MRS. C. H. BURGESS DIES AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

Mrs. Clementine Elizabeth Walton Nash Burgess, 52, of 230 Delaware Ave., died Friday in Milford Memorial Hospital after a short illness.

Mrs. Burgess was born Nov. 20, 1920, at South Boston, Va., the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Walton, of Pennsboro, W. Va. She received her early schooling at South Boston and was graduated from the West Virginia University. She received teaching fellowships at the University of Missouri in 1948 and the West Virginia University. She was a speech therapist in South Carolina, Florida, Baltimore, Md., and Delaware - serving New Castle, Kent and Sussex Counties. Mrs. Burgess also taught school in West Virginia and Kentucky. She had resided in Delaware for 14 years, the last 11 in Harrington.

She was a member of St. Stephen's Church, Harrington, and its Altar Guild. She was also a member of the American Legion Auxiliary, the Shawnee Country Club, the American Association of University Women, Dover, the International Club of Dover, and Alpha Psi Omega, a national dramatic honor society, West Virginia University.

Her husband, Carrington H. Burgess is the owner and editor of the Harrington Journal. In addition to her husband, she is survived by three brothers, Lief B. Walton Jr. and Leander B. Walton, both of Baltimore, and Harold E. Walton of Akron, Ohio.

Services were Monday at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in charge of the Rev. Joseph E. James. Interment and graveside services were Monday in the Oak Ridge Cemetery, South Boston. The Rev. Franklin Cale, of the First Baptist Church, South Boston, officiated at the graveside service.

State Fair Breaks Attendance Record

The 54th annual Delaware State Fair set an attendance record for loitering and was people.

George C. Simpson, secretary and general manager of the fair, attributed the record turnout to "generally cooler weather".

This year's attendance topped the 141,000 people who came to the fairgrounds in 1972. Simpson pointed out that it rained last year, dropping the gate totals near what they were two years ago.

As is tradition the highest daily attendance came on Tuesday, children's day. Simpson said he conservatively estimated the crowd at 35,000 for that one day.

Over 8,000 children went through the little red barn where they could pet the animals.

Bob Cherrix, 43, Dies After Long Illness

Bob Cherrix, one of the nation's leading harness race drivers, was buried Sunday in funeral services at a family plot near Snow Hill, Md.

The 43-year-old Cherrix died last Thursday at Peninsula General Hospital in Salisbury, Md., following a long illness.

Cherrix was one of the top drivers in the business, taking only 12 years to soar past the million-dollar mark in accumulated purses, and at the end of his sixth year of driving his career total of purse earnings was slightly more than $109,000.

He had over 1,000 victories to his credit and owned and trained horses at his Snow Hill farm and raced them at Brandywine and Rosecroft Raceways and several New York tracks.

His first New York appearance came in 1959 when he won seven of eight races.

Among his accomplishments are a pair of two-minute miles and was considered a good post man who got his position early and then adapted himself to the pattern of the developing race.

In 1964 alone he came from behind to win 92 races, his best season ever, and he was second that season in 124 and third in 89, winning $279,145 in purses.

His biggest single victory came with Lenn Hanover at the Bloomsburg Fair in 1957 and his fastest time was a 1:57 behind Doc Hobbs at Lexington on Oct. 5, 1961.

In the last year Cherrix had undergone six cancer operations and yet drove recently at Brandywine and Rosecroft.

Bob is survived by his wife, Peggy; a son, Robert P. Jr., two daughters, Debora and Patricia; and a brother, Zadok Cherrix III of Harrington.

New Directors Appointed To Milford Hospital

Seven new members were appointed to the Milford Memorial Hospital Board of Directors at the annual corporation meeting held last week, bringing the total Board membership to 33.

Named to three-year terms on the board were Mrs. R. Calvin Clendaniel, Lincoln; William G. Lamden, Georgetown; James C. Eberly, Lewis B. Harrington, John P. Lemmon, Austin C. Lofland, and Mrs. Edward Quinn, all of Milford. David G. Burton, Milford, was elected to fill an unexpired term for two years.

Four members of the current board were re-elected on the 1973-74 slate. They are John E. Burris, Edwin L. Fisher, Raymond W. Masten, and J. Edward Taylor of Harrington.

The following officers were elected to one-year terms: Samuel M.D. Marshall Jr., president; John E. Burris, vice president; Carson R. Ward, treasurer; Mrs. Burton D. Willis, secretary.

Resignations from the Board of Directors were accepted from Nelson M. Hammond, Felton; Fred W. Ireland, Ellendale; and G. Fank Waples, Milford. In appreciation for their past services on the board, totaling 42 years, special recognition was given these individuals by electing them to honorary membership.

Harness Racing Commission Appoints Veterinarians

The Delaware Harness Racing Commission has appointed a husband and wife team as veterinarians at the Brandywine Raceway. The couple, Lorraine E. Smith Parris, DVM, and Reginald G. Parris, DVM, were recommended to the posts by Secretary John E. Babiarz, of the Department of Administrative Services.

Mrs. Parris attended Michigan State University and earned her Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree from Tuskegee Institute Graduate School in 1957. After four years as a Clinician and instructor at Tuskegee Institute she established in 1961 the Belvedere Animal Clinic in Wilmington.

