

BIRDS AND PETS MEET WITH 6-INCH SNOW

Birds and pets did not find to their liking a 6-inch snow here Friday.

Dogs fared better than cats which had trouble navigating the heaviest snow here in several years. It was jump, jump, jump.

Birds experienced difficulty in finding food, and ravishly devoured the almost forgotten bread and cakes from the freezer.

Weather was cold, getting down to 8 and 10 degrees early Sunday morning.

Motorists encountered slippery roads, falls were not too infrequent on ice-covered sidewalks, and school children went home at noon Friday here.

Legion commander resigns

William W. Craig, State Commander of the American Legion, has submitted a letter of resignation to the Department Executive Committee under date of Feb. 1, 1974.

Commander Craig was involved in an automobile accident during his term as Vice Commander and as a result he suffered many serious injuries which are permanent in nature.

The desire to continue to work for The American Legion however, prompted him to remain in office and later assume the high office of Department Commander.

Upon assuming the top job in the department, Commander Craig admitted he did so with a certain amount of reservation concerning his physical condition and his ability to properly perform the myriad duties involved.

The resigning commander stated in his letter of resignation that the first half of his year as State Commander had its toll on his physical condition and although he suffered no additional debilitating effect, the stress has been considerably greater than he had anticipated, and thus, for the good of the Legion and to protect his own physical condition from further deterioration, he considered it proper that he resign.

Under Commander Craig's leadership the Department of Delaware had met all membership targets, had promulgated all Legion programs, and has maintained its prominence in the State and with the National Organization.

Department Vice Commander Edward S. Phillips of Millsboro, has been appointed to serve as acting commander for the remainder of the unexpired term of office.

Past Commander Craig expressed his regrets that he could not complete his term of commander and he thanks all of those Legionnaires who assisted him with the programs during his term of office.

Wedding Policy Change

Due to the paper shortage, The Harrington Journal will publish wedding announcements in an abbreviated form.

Announcements will no longer include descriptions of the gowns worn by the bride, her attendants and the mothers of the bride and groom.

If a photograph is to accompany the announcement, it should be a 5x7 black and white print of good quality.

Wedding photographs and information should be submitted either prior to the wedding or no later than two weeks afterwards.

For announcement announcements, a wallet-size black and white photograph is preferred.

Oliver Johnson Reed, 49, died in Milford Memorial Hospital Sunday after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage at his home Saturday.

E.A. Rutledge was elected president of the Ninth District Democratic Club.

Four Republicans were appointed Friday-two in each county-to departments of election in Kent and Sussex. Those appointed by Gov. Carvel were as follows: Kent-Edward West of Hartly and George P. Tatman of Harrington. Sussex-George W. Mitchell of Clarksville and Robert P. Hopkins of Bridgeville.

A Georgetown contractor was low bidder Tuesday for construction of an addition to the Harrington field house. John L. Biggs and Co., submitted a low bid of $33,500 for the construction of a stage to the building.

Mrs. Edna Fleischer, of Farmington, reported seeing five robins Wednesday morning. Mrs. Ralph Bower, of Greenwood, also reported seeing robins Wednesday. She added many woodpeckers and bluejays were on her Bohemia Farms eating pecans and English walnuts.

Carrington H. Burgess returned last week from Veterans Hospital where he had a mole removed from his arm.

Billy Walls, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Walls, who has been home-bound since the first part of December with a broken leg, has returned to school.

Avoiding the "brown bag blues"

The "flu bug" usually takes the blame when severe headaches, stomach upsets, cramps and fever occur simultaneously—but food poisoning is often the real culprit, says Anne Holberton, extension marketing specialist at the University of Delaware.

Food poisoning, which results from careless handling and preparation of food, occurs much more often than people realize. In particular, Miss Holberton stresses the importance of taking precautions when packing lunches for family members to carry to school or to work. To avoid the "brown bag blues"—another name for food poisoning associated with packed lunches—she has several suggestions for homemakers.

