City council eyes tax ditch And peck ave. betterment

The City Council Monday night studied a tax ditch, improvement of Peck Avenue and a proposed development for the department of Housing and Urban Development north of the city.

Fred Mott, U.S. soil conservationist, informed the Council the Brown's Branch tax ditch would cost approximately $30,000 to go under the following city-owned streets: Benjamin Street and Second and Harrington Avenues. Of this amount, the city would have to pay half. The state would pay the ditch under state-maintained streets.

The tax ditch plan was inaugurated during the term of Mayor Fulton J. Downing. It was to start west of Harrington, go east on the northern limits to Harrington Manor and thence to Brown's Branch.

Recently, it was presumed the work would not involve the city ditches, but Mott's appearance Monday night revealed the project had reverted to its original status.

Work has been progressing rapidly on the main prong of Brown's Branch from Cemetery Ditch.

Peck Avenue

Bids will be prepared for improvement of Peck Avenue from Meadowbrook Acres to East Street. The decision was made after Dan Nardo and Angelo Rossetti, of Nardo-Rossetti Enterprises told the Council they wanted to grade and stone the unfinished street at once. Other improvements would include a sidewalk and curb on the south side of the avenue.

The improvements would need 10 days to get equipment on the project, with two weeks for the work.

Nardo-Rossetti has purchased the Penn-Dol Development and will build 90 more townhouses.

HUD development

Representatives of HUD and Leon Weiner Associates appeared for "a strictly informal type" of encounter. For a year and a half HUD has been planning a low-income housing development of 50 houses and a community center northwest of town.

HUD is looking for project to be started in 8 or 10 months. The enterprise is one of four scheduled for Kent County but, it was explained all had to be ready for construction before work on any one could be started.

Weiner would then build the projects which would then be turned over to the state Housing Authority.

Federal authorities want to compare costs of an on-site sewer and water system against an off-site situation. Acceptance of the latter would mean HUD would use city facilities and pay for the extension which would cost more than $100,000.

In other business, the Council acted as follows:

Voted to accept the county tax assessment for this year.

Learned from City Manager Jack Harrington, federal revenue sharing would be $61,066, for period July 1, 1974 to January 30, 1975, beginning July 1, an increase of $6189 over this year.

Appeal night, on tax assessment would be held from 7 to 9 p.m., Mon., March 25, at City Hall.

Accepted Kent County building code for Harrington.

Voted to pay Edward H. Richards Associates, the city's consulting engineers, a retaining fee of $200 per quarter of a year.

Approved flood insurance, an item deemed necessary by law for financing for buildings.

Turned over to Terry & Terry, the city's solicitors, an agreement from CATV Harrington which called for a small building for electronics at a tower to be erected at the sewage disposal plant.

KENT ELECTION BOARD TO MOVE

The Kent County Department of Elections plans to move out of its dilapidated offices next to the County Courthouse into new $1,000-a-month rented quarters by May 1.

The State Budget Commission Friday approved spending $2,605 out of Gov. Sherman W. Tribbitt's contingency fund to finance the move.

According to State Elections Commissioner Lewis C. Wrightson, the department will be moved into the old Speakman Building on U.S. 13 across from the Capital Shopping Center in Dover.

The contingency approval covers the rent for May and June and $605 for moving and other expenses.

"We just ran out of patience with that old building," Wrightson said of the white clapboard house on S. State Street which the department has used since it was converted to office space several years ago.

"The front and back steps are falling through and when the rain gutters fell off recently, we'd had it," he added.

"Anyway the county wants to tear it down and good riddance," he said.

The converted house will probably be demolished to make room for eventual expansion of the Kent County courthouse, which it adjoins.

The proposed fiscal 1975 budget does not include funds for the $12,000-a-year rent for the Speakman building, but Wrightson said he has assurances the money will be provided.

The new quarters has both office and warehouse space.

"We can store the voting machines in the back and keep them maintained better, instead of renting space like we do now," Wrightson said.

Motorcycle safety

By Rhonda Lee Messick

The following are safety tips on riding a motorcycle:

1. Keep a distance when following a vehicle. Allow at least 50 feet at a speed of 20 miles per hour.

2. Stay alert! Be prepared for sudden stops of traffic approaching from left at intersections and vehicles pulling away from the curb.

