have been, in order to protect feed supplies needed by American livestock producers and their consumer-customers.

"We simply couldn't meet this year's sudden jump in foreign demand with old-crop soybeans and meal," says Richard Lester, chairman of the Delaware State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee. "Therefore, it became necessary to allocate available supplies."

Lester quoted U.S. Department of Agriculture authorities who point out that even with the embargo and subsequent export licensing system this country expects to ship overseas a record 491 million bushels of soybeans this year—some 57 million bushels more than the previous record set in 1970.

"At the same time, we will now retain sufficient supplies of old crop beans to meet domestic needs, thus providing for our livestock producers and, ultimately, consumers," Lester said.

After considering domestic requirements, the Government determined that approximately 33 million bushels of soybeans and 750,000 short tons of soybean oilcake and meal are available for export, Lester explained. This represents 50 per cent of the outstanding contracts for soybean exports for the remainder of the season and 40 per cent of the reported unshipped contracts for cake and meal.

Therefore, the Federal Government established an export licensing system under which each contract for soybean exports will be reduced to 50 per cent of the unfilled quantity. Each contract for soybean meal and oil-cake will be reduced to 40 per cent of the unfilled quantity. Licenses for cottonseed and cottonseed meal and oil-cake will be issued for the full quantity of the unshipped balance of contracts that were in force on June 13, 1973, because supplies are adequate to meet these exports and still fill domestic needs.

The Department of Agriculture estimates that this licensing system will allow for a 145-million-bushel crush and a 40-million-bushel carry-in of beans this fall, Lester said, thus protecting livestock producers—and consumers—from possible shortages of food and feed.

"Our first responsibility is to our own citizens even though we want to keep the export markets that we have built up so carefully," Lester said.

A number of unrelated and unpredictable events have occurred together around the world, resulting in the current global shortage of protein meal, the ASC chairman said. These include harvesting problems in the U.S., crop failures and droughts last year in Russia, India, Australia and South Africa, failure of the Peruvian fishmeal industry the past two seasons, the continuing growth in world demand for livestock products, and U.S. dollar devaluations that have made this country's commodities more attractive to foreign buyers.

Farmers Can Conserve Fuel When Harvesting Forage Crops

In this period of limited farm tractor fuel supply, farmers can do a number of things to use fuel more efficiently. Tom Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware, has some suggestions for farmers harvesting forage crops.

He says dull knives on forage equipment can double the power required by sharp knives. Keep knives and shear bar sharp and maintain proper shear bar-to-knives clearance.

Try to chop forage crops as coarse as practical by doubling the length of cut. If you are cutting hay at a one-eighth inch setting, change to one-quarter inch cut. Your PTO power requirements per ton of forage will be reduced by one-third.

Don't use a recutting screen when chopping hay or corn for silage, adds Williams. A very fine cut and the use of a recutter screen add nothing to feed values. A test at the University of Wisconsin revealed that when chopping haylage, a forage harvester set at a one-quarter inch setting and equipped with a four inch recutting screen requires 20 per cent more fuel per ton of chopped material than an identical rig without the recutting screen.

Williams also suggests utilizing natural dry down and solar energy for drying crops whenever possible.

Gardens Need Care Before Your Vacation

All set for sun and fun on your vacation? You can't take your garden with you, so take care of it before you go.

A few minutes in the garden before vacation can save hours afterward. It is obviously much easier to remove small weeds now than larger, well established ones later, reminds Robert Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

Apply a good mulching material after weeding. A layer of mulch two inches deep will prevent most weed growth, keep the soil cooler and conserve water. Common mulching materials include grass clippings, pine bark, peat moss, licorice root, old hay and straw.

While you're gone, your weed-free garden will look better to your neighbors than one which has become overgrown with weeds. If the weather turns dry in your absence, a weed-free garden will not lose as much water. Also, rapidly developing weeds will not be able to shade garden plants.

House plants also should be given a little special care before you leave. However, if you plan to be gone for more than two weeks, ask a friend or neighbor to water the plants for you.