First of all, cleanliness is of special importance. All utensils and countertops should be scrupulously clean. They should always be scrubbed with soap or detergent and hot water after contact with raw food, especially raw meat. This also includes your hands, which can spread bacteria as readily as a contaminated knife or cutting board. Don't prepare lunches if you have cuts or sores on your hands. If you must do so, wear clean rubber or plastic gloves.

Try to select foods that have a lower susceptibility to Salmonella and other bacteria. Canned meat and poultry products are good choices, as are dry meats and fully cooked products such as bologna and frankfurters. Fresh meat and poultry products can also be used safely as long as they are thoroughly cooked, have not been stored too long, and are not permitted to remain at room temperature more than about two hours.

Miss Holberton suggests freezing certain types of sandwiches, and packing them in the frozen state. They will have time to thaw, but not spoil, before lunch. Cold foods such as milk, cottage cheese, yogurt or pudding can be kept cold in vacuum containers. Pre-chilling the container in the refrigerator will help the food retain the cold.

Just as the cold foods should be kept as cold as possible, hot foods should be kept hot to avoid spoilage. With thermostats at lower settings during brisk winter weather, hot soups, stews and chili will be especially welcome in the lunches you pack at home. Bring them to a boil first, and keep them piping hot in a sterile vacuum bottle. Foods can be eaten right out of the vacuum container, using a long-handled spoon if necessary. Rinsing the containers after use will make them easier to wash later.

Fresh fruit is always a nourishing and delicious addition to

RECP plans outlined to state officials

Development of the 1974 Rural Environmental Conservation Program (RECP) in Delaware will get underway immediately, according to officials of the state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS). Delaware ASCS officials have just returned from Washington, D.C. where they met with top officials to learn details of this new conservation cost-sharing program.

Attending the Washington meeting from Delaware were ASCS state committee chairman Richard H. Lester of St. Georges, William H. Brady, state executive director, and Carlton K. Ridall, program specialist, representing the state ASCS office in Newark. Other officials from Federal and state agencies attending the two-day session were Otis Fincher, state conservationist, SCS, and Samuel Mace, state forester.

At the meeting they were told it's essential each state develop an RECP that "will strengthen conservation and environmental protection measures on American farms, and encourage the development, management and protection of non-industrial private forest lands." Discussion leader for the conference was Ray Hunter, director of the ASCS Environmental Quality and Land Use Division.

In outlining the goals of RECP Hunter told the state officials, "The goals are to improve the quality of life, for all people, by improving the environment, providing the maximum public benefit with the funds available, and by conserving the land and related natural resources. This is to assure a continuing ability to produce food and fiber necessary for the maintenance of a strong, healthy people and economy, while providing for wildlife, and other environmental enhancement."

According to William H. Brady, Delaware ASCS Executive Director, "RECP incorporates features from the old Rural Environmental Assistance Program (REAP), in addition to the new, expanded scope of the 1974 RECP. This year's program includes cost-sharing through annual or long-term agreements, and an extra emphasis on tree planting for timber production, called forestry incentives. Details of these programs will be made available to landowners by county personnel in the very near future," he said.

The program is administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service through its farmer-elected committee system. The Soil Conservation Service (SCS), Forest Service (FS) and the State

$2 Million Expansion for Penn-Dol Development

A $2 million expansion of Penn-Dol Development should soon get under way.

A spokesman for Nardo Rosetti Enterprises, Inc., of Wilmington, told The Harrington Journal Monday the contract had been signed to purchase the development for the expansion from Penn-Dol Development, of which Dr. Donald Schumar is president, of Baltimore.

The spokesman explained Rosetti Enterprises would begin 90 townhouses on or before April 1 at a cost of approximately $2 million.

The buildings would have these added features: covered entrances, patios, and all-aluminum maintenance-free exteriors.

The Penn-Dol Development has 10 townhouses on the tract, most of which have been sold or are in the process of being sold.

The spokesman for the Wilmington firm said it would soon begin construction of 96 apartment units in the rear of Dover Downs Racetrack, Dover.