Parris, a graduate of Lincoln University, served four years as a U.S. Army medical technician before entering Tuskegee Institute Graduate School from which he received his degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine in 1960. Parris then worked four years with the U.S. Department of Agriculture before joining his wife in private practice at the Belvedere Animal Clinic.

The Parrises are the parents of two children - a boy 13 and a girl 9.

The Harrington Volunteer Fire Company will sponsor Aug. 11 and 12, at the Delaware State Fairgrounds under the grandstand, the First Del-Mar-Va Arts & Crafts Show.

This show will feature wood carvers, leathercraftsmen, handcarved decoys, handcrafted gemstones and jewelry, colonial candlemaking, glass blowing, decoupage, inlaid wood artists, oil painting, chair caning, spun glass, Indian artifacts, antique toys, lapidary, and many arts and crafts performed by our forefathers and, hopefully through shows such as this, these precious arts and crafts will be passed on to our younger generation and continued for many years.

The following craftsmen will demonstrate, exhibit and sell their artwork throughout the two day show. Locally we are fortunate to have Jehu Camper, handcarved miniature exhibits; Burton T. Smith, antique toys; Franklin Rodgers, hand crafted leatherwork; Alfred Boone, chair caning; Harrington Senior Center, assorted handcrafted knickknacks; Edgar Graef, handcarved decoys; plus a total to date of 50 craftsmen and artists from Eustis, Fla., the bird carvers of Great Britain, Margaret Sewell, Mardela Springs, Md., Mary Leher, Richmond, Va., and many more from western Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey.

This show will be open to the public Sat., Aug. 11 from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m. and Sun., Aug. 12 from 1 p.m. until 8 p.m. Admission will be $1.00 for adults and 50c for children under 12 years of age. The monies received from this show will go to the Harrington Volunteer Fire Company to better supply Harrington and surrounding communities with the most up to date and efficient fire protection and emergency ambulance service available.

Chester Short, president of the Fire Company would like to point out that this should be a large show due to the number of craftsmen and artisans that have responded to display their crafts and arts. Also the Ladies Auxiliary will serve a fried chicken platter with corn on the cob, sliced tomatoes, potato salad, roll and iced tea for $2.25 both days of the show. So, to help us help you, come out and watch the craftsmen and artists make their wares, win one of the many door prizes which are donated by the craftsmen and artists, and enjoy a wonderful chicken dinner prepared by the ladies.

Eagle Scouts May Join National Ass'n

Adults and young men who have earned the Eagle Scout award may now join the National Eagle Scout Association of the Boy Scouts of America in order to continue their service to youth.

Scouts who have been honored by the highest advancement award offered by the national youth organization reaffirm their pledge of service to others through Scouting when they join the National Eagle Scout Association, James Pyle, advancement chairman of the Del-Mar-Va Council, explained.

Registration with the national association is for a period of 10 years, Pyle said, and the service by the Eagle Scouts is on a local basis. The types of activities that the Eagle Scouts carry out may be related to the council advancement program.

Nationally, about 30,000 boys become Eagle Scouts each year from a total membership of 2 million Scouts. In the Del-Mar-Va Council last year, there were 118 Scouts who became Eagle Scouts.

Pyle explained that the National Eagle Scout Association was established by the Boy Scouts of America in May 1972 in order to give an opportunity for all Eagle Scouts regardless of age, race, creed or economic status to retain an association with Scouting.

Brown-Liden Family Reunion

The annual reunion of the Brown-Liden family will be held Sat., Aug. 12, at the Century Club building at 103 Dorman St., Harrington.

Cost Rises On Housing Production

Housing production costs in Delaware continued to rise during the second quarter of 1973 while the volume of new units during the period increased by 2,291—a figure 2.6 per cent above the first quarter volume, it was announced by Robert S. Moyer, State Director of Housing.

He said that costs for on-site construction rose nine per cent over the first quarter, and the average construction cost of the 961 single-family homes authorized by permit in Delaware during April, May and June was $22,899. The construction cost of a single-family dwelling in Delaware, as measured by building permit data, has increased by an average of $5,500 in the past 18 months, he said, with nearly half the increase occurring in the last three months.

Citing data and statistics in the summer 1973 issue of the Quarterly Review published by the Division of Housing in the Department of Community Affairs and Economic Development, and prepared by Housing Specialist John H. Gorlich, Moyer said that on-site construction had dropped slightly in the past three months but sales of mobile homes added to the total volume caused the overall increase in new units. He observed that on-site construction was nonetheless 15 per cent higher than the corresponding quarter of 1972. However, in the final month of the quarter, building permits were issued for only 405 units in the state—the lowest since July a year ago.

Moyer said that second quarter housing statistics bear out what is now a familiar story of higher land prices, a tighter mortgage market, higher prices of homes, the Federal housing moratorium on subsidized units, inflation, higher costs of building materials and higher financing costs.

Meet new Delaware Dairy Princess, Sharon Ann Feucht of Middletown. Sharon will represent state dairy interests for coming year. Sharon was crowned in ceremonies July 25 at the Delaware State Fair.

