

The Fair: When the Old Were Young

By Gary P. Andres
Twenty-five dollars was a lot of money in 1919. Bread sold for less than ten cents a loaf. It was so expensive, the cost of living soared 77 per cent that year, that most people made their own. It was then that Thomas Minner, 98, Masten's Corner, put up a twenty and a five for his first share of the Kent and Sussex County Fair.

In all, he bought 103 shares. Next to his basket mill, which he ran from 1911 to 1969, it was the best investment that he ever made. The following July in 1920, the fair opened. Except for two years during the war, 1942 and 1943, when the "blackout" permitted only a daytime program, the Fair has been drawing farmers, children and politicians ever since.

In 1962 the state legislature appropriated annual funding and the Kent & Sussex County Fair became the Delaware State Fair. Except for the title change, the location, the reactivity and the exhibits have remained the same. Yet, Tom's son, John T. Minner, 68, Masten's Corners, still remembers going to that first Fair with particular pride. "Oh, Dad loved the Fair," he said. "He took us all: five boys, two girls and Mom. Mom liked the sewing things, but Dad was mostly interested in the machinery: thrashing machines, tractors and stuff."

"He always did love machinery, and he never wanted to be a farmer. Why, he even left home at 20 to work in Charlie Murphy's sawmill so he could be around machines."

John paused in his conversation and left the porch. With religious reverence, he returned from the house with a copper plate. "It used to have a thermometer on one side and a man with his arms up on the other," he said, "but they fell off."

Two Area Appointments Announced

Governor Sherman W. Tribbitt recently appointed John T. Cannon, Sr., of Bridgeville, to be an ex-officio member of the Delaware Agency to Reduce Crime.

Helen M. Holliger, of Milford, has also been appointed a member of the Council on Mental Retardation for a three-year term July 1, 1974, to July 1, 1977, succeeding Alan B. Killingsworth, who resigned.

Betty Lou Cooper, of Camden, was also appointed a member of the Council on Mental Retardation for a term of three years.

He turned the plate over. Stencilled on the back in sharp Roman letters and dedicated to his father were the words: "Delaware State Fair, Male Senior Citizen Award, 1963." The following year his father won a weather vane, with the same inscription.

"He still went to the Fair every year until 1969, when he went blind. But he didn't win the awards anymore because he never seemed to get there on the contest day," John added.

"Dad's birthday is on the sixteenth of May and he would like to make a hundred. If he does, he is going to the Fair that year," John said with enthusiasm.

Albert Thistlewood, 80, Harrington, said: "Yeah, I remember the first Fair. W. S. Smith, who was sheriff twice and a constable once, sold the original 30 acres of Fairground Proper to the Kent-Sussex Fair Association, and in 1925 my Dad sold them 40 more acres."

Thistlewood loved machinery, too. "At the time of the first Fair," he said, "the machine method of farming was just emerging as a threat to the horse. And there was an atmosphere about the Fair then: it was nice to see your neighbors because there were a lot of individual farmers, like myself, that were interested in machinery. Now, there aren't many small farmers left anymore and the Fair is more commercialized, but it always did change with the times."

Mrs. Howard Cooper, 81, who has lived for nearly 60 years with her husband in Harrington, feels the same way. She went to the first Fair with her husband and has been going ever since. "I don't believe that I've missed any at all," she said.

Years ago, when she raised rabbits and chickens, they were her favorite exhibits. "Now," she said, "I like the horses and the oil paintings the best."

Reginald McKnatt, who at 82, still has power in his voice, an eye for a pretty lady, and a rugged 220-pound frame, first went to the Fair as a worker for Pete Shaw. He is there this year again as a plumber and maintenance man, and he especially remembers "the prisoners of war" who worked for Libby, McNeal and Libby in 1944.

"The Fair has changed some since Ernest Raleigh, the first president of the fair, started the whole thing," he said. "The grandstands are bigger, the staples are nicer and it keeps growing every year."

Sam Short, 76, Harrington, was a young man, with a hot dog stand, in the early years of the Fair. And he was there for the first one. But, the one he remembers best is the Fair of the early thirties, when it rained so much and they tried to move the wagons with an elephant.

"The big elephant got down on his knees and tried to push with his head. It was so muddy and wet that the elephant didn't do too good," Sam said.

The Fair will be 55 years old this year, and it has changed some. Clarence G. Schreiber, 53, Harrington, was two years away from being born at the time of the first one. Schreiber didn't make his first Fair until 1940.

"I was just a boy," he said, "and I loved the Fair. I still do. But I will never forget my first one. Dad gave me $5 and sent me with a pony. I slept right in the stall with the pony."

He laughed good-naturedly at himself and continued: "I spent all my money on the first day of the Fair. But I couldn't go home; I had to stay all week with the pony. I washed dishes and everything then."