Cook endorses election reform

Mrs. Nancy Cook, Democratic candidate for Senator in the 16th Senatorial District, today endorsed election reform legislation. Mrs. Cook said, "The Watergate hearings have convinced me that we must restore the people's faith in the elective process. As it is now, a few very rich men can control elections by pouring huge sums of money into campaigns. Once the election is over they expect to receive a reward in special favors, tax breaks, or legislation favoring them. We must break the millionaire's dominance of elections in this country."

She continued, "I favor legislation which will require all campaign expenditures to be disclosed and will limit contributions to $100 per person. Delaware is one of only ten states in the United States which does not have some form of campaign disclosure law."

Mrs. Cook further stated that she has not received any substantial contributions from any single source but has relied on small contributions from many interested persons. She added, "Perhaps that is why we are spending less than one-half as much on radio and newspaper advertising as the Republicans are."

Mrs. Cook is seeking the seat in the Delaware General Assembly which became vacant upon the death of her husband, Allen J. Cook. Her opponent is Republican Calvin Boggs. The election is Fri., Feb. 15.

Futures market to hold Workshop

Good marketing practices can often make the difference between a profit or loss for farmers. But many farmers don't understand all of the marketing alternatives open to them.

Delaware farmers should ask themselves these questions:

1. Are you usually satisfied with the price you receive from your crops and livestock?
 2. Can you afford to produce crops or livestock without knowing the price you will get in advance?
 3. Do you have a marketing strategy?
 4. Do you know how to hedge your corn, soybeans or livestock in the futures market?
- If the answer to any of these questions is "no," you may want to sign up for the Futures Market Workshop being sponsored by the Delaware co-operative extension service. The workshop will be held at the Holiday Inn, Dover, Feb. 18, 19 and 20.

Contractual arrangements and futures trading in agricultural commodities have been available to farmers for many years. In general, however, farmers have not used them.

According to Roger Ginder, extension crops marketing specialist at the University of Delaware, hedging agricultural commodities can be a powerful marketing tool if used properly. But, it requires training and understanding. He says the workshop is designed to help producers determine why, how, when and where to use contracts and/or futures in their farming operations.

Drs. John Ikard and T. Everett Nichols, professors of agricultural marketing at North Carolina State University, will present the three-day program. They have presented this course to numerous groups throughout North Carolina.

To defray the cost of the workshop, a $25 registration fee will be charged. Farmers should contact a county extension office in Newark, Dover or Georgetown for registration material.

All schools of the Lake Forest School District will be closed tomorrow and Monday. The closing tomorrow results from a State Board ruling that schools shall be closed on this date to conserve fuel, and Monday is a midwinter holiday.

Junior broiler contest planned

Feb. 15 is the entry deadline for the 29th annual Delaware Junior Broiler Program. FFA and 4-H members can get additional information from their vocational agriculture advisors or 4-H agents.

The program is sponsored by the Delaware Poultry Improvement Association and the co-operative extension service at the University of Delaware. It is designed to give the participants experience in practical broiler production.

The poultry-rearing project will actually begin March 15 when contestants pick up their chicks at the University of Delaware Georgetown station. Each will receive 50 chicks, all of the same breed and hatched in the same incubator.

The contestants will feed and care for the birds to maturity. At the end of the contest, they will select seven broilers from their flocks for competition. After a commercial processor has dressed the birds, they will be displayed and judged.

Contestants may be from 9 to 19 years old as of Jan. 1, 1974. Twenty awards will be given, ranging from a first place trophy and prize of $25 to ten $5 prizes.

Contestants will also have an opportunity to enter their birds in two special classes at the Delaware State Fair. One will be for live pullet roasters and one for cockerels, using birds grown during the program.

When Everything's Green

People always ask me how old I am and I smile kindly and say I'll be sixteen when everything's green - When everything's green and warm. You see I came when the flowers did & the lilac filled the air. I'll be sixteen when everything's green - when everything's green & warm. By Ella Foulkrod

Think spring--a time for planting trees

A beautiful landscape doesn't just happen. It requires careful planning and maintenance on the part of the homeowner. If you've just moved into a new house and would like to plant and care for the trees yourself, you need to know about the wide variety of trees you have to choose from.

Shade trees, ideally, should be sturdy, long-living species, says Robert Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware. Usually you want them to grow relatively fast and to produce the size and shape desired.