Delaware Dairy Princess Named

Delaware has a new Dairy Princess. She's Sharon Ann Feucht, an attractive brunette who comes from a Middletown dairy farm. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Feucht Jr., Sharon was crowned July 25 in ceremonies at the Delaware State Fair.

Sharon is a graduate of Middletown High School, where she graduated as class valedictorian. This fall she starts her junior year at the University of Delaware as a home economics major. The new Dairy Princess says she is specializing in two fields—communications and education—with a strong side interest in food nutrition. Career goals? Well, they could be either in the direction of work with the co-operative extension service or public relations with a food company.

Sharon has good background for her role as Delaware's new Dairy Princess. Her former 4-H activities span a 9-year period; and then there's the business of growing up on a busy dairy farm. Asked about special hobbies, she says she likes to cook and sew—especially cook. During the academic year Sharon indulges her interest in music by playing the clarinet in the university's marching and symphonic bands.

As Delaware's Dairy Princess Sharon expects to help out at various state dairy events during the year. She'll represent the dairy industry at such events as the upcoming Farm and Home Field Day at the university's Georgetown substation Aug. 8. And you can expect to find her hosting the coming "Moo-In" in Newark, which will be held Aug. 10. She should also be making some radio and TV appearances.

Runners-up in this year's contest for State Dairy Princess were Miss Kathryn Hrupsa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Hrupsa of Harrington; Miss Charmayne Pierson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Pierson of Clayton; and Miss Virginia Carol Voshell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Voshell, of Middletown.

The state-wide program was sponsored by the Delaware Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA). The event is part of their program to promote dairy products and publicize the dairy industry throughout the state, explains contest chairman, Owain Gruwel.

Judges for this year's competition were Mrs. Nancy Woodward, former Miss Delaware, Middletown; Mrs. Sharon Schatz, a former Dairy Princess; and Bill Dannenhauer, State Supervisor of Agricultural Education, Dover.

Marian A. Day, Greenwood, does creative stitchery.

James Pentiwall, Oxford, Md., makes miniature cannons and cast brass jewelry.

Delaware Camping Market May Be Slowing Down

Growth in the Delaware family camping market may be slowing down. This is the indication of a recent sampling of Delaware families to find out their camping activities, attitudes on the future plans on the subject, according to Dr. Gerald L. Cole, associate professor of agricultural economics at the University of Delaware.

Cole's conclusions are based on results of a recent state-wide telephone sampling of 500 households. By far the largest numbers of families questioned (71 per cent) had no camping experience at all. In fact, only 28.8 per cent of the families interviewed had had some camping experience, with about half of these describing themselves as steady campers.

Results of the survey have been written up as a masters thesis by Lewis E. Gorman, a University of Delaware graduate student in the department of agricultural economics. Gorman says that camping as an outdoor recreation is fairly expensive as practiced by most Delaware families. For this reason, income appears to be a limiting factor. Only one-twentieth of the campers interviewed fell below the 6,000 dollar income bracket.

Cole and Gorman found that there is a trend among active campers towards upgrading their equipment—going from tents to tent campers, to more expensive trailers and motor homes. But this upward trend could be neutralized or countered by an opposite trend toward wilderness camping which requires less equipment. Young people in particular, seem to favor this more rudimentary form of camping in growing numbers. Another study is planned to go into such age group trends in camping.

Purpose of the sampling is to provide the family camping industry with an accurate evaluation of the present camping market. The boom in this industry over the last 10 years makes the market look healthy, but economists have been wondering whether the market might not have begun to reach its limits. The present study is a pilot study for a regional project to evaluate the prospects for future growth.

Cole and Gorman feel that the industry may have been over-optimistic about its prospects for continued growth. They cite growing dissatisfaction with campsites and the whimsical nature of the American market in leisure equipment as reasons to re-evaluate this recreation market.

Dissatisfaction with the present conditions for family camping was the reason given by 13 per cent of the former campers interviewed. Cole and Gorman suggest that the industry will have to make an effort to upgrade facilities, make campgrounds less crowded and keep up family interest by becoming more personalized in the services offered.

The potential market for expansion in the Delaware family camping industry is that percentage of the original non-campers who have now entered the planning stages for camping. Thirteen per cent of those sampled fell within this group. In Delaware 13 per cent of 277,856 non-campers (71 per cent of the total state population) could be a significant new market for the industry, if campground operators can make this form of recreation more appealing.

Greenwood

We have more detailed news of our Cadet Camp through the camp director, Jeanette McCreary. "July 16 at 1 p.m. eighteen of the junior age children boarded the bus for Denton camp for a rewarding week. A great time was had by all who participated in any way. It was both physically and spiritually rewarding.

The day started at 7 a.m. with reveille. We did calisthenics every morning at 7:15 to wake us up and get ready for a busy day. Then breakfast, flag ceremonies, and devotions and classes.

Classes consisted of Bible, nature, crafts, music, and sharing. Some of our less studious young people did not particularly like this part of our day. We continued our day with lunch, sing-spiration (fun music), recreation, supper, band practice and our evening service where several gave their hearts to Christ and still more dedicated themselves to Him.