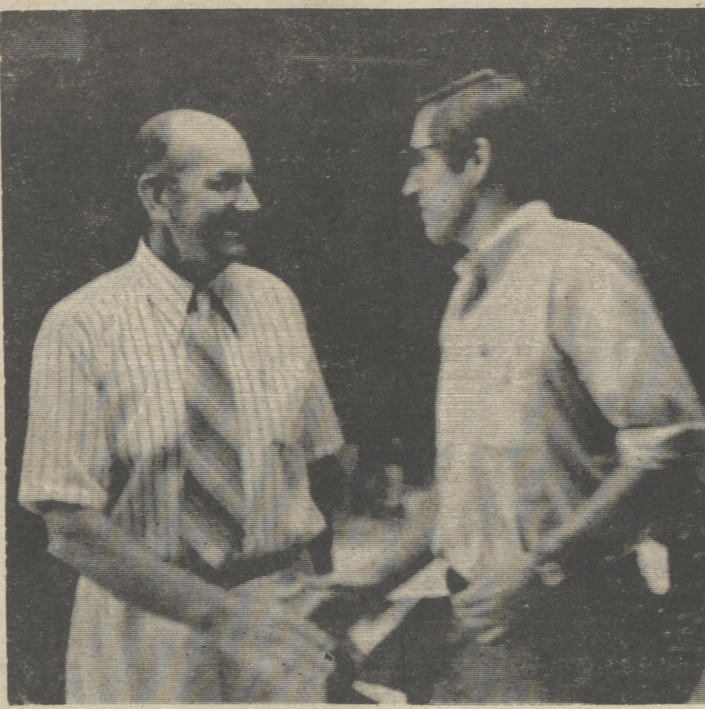

Schreiber doesn't take ponies to the Fair anymore. But the auto races are still there and go faster every year. There are no more acts where Model-T Fords "ride the hoop" and play polo with the doors off, as Burton Smith recalls.

The dancing girls are still there with more make-up and less clothing. There are more horses and better trainers. But it has been a few years since anyone came off the "high tower" to dive into a flaming pool.

Mrs. Tyler, 74, Harrington, hasn't "seen a man shot out of a cannon" since her first Fair in 1935. But this year, after she finishes the cooking, touring the flower display and looking at the animals, she is going to take a walk past the grandstand just in case they are loading the cannon.

Early summer is a busy time for home gardeners. You've probably got most of your vegetables in now—and most of your annuals are planted. But there are still a number of chores awaiting you, says Dr. Charles Dunham, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

First of all, there are some pruning jobs to do. Pruning now involves cutting back the rampant growth that many trees and shrubs made during the spring (Continued on Page 8)

Stockholders Named To Board

Eighty stockholders were elected to the board of directors of the Delaware State Fair Association on Tuesday, July 9, at the Harrington Fairgrounds. Stockholders are elected to board membership on one-year terms. "Of the 7,000 shares, 3,700 were represented personally or by proxy in the voting," General Manager George Simpson said.

At the next meeting, the first Monday following July 4, the annual stockholders elections will be held again.

Prior to the meeting, a dinner was held. U. S. Cong. Pete du Pont (R-Del.) was among the guests who enjoyed the excellent food and refreshments.

Danger Lurks Outdoors

Believe it or not, some plants that may be in your window box, vegetable garden, shrubbery and even certain trees and flowers along nearby streams, have a clear capability of causing violent sickness and, in all too many cases, even death.

Unfortunately most victims of plant poisoning are children who are tempted to sniff, taste and even swallow nature's first buds. Each year an estimated 12,000 children ingest some of the more than 700 plant species that are known to cause death.

Some of nature's most delicate and popular creations are among the 700 types of poisonous plants. Included in the list are the oleander bush, lily-of-the-valley, rhododendron, poinsettia, iris, buttercups and even mistletoe.

Of course not all parts of these plants are potential killers. For example, only the leaves and branches of the oleander are extremely poisonous. They can affect the heart, produce severe digestive upset and have caused death. If eaten, the leaves and flowers of lily-of-the-valley can result in irregular heartbeat and pulse, digestive upset and mental confusion.

All parts of laurel, rhododendron and azaleas, ingested, can cause nausea and vomiting, depression, difficult breathing, prostration and even death. One leaf of a poinsettia can kill a child.

Besides plants and household flowers, various parts of fruit trees are a popular attraction to youngsters but they can be dangerous too. The twigs of cherry trees can release cyanide when eaten and the leaf of the peach tree contains hydrocyanic acid, one of the five most dangerous poisons known.

Fair Fever

by Margo Farrow
Annually there is a chronic, unique and highly contagious bug in the air, surrounding the Delaware State Fair Grounds.

Generally the symptoms include an increased amount of activity in and around the fairgrounds and the Harrington area. Hot, dry weather is an expected side effect, to be relieved usually during the week of the fair, in one or more cloud bursts.

Temperatures range from nervous expectation to casual acceptance, they surface sometime during the second or third week of July.

The fever stage begins Sunday before the Thursday opening (this year the 19th) and peaks when the yellow and red train carrying the carnival people parks on one of the side rails near the fairgrounds.

After that point, the contagion is uncontrollable. Children catch the fever, and it is soon passed to parents and friends. Finally almost everyone has it. Politicians find that Governor's Day is usually when they succumb, since they are found in droves on the grounds that day.