Shade trees can be divided into two groups—deciduous and evergreen. Evergreens hold their leaves for one or more years. Deciduous trees produce new leaves every spring.

When choosing deciduous shade trees, here are some things to consider.

First of all there is the question of size and shape. One 35 feet tall at maturity is best on the average city lot with a one-story house. A tree that grows to 50 or 100 feet high would be much too tall for such a small lot and house.

It's also important to select a tree suited to Delaware growing conditions. You can be pretty sure when you buy a tree locally

Drug abuse seminar

Drug treatment, law enforcement, rehabilitation and education leaders from throughout Delaware will attend a four-day seminar next week to develop community-based alternatives to the State's drug abuse problem.

The seminar, which will begin Monday evening and run through Thursday, will be held at the Ramada Inn on U.S. 13 near New Castle. Invitations have been extended to 65 persons representing a cross-section of the State's criminal justice system, educational institutions and drug prevention and treatment programs.

Governor Sherman W. Tribbitt will keynote the seminar at a dinner session Monday night. The seminar is being co-ordinated by the Division of Drug Abuse Control and is part of a nationwide effort to involve local leaders in the planning and development of community-based alternative approaches to drug abuse prevention and treatment.

According to William B. Merrill, director of the Division of Drug Abuse Control, this seminar comes at a time when drug abuse has shifted from the use of only a few drugs to polydrug abuse from all age groups.

"We need to assess our programs and see what changes we must make to better serve drug abusers," Merrill says, "and we believe community-based programs will be the most successful."

He continues, "One of the goals of this seminar, therefore, will be to show that there are acceptable alternatives to arrest and incarceration for drug abusers and that community based programs can best provide these alternatives."

The Division also hopes to create an awareness that both the criminal justice system and the community benefit from the referral of some individuals to counseling and treatment, and that the mechanism to implement alternative programs must be planned and developed jointly by the criminal justice system and the community.

A major product of the seminar, Merrill says, will be the development of comprehensive written plans detailing the necessary elements to implement alternatives to drug abuse, alternatives within criminal justice and alternatives to criminal justice.

Program models such as Wilmington's Treatment Alternatives to Street Crime (TASC) will be analyzed as well as other programs offering drug abusers alternatives to incarceration.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

Old red depot brooding there Remote in the sunset glow Perhaps the march of time has dimmed The glamour of long ago.

But paved roads, motor-cars and such And travel through the sky's arched ways Can never bedim the glory of The good old railroad days.

The awarding of the photo of 1951 was the awarding of service buttons during a safety meeting by Superintendent Tom Goodfellow to 25 and 40-year employees.

Matmen scare Sussex Central, Beat Milford

Lake Forest's wrestlers made one of the best showings ever, by a team from this district, against Sussex Central and their ultra-successful coach, Herman Bastianelli.

The locals have never beaten Bastianelli, but this time, managed to win six matches and draw one, in twelve weight classes.

Unfortunately, three of the Knight's victories were pins and this enabled them to prevail 27-22 and hold off the Spartans' challenge for a third-place finish.

Tom Ware started off the Spartans victory skin in the third test of the evening. Rodney Wyatt added a superior decision, 14-2, which is worth four points instead of three.

Chris Mertz upset undefeated Zakrocemski 13-4 and Chris Adamo nipped H. Swain 2-1.

Sussex Central was in trouble but rallied to win. Lake Forest narrowly missed getting a draw with the Knights when George Davis' gallant effort, at 169 pounds, failed.

Spartans edged by Milford, Sussex Central

Almost amazing turn of events continues to plague Coach Jim Blades and his Lake Forest Spartans. Game after game the locals extend higher-rated opponents and lose out in the waning seconds by a point or two, or a bucket or two.

The word is out around the Henlopen Conference. "Forget Lake Forest's won-loss record. Don't sell them short or you may get burned."

After forcing once-beaten Seaford into overtime, the Spartans dropped cliff-hangers to Milford 48-45 and Sussex Central 66-64. Remember that four players were lost to the team, for one reason or another.