About nine every evening we had what we called "This-n-That". It consisted of camp fires, pizza parties, films and quizzes. We had a banquet which everyone enjoyed. The food for the whole camp was delicious.

One of our young people, Kelly Taylor, was voted "Best All Around Girl Camper." Ricky Baker came in second for "Best All Around Boy Camper."

We totaled 62 campers with 21 workers. Next year we hope more of our youth and some of our adults can enjoy it with us. Thank you, Lord, for a great week.

Don't forget the Whirly Birds and Jet Cadets are holding their auction tentatively, Aug. 11, on the church grounds. We need baked goods and any articles you can spare. Call 349-4255 or 349-5265.

We will have a Charge-wide Sunday School picnic Saturday afternoon, Aug. 4, at Martinak State Park near Denton, Md. A pavillion will be provided. Fun and games will start at 3 p.m. and a covered-dish supper will begin at 6 p.m. Hamburgers and hot dogs will be provided. A vegetable, salad or cake will round out the menu. At 7 p.m.

a worship service will be held. Guests of the Paul McCreary's Saturday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Redden and daughter, Kay, of Queen Anne, Md.

Carol Cox was an overnight guest of Paulette McCreary this week.

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Paul McCreary were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Kelly of Denton, Md., for a yacht party, boarding the boat at Cuicide Bridge and going over to Cambridge, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Graham were guests at a buffet dinner and garden party given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. Goodley of Venice, Fla., at the home of Mrs. Harriet Jeglum of Rehoboth Beach, Saturday evening.

The Jacob Hatfields were pleasantly surprised with a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Willey and the former's sister, Rhoda, of Akron, Ohio, who were in the area calling on friends and relatives. They had also called on his cousin, Miss Mary Lookerman.

Mrs. Jacob Hatfield spent Wednesday evening with the Albin Otteys. Mrs. Ethel Hubbard was a Monday luncheon guest of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hatfield and Mrs. Ellen Bollinger.

Somber are the shadows! A newspaper man in Chicago wails: "When I married my wife ten years ago, she looked like a siren—now she only sounds like one."

While in Washington last week to attend an important meeting, Gov. Caleb Boggs and his companion, Corp. Walter Nedwick, parked their car in front of a restaurant and went in to dine. On their return, they discovered that the governor's brief case, suitcase, a suit of clothes, as well as his toilet articles, had been stolen—like-wise Corp. Nedwick's suitcase. When Gov. Boggs was a member of Congress, they had ten per centers in Washington—they're one hundred percenters now.

Risk Factor Screening

James D. McGinnis, (D-Dover) President of the Kent County Heart Association reports on results in the Risk Factor Screening Programs conducted at various times and places in Kent County since last February. Results are cumulative and in no way reflect on any individual or group of individuals participating in the program.

Total persons screened - 684; abnormal electrocardiograms - 143; blood pressure above 145/90 - 166; cholesterol level (over recommended limits) - 177; triglyceride level (over recommended limits) - 147; overweight (related to height with a 15 lb. plus or minus tolerance) - 372; phenotype (abnormal lipoprotein) 46 (out of 78).

The Delaware Heart Association is not attempting to draw any specific conclusions. The Risk Factor Screening Programs are a community service of the Delaware Heart Association.

They are conducted in an effort to indicate a predisposition to heart attack and cardiovascular disease in persons who are generally unaware that these conditions exist.

The Delaware Heart Association offers some guidelines to those predisposed to heart attack.

Your blood cholesterol level should not be over 250 mgs %. A man with a blood cholesterol over 240 % has more than three times the risk of a man with a blood cholesterol less than 200 mgs %.

A cigarette smoker has nearly twice the risk of the non-smoker.

An individual with blood pressure greater than 160 has four times the risk of an individual with blood pressure less than 120.

A man in his 50's has four times the risk of attack as a man in his 30's.

If your cholesterol is over 250 mgs %; your blood pressure is over 160; and you smoke one package of cigarettes per day; your risk of having a heart attack is six times greater than normal.

The Delaware Heart Association will continue its screening program and estimates that about 1,000 participants will be screened this year.

Volunteers are needed to assist in the screening. Those interested should contact the Delaware Heart Association at 654-5269 or the Georgetown office, 856-7386.

Bottler Knows Returnables More Economical

Ever wonder why soft drinks cost up to 40 per cent less in returnable bottles than in throw-away containers? An Oregon bottler explains the economics of the situation:

"We've always felt the returnable bottle was more profitable. We have bottles out there that are coming back 15 to 25 times, and they cost us 10 cents each. Conceding five cents refund to the consumer, and based on 15 trips, each bottle costs about a third of a cent per trip. But non-returnables cost us four cents each, and that's lost every time. The same is true for packaging. Normally we get four trips per carton, before it's so battered we're not proud of it or can't use it any more. The returnable cartons cost 10 cents each, or about two and a half cents per trip. Non-returnable cartons cost 10 cents each, and again, that's lost every time it leaves the plant."