To date, there is no cure for this malady, since it will be going into its fifty-fifth cycle this year. The doctor does give one bit of advice: when you contact the fair fever, don't try to fight it. The only way to get it out of the system is to relax and give in.

It's on the way—from July 19 to the 27th. Be forewarned.

Nursing Home Owner Arrested

Mrs. Mildred Messick, 110 Center St., Harrington, was arrested by two Harrington policemen, yesterday.

She was charged by the Delaware State Board of Health with violating a state fire safety code in her Reese Avenue Nursing Home. After posting a $1,000 bond in Magistrate Court she was released.

Previously, the state had revoked her license for having an inadequate, internal sprinkling system. "I was in the process of applying for a license on my new Center Street home," she said, "but now the state won't allow a small nursing home to house more than six residents in one place. I already have four on Center Street and I wanted to move the eight from Reese Avenue."

Pointing to the surroundings, she said, "This place is big enough for all 14 and the Fire Marshal approved the sprinkling system here four months ago. Besides I have eight full-time aides."

Messick is going to the Court of Common Pleas on July 26 to contest the board's ruling.

Dr. Yvonne A. Russell, Dept. of Health and Social Services, filed the formal complaint.

Anyone who is a resident of Kent County or who is attending school in the county is invited to submit his original design for the Kent County's Bicentennial Emblem. Judges will select one emblem and award its designer $100. All outstanding designs received by the Bicentennial Committee will be awarded honorable mention.

Two Hurt Near Felton

Two persons were slightly injured in a two-car accident at 5:45 p. m. Friday at Del. 12 and Kent 388, three miles east of Felton.

Injured were Patricia West, 17, driver of one car, and her sister, Marice, 16, a passenger, both of Felton. Both were treated for minor facial cuts of Milford Memorial Hospital and released.

Police said the mishap occurred when a car driven by Orville Pearson, 51, of Milford, pulled from a stop sign into the path of the West car.

Pearson, who was not injured, was charged with failure to remain stopped at a stop sign.

Light Rates Down

Delmarva Power & Light Company announced a decrease in the electric fuel adjustment charge will appear on customers' bills in Delaware and Maryland during the month of July. The July fuel charge is 1.58c per kilowatt hour as compared to 1.69c per kilowatt hour during the month of June.

A company spokesman said that the decrease in the July fuel charge is primarily due to the increased use of coal following completion of maintenance on generating units at the company's Indian River plant. The fuel adjustment charge for July is based on the cost of fuel the company used during the month of May.

Milford Hospital Rates Raised

The board of directors and administration of the Milford Memorial Hospital have announced that effective July 1st daily rates were increased by approximately 10%. The decision to raise the hospital's rates is necessitated by the increasing cost of goods and services. The lifting of all price controls in food and the raise in minimum wage rates by the government has contributed substantially to an increased operating budget.

Since October, 1970, Milford Hospital has raised its rates by only 2%. The new rates will affect all categories of admissions. Semi-private rooms will be $62 and $63, private rooms, $74 and $76. Pediatrics will be raised proportionately. The rates for intensive care and coronary care units remain the same for the present.

Frederica Girl Critically Hurt

Ruth A. Hayes, 5, of Frederica was listed in critical condition today at Delaware Division with massive head injuries after being hit by a truck in front of her home yesterday, state police said.

Police said the girl was riding her bicycle on Front St. when she darted from a private driveway into the street, hitting the oncoming truck.

The truck, a Millways Trash Disposal truck, was driven by James Baggett, Jr., 25, Bridgeville.

Police said there will be no charges.

Second July Jubilee

A sultry July fourth marked the second July Jubilee, a celebration-fund-raising activity for the Republican party in Delaware. Held again on Paradise Alley, north of Harrington, the crowd feasted on chicken, beef and pork barbecued, and listened to country music and mingled with incumbents and hopefuls.

The highlight of the day came when George Cripps, member of the Kent County Levy Court, and past state auditor, literally tossed his hat into the ring for the upcoming election for the 18th Senatorial Congressional seat to oppose incumbent Bill Murphy.

Also on hand was Herman Brown, host and chairman of the Republican party in Kent County, as well as Senator Pete duPont, Rep. Bill Roth and wife and Larry Sullivan, announced candidate for attorney general.

A Doctor With Heart

By Gary P. Andres

Dr. is an abbreviated introduction to a man's life. By interpretation it is an ambiguous word. Healthy cynics associate it with exorbitant fees, expensive vacations and malpractice suits. Sick people on meager incomes greet it with reverence, hope and even awe.

Both definitions have substance, but neither quality is excluded from AMA membership. Medicine is a triad of occupations: law, science and theology. In addition, the practice requires a certain tolerable immunity for ingratitude. Good physicians seldom get good publicity; in print, recognition requires a full statement of vices. Like all professionals of human endeavor, medicine has representation from thieves and philanthropists.

Dr. Keebler, a general practitioner, was impartial. He set examples for both standards; he stole the anxieties from pregnant women and gave the proceeds to parenthood. A medical degree, to him, was more than a certificate of intelligence; it was an introduction to the philosophic mysteries. He coached expectant mothers through the gestation cycle to delivery. "It never ceases to amaze me," he said, "the miracle of a new life."