Soak your house plants thoroughly the night before you leave and put them in plastic bags just before departing. Tuck the bag under the pots so the plants are completely covered. Try to keep the leaves from touching the plastic. A few sticks or wire stuck into the soil will support the plastic.

Never put plastic covered plants in the sun. They would bake to death. However, be sure they get plenty of light. Don't be alarmed if there are a few yellow leaves on the plants when you return. With normal care they should soon recover.

Never leave your plants soaking in a few inches of water. If you do your plants may all die before you get home.

Wetlands Basic To Food Supply

To some people Delaware's tidal basin may look like little more than a muddy waste between the land and the sea, full of troublesome insects in hot weather and not much else. These people may wonder why there is so much current concern over preserving the wetlands. But there is good reason for this concern, says Dr. Frank Murphy, applied ecologist at the University of Delaware.

Far from being the waste place they appear, the wetlands are actually teeming with specialized life on which our food supply may increasingly depend.

The wetlands are land forms that resulted from the invasion of shallow water by land vegetation long ago. They were built up over thousands of years through deposits washed down from the uplands and brought in by the sea.

Plants and animals of the wetlands are unique. Only certain species can tolerate the salt and the tidal flooding. The vegetation is mainly grasses. Wetland waters serve as a nursery ground for many young fish. The wetlands contain basic food webs that support shellfish and finfish living in Delaware's coastal waters. They provide the nutrients on which this marine life depends.

Tidal marshes are like a kind of vast chemical laboratory, explains Murphy. In them a certain level of organic waste—mainly from decaying marsh grasses—is converted into amino acids and plant proteins that are the very foundations of life.

The job of reducing nitrogen and sulfur from this marsh waste and converting them into nutrients is performed by countless microorganisms living in the marsh mud. Not only do these microorganisms recycle the "garbage" of the wetlands into protein and minerals, they also produce needed oxygen for the atmosphere.

Pollution in the form of an excess of sulfur can so upset the chemical balance of the marshes that instead of amino acids and proteins, Murphy's "chemical laboratory" could produce too many sulfur acids. Then the wetlands will deteriorate. This could easily happen in Delaware unless preventive steps are taken soon.

Dredging for commercial development also poses a serious threat to the wetlands. Advanced technology has greatly accelerated the rate at which we can destroy these marshes.

Murphy sees a time when the United States could depend on the sea for much of the protein in its food supply. Expansion of marine culture (or farming of the ocean) and commercial fishing could be a logical answer of providing high grade protein for human consumption at a reasonable cost. Mariculture is already practiced extensively in countries like Japan, China and India where protein needs are critical.

There are an estimated 125,000 acres of tidal marsh now left in Delaware. Fortunately, says Murphy, we still have the option to protect this land. Many states have long since lost such options. State Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control biologists estimate that we need to protect at least 70 per cent of these wetlands in order to provide the necessary nutrients for estuarine life—especially finfish and shellfish.

Some scientists maintain that it is possible for man to recreate marshlands that has been destroyed by pollution or dredging. But Murphy says we have yet to demonstrate a long term ability to make these artificial wetlands productive in an ecological food chain. He concludes, "Wouldn't it be more prudent

Basic Educational Opportunity Grant

The Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program is a new program of student financial aid which was authorized by Title I of the Education Amendments of 1972. Basic Grants will be made in addition to existing sources of student financial aid and the amount of a grant will not be affected by other aid received by the student. The grant will be calculated by means of a Federal formula that applies to all applicants throughout the country. Unlike other Office of Education programs of student financial aid, the receipt of an award and its amount do not depend on the availability of funds at a particular institution. The grant is made to eligible students, who in turn may attend any eligible institution. However, the amount of the award will be affected by the differing costs of attendance at different institutions.

Eligible Students

For the first year of operation for the Basic Grant Program, eligibility will be limited to those students who will be enrolling in a postsecondary educational institution for the first time and who will be attending on a full-time basis. Students who were enrolled in postsecondary educational institutions prior to July 1, 1973 are not eligible, except those students who were enrolled in remedial or preparatory programs prior to July 1, 1973. The amount of a grant is based on the ability to preserve what we have than to presume to recreate what evolution took thousands of years to do?"