MICKEY CHAFFINCH

Mickey Chaffinch Begins Term With Mennonite Missions

Mickey Chaffinch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Drexel Chaffinch of Harrington, has begun a one-year term of Voluntary Service with the Mennonite Board of Missions, Elkhart, Ind. He is a member of the Tressler Church, Greenwood.

Chaffinch is serving the first three months of his term as a member of a boardwalk team ministry which is involved with youth in Ocean City, Md. In September he will begin a nine-month term of service in Canton, Ohio, where he will serve with the YMCA in clubs and recreation. The Canton VS unit plays the role of catalyst in the community, encouraging young people to get involved in activities and programs to meet their own needs. VSers will work at this through the church, the YMCA, schools and the Team Center operated by First Mennonite Church. They will utilize the current organizational structures of the community and will fellowship with First Mennonite Church.

Chaffinch is a 1971 graduate of Lake Forest High School, Felton. He attended University of Delaware, Newark, for two years.

Currently more than 400 youth through senior adults serve in 75 locations in Canada, the United States, Puerto Rico and Jamaica in the Voluntary Service program of the Mennonite Church, offices in Elkhart, Ind., Phoenix, Ariz., and Salunga, Pa.

Burgess, Thompson Top Locals In Track Meet

Second places by Matt Burgess and Eddie Thompson were the top performances by Lake Forest area athletes, in the weekly Olympic Development track meet, at Wilmington's Baynard Stadium.

Burgess, 15, had his best competitive throw ever (109 feet, 1 inch) to get the runnerup spot in the discus. It was his first meet since late May. He competed in the 14-17 group.

"Steady Eddy" ignored a cut foot to record a fine 4.50 to get second in the mile. Ron Mosley also joined the award winners with a 55.7 effort in the 440 yard run, to finish third.

Allen Parker ran the second two-mile race of his career and cut his time from 10.35 to 10.27. When he overcomes the effects of his six-month layoff, he is going to make his presence felt.

Four distance men entered a sprinter's race, the 440 relay and though unplaced were timed in a very creditable 50.1 seconds. These boys were: Mosley, Thompson, Kit Tilghman and Hary Benson.

Southern States was founded meeting will receive a special 50th Anniversary Commemorative booklet.

One of the highlights of the meeting will be the showing of a color movie-entitled "The Seed That Really Grew", commemorating the 50th anniversary of Southern States.

The film is a story of people, facilities and the philosophy that has made the co-operative important to farmer-members in its five-state territory. The movie is documented with scenes from across the territory covering meetings, local retail outlets and their services, manufacturing and warehousing operations and farm scenes.

Presenting the film will be J.L. Pryor of Seaford, a member of the co-operative's regional staff, who will also report on the over-all Southern States operations for the fiscal year ended June 30.

In Virginia in July, 1923 as the Virginia Seed Service. Today it serves over 243,000 farmer-members in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia and Kentucky.

event to benefit the restoration fund of the Parson Thorne Mansion. It is not open to the public on any other occasion.

This elegant house was built by James C. Douglas in 1785, and was restored by Mr. Lundy in 1965. The original entrance woodwork, staircase, and some of the raised panelling were removed in the 1930's and are on display in Winterthur Museum. The frame wing containing the kitchen and dining room is an enlarged reconstruction of the original. The house is furnished with fine American and English antiques including a desk and chair made by Duncan Phyfe. The Chippendale, Queen Anne and Sheraton periods of furniture are well represented, and many Oriental rugs are used throughout the house.

The restoration project currently in progress at the Parson Thorne Mansion is the complete interior of the two story frame rear wing which is the oldest structure still standing in Milford. The exterior was restored in the mid 1960's but no interior work has been done other than plumbing and electricity. All of the 18th century woodwork remains, but the old plaster could not be saved in these rooms. This is a major project and may take the remainder of this year to complete.

If there is heavy rainfall Aug. 11 the party will be postponed until the following Saturday. Light rainfall or showers early in the day will not be sufficient to postpone the event. Since cocktails will be served persons under the age of 20 will not be admitted. Tickets are $2.50 each and may be purchased at the entrance gate. Further information is available from Mrs. Thomas Dyer at 422-9593.

New "trickle" irrigation system being developed at University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation economizes on water by slow, localized watering of plant root system. DuPont Viaflow polyethylene tubing is used in this surface irrigation system.

Researchers in the department of plant science at the University of Delaware measure lateral water spread in new "trickle" irrigation system. System utilizes DuPont Viaflow tubing laid along ground at base of plants.

Trickle Irrigation System On View At U. OF D. Field Day

A new system of surface irrigation of high value commercial vegetable crops will be on view at the University of Delaware's up-coming Farm and Home Field Day Aug. 8 at the Georgetown substation.

The system is designed to use water more efficiently by placing the water in close proximity to the plant root system. Called a "trickle system" by developers in the department of plant science at the university, the system makes use of DuPont Viaflow tubing and a low-capacity pump to deliver water to field crops. Viaflow is a polyethylene product with minute holes only about four microns in size. The tubing has about 50 per cent pore space and is commercially available now.