He was a country doctor and proud of it. His parents were the farmers, the young married couples, the elderly and, almost entirely, the poor. He knew all of the back roads and the farms, which ones planted corn last year and in which fields. On some farms he even knew the names of the cows and how much milk the big Holstein "Suzie" gave. Fishing was his only hobby. The tug of a trout on light tackle thrilled him.

Keebler, two-thirds of his life was over before he began. He was overweight, overworked and underpaid. During most of his practicing career he had a second-floor office with shiny instruments, small rooms, wall-to-wall patients and a color television. He had the TV so the old women in his office could see what color dresses the characters in the soap operas were wearing.

Keebler was a fine doctor. He was a short, fat man with rolled-up sleeves and a stethoscope dangling from his ears. He had a gentle smile, thinning hair and kind-blue eyes.

Over the years he collected as many promises as dollars. His charitable disposition was as much a part of him as the "little black bag." Cash customers waited their turn often behind those with long overdue bills. In more than one case it was quietly rumored that "the doctor" provided an interest-free loan to a patient who required an out-to-town surgical specialist.

Strep throat, fevers, deep cuts and stiff joints were his stock in trade. Broken bones were seasonal, summer items, while babies were a year-round commodity. He prescribed penicillin, brand specialists and kindness. More than his clients, he believed in patience. When diet pills were almost a medical fad, he was reluctant to prescribe them. With his stomach thrust forward, he told more than one industrial secretary and middle-aged housewife: "Look at me. I am fatter than you and I don't use them." Many diet problems, Keebler diagnosed as enfeeblement of the will: more determination and less spoon was needed. A year or two later medical journals carried monthly articles on the previous abuses and side effects of the diet pill.

He also had more faith in the compassion of the Almighty than in his education from Temple University. For severe cases, he recommended prayer in addition to hospitalization. Between office hours and house calls, he raised three kids and his own blood pressure with his enthusiasm for high school sports. He covered all of the games as a doctor and a fan.

He gave more than his talent and time. He gave everything he had. He borrowed the best precepts of philosophy and psychology. He had a sense of humor and a dry wit; he gave people sound advice, along with a little laughter. The characteristics pumped adrenalin to his bedside manner.

In 25 years he took this writer from the delivery room to a degree and marriage. And, as with hundreds of others, he supplied all the physicals between from Cub Scouts to working papers.

It was a short ride from the metallic echo of passing trains on Railroad Street to the quiet slumbering of the town cemetery. It took Keebler 58 years to move his office. The distance from his presence to his absence is unmeasurable.

It will be a long time before another doctor asks a broke college kid: "Whose paying for the physical, you or your old man?" "I am. How much?" the kid answered with false financial authority. "Nothing," he said, with deceptive indifference, "it's on the house."

Everything, all of it, takes heart. Heart in all men is an orphan of biological necessity. In the best of men, it is an instrument finely tuned to an admirable quality. Yet, it is tragically unfortunate that in the decisions of God, the judicial system of theology has no plea bargaining privileges.

For in the final analysis, sympathy and sorrow are measures of enevy and regret. For in mankind a man like Keebler is always envied for the admiration he attracted. His death was regrettable because his life was so full of generosity, and only the poor, which included most of his clients, have any real appreciation of the virtue.

Heart attack: in the jargon of the trade, Keebler died of "cardiac arrest." Without trial or counsel, he was found guilty and he was.

It was inevitable. The size of his heart made him vulnerable.

The young manager of a Brookside Park restaurant, was killed Thursday, July 4, in a car-truck accident in the Kent County town of Frederica.

State police said Roger M. Jarrell, 21, of the Village of Prestbury Apts., Chestnut Hill Rd., Newark, was dead on arrival at Milford Memorial Hospital about an hour after the 2:15 a. m. accident.

Jarrell had been manager of the Hardee Restaurant on Marrows Road near his home.

State police said Jarrell was driving a 1972 coupe along Front St., Frederica, with Robert Palmer, 22, and Lawrence E. Hatfield, 23, both of Felton, as passengers.

Jarrell lost control of the car on a slight curve and plowed into the back of a parked tractor-trailer owned by Todd Transportation Co. of Secretary Md. The car was forced completely under the rig, partially crushed.

Members of the Frederica, Bowers Beach and Carlisle of Milford Fire Companies worked for more than an hour to free Jarrell. Palmer and Hatfield were only slightly injured, police said.

One of the simplest ways to get more from your air conditioner is to wash your filter at least once a month. A dirty filter causes reduced air flow and can cause unit deficiency to drop as much as six per cent and increase your utility bills accordingly.

I'll Tak' the Low Road

One of the most famous of all Scottish songs is "The Bonnie, Bonnie Banks o' Loch Lomond." It refers to the sides of the loch and not to any financial establishments in the neighborhood.

The chorus goes—
Oh, ye'll tak' the high road and I'll tak' the low road,
And I'll be in Scotland before ye.

Why should taking the low road be quicker than taking the high road?

