"A gain for Wisconsin will be a loss to Harrington."

It was recently learned that Arnold Gilstad would be moving away from Harrington in the near future. Arnold has been a strong point in our community for a long time. As far as I can recall, there has always been an Arnold Gilstad in Harrington. His absence will be sorely missed.

Arnold Burton Gilstad must have been a raw-boned young man when he first set foot on the Delaware shores in 1941. He had taken a job with the duPont Company back in his home state of Wisconsin and was transferred to the duPont plant in Seaford shortly thereafter.

Except for a break during World War II, when he served overseas as a company commander in the infantry, he has been in Delaware ever since. In many ways, we all are glad that he came our way, for all of us in many ways have benefited from his association.

Arnold's familiar pose, where I first remember him, was sitting at his insurance desk - to the right upon entering the Raughley Insurance building. That's probably where he met many of us and certainly where he ended up helping us. Since 1941, his record of accomplishments have been many, stemming from his long association with the fair (director and member of the executive committee for 25 years), the raceway (secretary at the raceway for 25 years), established Gilstad Real Estate 20 years ago, carried on the Raughley Insurance Agency for the past 30 odd years, member of Masonic Temple Lodge No. 9 AF&AM and Delaware Consistory 32nd Degree Mason, member of Harrington Chamber of Commerce, Harrington Lions Club, director and vice president of First National Bank of Harrington and since 1968 he has been the president of the bank.

Through all of this he has brought a real part of our community for he brought us a certain touch of class. To say that he has been kind, courteous, and considerate to us would be an understatement. All of us who know him will miss him. We wish him much success in the years ahead at his new home in Grand View, Wisconsin. "A gain for Wisconsin will be a loss to Harrington."

Thoughts . . .

by Senator William Roth

The Internal Revenue Service admits that it should be more responsive to taxpayers' needs and complaints.

I have discussed this matter with James Quinn, Regional Director of the Wilmington IRS office. Mr. Quinn admits that the IRS needs to be attentive to this problem and he has been most helpful in offering suggestions on how his office can best deal with taxpayer complaints.

In addition, on a recent radio program for Delaware stations, I discussed taxpayer grievances with Donald C. Alexander, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. I told him I receive many letters from people who complain that they don't understand IRS procedures or findings and can't find anyone within the agency to help them.

"We recognize the problem," he said. "It's a serious one and we're doing our best to meet it. I wish I could say that we were meeting it completely effectively. We're not."

He explained that the taxpayer service division of the IRS is relatively new and said that the agency does not have enough trained personnel to respond as fully as it should to taxpayer concerns and complaints.

I asked Mr. Alexander how a taxpayer should go about entering a complaint with the IRS if he disagreed with its actions.

His reply, in effect, was that the taxpayer should go over the head of whomever was handling the case and appeal to the next higher level of authority within the IRS. He said the agency is in the process of establishing a complaint desk within its taxpayer service division, but added that this "is slow to come."

"It's slow to come," he said, "because of the problems I mentioned about the workload exceeding the resources available to cope with it. And slow to come because it's something new to the IRS, and the IRS, like all large organizations, moves slowly."

Mr. Alexander convinced me that he is concerned about IRS shortcomings, but his comments underscore, I think, the need for the sort of legislative remedies I have proposed.

I have introduced legislation that would establish within the IRS a special division to provide assistance to taxpayers and investigate whatever complaints they may have. It would serve as an ombudsman, with the authority to make recommendations directly to Congress on tax collection matters.

The bill would also require the IRS to inform taxpayers of its reasons for auditing a tax return, to advise taxpayers of their rights in such cases, and to eliminate the secrecy that currently surrounds IRS audit procedures.

Fifteen other senators, including both the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Senate Subcommittee on Administration of the Internal Revenue Code, have joined me in sponsoring the bill.

We believe that the needs and rights of taxpayers should be given the protection of law. They are basic. They should not be subject to the vagaries of bureaucratic life.

As the nation's tax collector, the IRS is the only direct contact most citizens have with the federal government. By increasing the public's confidence in the IRS, we can increase its confidence in our government.

DuPont Reports

Most would agree that English is a wonderful language. According to Professor Henry Higgins, however, it has not been spoken in America for years. From all indications, the debasement of our common coin of communication is on a par with the dwindling value of the dollar.

Obscuration, for example, is becoming an advanced art. In the relentless quest for status, simple descriptions are giving way to lofty titles. The man who collects your trash has become a sanitary engineer who takes his haul to a solid waste disposal site instead of the town dump. If your pet has disappeared, you call your local animal warden. (Dog catchers evidently are as extinct as the awk and dodo bird.)