3. Be seen. The motorcycle head lamp must be lighted at all times. Many collisions occur because the cycle is not seen by the operator of the other vehicle.

4. Use your brakes wisely. Since the front brake is the most powerful apply the rear first at normal speeds—then

EPA proposes new pesticide rules

The Environmental Protection Agency is asking for public comments on a new set of rules governing pesticide applications. The proposed regulations come under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act and are scheduled to go into effect Oct. 21, 1976.

The rules would place some important limitations on current commercial pesticide applications in farming, according to John S. McDaniel, specialist in agricultural chemicals at the University of Delaware. To make it easier for pesticide users to understand the new regulations, McDaniel provides this summary.

First, the Act requires all pesticides to be classified for either general or restricted use. Those limited as general may be used by anyone. Restricted-use pesticides may be used only by certified applicators—with states serving as the certifying agencies.

Cash supplemental security income checks promptly to prevent loss

Supplemental security income checks should be cashed within a reasonable time to prevent loss or theft—even though there's no time limit on cashing them, according to social security officials.

The supplemental security income program has established a national income floor for people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 or over or blind or disabled. Checks are delivered the first week of every month.

"It's a good idea to sign your supplemental security income check in front of the person who will cash it," a social security spokesman said. "If you sign a check and then lose it, it could be cashed by anyone who finds it."

People whose supplemental security income checks are lost, stolen or destroyed should get in touch with the nearest social security office at once and explain what happened, according to the spokesman.

"Your check can be replaced," he said, "but it will take a number of days. It's in your interest to handle your checks carefully. You can make arrangements with any social security office to have your supplemental security income check mailed to a bank or other responsible financial institution. But a supplemental security income check cannot be made out to someone else to pay off a debt.

People who get a supplemental security income check they know is not due them must return it to the U.S. Treasury Department. "The return address is on the envelope in which the check was delivered," the spokesman said, "and you should enclose a statement of your reason for returning the check."

"Or," he said, "you can take the supplemental security income check to any social security office. People there will give you a receipt and return the check for you."

The program is run by the Social Security Administration, an agency of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. "But supplemental security income payments are funded by general revenues, not by social security contributions," the spokesman said.

Plant spring vegetables now

Now's the time to start your home vegetable garden. Cool season crops can be planted as soon as the soil is dry—conceivably as early as this week—says Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

B.ets., carrots, cabbage, lettuce, onions, radishes, peas, spinach and endives all do very well at this time of year. In fact, they shouldn't be planted after April 20. These vegetables thrive on cool weather and will all stand up to frost. There's just one thing to remember, says Stevens. Plant your seeds very shallow, as the soil is cool and wet now.

Most of these vegetables take a lot of lime. So it's a good idea to apply 10 pounds of limestone to a hundred square feet of soil before you do any planting, unless it's been limed in 1973. Also remember that lettuce and other leafy crops do best in soil that has plenty of nitrogen plus all the organic matter you can add.

Though most of these cool weather vegetables can be grown from seed, cabbage does best when started from plants. And if you decide to grow head lettuce, that too should be started as plants, not seed. The sooner you get these two vegetables into the ground now, the better they'll do.

Onions can be started as seed, sets or plants. Some gardeners may also want to raise leeks, a more demanding cousin of the onion as far as gardening goes, but worth the effort if you like them in hearty soups and stews.

One of the easiest of all early vegetables to grow is the radish. Children find this an especially satisfying garden crop, as it matures in only about 28 days. For best results make several plantings every 10 days up to the first of May. This will give you a continuous supply of radishes for quite some time. There are many different types of radishes including the long, white icicle type, the cherry, etc.

Successive plantings of lettuce are also a good idea. Sow a few feet of seed every 10 days until mid-April.

You have a number of choices when it comes to buying lettuce for your garden. First of all, you can buy either plants or seeds. And you have a choice between head or leaf lettuce. Among the leaf varieties there's a wide range of colors and leaf shapes.

Greenwood

Attention: The Greenwood Volunteer Fire Company is pleased to announce that a date for its First Biannual Supper of this year has been set. The date is March 31. Serving time is from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The menu includes our "famous" oyster fritters, chicken salad and dumplings, plus all other trimmings. This will be served family style. Bring the entire family. Prices have been altered to ease the cost for the family outing. Prices are as follows: Adults, $3.00; children, (12 and under) $1.75; pre-school children, FREE.