The real story of the famous song is of a supporter of Bonnie Prince Charlie and the Jacobite cause who had been captured and was being hanged at the border town of Carlisle. The superstition among Highlanders is that the soul of a man who meets sudden death in this way will travel rapidly under the ground to Tir-nan-Og, the Heaven in the Highlands. That is "the low road."

But his companions, who have seen their fellow Jacobite executed, have to take the highroad back to Scotland, and they will arrive there a long time after the dead man's spirit.

New Outlook On Windows

There's now a new way to help protect a building from thieves: a window material that's almost completely unbreakable. This product can also be used for storm doors and storm windows, to help prevent accidents and vandalism.

One place where it's uniquely being used is on the windows of Trinity Episcopal Church in Jefferson, Ohio. Built in 1876, this church is a classic example of the steamboat Gothic architecture popular in the midwest at the time, and it is blessed with a set of stained windows that is rare. Unlike traditional stained glass windows, these are not a mosaic made from pieces of leaded glass; instead, they were painted by itinerant artists of the period to create a stained glass effect. Unfortunately, this has made them both irreplaceable and sadly subject to wear by weather. To prevent further deterioration, the cherished windows have been covered with the virtually unbreakable material.

This product, which might be called a modern miracle of a plastic, is Lexan Sheet from General Electric.

A little piece of clear, practically impervious plastic, can provide a lot of protection for places with stained glass and plenty of other windows. And it does all this without marring the appearance of the window or spoiling the view, as glass embedded with wire mesh or screening would.

Metrics, Here We Come

Delaware's campaign to teach the international metric system of measurement has been underway this summer.

On Aug. 13 some 250 teachers from all districts and the non-public schools will meet in Wilmington, Dover and Georgetown to begin 16 hours of work to prepare them to train other teachers in their home districts.

The summer inservice follows the plan to change over to metrics adopted by the state board in February. Plans call for all schools to begin using metrics by 1976-1977 and for it to be taught as the primary system of measurement by 1980.

The change is being organized by a group led by William Geppert, state superintendent of math; John Reiher, state supervisor of science and environmental education; Thomas Baker, Del. Mod dissemination specialist; and Donald Dunkle, state supervisor of trades and industries.

HARRY G. FARROW, JR., Publisher

A few years ago I chanced upon a magazine entitled "Success Unlimited." Many sales offices use this monthly publication as a training manual for the inspiring human interest success stories appearing in it.

A typical lead story was one which I read in one of the early editions. That particular story came to be one of my favorites. It was the story of George Ward ... and one which has been told by others many times.

The life of George Ward is an inspirational one to all. He came from a poor family in Oregon, was a grade school drop-out, hired on as a cabin boy on fishing vessels bound for Alaska, and generally held company with those who were on the wrong side of the law. Later he joined Pancho Villa—rode with him in Mexico, and eventually held the high post of paymaster in that army. Shortly thereafter he was arrested by the Texas Rangers, tried and convicted of dope smuggling, peddling and horse stealing. He denied his guilt to his dying day. As he was led into the Federal prison at Leavenworth, he swore that someday he would have revenge. He would kill the judge who had sentenced him, would do away with the members of the jury and arresting sheriff.

The main issue is that George Ward had become a negative person and was his own worst enemy. One day he began to change his view. He developed a positive mental attitude (P.M.A.). He studied the Bible thoroughly and began to take on jobs at the prison ultimately to identify him with the model prisoner role. As fate would have it, a man was brought to Leavenworth for refusing to pay his taxes. It wasn't that he would not pay his taxes! It wasn't because the law worked against him. No ... he was put in prison for failing to pay his income taxes, for he felt the tax law benefited too much the rich man—which he was—and worked an economic injustice on the poor man.

This man was the very wealthy Mr. Bigelow of Brown & Bigelow, of Minneapolis-St. Paul. George Ward became Mr. Bigelow's friend, shield and trusted companion while in prison. So impressed was Mr. Bigelow with George Ward that Bigelow offered him a job when he was paroled.

When that day came, George Ward went directly to Minneapolis for the job—sweeping floors. He soon became foreman and then on up the ladder, for his P.M.A. was still working for him. He became president of Brown & Bigelow and when Mr. Bigelow died, George Ward became the chairman of the board. During these years of his ascension he turned Brown & Bigelow from a small office equipment company to one of the largest manufacturing companies in this country. He developed the office business calendar, many of the electric office equipment which we use today, and the mechanical pen—a mechanical work of art, which we all take for granted. He had a great imagination. Why—because he was always working in that direction.

George Ward remained a humble ... salt of the earth person throughout his business life. He helped and hired many, many ex-convicts. He never forgot his stint in prison and he wore his I.D. number on a wrist bracelet all his life. You might say that the real turning point in George Ward's life was being arrested by the Texas Rangers and eventually made him to be a "new man." We know this to be illogical ... for it was not any of those reasons. George Ward's attitude, his desire, his determination to make something of himself by setting about thinking, acting and reacting in a positive manner were the real reasons.

