Natural childbirth program to continue at Milford Memorial

A program of "Education and Preparation for Childbirth" begun last year at Milford Memorial Hospital is being continued on a going basis. Due to the increasing popularity of the classes they will be conducted throughout the year, with the exception of July and August.

The course is designed to prepare both parents for natural childbirth and both are required to register. Instructor, Mrs. Sue M. Hatfield, R.N., stresses the importance of the participation of the expectant mother and father as a "team," with the husband filling the role of "coach" to provide encouragement and a climate of relaxation and assurance, not only during the labor and delivery but during the various stages of pregnancy. The sixth month of pregnancy is recommended as the proper time to begin classes. Mrs. Hatfield, who has been associated with Milford Memorial Hospital for 20 years is a graduate of the Hospital for Women of Maryland, now a part of the Baltimore Medical Center. During her affiliation with Milford Memorial Hospital she has also taught prenatal, postnatal, and baby care classes in other Delaware communities. Group training is concerned with the expectant parents' understanding of the physiological and psychological processes involved in pregnancy, labor and delivery.

Parents who have attended earlier classes have reported great joy in their joint involvement at the birth of their child. The mother's knowledge of muscle toning, conditioning exercises and proper breathing made possible by her conscious participation in achieving delivery of her baby with the added fulfillment of having her husband by her side.

Classes, limited to eight couples, are conducted in series of eight weeks each.

A new series is scheduled to begin Wed., March 13, ending May 1. May 8 another series will start and continue through June 26. Classes will be discontinued during July and August but will resume in September.

Interested couples may secure further information by contacting either the hospital (422-7511, Ext. 430) or Mrs. Sue M. Hatfield, R.N., at 422-5622.

Lake Forest exchange student journeys to South Africa

Friday, the 18th of January 1974, Valery Blackman, the pretty and bright representative of Lake Forest's American Field Service program, said goodbye to her parents and grandfather in New York after an orientation program at the Commodore Hotel, and prepared for her journey to South Africa. There were other Exchange Students from forty-one different towns and cities in the United States, all but two of them going to various cities in South Africa. . . . the two going to Rhodesia. One other girl was going to Port Elizabeth, Valery's new "home town", and a young man from Chicago was to be in the same school as Valery would be attending.

Valery's family has received a very interesting letter from Val and has graciously shared it with us and gave permission for it to be published to give our readers a glimpse of an exciting adventure as seen through the eyes of a lovely Lake Forest Junior. How we miss her!

"Dear Family. . . (Jan. 19, 1974) We are taking off from Ilha Do Sal. It is too dark to appreciate what I'm sure is a beautiful island. It is off the coast of Mauritania in the Atlantic. By our time it is 3 a.m. It will be 8 1/2 hours more until we arrive in Johannesburg. Already we've traveled for 8 hours. The airport was small and empty. It looked like something from a Humphrey Bogart movie. Fans hanging from the ceiling, polished wooden chairs and tables, and slow black people serving tea and coffee. (In African, tee and koffee.)

Yesterday we had the best time in New York! They sent us out in groups. Our group was

American Host Program

Harrington area families are needed to entertain English-speaking European teachers as guests in their homes for a one or two-week period this summer, it was announced by the American Host Program.

According to J. Stuart Perkins, board chairman of the Host Program, who is president of Volkswagen of America, American Host is one of the few non-governmental programs designed to show the American way-of-life to foreign teachers by pairing them with American families.

Now in its twelfth year, American Host has opened doors to better understanding for more than 5,000 European teachers who have passed on their new understanding of America to their students, colleagues and friends.

Perkins said that being a "Host Family" is open to anyone who has the desire to increase understanding and friendship between Americans and Europeans. Host Families are required to provide a private room, meals for their guest, the opportunity to meet their friends, neighbors and perhaps fellow teachers and to see some of the points of interest in the area.

American Host arranges all transportation. Host Families are asked to meet their guests upon arrival in their area. Teachers and Host Families have an opportunity to correspond for at least a month before meeting.

Arrangements for participating as a Host Family can be made by writing to: The American Host Program, Hotel Commodore, Suite 2100, New York, N.Y. 10017, or call (212) 683-6567.

THE CITY FARMER

It's nigh twenty years come spring,
Since I left the city
Brought the wife and daughter too;
Jes' eighteen years old and pretty.

Liked the city in a way
But always had a yearning
To get out on the farm again
And see the soil up-turnin.

Can't get used to city ways
Where everything is a flurry
And neighbors never stop to chat;
They're always in a hurry.