We are hoping for a great turnout. The Annual Fund Drive for 1973 was a great drop from previous years. But the cost of operating has increased. With a large turnout for this supper we are hoping to bring ends closer together, which, in turn, will help serve you better.

Lawn publication available

Publications outlining common Delaware lawn problems are available from the co-operative extension service at the University of Delaware.

Your lawn may not look right for any number of reasons, according to David V. Tatnall, extension garden specialist at the university. Wrong seed, poor soil, unfavorable weather, insects and disease all can result in a poor looking lawn.

It's not always easy to recognize the cause of your lawn problems. However, many of the lawn problems found in Delaware are discussed in "The Art of Lawn Care" and "What's Wrong With My Lawn?"

The publications provide information on selecting the best grass varieties for Delaware conditions, how to recognize and control insects and diseases that damage lawns, soil problems, controlling weeds and general maintenance.

Copies of "The Art of Lawn Care" and "What's Wrong With My Lawn?" are available from county extension offices.

Poultry fancier club organized

Delmarva and northern Delaware residents who like to raise fancy poultry can now belong to a club that's intended to bring breeders together to compare birds, discuss disease problems and cures, and other matters of interest. You don't have to be a professional breeder to qualify, according to Burke Cleaver, one of the club's organizers. Anybody who has been interested in raising bantams, chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, peafowl, quail, cuckards or the many breeds of pigeons is eligible to join.

Since Delaware is known as the broiler state, and the Delmarva peninsula is a major poultry producer, it's only fitting that there should be a poultry club in this area, says Cleaver. Many other states already have such clubs.

An informal group of poultry fanciers has been meeting in Delaware for about a year now.

Among them they have about 12 standard breeds and six bantam breeds of chicken. The organizers would like to show the public some of the more unusual historic breeds, as a change from the standard farm lot chickens and crossbreeds that most of us are familiar with.

At present the poultry enthusiasts meet informally in Frederica at the home of club president, Shelby Harrington III, at 8 p.m., the third Tuesday of each month. New Castle county members car pool down to the meetings. Membership in the club is available on an individual ($5) or family basis (7).

A poultry show is in the planning stages, says Cleaver. And newsletters are in the making. The club also plans to have educational meetings at which specialists provide technical information on such subjects as breeding, nutrition and disease control.

One such specialist is Dr. Paul H. Sammelwitz, of the department of animal science and agricultural biochemistry at the University of Delaware. Sammelwitz, who is currently conducting genetic studies to increase disease resistance in poultry, says there is great merit in continuing to raise the standard breeds of poultry no longer in commercial production.

The crossbred lines used by the broiler and egg industries have been developed through highly selective breeding primarily for two purposes—weight gain and egg production. The specialists fear this selective breeding may lead to flocks that may become highly vulnerable to new diseases that—as in the case of exotic Newcastle disease a year ago—could potentially wipe out an entire segment of the industry. The flocks of birds raised by poultry fanciers around the country are an important genetic reservoir of future poultry breeding.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

Back in the "not-so-long-ago" when mass transportation was essential to economy on the Delmarva Peninsula, the railroad was maintained by experienced forces for a freight-train speed of forty miles-per-hour. Apparently, through faulty manipulation at the top, this speed has dwindled to a snail's pace of eight and ten miles-per-hour, causing our street crossings to be fouled for lengthy periods, hazardous to fire and ambulance operation. These unfavorable conditions are a far cry from the days of Casey Jones and the predicament of:

An old Hoghead, once passed away
 Whistled off for the Judgment Day.
 The trip was the first of the kind he made
 And he worried a lot how he'd be paid.

He didn't know what rates applied
 As this was the first time he had died.
 So as thru space he swiftly flew
 He recalled all the rulings he ever knew.

He could claim no initial delay at all
 As there had been no chance for him to stall.
 He couldn't claim time for testing air
 As he hadn't any brake-line there.

He could not claim time at the water spout
 Since he passed no water-tubs enroute;
 He had no chance to stop the wheels
 While he ate about a dozen meals.

He finally arrived at the pearly gate
 And registered in one hour late;
 He washed and smoked and fooled around
 The same as he did while on the ground,

Then made out his time in the usual way
 Claiming one hour "final delay."
 He grinned to himself as he thought, "how neat"
 He had stolen an hour from old Saint Pete.