Positive mental attitude is a philosophy that President Nixon employs daily and one he believes in absolutely. This is why I firmly believe to be the sole reason that he is able to stand up under the immense pressure and loneliness that are his companions now. Without this inner self-confidence, without this strong determination to forge on and the desire to find a better way, he would have cracked in the early stages of the Watergate investigation. It is due to this simple philosophy that he will not break ... for this I am positive.

The publisher of this magazine of which I write is W. Clement Stone, a very wealthy and successful black businessman and close friend of President Nixon. Stone has P.M.A.

If we in our everyday lives work in a positive manner, our lives will be much fuller, and we will accomplish a great deal more of good for ourselves and our fellow-man.

Stop worrying and put your better foot forward and things will happen for the better.

We need more of it right here in the community of Harrington ... a fine community composed of fine people. Let's make it a better community. Get the P.M.A. to work.

That's my CHOICE—What's YOURS?

MY ANGEL

I married an angel—she doesn't have wings,
Her title is "Queen of the Range."
She cooks and she bakes the most heavenly things,
Sometimes they're deliciously strange.

And when at long last a sample is passed,
I taste it and close my eyes.
My verdict is fast—"It can't be surpassed,"
But she thinks it can and she tries.

And to each recipe there always will be
An ingredient that is very real.
It's put there for me and I can just see
That it adds to the taste and appeal.

In everything nice—be it pie, cake or rice,
There's an ingredient that comes from above.
With the sugar and spice and everything nice
She adds a big scollop of love.

Woodcarver To Exhibit Skills

Exhibit Skills

Charles Stein has been carving since he was about 10 years old—making them mostly for his own hunting needs at first. Over the years this Georgetown artisan has developed a personal style that's as good as a signature in the world of waterfowl carving.

Though he views his carving pretty much as a pastime, Stein is well-known and respected for his skill. Three years ago, in fact his handsome decoys won him best in show in the novice class of the World Championship Waterfowl Carving Competition in Salisbury, Md. It was the first time Stein—high school science teacher by profession—had ever competed. "I only entered because my wife kept bugging me to do it," he explains modestly. Novice or not, he did pretty well—walking off with a pair of first prizes, in addition to his world championship.

You'll have a chance to see this fine woodcarver at work later this summer at the annual University of Delaware Farm and Home Field Day (Wednesday, Aug. 14) at the University's Substation in Georgetown. Stein will be one of a number of Delaware artisans demonstrating their work as part of a display of Heritage Skills sponsored by the Home Economics Extension Service of the University.

Besides woodcarving, there will be demonstrations of weaving, quilting, cornsuck weaving, cornsuck dolls, tinwork, rug hooking and braiding, toll painting and lampshade decoration. The event is open to the public free of charge.

Just in case you get the idea that the U. S. is feeding the whole world and nobody's selling us any food, take a closer look at some of the items in your supermarket the next time you shop.

Bananas, black pepper, Roquefort cheese, and seasonal items like fresh pears, apples and tomatoes are among the foreign fare found at American food stores.

As a matter of fact, the U. S. is second only to West Germany as the largest importer of agricultural products.

When the nation's domestic supplies of fresh pears fell off sharply not long ago, Australia harvested a bumper crop and moved in to become our leading supplier. Australia and New Zealand also shipped apples to the U. S. when domestic supplies were on the short side.

Last year, new import records were set for meat, dairy products, fruits, vegetables, nuts, bananas and wines.

Australia, New Zealand and Central American countries are the chief suppliers for our fresh-chilled or frozen beef imports, which totaled nearly 1.4 billion pounds last year.

Fashions That Are Dangerous to Motorists

Some fashions can be deadly when mixed with driving because they interfere with safe control of the car.

According to the Uniroyal Tire Company, the following style trends or items of clothing or jewelry can be dangerous:

Shoes—Platform shoes, clogs and all other nonflexible sole shoes prohibit complete control of gas and brake pedals. Wear driving shoes—loafers or sneakers—instead, or keep a pair in the car to exchange with the nonflexible sole shoes you're wearing.

Bracelets — Link, charm and dangling bracelets can catch on car keys, the horn ring, gear shifts or seat belts.

Gloves—Any cloth glove can be slippery and not let you grasp the steering wheel firmly. Leather, suede or leather-palmed gloves are recommended.

Long Hair—If your long hair isn't held back by a clip, it can catch in the steering wheel or seat belt or blow into your eyes.

Dr. Richard Fowler, livestock specialist at the University of Delaware, had some interesting comments concerning swine crossbreeding. In a recent pork newsletter, Dr. Fowler had these comments:

Greater survival rate is a result of crossbreeding. Research has shown that purebred sows crossed with a boar of another breed weaned an average of 25 pounds more pig per litter than non-crossbred matings. Number of pigs farrowed and gains were very similar for both groups so the heavier litters were due to a greater number of pigs surviving at weaning.

Breed differences showed up. Durocs and Hampshires had the biggest increase in litter weaning weights when crossed with another breed. Yorkshires responded least to crossbreeding. Greatest benefit came about by using crossbreed females. The three-way cross litters averaged one more pig than the two-breed litters from purebred gilts.

Crossbred pigs reached market weight 10 days earlier than purebreds did. There was no difference in growth rate between two-way crosses and three-way crosses. Feed efficiency was the same for all the pigs. Carcass quality was very similar to that of the parent breeds.