Bob Jacobs, a former Milford Buccaneer, now in Lake Forest livery, undoubtedly made many of the Milford supporters wish they still had his services.

Harrington Bowling League News

Leah S. Wheeler McKnatt Funeral Home was the only team to come out of their contest with a clean slate as they crushed Robbin's Hardware. The Gareys, Bob and Don, provided much of the power for McKnatt's as Bob smashed the pins for a superb 246 game and 530 series, with brother Don coming through with a great 241 game and 569 set.

Robert Dennis rolled a fine 202 game and 557 series, with Buck Thompson adding a good 203 game for Brothers Five. Junior Bishop scattered the pins for a great 231 game and Bob Wilson lead all bowlers with a superb 594 series, which included a 210 game with Leroy Betts adding a fine effort as the T & M Rejects took three points from the Spoilers.

As the last third starts, there are six teams tied for second place and a subsequent number tied for third, with Taylor & Messick leading the second place list, mainly because of the real fine bowling by Kenny P. Outten, who collected a fine 213 game and 523 series and the fine output by George Langford, which enabled the team to collect three points from Quillen's Market.

in with a real fine above average effort as did Mike and Bill Kohel. Frank Collins rolled a good effort for People's. Junior Bishop scattered the pins for a great 231 game and Bob Wilson lead all bowlers with a superb 594 series, which included a 210 game with Leroy Betts adding a fine effort as the T & M Rejects took three points from the Spoilers.

Fry's American took three points from Brothers Five with a great 567 series, with Leroy Wheeler collecting a 557 set and John Forbes rolling a good 200 game and Kreg Jester added a good effort as the team put together a fine team effort with all bowlers bowling real well.

in fine form as they took three points from Jerrell Fuel on Gary and Paul Baker's and Donald Butler's fine above average efforts. The fuelers' Dallas Hayman added a fine 536 series effort which enabled the team to collect one point.

THINK SPRING

that it will be cold hardy. But it is just as important that it will do well in the heavy clay soil and relatively poor drainage conditions that exist in many parts of Delaware.

The tree you choose should also be resistant to the diseases and insects that are common to this area. And there are also environmental considerations, points out Stevens - such factors as susceptibility to air pollution, or the adaptability of the tree to city streets with their curbs and sidewalks.

Trees such as Siberian elm, poplar, red maple and mimosa produce abundant fruits, seeds, and seedlings that can become a nuisance in lawns and gardens. Trees such as Black Locust sprout from the roots and can interfere with lawn mowing.

It's difficult to find a species with "no fault." But if you balance the pros against the cons, you can easily decide on what you'd like to have.

Spring is considered one of the best times to plant trees in this area. This means as early as the ground can be dug-up until late April. So now is a good time to start investigating tree possibilities. For a helpful listing of "Recommended Trees and Shrubs for Delaware," write Mail Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark 19711.

BROWN BAG

packed lunches. However, Miss Holberton warns that it too can be contaminated with bacteria, as well as with residues of pesticides. Scrub fruit with soap and water - merely rinsing will not remove the contamination. Even fruits such as bananas and oranges should be thoroughly washed, since the skins come in contact with the hands. Grapes should be dipped repeatedly in suds, then rinsed in clear water.

Almost everyone likes hard-cooked eggs. They taste good, add important protein, and are easy to pack. But don't peel them first, advises Miss Holberton. The shell protects the egg from contamination, and should not be removed until lunch time.

Finally, give some thought to the brown bags themselves. They should be as clean as the food; therefore, buy bags for the purpose instead of re-using bags that have previously contained groceries or some other items. Miss Holberton advises homemakers to consider using lunch boxes instead. They hold the cold much better than paper bags, especially if they are insulated. And they are easily kept clean.

Forestry Agency will provide technical assistance, planning and policy recommendations. The Extension Service (ES) will provide educational support.

Edward H. Hanson, Director of USDA's Office of Field Operations, discussed the Department's new "one-stop service" concept now being developed for farmers and other rural residents. This new concept is aimed at combining, under one roof, the services of four USDA agencies - ASCS, Farmers Home

It Seems To Me

There is nothing more exasperating to the seamstress than a fabric which puckers as she sews. The puckering problem is likely to be prevalent as soft sheer fabrics appear on the fashion scene. They are notorious for their tendency to pucker as you stitch on the machine.