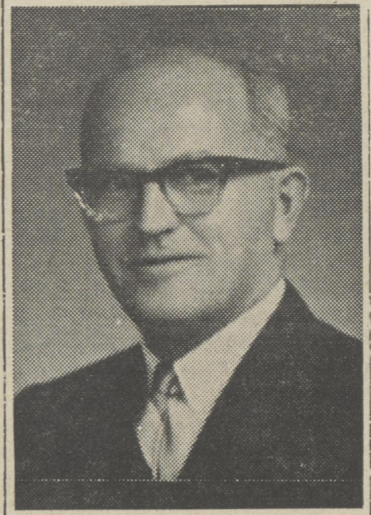

I like to be in overalls,
Tired at close of day,
To hear again the thrash-machine
And smell the new-mown hay.

The city might be fine for city folks,
With all its noise and goll darn her
But I'm glad to be back home again
To be a plain dirt farmer.

sent to Spanish Harlem. We were given a map, took a subway, and hit Harlem. It sure was Harlem but not Spanish. We did eventually find Spanish Harlem. The thing that impressed me most was the way people bet in the streets. Two men used cards, the third used thimbles and a pea. It was quite easy to guess the right one (with the cards you had to keep your eye on the queen and with the thimbles watch the one with the pea under it.) In our group we guessed the right one every time. A lot of shops were open air. We stopped in a Spanish Deli - everyone got something different and shared it.

Jan. 20 . . . It is 9 p.m. South African time - 3 p.m. New York time I am spending the night in Johannesburg. About one hour outside the city. It is a farm. They have peach orchards - about 50 acres; it is peach season now. They have a swimming pool, tennis courts and 2 guest houses. When we landed in Johannesburg it looked like every house had a pool. All the buildings have thatched roofs on this farm. Don't get the idea that they are huts because they are carpeted and made of stone! At dinner we asked for milk so they gave us fresh milk - (Continued on Page 4)

Ernest E. Killen Heads State Democrats

Ernest E. Killen

Ernest E. Killen, of Harrington, was elected unanimously Friday night to head the state Democratic Party amid charges a change in party rules would make him a puppet of the party's state executive committee.

The personal choice of Gov. Sherman W. Tribbitt, Killen Saturday was already laying plans to switch the location of party headquarters, to hold at least some of the executive committee meetings in Dover instead of Wilmington.

The rules change, pushed by rural New Castle County Chairman Edward F. Peterson, authorizes the executive committee to direct rather than assist the party chairman.

Friday night Henry Topel, former state chairman, was elected vice chairman. Maurice Williams, Wilmington city treasurer, was re-elected treasurer.

Killen is chairman of the Kent County Democratic Committee. Already, many names have been advanced for the post, including those of William Chambers, of Canterbury, Skip Pikus, of Milford, Mrs. Joanne Sleights, of Dover. Benjamin Hughes, of Harrington, chairman of the 5th election district of the 35th Representative District, vowed he was not a candidate for the post.

Chambers was campaign manager for Mrs. Nancy Cook in her successful battle for senator from the 16th Senatorial District in a special election Feb. 15 to fill the term of her husband, Allen J. Cook, who died Jan. 9.

Incidentally, Herman Cabbage Brown, Harrington native, is chairman of the state Republican Committee.

THE LITTLE SQUIRE (OF HARRINGTON)

By J. Harvey Burgess
 (Published in 1942)

There was another little boy—
 I never "knew him when"—
 I've known him since he took his place
 Within the sphere of men.
 Director in some big concerns,
 I'd say perhaps a score,
 And he himself employs about
 A hundred folks or more.
 If that was all he ever done,
 I'd never write a line
 About this boy, for I ain't one
 To up and take a shine
 To any man upon this earth
 Because he seems to know
 Just how to rake the dollars in
 And make a pile of dough.
 But that ain't all; no, sir, it ain't;
 He don't tell, but I've found
 A lot of things about this boy
 By sort of "nosin" round:
 He didn't go to college, but
 A lot of folks I know,
 A lot of boys and girls, have gone
 Because he helped them go.
 Financed a playground so the kids
 Could have a place to play;
 Paid bills at hospitals for folks
 Who can't afford to pay.
 Through him and through his specialists
 The weary blind may see;
 Through him the lame and halt may walk,
 But here the tragedy—
 Or blessing—who can say or tell—
 Himself, he cannot walk
 Without the aid of crutch; I can't
 Pretend to sit and talk
 About the ways of Providence,
 Of why, or where, or when—
 But just observin', when God gives
 A handicap to men,
 It ain't a handicap at all;
 It's just a testing phase—
 God makes it up, a heap sight more
 In lots of other ways.
 And when his mother long ago
 Each day would start her trek
 And tote this little boy to school
 'Way out at Muddy Neck,
 She didn't know as she trudged on
 Love's labor day by day,
 How rich, how fine the dividends
 That little boy would pay!
 She didn't know in later years
 The lowly and distressed
 Through him, her son, for what she'd done
 Would rise and called her blessed!
 Yes, when she carried him to school
 With strength that faith invokes—
 She didn't carry him ALONE—
 She carried OTHER folks!