Clay base is best for cows. Cows in free stalls with clay bases enjoyed better health than those in concrete-filled stalls in a Purdue University study. Dr. Doi Hill, dairy specialist, says that a two-year study involving 32 lactating Holsteins was conducted at Purdue's dairy center. The cattle were housed in an open-front, free stall barn. One group was in a free stall area with a clay base, sawdust bedding and a solid concrete alleyway. The other group was in concrete-filled free stalls with little or no bedding and a concrete-slatted alleyway.

While there was no significant difference in milk production, cows on the clay base had better health, stayed cleaner with fewer mastitis cases and suffered fewer feet and leg injuries, Hill said.

Senior Center Activities

By Sam Short

At the last membership meeting the Center voted on several items of interest for the good of the Center, such as taking trips before the close of summer, one to Denton, Md., and a trip to St. Michaels. Several members volunteered to drive their own cars on these trips on a 50-50 basis.

Anyone who likes to bowl can join our Senior Citizen's bowling team at the Milford bowling lanes on Friday evenings. All you have to do is join the Center.

As several of our members have jobs at the Fair in various judging capacities, we will not have any activities for that week but will serve lunch to the members who are getting them there now. We would like to welcome all senior citizens to stop in and visit us while attending the Fair.

We have a new cook now with us, Mr. Charles Zini, a retired Army cook. He is moving to a bungalow on the corner of Grant and West Streets in Harrington.

We have been having Bible study with the Rev. John Edward Jones as our teacher. This will be discontinued through July and August and we are planning a hymn sing to replace it.

There is now a piano player and we invite you to come and help us. We also have the only kitchen band in the state. Come out and bring your own instruments.

Making things at the Center is fun and they make nice Christmas, wedding and birthday gifts—ceramics and arts and crafts. Make them yourself this year and save.

Mrs. Lelia Hopkins was welcomed back to the Center by the members at the meeting Tuesday. She has been on the sick list for quite a while. We are also glad to welcome Mr. Gleason back from the hospital and he is ready to go to work.

In the last few weeks we have had 13 new members join our Center. Come on, all of you who are 60 years of age or older. Join the crowd and enjoy yourselves.

Cutting expenses? Most of us are finding ways to plug some spending leaks.

Sewing the family clothing can save at least half of the cost of ready to wear if you have the time and skill required. But even if you sew there are ways to cut sewing costs.

Choose your pattern first and buy the exact amount of yardage. Impulse buying of any eye-catching fabric often results in buying more than you need. Check yardage requirements carefully. If you're on the short side you may be able to buy less fabric. You can use less expensive fabric for pocket linings or for garment facings. Eliminate pockets and pocket flaps altogether. Eliminate cuffs or make false ones.

Select styles with few pattern pieces. They cut to better advantage and save fabric as well as thread and your sewing time. A pretty print looks best in a simple style anyway.

You can reduce garment cost by eliminating some of the extra trim. Purchased trims are expensive. Self-fabric trims are time-consuming.

Bring out grandmother's button box. Or substitute other fastenings for buttons. This will be a do when you price buttons this fall. Prices of plastic buttons have nearly doubled in the past year. Raw materials for making these buttons have increased greatly in price and some materials are scarce. If you are buying buttons find ways to use fewer of them.

Thrifty seamstresses have re-used buttons and zippers for years. Thrift shops often remove zippers and buttons from clothing given to them and sell these notions at a fraction of the new price.

Reuse your patterns. Once you have a style which fits, use it often. Many styles are basic in design and the same pattern looks different in different fabrics. You reduce your pattern cost by one-third if you use the pattern three times instead of once.

Use up some of that fabric you bought on impulse. Most seamstresses have a stockpile of fabric bought at a weak moment. Use it up so you'll have storage space for those bargains bought at seasonal sales.

Don't economize on fabric quality unless it is absolutely essential. Good fabric is easier to sew and the garment will look good as long as you choose to wear it. Good-quality fabric can be reused and made into new garments as styles change.

It's kind of fun to find ways to economize once you start on an economy kick.

Harrington Loses Three Games During Week

After losses to Smyrna-Clayton, Middletown and Dover, Harrington's Big League record now stands at one victory and eight defeats.

In an 8-6 defeat at the hands of S-C, Harrington outthit the winners, 8-6. Rodney Wyatt was on the mound for Harrington. Neal Smith had three hits in four trips. The Lake Forest junior was tied for fourth place in the National League batting averages with a .368. Glenn Jarrell had two Harrington safeties.

Middletown held a slim 1-0 lead until the final inning when a two-run rally made the final count 3-0. Greg Hobbs pitched well in defeat and had Harringtons only base hit.

Neal Smith was credited with holding the score down. Playing centerfield this time, he caught a drive that was headed out of the park and made a shoestring catch that halted an extra-base try by a Middletown batter.

Pitcher Bob Nored and catcher Wayne Erne accounted for Harrington's two hits as Dover recorded a 10-1 triumph.