Puckering is most likely to occur on fabrics with relatively little "give," such as firm, closely-woven materials or soft woven sheers and on woven fabrics with special finishes, such as permanent press. Puckering is more likely to happen when stitching on the lengthwise grain of fabric rather crosswise or on the bias.

If one or both of the thread tensions of the sewing machine are too tight, stitching on any fabric can be puckered. The choice of thread and how you handle fabric as it is sewn will also make a difference.

The size of thread and needle should be selected in relation to the fabric. A sheer fabric requires a fine thread and a small needle. Polyester or polyester core thread has elasticity and strength. Use very light machine tensions, however, and hold the fabric taut as it feeds through the machine.

If you have been conditioned to avoid touching the machine tensions, you may need to take yourself firmly in hand and learn to loosen that tension. You may be able to control the puckering by loosening only the upper tension, but if loosening both tensions is necessary follow the advice in the instruction book of your machine. The lower tension cannot be changed in some machines.

You may need to make a choice between an unbalanced stitch and seam pucker. If the machine stitch doesn't look perfect, you wouldn't want to use it for top stitching, but top stitching would probably be a poor choice anyway for a fabric that is likely to pucker.

Stitch with a long stitch -- about 8 to 10 stitches per inch. A ball point needle may give better results. Modern fabrics dull machine needles quickly, and needles may need frequent replacement. Always test stitch a piece of the fabric you expect to use. Stitch and set it aside for a while to see if the thread relaxes and puckers.

Try to sew at a moderate and even speed. Change of speed and rapid stitching are more apt to cause skipped stitches and puckering.

The needle hole should be small. Use the straight stitch throat plate instead of the all-purpose zig-zag plate if your machine has both. Even a small piece of gummed tape over the needle hole will be a help.

As a last resort you may have to sew over tissue paper, but try to avoid that nuisance.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne W. Holberton

Macaroni is an "easy" food. It's easy on the eye because of its 120 interesting shapes, easy on the tummy because of its digestibility. It is easy to combine with more expensive foods because of its wheaty, milk flavor and it's easy on the budget since it is relatively low cost. The only thing difficult about macaroni is its untraceable history.

As far as the rest of the world is concerned every country lays claim to this food. However, here in the United States it is a bit easier to trace macaroni's history. The reason for that is Thomas Jefferson was such a tidy bookkeeper. He kept records in detail involving Monticello gardening and food preparation. He dabbled in every unusual food that could be grown or manufactured, including Tattuga lettuce, artichokes, English mulberries and nasturtiums. His orchards, besides the usual apple and cherry trees, also offered harvests of almonds, olives and greengage plums.

In 1785 Jefferson went to Europe to serve as our minister to France. When he returned home from this tour of duty he brought with him a French cook who could create magnificent dishes with macaroni. But, with no machines to make macaroni there was a problem, so, in 1789 Jefferson purchased a machine and had Mr. Short learn just how it was manufactured. By this time Jefferson was elected President and macaroni was featured frequently on White House menus.

Macaroni or pasta is the general term used to refer to all spaghetti, noodles and macaroni. When buying these items look for the term "enriched." It means that the product is a valuable source of B vitamins and iron. If you purchase products labeled durum wheat (semolina) this is your guarantee of the highest quality available. Durum is a high protein wheat and semolina is a word used to describe the granule into which durum wheat is milled.

Most macaroni products double in size when cooked, so use a large, deep kettle, and at least four cups of water that has been slightly salted. The big pot or kettle is needed to keep the macaroni from sticking, also to help prevent this add a tablespoon of salad oil to the cooking water.

When the water is boiling briskly, gradually add the macaroni so the boiling doesn't stop. Cook uncovered stirring only occasionally. Cook only until tender. Test for doneness by tasting.

Drain cooked pasta at once in a colander or strainer. Do not rinse. If needed, add a little more salad oil to keep from sticking together.