As he followed a path to the pearly gate
 He saw a sign in large gold plate
 And this he read as his spirits fell;
 "If you have been delayed you must go to hell."

And when he saw that he'd been gypped
 He tried to claim that his pencil slipped.
 Offering all the alibis
 That he had used beneath the sky.

Saint Peter said, "don't lie to me"
 The way you did at the I.C.C.,"
 "You must go below where you shall burn"
 "For falsifying your time return!"

Veterans Administration News

The Veterans Administration warns veterans and servicemen who sell homes purchased with GI loans to make certain they obtain a "release from liability" if the purchaser assumes their loans.

"Otherwise," explains Dr. Harry E. Walkup, director of the VA Center in Wilmington, "the seller (the veteran) could be held financially liable should the purchaser default on mortgage payments." He noted VA granted 9,270 "releases" last fiscal year, about the same number as the year before.

VA will grant a "release" provided the veteran's loan is current, the purchaser agrees to assume the veteran's liabilities and the prospective purchaser is a good credit risk with sufficient income to meet the GI loan mortgage payments.

Dr. Walkup stressed, however, that a "release from liability" does not automatically restore GI loan entitlement the veteran utilized to purchase the home sold. Restoration can be made, he pointed out, only for what the agency describes as "compelling reasons" for disposing of the property—providing the GI loan has been paid in full.

Where purchasers agree to assume loans, the director urged veterans to apply promptly for a "release" from the VA offices which guaranteed their loans.

A Veterans Administration medical team has developed a simple test that will help avoid rejection of transplanted kidneys.

The test, developed by Doctors Barry D. Kahan, Kamal K. Mittal, John J. Bergen and Baldwin H. Tom of the Chicago VA Research hospital, is a method for early detection of the body's immune responses, the major cause of rejection of transplanted organs.

In the January issue of the medical magazine, Lancet, the VA investigators reported that the pattern of reaction among 23 patients with transplanted kidneys had been detected by the test several days before there was clinical evidence of rejection.

Rejection results from immunization to foreign antigens of the surface of the transplanted cells, and the test is a specific diagnostic tool for measuring the host-reactivity to the transplanted antigens.

The test involves microscopic examination of a mixture of the patient's white blood cells with cells of the donor's blood. If rejection is occurring, the white corpuscles will be clustered around the host or target cells, destroying them. When rejection is reversed by chemotherapy, the corpuscles no longer gather around the target cells.

Suppose you had a physical handicap which made it impossible to buy clothes to fit. Wouldn't you appreciate having someone design clothes for your special needs? That's what the General Federation of Women's Clubs are doing. They conduct a contest co-sponsored by the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped and the American Home Sewing Council.

This year it was again my privilege to be a judge for Delaware's contest. Mrs. Virginia Winkler of Harrington, was state contest chairman.

This is one of the most worthwhile sewing contests that I know about. It provides satisfaction for the contestant and pleasure for the one who receives the garment. The good ideas generated may help others adapt clothing for the particular needs of the handicapped. The self-help features which many contestants designed allow some individuals to at least partially dress themselves and to achieve a new measure of dignity and independence.

Contestants selected a severely handicapped woman or child of age five or over whose physical limitations require special clothing not available through ordinary sources. The clothing needs of the individual were to be analyzed to determine any special features necessary to solve or ease the problem. The garment construction was to be planned to include such features as: comfort and freedom of movement, ease in dressing and removal, de-emphasis of the deformity or appliance, and minimal care and maintenance. The garment was to be constructed to meet these needs, as well as to be attractive and becoming to the individual. Quality of workmanship was considered in making final decisions.

The contestants had adapted patterns to include front openings instead of back openings, using large zippers and large ring pulls for easier grasping. Velcro was a commonly used fastener so that the individual could easily fasten his own clothes.

Pants and blouse combinations were popular for wheel chair models. Wider pant legs helped camouflage leg braces. The short, full style blouse was comfortable for the individual in a wheel chair.

Pants featured elastic waistbands for ease of dressing and greater comfort. One design included large cord loops at the waistline so the child could grasp the pants for easier dressing. Hems of pants were machine stitched so they wouldn't rip out as readily.

One contestant designed a special basket for a wheel chair so a student could go to school with necessary supplies close at hand.