Washington abounds with various bureaucratic dialects. Some expressions, however, become widely accepted as governmentese. Many Federal policies are programs require "fine tuning" before they are "up to speed." If you need a rough estimate of costs, you ask for a "ballpark figure." If you encounter a tough and treacherous opponent, he is likely to play "hardball politics" against you. Therefore, it is important to determine his "bottom line" or minimum bargaining position.

It would be difficult indeed to award a prize to the best wordsmith in Washington. My candidate, however, is the faceless flack in the Pentagon who had to find a new definition for tear gas. Could anyone improve upon his masterpiece, a "beneficial incapacitator?"

Another disturbing development in the undermining of our language is the gradual disappearance of yes and no. I base this observation on the replies of numerous witnesses that have testified before Congressional Committees. When asked a question that obviously merits a brief positive or negative response, they seek refuge in the need "to put the situation in its proper perspective," and are off on a windy sail of words.

The question, of course, goes unanswered. I recognize that members of Congress also suffer from this affliction. Frequently, however, we are reminded that yes or no - or yea and nay - still live when we are required to record our votes.

Our everyday language is replete with new variations of perfectly good old words and expressions. We all want to avoid being ripped off, hassled, put on (or down), and to skirt "heavy" problems. Meanwhile, "hopefully" is springing eternally everywhere these days. It is time to give that overworked word a rest.

Do I believe that I personally am guilty of committing any of the foregoing sins against our language? Well, we must look at the problem in its proper framework. In doing so, we hopefully will see that English

Weekly Report of Joseph Biden

What man or woman breathes in America who has not cussed at the Federal government when it comes time to fill out any one of the countless forms our government has inflicted upon us?

There are so many of them, it has been estimated that Washington generates more than 2 billion forms a year - more than 10 for every man, woman and child in America.

Stack them up and they would fill Yankee Stadium 50 times or more, according to one estimate made by Senator Thomas McIntyre, who has conducted a number of hearings on the subject.

Then there is the cost. It's estimated that it costs $18 billion a year to print, sort out and file all those pieces of paper. And it costs businessmen and others another $18 billion a year to fill out and return them.

I think it's time for a radical

Farmers Alerted To New OSHA Regulations

Recent Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) regulations concern all farmers, says Ronald Jester, extension farm safety specialist at the University of Delaware's station in Georgetown. According to Jester, a new OSHA law went into effect June 1, 1975, which requires that farmers inform employees who operate tractors about safe operating practices. Employees must be informed at the time of initial assignment and at least annually thereafter.

The following are the instructions employees are to receive in the operation of agricultural tractors:

1. Securely fasten your seat belt if the tractor has a rollover protective structure
2. When possible, avoid operating the tractor near ditches, embankments and holes
3. Reduce speed when turning, crossing slopes and on rough, slick or muddy surfaces
4. Stay off slopes too steep for safe operation
5. Watch where you are going, especially at row ends, in roads and around trees
6. Do not permit others to ride
7. Operate the tractor smoothly - no jerky turns, starts, or stops
8. Hitch only to the drawbar and hitch points recommended by tractor manufacturers
9. When the tractor is stopped, set brakes securely and use park lock if available

Keep in mind the following points as you prepare your window display:

1. Try to make the public aware that 4-H is active in the community.

2. Keep your display neat and easy to read.

3. Try to have action.

4. Have a contact for more information. You may use the 4-H office number, 856-5250.

4-H is a family affair - enroll the parent as you enroll the boy or girl is good 4-H procedure. Much of 4-H club work is home and family centered and the success of a member depends a great deal on the interest and enthusiasm of the parents. They can give guidance in project selection, advice and encouragement in planning and carrying out the project. Those interested should write the 4-H office, R.D. 2, Box 48, Georgetown, or call 856-5250. There is not a better time to join 4-H.

Your 4-H leaders now have the Achievement Banquet tickets. We only have 500 seats remember, so if you plan to go, you had better get your tickets today. It will be a great night of fun and fellowship. Don't stay home and be disappointed!

to the point of what consumers can get hold of in terms of canning lids and sealing materials.

Q. What about the canning lids that are reportedly not good for home canning purposes - and what exactly is their purpose?

A. Specifically, the ones

I'm concerned with are being sold in some quantity, seemingly, in this area. Made by a perfectly reputable company, these lids were developed for the canning of certain types of commercially preserved products. These were not intended for use of home processed, or home canned, foods. In some situations, I understand, there is some type of basic information that is being handed out with these lids as they are being sold. So, consumers may get some idea of how they might be used. In other situations, there is no information except that on the carton as the person makes the purchase. And the statement on the carton that should probably be made more clear, is that these lids should not be used for home processing of meat, poultry, non-acid foods or for pressure canning of foods.