Eligible Institutions and Programs

Eligible students attending most colleges, universities, community and junior colleges, hospital schools of nursing, and many vocational and technical schools approved by the Office of Education, will be able to receive Basic Grants in the next academic year. Although each institution must be approved according to the specific criteria of the Office of Education, generally any school which: (1) admits as regular students only those persons with a high school diploma or its equivalent; (2) offers a program of study of at least six-months duration which leads to a degree or to employment in a recognized occupation; and, (3) is located in the United States is eligible for participation in Federal student aid programs. Student attending such an institution are eligible to receive Basic Grants. Of course, students will have to be enrolled in an eligible program within that institution to receive an award. An eligible program of study is one which admits as regular students only those persons with a high school diploma or its recognized equivalent and is of at least six-months duration.

Amount of Basic Grant Awards

The maximum Basic Grant award under the program is $1400, less an amount that the student and his or her family will be expected to contribute toward the cost of education. The amount of each grant also may not exceed one-half of the amount the student needs to pursue higher education. Furthermore, the amount of each grant is dependent on the amount of funds appropriated by the Congress for the program. Because of the size of the appropriation received this year ($122.1 million) it is expected that the maximum grants awarded will be between $500 and $600.

Application Process

The student should pick up an "Application for Determination of Family Contribution for 1973-74 Academic Year". Application forms will be available at institutions of post-secondary education, high schools, state employment offices, post offices and other locations easily accessible to students, (in late June).

He then completes the application. Thorough instructions are included in the application packet. The Basic Grants application must be submitted even if the student has completed other financial aid applications.

When the application is completed, it should be mailed to Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program, P.O. Box B, Iowa City, Iowa 52240.

Division Of Continuing Education Releases Fall Bulletin

The University of Delaware Division of Continuing Education has a number of answers to the question: "What can I do with my free time?"

The answers are detailed in the division's recently released fall course bulletin, which contains a complete listing of all degree courses and professional and non-degree programs, as well as a section detailing cultural programs to be offered through the division.

Included in the listing are new courses, interdisciplinary classes, special courses for women and independent study courses.

Degree or credit courses ranging from social and cultural anthropology to urban planning are listed, in addition to a wide range of noncredit courses in such areas as lifetime sports, business and management, community service, computer technology, communications and corrections.

The cultural program listing includes such offerings as "The Golden Age of the String Quartet," "Museum Without Walls," and various upcoming musical events at art exhibitions.

Fall continuing education classes will meet at locations throughout the state, in regular campus buildings and in the division's home in John M. Clayton Hall, as well as in Wilmington, Dover, Georgetown and Milford.

The bulletin also includes general course and advisement information, registration materials and a campus map.

Anyone wishing a copy of the bulletin, available at no charge, should contact the Division of Continuing Education at Clayton Hall, telephone 738-2214. Copies also have been placed in local libraries.

Field Day Will Feature Weed Control

Delaware's cool, wet spring helped the grass get off to a beautiful start, which is fine if you had a large lawn. But for many farmers, the grass and broadleaved weeds that came up among their crops were not appreciated.

These growers should plan on attending the University of Delaware's Farm and Home Field Day August 8 at the Georgetown sub-station. Major emphasis of the event will be tours of crop research plots which include weed control studies on a range of vegetables and field crops. Farmers will be able to observe actual field tests and make their own evaluations of different herbicide applications under various growing conditions.

Other farm and crop-oriented research will also be on display with bus and farm-wagon tours throughout the day. Tours will provide on-the-spot inspection of research projects that deal with new crop varieties, new chemicals, methods of controlling insects, irrigation and new production techniques that insure higher yields and better quality crops.

The yearly farm and home exhibit event will also feature a homemaker's program, agricultural exhibits, a plant diagnostic clinic and a fried chicken dinner. Ed Ralph, director of the sub-station, is co-ordinating the day's activities.