Attractive colors, trims and pretty buttons all made the garments appealing to the model. Smiles of pleasure were evidence of the delight of the recipients for their new clothes. No doubt this was ample reward for each contestant, regardless of how she placed in the contest.

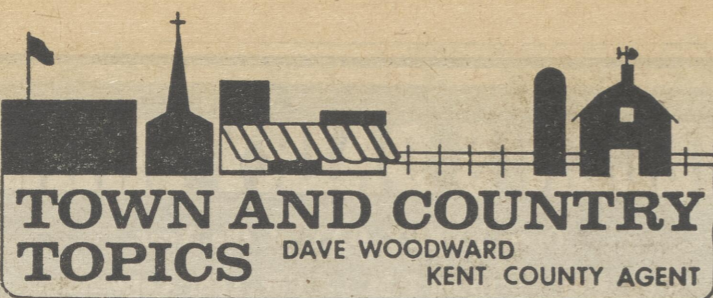

A wonderful contest! The American Home Sewing Council thought so too. Last year they awarded the General Federation of Women's Clubs their Golden Needle Award. This year, the Sewing Council has become one of the sponsors of the contest.

There will be a seminar for home vegetable gardeners sponsored by the University of Delaware co-operative extension service at the State Highway Building, across from the Blue Hen Mall, in Dover. The meeting will be held in the Center Conference Room of the State Highway Building. This will be held March 20, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Dr. William H. Mitchell, extension agronomist, will speak on lawns, fertilization, liming, irrigation and mowing. Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist, will cover trees, shrubs, flowers, pruning and mulching. Dr. Robert B. Carroll, extension plant pathologist, will talk on diseases of lawns, trees and shrubs, wilt diseases, powdery mildew and scab diseases. Frank E. Boys, extension economic entomologist will discuss major insect pests, sod webworm, Japanese beetle, bagworm, borers, scales, galls, and gypsy moths. After their presentations, each specialist will be available for questions. There will be a display of items of interest to home gardeners. We invite anyone to attend; this event is free to the public. We hope you can participate in this meeting. Why not get up a car pool where possible so you can conserve gas. You may need that gas to till your garden this summer.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne W. Holberton

Sure, 'tis corned beef, cabbage and potatoes. 'Tis the meal for St. Patrick's Day!

The corned beef is the best ever these days and with the directions given on the package, cooking is made much simpler. Years ago the beef was preserved by dry salting - embedded or sprinkled with corns of salt (coarse). But as brining took the place of salting the term still held, and we say "corned beef" instead of "brined" or pickled beef. The beef cuts that are usually corned or brined are brisket and the rounds.

The process of corning beef starts with injecting the pickled solution into the meat and then placing the meat in the solution for a specified length of time. It is then packaged into consumer sizes or left whole or cut into portions desired by customers.

The brisket cut of beef used for corned beef contains a strip of fat interwoven in the lean. This is almost always removed before corning. However, the brisket will still contain some fat which lends juiciness and added flavor to the meat. The slices from corned beef are narrow and long - typical of the general conception of the kind used in the famous corned beef and cabbage dishes.

Corned rounds are solid lean meat. In some markets you may find labels telling you if the round is either top or bottom because both are used. With the new labeling program in effect in most states you will know the exact cut that has been corned and this will help you in knowing how to cook it.

Directions for cooking will be on most of the cryovac packages. If not, they are simple - simmer in water until tender (20 to 30 minutes per pound). The moisture in the cryovac bags can be used. It is the pickling solution which has seeped from the meat plus some added spices. As the meat cooks don't be surprised at the shrinkage for it will happen. Cook vegetables in this same broth during the last 30 minutes or so. This will give the cabbage and potatoes that delightful corned beef flavor.

There are different pickling processes developed so read the label and pick the one that suits your taste for they come with spices, sugar cured, or a special garlic flavor.

The bountiful supply of beautiful fresh cabbage we have in the market now makes this an economical choice. Most of the heads are weighing around two to two and one-half pounds and are selling at reasonable prices. A two pound head of cabbage will yield about eight servings of cooked vegetable.

When selecting cabbage look for these points: solid-firm heads, heavy for their size, with leaves of good color - to insure maximum yield and avoid waste, leaves that are fresh, crisp, free from insect injury or bruises to insure freshness, good flavor and texture.

Potatoes are still expensive but you can get either old or new potatoes that will fill the bill.