 Mertz had to face two former state champions, at 138 pounds. Chris forced Rankin of Tower Hill into overtime, before losing, then later dropped a decision to Bucksworth of Tatnall. In between these matches he outpointed Dixon of Smyrna, to ensure a fourth-place finish.

 WOW! I can't begin to describe the country. The Bartu walk around in their native dress. Not plain clothes but like peasant dresses, long, full and colorful. There were also Indians. So many of the black people walk around balancing loads on their heads - it is amazing. The countryside is very green.
 Jan. 21 Monday... On our way to Port Elizabeth we took a short flight that was supposed to stop at Bloemfontein, East London, then Port Elizabeth. We landed safely in Bloemfontein but on our take-off a bird flew into the engine; the pilot stopped short and all the tires burst! The airport had only one spare tire—ended up spending the night in a hotel in Bloemfontein. It was supposed to be a 2-hour trip.

Carry your medical records when you travel

The Delaware Safety Council is launching its 1974 program with the theme: "Carry Your Medical Records When You Travel."

The latest safety program urges all licensed drivers in the State of Delaware to carry their personal medical history with them at all times.

According to Francis J. Jamison, manager of the Delaware Safety Council, the program will hopefully save thousands of lives on the highways and in the emergency medical rooms.

To kick off the year-long campaign, Jamison showed Governor Sherman W. Tribbitt that one way of achieving success in the program is the use of an on-person medical record card-called the "Stat-Pack." Complete medical records on a long sheet of paper compressed within the airtight and watertight Stat-Pack case can be immediately available to attending physicians in the event of an accident or emergency.

"The time has arrived for the traveling public to question the wisdom of leaving life-saving medical information lying idle in some doctor's filing cabinets," Governor Tribbitt said.

The Governor will be the first person to carry Stat-Pack, befitting Delaware's reputation as "The First State" of the Union. "I think it is an excellent idea for licensed drivers to have their medical records with them at all times," Governor Tribbitt said. "And the Stat-Pack is a fine means of doing this."

"The Stat-Pack is about the size of a credit card and can be conveniently carried in wallet or purse," Jamison explained as he demonstrated one to the Governor.

"For use in an emergency, it is just snapped open to reveal a medical history drawn up by a doctor, relating to a person's immunizations, allergies, past illnesses, present medical conditions and blood analysis charts," he said.

The Safety Council's year-long campaign to make the public aware of the need for carrying on-person medical records will include specific objectives like providing Stat-Packs to all firemen, policemen and emergency medical personnel.

In addition to reaching persons in government, business and industry, the Safety Council hopes to solicit the support of automobile clubs, health organizations, labor unions, doctors, and hospitals for use of Stat-Packs or other similar means to solve the problem of the crisis-related need for unavailable medical records.

"Fifty million patients were treated in the nation's emergency rooms last year alone," Jamison added. "It is critical that the patient information relayed to the doctors in our nation's emergency care facilities be both accurate and comprehensive."

Delaware's far-sighted Safety Council has a good track record in recognizing the need for many safety methods. In the past, the Safety Council has pioneered both driver training programs and vehicle inspection programs.

What happened to your lawn--last year?

The time to analyze what you did wrong last year is now--the months before spring planting season begins. A poor lawn is frequently caused by diseases. Many homeowners fail to recognize these, diseases, according to Dr. Robert Carroll, extension plant pathologist at the University of Delaware. Diseases are often confused with insect damage or other problems.

To have a healthy, vigorously growing lawn you must select grasses adapted to the soil, climatic and light conditions under which they will be grown. Then spend the necessary time, effort and money to care for the lawn. In addition to disease control, lawn care includes proper fertilizing, watering, mowing and insect and weed control.

Brown patch is one of the most common lawn disease problems in Delaware, says Carroll. The fungus responsible for brown patch attacks practically all species of grasses, but it is most serious on bentgrasses, fescues, Kentucky blue grass and rye-grass. Brown patch occurs during warm, wet weather-but disappears when the weather becomes cool or dry. If it's serious, however, it kills the grass.