It Seems To Me

Janet Reed
The most expensive clothes in the world can look straight off the bargain rack if they don't fit properly. On the other hand, a moderately priced outfit can look twice what you paid for it. The secret is making sure your clothes fit correctly.
Clothing should look and feel comfortable and natural -- an extension of the wearer. It is easier to test the fit when you buy clothes and have an opportunity to try them on. When you sew, achieving a good fit is more difficult.
To achieve a good fit, you must make use of your sewing knowledge and common sense and you must take a realistic look at your own figure. It will help, too, to enlist the help of a friend who sews.
Pattern sizes generally correspond to sizes in ready-to-wear. But many women find they vary between three or four sizes in ready-to-wear, depending on the style of dress, the amount of stretch in the fabric, the quality of the garment or the manufacturer's size proportions. This is also somewhat true in pattern size.
How do you know what size pattern to choose? Let ready-to-wear be your guide. Next time you shop for ready-to-wear, try on a size smaller, or maybe a size larger, than you normally wear and judge the difference in fit.
Observe the type of fabric used. Knit fabrics have varying amounts of stretch and all knits stretch more than wovens. To compare sizes you must take into account the type of fabric you will use. Will it stretch as much as the fabric in the garment you are trying on?
Observe the styles which fit you well in ready-to-wear. Do you look for styles with an easy fit at the neckline, or ones which allow for extra inches at the waistline? Look for similar styles in patterns. If you look for seam lines which allow easy alterations in ready-to-wear, look for these in the pattern style too.
You can get a good idea of becoming styles and fabrics as you try on ready to wear. The latest style may not do a thing for you. See how it looks in ready-to-wear before spending time to make it.
When choosing pattern size, try to pick a size that gives a good fit through shoulder and neckline. If your waist and hips are larger in proportion, these adjustments are comparatively easy to make. Even bustline measurements are easier than those at neckline and shoulders.

Forget the old rule of buying pattern size by bust measurements. It may not work for the teen-ager or some women, but most mature women find that the pattern will be too large.
Your body build is a better guide, but we have no accurate measurement for this. A large frame, slender woman with square shoulders may find that buying by bust size gives a pattern that is too small. A small boned but fleshy woman will find the pattern too large in neck and shoulders. She might try a size smaller, making necessary adjustments at bust, waist or hip, or she might find that one of the half size styles will give a perfect fit.
Don't overlook the variety of figure types available in patterns. The misses petite patterns fit many shorter, mature figures, and half sizes are available in many attractive styles. Misses patterns are available in greater variety but are designed for the taller, average proportioned figure. Check the measurements for each figure type.
Measurements in the pattern book are body measurements. Designers allow a certain amount of fullness or ease beyond the body measurement for comfort and style. The amount of ease we need or want may vary from that allowed by the designer. Sometimes we can use a smaller pattern if we like clothes to fit the body snugly.
Each person is different, and there is no magic formula for a good fit. If you are not sure of the pattern fit, and are sewing with expensive fabric, make the pattern up first in an inexpensive material. In that way you can test the fit, see if the style is becoming and learn exactly how the pattern goes together before you cut the expensive fabric.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne W. Holberton
Here are a couple of old sayings that certainly apply to these times we are now living in. Do you remember "waste makes want" and how about "a penny saved is a penny earned?" How true these two sayings are and how easily they can be applied to stretching the food dollar.
For example, a small rugger scraper should be used to remove every trace of batter, dough, or sauce from bowls and pans before they are washed. Many times an extra pan cake will come from the scrapings or an extra cup cake from the sides of the mixing bowl. Dry bread, rolls, and cake should be made into crumbs instead of being discarded or allowed to mold. Sliced bread that has dried out can also be made into the most delicious croutons ever. These crisp nuggets add so much to a tossed salad and when bought they add pennies and dimes that need not be spent.
The good outer leaves of cabbage, lettuce, etc. should be saved and combined with spinach or other cooking greens. They make a delightful combination. When making a tossed salad use many types of tender greens, do not confine yourself to just iceberg lettuce.
Fruits and vegetables should be pared as thinly as possible if at all. Too many times the best part of the food is thrown away. When possible bake or boil your potatoes in their skins. With young tender carrots simply scrub to make sure they are clean--don't peel. These are just two examples, there are many more.
Leftover food can be regarded as a clear gain or sheer loss, according to whether your family has learned to accept them