How long can you store macaroni? Uncooked pasta should be stored at room temperature in a cool, dry place in a covered container to keep out dust and moisture. It will keep in this manner up to one year; noodles will keep up to six months.

Macaroni is best when cooked just before serving, but if it must be cooked ahead of time toss drained macaroni with a small amount of oil and refrigerate in covered container. To re-heat put in boiling water just long enough to heat through. When cooked macaroni is stored in a sauce, it loses texture and it softens. If macaroni is to be used in a casserole that will be cooked further then shorten the cooking time slightly.

Alternatives in marketing soybeans

Farmers have a number of alternatives in marketing their soybean crop. But a sound marketing strategy starts with clear marketing goals, according to Roger Ginder, extension specialist in agricultural economics and marketing at the University of Delaware.

Speaking at the 8th annual Delmarva soybean meeting in Salisbury, Md., Ginder explained that a farmer's marketing goals will vary greatly from one operation to another, depending on his desire for profit, his aversion to risk, his level of borrowing, his alternatives for using his time, land and capital, and a host of other factors.

The important thing is to ask yourself the question, "What do I really want to achieve in marketing this crop?" Once you've decided that, you can choose the marketing strategy of combination of strategies that best meet your goals, the specialist told his audience.

Some farmers want to look into a price that will cover production costs and leave a certain level of profit above costs. Others want to get the maximum price offered on the market for their entire crop. Another goal is to generate enough cash with part of a crop to meet interest and principal payments and get the highest price for the rest of it. Some people may want to sell their crop with the least amount of risk possible.

The alternatives open for marketing soybeans fall into two main categories: forward pricing; and selling in the cash market.

Selling in the cash market at harvest or after harvest are the simplest forms of marketing, Ginder explained. You know just how many beans you have and you can sell to any dealer.

But prices are often lower at harvest than they were at planting, and you never know ahead of time just what price you'll be able to get on the cash market. If you store harvested beans before selling, them, you also add storage and handling to your production costs. And there's a chance you may not be able to sell your crop for enough to cover these extra costs.

Many farmers prefer forward pricing to cash marketing. Forward pricing means selling some portion of your crop for delivery at some future date for a price agreed on at the time of sale. This option is unique in that it can be taken at any time -- even before the crop is planted.

If you choose to forward price your crop, it can be done in one of two ways. You can make a cash contract with a local dealer. Or you can sell a contract for future delivery on the Chicago Board of Trade -- this is called "hedging." Cash contracting is the more traditional tool in forward pricing soybeans, said the marketing specialist. He advises farmers who use this marketing method to put any contract in writing, to be sure it spells out the amount and quality of beans to be delivered, the place of delivery and the time of delivery, and to make sure they understand the terms of the contract before they sign.

The futures market is a very complicated way to forward price soybeans. It requires dealing through a commodity broker, dealing in units of 5,000 bushels or more, and either making an off-setting transaction in the futures market during the delivery month or shipping the beans to Chicago.

The specialist said the system is a practical alternative for larger farmers. But he warned that unless you have a sound understanding of the way it works, the use of the futures market to forwarding price your crop is not advisable.

One danger in either forward price system is over-contracting your crop, Ginder concluded. "Limit your contracts to an amount you are likely to be able to deliver. And in the event you wish to contract a large portion of your crop, consider taking out insurance to reduce the risks of crop loss."

Homemaker attends NEHC seminar

A Georgetown homemaker, Mrs. Norris Givens, recently participated in a national highway traffic safety seminar in Washington, D.C. The three-day event was sponsored by the National Extension Homemaker Council (NEHC). Mrs. Givens attended as Delaware representative. She is president of the state council of H.E.C. Extension Clubs.

Purpose of the seminar was discussion of traffic court handling of DWI (Driving While Intoxicated) offenders.

In 1973 NEHC launched its program, Operation DIRE (Driver Improvement, Rehabilitation and Education), which is aimed at improved relations between the average citizen and the nation's traffic courts. This meeting marked the beginning of the second phase of its educational campaign.

Speakers at the seminar included the director of the Office of Alcohol Countermeasures of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, as well as two nationally known judges.