Fertilizer shortage a call for change

Farmers will work 60 million additional acres in 1974. The nation and the world will wait anxiously for the food that will be produced on these reserves acres. But a new problem has come up. Will there be enough fertilizer to adequately nourish all the crops that farmers plan to grow?

There are conflicting answers to this question, says William H. Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware. Most observers agree that a shortage exists. But estimates of this shortage range all the way from five per cent to 25 per cent. Prices for some materials have already risen from 200 - 300 per cent and this may only be the beginning.

There are several reasons for the current shortages of fertilizer materials, Mitchell explains. The U.S. has large supplies of phosphorus, located principally in Florida. Much of our potassium is imported from Canada which, in turn, is short of phosphorus. Mutual trade agreements are in effect, but transportation problems have become serious and will limit the amount of potassium available for U.S. farmers.

The most limited fertilizer material will be nitrogen. The nitrogen used by farmers is produced by combining atmospheric nitrogen with the hydrogen from natural gas to make ammonia. Natural gas is in short supply and a spokesman for the Fertilizer Institute has reported to Delaware farmers that gasification of coal to produce hydrogen may be the only practical solution to the problem. But it may be 1980 before nitrogen fixation plants are using this source of hydrogen to produce nitrogen.

Another reason for shortages is the fact that many of the old and relatively inefficient fertilizer plants have been forced to close. Low profits in the fertilizer industry have caused potential investors to look elsewhere and there simply has not been sufficient capital available for new construction.

All this means that for the next few years, farmers will be expected to grow more food and fiber with relatively less fertilizer. This challenge can and must be met, says Mitchell. To do so will require a number of changes.

For one thing, diagnostic services must be greatly refined. Yield response curves need to be drawn more exactly so that recommended rates of fertilization can be safely reduced. Current applications often exceed needs. Farmers traditionally have used high rates to ensure there is enough available. But excessive application rates can lead to nutrient recovery levels as low as 25 per cent. At best, they're seldom above 65-70 per cent. Every grower in the state should avail himself of the most complete soil and plant testing services available, says Mitchell, in order to bring application and recovery rates closer together.

Low soil moisture helps to explain the inefficient use of plant nutrients on many Delaware farms. Without sufficient water, nutrients are not absorbed by plants. They remain unused during the growing season and then during the winter months are leached down through the sandy soils below the root system of most crops. Irrigation capability should be developed wherever possible with emphasis given to systems which also use water most effectively. Two of the most promising systems are subsurface and trickle irrigation.

Plant residues and animal and human wastes must be recycled to supplement conventional fertilizer sources. Current experiments at the University of Delaware are investigating use of recycled urban wastes as one solution to the problem.

Fertilized application techniques also need to be improved. Broadcasting and truck spreading of fertilizer is so common that many farmers do not own equipment for band placement of fertilizer at planting or as a side-dressing. And yet, research has shown that plant nutrients are more efficiently used when placed adjacent to the plant row and when applied close to the period of greatest demand by the plant. Re-tooling of equipment is needed to take advantage of the best application methods.

And finally, says Mitchell, a return to usage of cover crops that restore nitrogen to the soil is needed. The ability of leguminous plants, such as the clovers, to fix atmospheric nitrogen has been known for ages. Once again the familiar clovers-alalfa and vetch-should be used in crop rotation or as winter annual cover crops to supplement the short supply of fertilizer nitrogen.

der-utilized fish which may not have caught on with consumers because of custom, prejudice, or simply an unappetizing name.

"Dogfish by any other name would be delicious," he says. Fish is an outstanding food for several reasons, Seymour points out. It is often cheaper than meat, but is equal to meat in protein content. It is easily digested and thus can be served to the very young as well as the very old. It is excellent for low-calorie and low-sodium diets. Fish is also versatile-it can be prepared in a number of appetizing ways, both hot and cold.

Some of the most economical and delicious fish are not easily available commercially, although Seymour hopes that they will gradually find their way to market in greater quantities as consumer demand rises.

One of his favorite is shark, which is available in Delaware waters twelve months of the year, and is also prevalent elsewhere. People who reel in shark shouldn't toss it back into the water, he says. Instead, immediately cut off the head, eviscerate and clean it thoroughly, then put it on ice. Handled this way, the meat has an excellent flavor and texture. Shark is especially good for children to eat because the white meat contains no bones.