The tubing is placed along the base of plants and can be set up in such a way that cultivation is still possible between rows, says Dr. William H. Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware. Trickle irrigation operates at very low pressure—only from three to five pounds pressure is needed from a low-capacity pump. In lower Delaware because of the shallow water table, it should be easy for farmers or gardeners to sink a well point in their fields and set up the pump and plastic on the ground. A single valve operates the system. Mitchell sees tremendous advantages to the system because of its simplicity and efficiency. Trickle irrigation requires less than half the amount of water used by conventional overhead irrigation systems. It eliminates the wasteful use of water in irrigation and at the same time makes water readily available during periods of dry weather.

Trickle irrigation is ideal for high value commercial vegetable crops, as well as corn, peppers and melons. It offers many advantages for nurserymen and commercial vegetable growers as well as home gardeners, says Mitchell. Demonstration plots at the Georgetown substation that can be seen on Field Day show the use of trickle irrigation with peppers and corn.

Chinese Farmers Begin Visit To U.S.

Thirty-two young farmers from the Republic of China recently began a 20-month visit to the United States. Two of them will be spending most of that time working on a dairy farm near Lewes.

Kiang Cheng-Wei and Chang Yung-Yun will be living and working on the Homer Bryan farm for the next 17 months. They are taking part in an agricultural training program sponsored by the National 4-H Foundation on behalf of the co-operative extension service and in co-operation with the Joint Commission on Rural Reconstruction in Taiwan.

The visiting farmers spent their first week in the U.S. attending orientation sessions in Washington, D.C. Then they went to dairy farms in several states on the East Coast where they will learn practical job skills. They also will have an opportunity to participate in community and family life in the United States and develop greater skill in the English language. At the end of the work experience the trainees will receive three months of academic training at a U.S. college.

The Republic of China Agricultural Training Program is the third such program to be carried out by the National 4-H Foundation. The first was established in co-operation with the Japanese Agricultural Training Council in 1966 and has resulted in the training of more than 1100 young men. In 1972 a training program was initiated for young Korean farmers, 80 of whom are now in training in midwestern states.

Wages paid these young trainees enable them to meet the costs of international transportation, arrival orientation, classroom and in-service training and general living expenses while in the United States.

Scab is transmitted through infected seed and by air-blown and soil-borne spores of the fungus that originated in crop residue. Spores are very light and can be blown for a considerable distance to start new infections.

The same fungus can infect rye, barley and corn. Hot water treatment will kill the fungus within the seed. Seed should also be treated with a fungicide before planting, to kill external spores and protect the seed against spores in the soil. Seed should be cleaned thoroughly to remove any infected seed. And crop refuse should be plowed under well.

All these steps will help in controlling the disease, says Carroll. Even so, control is extremely difficult during any season with the kind of weather conditions that have prevailed this year during critical growth stages of the crop.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne W. Holberton

How much food do you buy in a year—in a month—pay for carry home-cook and serve—and clean up after? According to the USDA 1,450 pounds of food per year is bought for each individual. So if you have four members in your family you have bought 5,800 pounds. Almost three tons of food! That's big business and it certainly can account for some of the backaches we all have. Three tons is a whale of a lot of food!

This August we may be buying a little less since prices will remain high and all information about future food prices point to even higher prices. Meat prices will remain much as they are with increases seen for pork. The light supplies of feed for livestock could lead to some liquidation of cattle herds or hogs. Typically, fall runs of cattle and hogs begin in August with marketings increasing through the late summer and fall. However, the total supply of livestock seems to be smaller than expected so if relief comes it will be "short lived" and higher prices will be the usual.

August is an important month for the receipts of fish and shellfish. Those that should be in better supply during the month are bluefish, butterfish, porgies, sea bass, striped bass, sea trout and whiting. The shellfish that are in good supply are shrimp, hard and soft clams and southern scallops.

What about broiler-fryers? Nationally, production is down from last year, but in our area, the Delmarva producing area, broiler output is up. This will help keep prices from skyrocketing, but prices will remain in the 50c and higher bracket. Remember, the feed prices again have made it very expensive to raise these tender versatile birds. As a result of the feed shortage there are a number of producers going out of business in many producing areas. Egg prices are up again and of course they are effected by feed costs also. Producers are culling laying hens more closely and reducing output.

Local and near by harvest of fruits and vegetables have brought lower prices to some items. This is the bright spot in the future cost picture. Don't get hopeful that prices will match the low prices of two and three years ago. Those days are gone. Farmers and producers have to make a decent living also and as wages go up so will food prices. Among the fruits and vegetables to look for are blueberries, peaches, cantaloupes, apples, pears, grapes, plums, lettuce, beets, squash, cabbage, corn, carrots, tomatoes and snap beans.

Dry beans are one of the more economical sources of protein and they are in good supply. Pinto and navy (pea) beans are the most abundant.

You may have heard this already but in case you haven't, the Plentiful Food program of the USDA has been discontinued. This program was designed to alert all consumers and quantity food buyers to foods that were abundant and reasonable in price.

Enjoy Ice Cream More With Proper Storage

We are at the top of the ice cream eating season, so what could be more interesting to talk about than this refreshing food. It is still America's favorite dessert. And it is one of the most nutritious dessert products known.