For control of brown patch you should avoid excessive applications of nitrogen fertilizer. Water lawns early in the day to dry grass leaves time to dry out before night. Remove clippings if they are excessive. This disease can be controlled if the lawn is watered 48 hours before treatment with a good lawn fungicide and if this is repeated three times at approximately weekly intervals.

Dollar spot, sometimes referred to as "small brown patch," is another common disease found in Delaware lawns. It occurs on many species of grasses and is especially destructive on bentgrasses. In contrast to brown patch, this disease develops during cool, wet weather. In Delaware, the fungus is most active in May and June and again during September and October. Damage from dollar spot is usually greatest where there is a deficiency of nitrogen. The disease can be controlled by use of a good lawn fungicide which should be applied during the early stages of a disease attack.

Other common lawn problems include mushrooms and fairy rings. They vary in size, shape and habit of growth. They usually develop from buried organic matter such as pieces of logs, scrap construction lumber, or tree stumps. They're usually harmless to grasses--they are unsightly.

Mushrooms and fairy rings develop after prolonged wet weather in the spring and fall and usually disappear as the soil dries out. You can get rid of them by getting rid of the buried wood-dig it up. If this is not practical, it may help to drench the soil in and around the affected area with a captan solution. Fairy rings are seldom found in lawns that are adequately fertilized and treated with a fungicide to control other diseases, Carroll says.

Planning ahead now for disease control can be the answer to a better lawn this year.

More information about the description and control of these diseases can be obtained from the U.S. Department of Agriculture revised booklet "Lawn Diseases" (Home and Garden Bulletin No. 61) which is available from Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 for 35c.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne W. Holberton

Researchers are continuing to produce new food products and these new products are in a constant state of evaluation to see if they meet the requirements of the constantly changing consumer need. Because processed foods are in great demand by today's consumer, agricultural scientists are continually working to develop foods which are quick and easy to use.

Developing these new products is only part of the story. Today there's another big side-will the consumer accept these new products with higher price tags for consumers? Then too, can the companies afford the advertising and production it takes to create consumer awareness of the new items? Can the new product compete for retailers limited shelf space? And, after considering all these questions will industry really be interested in putting the product on the market?

Here are a few of these new items. What do you think, will they reach your pantry shelf?

Instant orange crystals and orange juice tablets (O.J. Tabs). The crystals are made by dehydrating concentrated orange juice. They contain about 97 per cent natural citrus solids and have no sugar added. The reconstituted instant orange juice tastes like regular orange juice and has all its nutritive benefits. It has the advantage of not needing refrigeration.

Instant orange crystals have been used by the military and were especially packaged for the astronauts. They will soon be available to the general public.

O.J. Tabs are made by compressing instant orange juice powder into tablets. The tablets do not have to be refrigerated or reconstituted, and they are eaten like candy. Eight have about the same food value as one orange.

Osmovac fruits are sugar dried fruit slices that have a crisp, honeycomb-like texture. An osmotic process draws 60 to 70 per cent of the moisture out of the fruit, which has been placed in heavily concentrated sugar syrup or in dry sugar. The fruit is then dried in air or vacuum.

These dried fruit, which include bananas, apples, peaches, and strawberries can be eaten with cereal or as snacks. They can also be used in baked goods, deserts and salads.

Instant dry whole milk dissolves easily in cold water and the great thing about it is that it has the flavor of fresh whole milk. In dry form, it may be stored at least six months in the home refrigerator. Its estimated cost is about 10 per cent lower than fresh whole milk. The dairy industry is interested in manufacturing this product and it is likely that consumers will be able to buy it at some future date.

Air-dried mushrooms is a new product similar in flavor to freeze-dried mushrooms but at about one-half the cost. The air-drying process developed by agricultural research yields an excellent product which can be stored in humectically sealed packages for at least seven months.

These are just a few of the new foods already developed.

List available of vegetable varieties

Delaware home gardeners have a choice of growing many types of vegetables, ranging from common ones as corn and carrots to more unusual types like collards, chard and leeks. A list of vegetable varieties well adapted to Delaware growing conditions is now available from the Delaware co-operative extension service.

Included on the list are two fairly new varieties of sweet corn which are outstanding in several ways. Silver Queen is a white sweet corn which produces high quality ears. Buttersweet is a yellow corn variety which matures and produces two good ears per stock.

In order to obtain seed for new varieties, it is generally necessary to order from seed catalogues.

Copies of "1974 Vegetables for Delaware Home Gardens" are available in county extension offices.

It Seems To Me

Janet Reed

The idea of using separates to extend the wardrobe has been around for a long time, but it appears to be stronger than ever this year. It's a good way to stretch the clothing budget, for a few well-chosen items can be combined into several different outfits. The addition of a new garment or two can also update wardrobe leftovers from last year.