This leaves, of course, some things as person might use them for - namely processing fruits, pickles, jams and jellies. However, the information doesn't state that these lids really are suitable for this purpose. As I said before, these lids were developed for commercial preservation and the means of preserving foods com-mercially is somewhat different than those means that are open to the home canner. With these lids there seems to be no real way to tell when a person may have a secure seal developing on these foods. So, I think we may have a question as to how well these foods have been preserved and sealed and whether or not they will hold up for any extended period of time.

We may have some food safety problems developing here, and maybe food loss. The trouble is, I think there are some very serious questions here - about these canning lids - it comes down to this: whether or not home canners can tell if they have a safely preserved food product that is going to hold up for some period of time.

Q. In light of this discussion, the consumer should be wary of these canning lids. So, what are your suggestions for consumers in finding the correct and usable type of lid?

A. There are so very few options open. If consumers are able to purchase reputable, brand-name products, of course this is to their advantage. You can be reasonably sure that these products will function as they should. If consumers buy brands they are not acquainted with, there ought to be some indication along with the canning material - about the way in which it should be used. Then, I suggest they follow these directions very carefully.

Pictured above are all of the candidates for the Miss Felton and Little Miss Felton pageant as they await the word as to the winners. The winner of Miss Felton was Robin Degnates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Degnates, and the winner of Little Miss Felton was Melissa Kay Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hughes. Fetal Monitor For MMH

The Labor and Delivery Unit of Milford Memorial Hospital has added a new dimension to its interest and regard for the safe delivery of both mother and child. Equipment designed to monitor the unborn child and the mother's progress has recently been acquired by the hospital.

The fetal monitoring unit is compact, portable and produces a continuous two-sided graph from the electrodes placed on the mother's abdomen or applied directly to the unborn child. The graph records not only the heart beat of the baby, but the contractions of the mother. From reading the graph it is possible for the physician to accurately determine the stress being experienced by the baby. He then will decide whether the baby may be safely delivered normally or whether delivery should be induced.

The decision to monitor an expectant mother is always made by the physician and is not limited to exceptional cases. Monitoring may be continued as long as the physician feels it is necessary to the welfare of the mother and child. The nursing staff of the Labor and Delivery Unit is qualified to operate the monitor and report to the physician; however, in instances where direct monitoring of the baby is indicated only the physician may attach the electrodes.

"In acquiring this sophisticated equipment at a cost of $8,000," says Joseph B. Ahlschier, President of Milford Memorial Hospital, "the hospital has taken a great stride forward to further provide a climate for safe delivery of a child to those women whose medical history indicate that possibility."

Area Appaloosa Show Draws Entries

On Sunday, August 31, Harrington will host the Delaware All Appaloosa Show. Competitors from all over, including both individual owners and large stables, will compete for prizes. One of these stables will be Singletree Stables Riding School, Inc. of Seaford, Delaware.

Miss Mollie Esterson, currently studying for her instructor's certificate, and Miss Susan Long, an advanced riding student, will be showing Waco's Joker B and Smokey's Otter Dots, respectively.

Miss Esterson is well known among the Appaloosa people, having won many ribbons and championships on her personally-trained horse, Waco's Joker B, better known as Black, has proven he will be tough competition by placing second and third in English serve Champion for the division at the Washington International Horse Show. Black has also earned both Certificates of Achievement which is awarded only to Appaloosas.

Susan and Smokey will be appearing for the first time at the Appaloosa show. Although this is Smokey's first season showing for the stable, he has been placed in the ribbons quite often and should appear at the top of his classes.

When not appearing at area shows, these horses spend their time helping make good horsemen out of the students at Singletree Stables Riding School, Inc.

Mrs. Janet Esterson, the head instructor at the school, will also be at the show to cheer her riders on.

This is just a small section of the many ribbons and trophies which have been won in various shows by Mollie Esterson and Waco's Joker B.

It Seems To Me

Fall fashions and new fabrics are showing up in the stores. The new fashion season is always an exciting time with ideas everywhere.

If you're sewing the family wardrobe this year try to find time to look first at ready-to-wear. You'll get a good idea of style trends, colors and fabrics. You don't need to be bound by them but you're apt to get ideas you can adapt for your own purpose.

Are you making coats for the children or for yourself? Take a look at some of the exciting man-made furs. I don't know why we call them furs because many of them don't even make a pretense of looking like furs. They come in bright colors and different textures.

Every year the choice is greater. This year you have a wide choice. If you don't want a coat of this fabric, consider it for a lining or for accessories. It's ideal for lining capes, which are more popular than ever this year.

Check the care directions before you make your final choice. These fabrics differ greatly in the care required. Pile fabrics are easy to sew. If you're using them for the first time here are some sewing suggestions.