Bryant, Mosley Win In Dover Track Opener

The first summer track meet sponsored by Kent County Parks and Recreation saw Lake Forest athletes winning. Don Bryant, holder of three Lake Forest track records, flew 21 feet, 4 inches to win the long jump, placed second in the 100-yard dash, and ran on the winning 440 relay team. Bryant received two first place awards and one for second place while competing in the 18 and over age group.

Ron Mosley, a superb half-miler and miler, vied in the 440 this time and tied for first in 53.8 seconds with Adolphus Price of Cape Henlopen. Price was a close second in this year's quarter-mile race in the scholastic title meet. They ran in the 15-17 group.

Mosley will compete in the 880-yard run in the Junior Olympics Eastern Regional meet to be held Saturday near Washington, D. C. He's already won the Delaware and Middle Atlantic titles and could earn a trip to the National meet in Omaha, Neb., if he does well.

Tuesday, July 16, at Dover High, the third meet will be held. No entry blanks are necessary. There are events for male and female in all age groups. At 6:30 p. m. boys 11 and under, girls 14 and under, and girls 15 and over will compete in separate divisions in these events: 120-yard dash, 220-yard run, 880 relay, and softball throw. At 7:30 p. m. boys 12-14, boys 15-17, and men 18 and over will contest the 220, mile, 880 relay and shot put, with a single exception. The boys 12-14 will throw the softball instead of the shot.

Men 30 and over will try the 220, the 3/4-mile run and the shot put. Some of these men may elect to compete instead in the 18 and over group. Each contestant is limited to two events. Awards are given for first, second and third places.

A fountain in Sicily was credited with being able to distinguish truth from lies. Writings were thrown into it, and the truth floated, lies sank.

Harold Bunting Invincible In Holiday Triumphs

Eastern Shore stockcar racing saw Milford's Harold Bunting, commander of the Paul White-lock Prepared Vega, score an impressive Holiday "Firecracker 50" Sportsmen triumph over Richard Malnor of Berlin, Md., in a Mustang. Bunting and Malnor, in what had to be one of the most exciting races ever staged on Delmarva, duel from lap 15 until they tangled on the 35th go-round with both recovering and Bunting going on for the victory.

Modified feature racing D. A. R. A. style once again witnessed Milford's "Mr Invincible" Harold Bunting perform with flawless ability capturing win No. 25 of the season for the Don't Auto Parts crew. The race for first developed during the last five laps as Haines Tull of Seaford was drawing a bead on Bunting's bumper as time ran out for the Davis Trucking ace chauffeur.

Bill Towers of Harrington represented the Ford contingent bringing the Katheryn's Restaurant-Towers Gulf Pinto home third. Each week Towers is gaining the experience and beginning to demonstrate a fine ability to lead and run up front. Bridgeville's Stan Busby, another up and coming charger on the circuit, scored fourth in the J. O. B. Construction Vega. Walt Breeding of Federalsburg, Md., nailed down fifth with his Taylor & Messick-Advanced Speed & Equipment Vega.

Next scheduled D.A.R.A. program is July 12 at 8 p. m.

EARLY SUMMER

season. Head back and thin over-vigorous shrubs to the desired size. Remove low-hanging tree branches that interfere with walkways. Cuts on trees and shrubs made at this time will heal quickly. Allow wounds to dry for a week or two—then cover them with tree paint.

It's also time to divide and replant German iris. Cut back the leaves and divide the clumps into single plants with one or two sections of healthy rhizome. Discard any diseased plants. If the disease has been a problem with your iris, it may be wise to try a new location for them. To control the iris border, incorporate a systemic insecticide into the soil where you replant them.

If you haven't done it yet, remove all old flower heads from your rhododendrons. These dead flower heads are best broken out by hand, says Dunham. Do this now to increase growth and the development of flower buds for next year.

Weeds are the No. 1 garden problem in the early summer. Mulching greatly aids their control in flower and shrub beds. Even if you haven't mulched your plants, it's not too late. You will have to clean up plant beds first, though. When you use a hoe, be sure not to cultivate too deeply around shallow-rooted plants. Azaleas and boxwood are two shrubs especially vulnerable to careless cultivation.

Your roses have already reached their peak bloom. To make sure they continue to bloom all summer, keep to a regular spray schedule. Also, break off old blooms as soon as the petals drop. Roses should be ready for a light application of fertilizer now that their June bloom is over.

Grass clippings, weeds and any other organic refuse will decompose rapidly in a compost pile during the warm summer months. To speed up the decomposition, add a thin layer of soil, some lime and fertilizer. And keep the pile moist. Many of the house plants you placed outside for the summer will be making vigorous new growth now. Pinch and shape them as they grow to produce nice symmetrical full plants to bring back into the house next fall.

DANGER LURKS

tato and tomato plants contain alkaloid poisons that can, when swallowed, create nervous disorders and stomach upsets. Most plants is rhubarb. Its stalks, commonly used in cooking and baking, are not toxic but the plant's leaf blade, containing oxalic acid can crystallize in the kidneys and cause severe damage if a number of leaves are eaten.

The best preventive measure is an all-around educational program implemented in the schools and in the home.