Ice cream is made with milk concentrates and sweeteners, plus small amounts of emulsifiers and stabilizers, explains Dr. W.R. Hesselstine, extension dairyman at the University of Delaware. The emulsifiers and stabilizers minimize noticeable ice cream crystals and prevent a wet appearance in the dessert. The milk proteins, vitamins and minerals in milk solids make ice cream very nutritious. Milk fat gives it smoothness and richness, while supplying vitamins A, D, E and K. And the sweeteners make ice cream very appealing to the taste.

There are many brands of high quality ice cream, says Hesselstine. In fact he finds very few which are not tops in quality. Perhaps the housewife and eventual consumer do more to injure quality in ice cream than anyone else, through improper storage.

Among the most injurious things which can happen to ice cream is heat shock. When ice cream is allowed to partially melt, ice crystals form when it is refrozen. It then has a "sandy" or "silvery" texture. This texture is not harmful. But it is objectionable.

Hesselstine has some suggestions for preventing heat shock in ice cream. First of all, buy ice cream just as you leave the store. Get it into an insulated container right away. Go directly home and put it in the freezer. And when serving this dessert, put the unused portion back into the freezer right away. The other big problem in ice cream storage is an oxidized flavor from the leftover portion which is put back in the freezer for later use. The exposed surface of this unused part simply oxidizes. It has an unpleasant metallic taste when this happens.

You can do several things to prevent oxidation from occurring. Buy smaller quantities—more units—and eat all the container at one sitting. Or if you expect to serve only part of a package, scoop the ice cream out from one end of the carton, thus leaving as little exposed surface as possible. Place plastic wrap or foil over this exposed surface to minimize oxidation. This will also prevent absorption of refrigerator odors.

Why not try these storage tips and get even more pleasure out of this nutritious dessert.

TOWN AND COUNTRY TOPICS

DAVE WOODWARD
ASSISTANT KENT COUNTY AGENT

Ground hogs are just what they are—ground hogs! Many homeowners, gardeners, and farmers face the problem of controlling ground hogs in their yards, gardens and cropland. In spite of less waste land and leech cover, the old ground hog seems to survive very well and their number seems to increase.

It's quite frustrating for a homeowner to have one of these animals destroy his vegetables, and it's quite exasperating for a ground hog to eat up a half acre of soybeans, especially at today's prices. For the sportsman, they are fair game and it's quite enjoyable to hunt them. However, there is always a risk when hunters are afoot with high powered rifles during the summer months. This is because most livestock and people are outside during this time of year.

Methods of controlling, we might suggest, are the use of gas cartridges which can be purchased from your farm supply store. They can be put into the holes and the gas exterminates the ground hog. This would be the most reasonable and less expensive method of control. Trapping is another method of control, but many times not successful, and the risk of catching a pet or another animal is quite possible.

Another method would be the use of automobile exhaust fumes piped down into the burrow. Quite often this is not practical because of the location of the burrow. Flooding the ground hog out with large amounts of water can be tried if other attempts fail.

The control of ground hogs is also desirable because of the possible threat of broken legs of animals, or broken wheels, or upset vehicles because of the burrows and mounded soil.

At this time of year, be sure to check your dog regularly for wood ticks. These ticks crawl up on blades of grass and bushes and wait for victims to come by. They attach themselves to dogs, humans, and other animals. They are not selective.

On dogs, they are often found around the neck, between the toes, between the legs, and in and around his ears. In removing the tick, use forceps with a steady pull. Do not yank or jerk them out because the tick's mouth parts will be left in the skin and will cause infection. Children should also be checked for ticks after being in the wooded areas. Ticks are often found around the ears and hairline of the children. The greatest danger of ticks is they may be carriers of Rocky Mountain Fever.

To control ticks and fleas on your dog, a regular treatment of Sevin rubbed into the hair coat will do a good thorough inexpensive job. If your cat has fleas and/or ticks, you may also dust with Sevin, but do not apply to young kittens.

How would you like to face these odds—4,000 to 3? If your sporting instincts draw back in the face of such odds, you might be interested to know that 5 per cent of the U.S. population runs these risks willingly each year in producing food and fiber to meet the needs of the other 95 per cent.

I heard one farmer say he could get better odds by going to Las Vegas and could gamble in cool air-conditioning without plowing!

According to scientists, these are the kinds of odds a farmer faces just from weeds alone when he plants a crop. Take soybeans, for example. At normal planting populations, it is estimated that three soybean seeds could be battling as many as four thousand weed seeds for the same nutrients and moisture.

Weeds are the most expensive pests faced by farmers. In a recent year they cost the farmers over five billion dollars in terms of yields, crop quality, and control steps. Chemical herbicides, crop rotation and narrow row planting practices are some of the methods currently being used to combat weeds in soybeans. Scientists are looking at new possibilities, like micro wave and lasers, for more effective and less expensive weed control.

It Seems To Me

Janet Reed

Do you remember how important it used to be to have a new outfit on the first day of school? When we feel we look our best it gives us a little more self-confidence when we step into a new situation. Ideas of how to look our best may change, but that new outfit on the first day of school can bolster self-confidence.