It is tempting to buy separates on impulse and end up with a number of items that don't look quite right together. Manufacturers make it easy for us by promoting lines of color-coordinated separates, but it's more fun to make your own mix-and-match combinations.

Successful combinations require planning. Start with a patterned or plaid item, such as plaid pants. Pick one of the colors of the plaid for a top in a solid color. Then select a solid jacket in a second color. You can add a skirt to match the jacket, or a plaid skirt, plus a shirt in one of the plaid colors, and you have a basic wardrobe to take you anywhere.

One of the newer ideas in combining separates is to combine two patterned fabrics such as a plaid and a print. There is a fine line between success and failure when you try this.

When using different patterned fabrics, tie them together by repeating the same color in both garments. Contrasting a bold pattern with a small pattern is more interesting than wearing two designs of a similar scale. A contrast of light and dark is more attractive than two colors of about the same value.

Accessories can also tie separates together. The use of scarves, jewelry and shoes can complete the unified look you should achieve when using separates.

If you aren't sure of your skill in combining separate parts of the costume, use the separates made by manufacturers for this purpose. But train your eye to other possibilities. It's a lot more fun when you try your own successful combinations.

Leasing farmland in 1974

It looks like another good crop year is ahead for Delaware farmers. Corn continues to command strong prices and soybean prices have dipped only slightly from record levels of 1973.

With most grain crops bringing down record prices, processors are being forced to offer better contracts for vegetables and low value crops such as hay and pasture are rapidly disappearing.

Farmers anxious to grow an extra 100 acres of crops are bidding against each other for land to rent. Under these conditions, it is easy to bid away anticipated profits in high land rent, according to W.T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware.

He said growers should be sure they are doing the very best job with the land they already have before setting out to farm an additional 100 acres. "Don't be tempted to farm land that is so marginal that returns are disappointing. Remember, big profit is in the extra bushels you produce per acre above the average yield for the state. This year, those who rent land must take into consideration, when bidding for land to rent, the much higher production costs they will experience."

If you do rent farmland, be sure you cover all conditions of the rental in writing before the crop is planted. A firm contract now can prevent serious arguments or substantial losses later.

There are various types of lease forms available, and McAllister stresses that it's always a good idea to bring lease agreements up-to-date.

Most farmers and landlords prefer to lease or rent farmland for cash. The landowner knows exactly what he will receive for the use of his land and the farmer knows exactly what it will cost. Today, it isn't uncommon for good farmland to rent for $25-$35 per acre.

Some owners may still prefer to rent their land on a share-crop basis. Not too long ago, share leases provided for the landowner to receive one-quarter, one-third or even one-half of the crop for rent. McAllister says this isn't practical today.

If a share-crop lease is used, the farmer and landowner should work out an exact percentage on the distribution of shares. It probably won't be exactly one-third or one-half; it may be 30 or 40 percent. A few percentage points on a 150 or 200 acre corn or soybean crop can mean a few hundred dollars at current market prices.

Holstein project

Delaware members of 4-H and FFA who are interested in raising cattle can learn more about it by participating in the state's fifth annual Holstein heifer project.

The program, sponsored by the Delaware Holstein-Friesian Association, assists and encourages 4-H and FFA members in raising Holstein heifers for a profit. The project is designed to develop knowledge and ability in successfully raising dairy animals and to help the participants make money and gain experience with an investment.

Holstein calves for the project will be purchased from local breeders in Harrington some time in August. The calves, which will be priced by the Holstein Association, will be numbered and participants will draw lots for their calf.

Contestants will raise and show their calves for two years. Then the animals are to be sold at the annual state Holstein sale at the Delaware State Fair.

The Holstein Association will appoint a member-breeder to help oversee the raising and development of the calf. This breeder must visit and talk with the buyer within a week of purchase and then every three months until the sale date.

The Delaware co-operative extension service or a vocational agriculture teacher will also visit each participant regularly and help get additional professional assistance as needed.

A one-hour educational meeting on calf-raising methods for the participants and their parents will also be presented.

Parents and buyers agree to provide adequate quarters for the calf, follow approved feeding and breeding practices, vaccinate as recommended, report monthly on the animal's progress and the investment. These data will be used in evaluating future programs and in assisting others in making decisions about the project.

Each heifer should be bred to calve shortly after the final sale. This will normally bring the highest possible price for the animal and increase the owner's profit.

For more information about the Holstein heifer project, contact Dr. W.R. Hesselting at the University of Delaware, a county 4-H agent or vocational agriculture instructor.