Seymour stresses the importance of cleaning and storing on ice until the fresh-caught fish can be refrigerated. This is vital for commercial as well as sport fishermen. Most of the negative feelings people have about fish are the result of eating fish that wasn't handled properly. Flavor and texture can be easily destroyed in this way. "Why go fishing in a two thousand dollar boat with a hundred dollar reel, and neglect a few cents worth of ice to keep your fish cold?" he asks. For those fishermen who occasionally land a really big one, Seymour has this advice: "Don't throw the head away. The meat steamed off a large fish head makes the best chowder in the world," he says.

Spartan track in rebuilding year

Track practice started Monday afternoon for Lake Forest's 1974 varsity squad. This is about the only sport that athletes from this area participate in at the college level. Some 25 to 30 Felton, Harrington and Lake Forest High school athletes have performed on college track teams over the past 15 years.

Yet, this is the only boy's varsity sport, of seven Spartan sports, that still has no practice area at the high school. The boys must get to Harrington, practice briefly, then board the shuttle bus to Felton, Plymouth and Frederica, in cases where the many non-Harrington athletes are concerned.

A track should have been constructed at the high school five years ago. Instead, there have been promises, promises, promises.

Laurel has an all-weather track and is already in a position to send track performers to colleges on athletic scholarships. Lake Forest kids can expect such offers too, but they will not occur as often, because of the obstacles the Spartans must overcome.

The men on the Lake Forest faculty with track experience, are reluctant to accept the coaching job because of the orphan status of the sport here, and the problems involved with trying to build a competitive team, at the Chipman School location.

A couple of young men have come to the rescue and are willing to take over the reins in order to keep the sport alive.

At Drummond, a former Greenwood High basketball player and Delaware State College graduate is one. The other is Craig Jantz, a shotputter at Tottenville High School, Staten Island, N.Y. Jantz is a graduate of Wagner College.

Ed Wheatley will again handle the weight men. Wheatley is a Harrington High and Delaware State graduate.

Distance events might be the Spartan's best events, as might be expected from a school that won another state cross-country championship.

Ron Mosley, a senior and No. 1 harrier, owns a 2.02.2 half-mile and a 4.47 mile and may be the top Spartan point-getter.

Sophomore Harry Benson can do a fine job in any of the distance events, but will probably see action in the 880, mile and might run the mile relay on occasion.

Kit Tilghman, a junior, is the top 440 prospect. Kit may near the 53 second mark in this event. The 880 and mile relay events are other possibilities for him.

Joe Voshell, a sophomore, ran a couple of 11.03 two-mile clockings as a freshman. A foot injury slowed him the last half of the campaign. Joe could score heavily in the eight-lapper and is backed up by Bob Kashner, a junior and No. 6 cross-country runner.

Lee Dunbar and Bob Loper have experience in the hurdles. Shelfont Waples and Kevin Wooters are returning 1973 let-

Harrington Bowling League News

Leah S. Wheeler

Both can be used in the 440 and mile relay. Wooters may be the No. 1 high jumper along with senior John Starke.

Lake Forest had a state champion triple jumper last spring, but Don Bryant is no longer in school. Lester Fountain is a senior who has experience in the horizontal jumps in summer track. He should be No. 1 here with Ron Dunlap assisting. Reggie Guinn may be a factor here and in the 440 relay.

Other candidates in the running events are: Jim Harris, Steve Turek, Barry Cooper, Paul McClellan, Walter Bishop, Dwaine Murray, Ron Wertman, Cliff Ayers and Andrew Paulson. Matt Burgess was No. 1 in the discus last year, for Lake Forest. His top throw was 109 feet, as he finished second half a dozen times and won his varsity letter. He's already thrown 110 feet and is aiming for 120 in this his junior year.

Another junior letter winner in the discus is Benny Cohee, who has the size to throw the shot, also Jerry Thompson is another platter spinner. Glenn Hart and Charles Besselleu are other shot putters.

Rick Woodward is the only announced pole vault prospect. Woodward may throw the shot and do some running.

Some other candidates are expected to report soon. As usual there are boys who ran last season, but have jobs, transportation difficulties, scholastic problems, etc., that will prevent them from competing.

At present, the most glaring weakness is the sprints and as a result of this deficiency, the short relays, the 440 and 880 baton events. Lake Forest won't win many meets and will have to be consoled by the triumphs of a few outstanding individuals.