School clothing will be more expensive this fall so here are some ideas to help cut down on costs.

What is bought is more important than how much is bought. A few basic garments that can be worn in different ways will give variety. A few new separates can be teamed with wearable items from last year. A new purchase now and then will keep the basic wardrobe interesting and changing.

Buy no more clothes than is needed at one time. A growing child may need frequent replacements if the clothes are to fit well.

It's not usually a good idea to buy clothes too big for the child, expecting him to grow into them. Clothes that are too big look awkward and clumsy and may catch on things. By the time the child has grown into them, clothes will be faded and worn out or out of style. If the child's size is changing rapidly you may want to look for features that adapt easily to growth, such as: undefined waistline on dresses; raglan or kimono sleeves in coats or jackets; deep-cut armholes for set-in sleeves; long tails on shirts and blouses; no tight cuffs of bands; two-piece garments; stretch or knit fabrics; deep hems or cuffs; pleats, gathers or tucks that can be let out; elastic at waistline; wide seams; adjustable straps.

It's important for most young school children to feel they are not dressed too differently from their schoolmates. However, buying the latest fad can be expensive. Fads are more expensive to begin with and have a short fashion life. Try to help the child select a more basic style which can be worn longer.

Pay attention to the care labels and follow them exactly so clothing will wear longer. And teach the child to hang up clothing and respect his clothing. It's easier to develop good clothing care habits than it is to break old habits. Children learn by example so set a good example of clothing care.

And if you don't already sew for the youngsters, learn how to make their clothes. The high cost of ready-to-wear is largely the labor cost, so if you furnish the labor you can save money.

Buying An Air Conditioner

Three cost factors are involved in buying an air conditioner—operating efficiency, correct cooling output and price. Too often we consider only the third factor, price, says Coral Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware. But efficiency of operation can offset short-term price savings with long-term lower operating costs.

The Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers (AHAM) has compiled a directory with information on energy efficiency ratios for nearly 3,000 room air conditioners sold under 55 different brand names. These directories are available from any retail appliance outlet, says Miss Morris. They can be of help in choosing an air conditioner.

The energy efficiency ratio (SSR) of an air conditioner is computed by dividing the British thermal units or BTUs per hour of cooling by the watts of power used. A unit of the same size that gives the most cooling per watt will cost you less to operate than one using more power for the same amount of cooling. For example, a 6,000 BTU unit with an energy efficiency ratio of 7.9 uses energy

Blossom-End Rot Hits Tomatoes And Peppers

Hot, dry weather has promoted some serious growing problems in Delaware tomato plantings. Home gardeners may already have noticed symptoms of blossom-end rot on their tomatoes, says Dr. Robert B. Carroll, extension plant pathologist at the University of Delaware.

The condition first appears as a small water-soaked area at or near the bottom (blossom-end) of the fruit. The rot spreads rapidly. As it advances the in-fectured area become dry, sunken, leathery looking and finally turns dark brown or black. Spots of blossom-end rot vary in size, but they may cover over half the fruit.

Blossom-end rot can also develop in peppers, says Carroll. In peppers, the affected area becomes light colored and forms a paper-like texture.

This problem develops during hot, dry weather. To control blossom-end rot in tomato and pepper plants, water frequently during dry periods. This helps maintain even soil moisture for the plants and promotes steady growth. Carroll also advises gardeners to cultivate plants shallowly and apply fertilizer where necessary. Be sure plants have sufficient phosphorus and calcium, but don't put on too much nitrogen and potassium.

Catface may also affect some tomatoes. Gardeners can recognize fruit affected by this problem because it is extremely malformed and scarred on the bottom. Hot, dry weather or the use of certain herbicides—such as 2,4-D—too close to the plants are possible causes.

There is a special formula for calculating the BTUs on the basis of this information. Your air conditioner salesman should be able to help you with the calculations, says Miss Morris.

more efficiently than a 6,000 BTU unit with an energy efficiency ratio of only 6.5.

You also need to know how many BTUs per hour of cooling a room will require, before choosing an air conditioner. Factors determining the BTUs include: size and insulation of walls, floor and ceiling of the room; the number and size of windows in the room; shade or sun exposure; family size; and heat-producing equipment in the room.

Store High-Moisture Corn For Livestock

Livestock producers should consider storing high-moisture corn for feed this year because of the limited fuel supply for drying, according to Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware. High-moisture corn used for livestock feed can be stored in air-tight silos or treated with chemical preservatives such as combinations of propionic and acetic acids.

Chemically treated high-moisture grain can be stored in any existing farm storage as long as the grain is protected from the weather. It can also be stored outside under plastic. However, since the acids are corrosive, metal and concrete storage bins should be lined with plastic or coated with coal tar epoxy.

Thorough, accurate coverage of the grain with the acid preservative is necessary. Specially designed mechanical applicators are available for rent or purchase. They will treat up to 1200 bushels per hour.

Cost of the acid treatment varies with the moisture content of the grain and the length of storage time, but in most cases cost should be comparable to drying.

Also, livestock feeding trials have shown better feed efficiency for high-moisture corn than for dried corn. However, acid-treated corn can only be used for livestock feed.