Help Control Mosquitoes By Eliminating Breeding Sites

Have you swatted any mosquitoes lately? It may keep you from being bitten, but you'll get better results if you keep mosquitoes from hatching in the first place.
Controlling breeding sites in Delaware is usually done on a large scale by the Mosquito Control Division of the State Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection. However, even a can filled with water can be a breeding site, and if it's in your yard you'll never be able to get rid of all the mosquitoes by swatting or spraying.
According to Frank Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware, breeding sites such as bird baths, small swimming pools and animal watering tanks should be flushed and refilled with clean water once or twice weekly. Leaves and debris in roof gutters should be removed to prevent water from collecting. Other favorite mosquito breeding grounds are low areas in lawns, drainage ditches and vacant lots or untended areas that are overgrown with grass and weeds.
To control adult mosquitoes indoors, Boys recommends using a commercially available aerosol bomb containing pyrethrin. Resin strips impregnated with DDVP (Vapona) will also control the pesky insects in enclosed areas where there is no great amount of air circulation.

Corner shopping center in Wilmington.
Special feature of the "moo-in" will be an exhibit of calves from the dairy herds of Carl Feucht of Middletown, and Ed Williams of Hockessin. Organizer of the event, Dr. Wilbur R. Hesselstine, extension dairyman at the university, says there will be at least one Jersey and one Holstein calf on display.
Extension home economist, Barbara DeMesse, will also be on hand to explain nutrition facts about dairy products. One of Delaware's former Dairy Princesses will be in attendance, too, to welcome visitors and help explain the exhibits.
The "moo-in" is being held at the request of Prices Corner merchants, who were impressed by the success of the June dairy exhibit in the Castle Mall shopping center in Newark.
The exhibit will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. July 14.

Successful Cooking No Accident
Good food is seldom produced with careless cooking methods. Whether the food is as simple as a scrambled egg or as elaborate as a wedding cake, it requires a well-informed cook who delights in her finished product. Some factors that contribute to success in cooking are: an understanding of cooking terms, tested recipes, measured ingredients and measured heat.
Many difficulties in cooking can be eliminated by a thorough and clear understanding of the processes, says Gwen Colvin, extension home economist at the University of Delaware. Most cook books have definitions for terms commonly used while cooking. It is important to study these because success depends on such little things as having food cut into pieces of proper size, boiling the water hard enough when the food is added, or not boiling the water too hard during the cooking process.

The less experienced cook will save time, materials and embarrassment by using tested recipes and following them step by step. Before cooking, check to see that you have all the ingredients, that you understand the terms and process used, have all necessary equipment, and that the number of servings is suitable. It is wise to learn to master a few basic recipes and variations for them, says Miss Colvin. Once you have tried a recipe, write comments or suggestions that you would like to remember. Collect recipes that have become family favorites.
In grandmother's day, a cup of flour could have meant anything from a demitasse cup to a mug. Modern standard measuring equipment eliminates many failures. You get more accurate measure when using glass or plastic equipment for liquids. Those who rely on their own methods for measuring may or may not be successful. Accuracy and precision account for success.

Temperatures should be measured carefully, too, because they are just as important as measured ingredients. Thermometers are accurate and comparatively inexpensive. They will last long with proper care and will save money by making it possible to produce good results.
Continued cooking failure is an expensive experience in materials, labor and morale, concludes Miss Colvin. With the right equipment, care and know-how you can make the cooking story in your kitchen a success story.

We'll Give it to you!

We don't have to sell our Ideal Instant Iced Tea mix... it sells itself! That's because it's so deliciously refreshing and easy to use. Each package contains everything you need to whip up a cooling summer thirst-quencher in a hurry ... even the lemon and sugar (Sorry, you'll have to supply your own water) And the price is great too ... a package of ten envelopes sells for only 69¢.