Keep the style simple. The fewer details the fewer problems. Eliminate seams where possible. For example, the center back of a straight coat can be cut on the fold instead of seamed. Front facings can be cut in one piece with the front of the coat in same styles. If facings seem too bulky, consider using braid to finish the edges. Choose styles which do not require buttonholes.

When cutting out the coat, lay the pattern pieces so that the pike goes down in a lengthwise direction on all pieces. Pin the pattern to the wrong side of the fabric. Cut a single layer of fabric at a time for greater accuracy. If the pattern calls for darts, try to ease in the fabric instead. This will be difficult for a large dart and you may prefer to trim away some of the fabric within the dart after it is finished.

Stitch in the direction of the pile, forcing as much of the pile as possible away from the seam as you sew. When the seam is finished, use a needle or fine comb to gently pull out any pile which may have been wedged into the seam when it was sewn. This makes an invisible seam line.

Be cautious about pressing. The fabric may not need it. Different fiber content in these fabrics respond differently to steam and heat. Always test a sample of the fabric before touching the iron to it.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Jump Jr. were their daughter, Cristine, and son-in-law, Owen B. Melton Jr. and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Melton, Sr., all of Indiana. They spent ten days here and visited in Williamsburg, Va.

Other weekend guests were their daughter, Sue and son-in-law, Jerry Stup, of Middletown, Md., and their daughter, Ginger, and son-in-law, James Baldack, and granddaughter, Holly Cristine, of Cambridge, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Houston Willey spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Minner and family of Kenet Square, Pa. Their son, Kevin Twilley, spent last week with his uncle and aunt and returned home with his parents.

Town And Country

Dave Woodward
KENT COUNTY AGENT

At this time of year there are two soybean insects and maybe a third one that cause concern among soybean growers. Namely, they are the Mexican bean beetle, the Green Cloverworm and the Corn Earworm. Spider Mites also give some problems. Below I will describe the insect, the damage it does, and time of treatment.

Mexican Bean Beetle - Damage: Larvae and adults feed on foliage and stems with some podfeeding occurring before the pods mature. The larvae feed in characteristic strip-like patterns, leaving sections of untouched leaf between the feeding areas, thus giving the foliage a lace-like appearance. Both adults and larvae leave the transparent upper epidermis un eaten.

Description - The adult beetle is about 1/3 long, copper yellow with 16 black dots (8 on each wing cover). The larvae are yellow and covered with branched spines, which give them a fuzzy appearance. The larvae grow to about 1/3 inch and are full grown in 3 to 5 weeks. As the larvae approach the pupal stage, they lose some of their spines and become attached to the leaf. Pupae are yellow with a transparent whitish cast skin at other end which is attached to the leaf. There are usually two generations a year in Delaware.

Control - In fields that have had previous infestations, growers may wish to treat new plantings at plantings at planting time with a systemic insecticide. Treat young plants that have become infested after emergence from the soil. On young beans before bloom, treat only when foliage injury averages 25 percent or more. For soybean in bloom or podding, treat when defoliation reaches 15 percent or more. Also check plants by shaking three feet of row in 10 locations throughout the field onto a white sheet. If the total count is over 150, treat.

Green Cloverworm - Damage - Green cloverworms cause ragging and defoliation of plants. When populations are heavy, they may attack the pods.

Description - The larvae of the green cloverworm are light green with two white stripes along each side of the body. They have only four pairs of prolegs (including rear prolegs). When mature, they measure about 1 to 1 1/2 inches. They are very active, falling to the ground at the slightest disturbance. When touched, they wiggle violently. The adult moths are dark brown and black; when at rest they resemble an arrowhead. There are usually two generations a season.

Control - Predators, parasites and diseases aid greatly in reducing the number of green cloverworms. Parasitism and disease are often high when populations are severe, thus providing natural control most of the time. Insecticide treatment is justified on soybeans only when there are eight or more worms per foot of row. To make a count, place a white cloth about three feet long and 20 inches wide between two adjacent rows. Grasp the plants in an 18 inch section of row and shake vigorously over the cloth. Count several times at various locations in the field. After the beans are fully developed, treatment will not be needed unless the insects are feeding on the pods.

Corn Earworm - Damage - The larvae prefer to feed upon the soybean pods, but when these are not available the leaves are devoured, especially when the insect is very abundant. Typically, they eat a round access hole through the pod and consume the bean seed inside. The small worms feed slowly and may easily be overlooked. When large, earworms eat ravenously causing more obvious and heavy pod damage. The earworm's attack on soybeans usually occurs in late August and September, when corn is maturing and relatively unattractive to the moths.

Description - Earworms are cutworm-like in appearance and when full grown are about 1 1/2 inches long. They vary in color and may be green, olive-green, pink, yellow, or brown or nearly black. They have light-colored undersides and possess longitudinal body stripes. In summer they complete their growth in about 20 days. The adult moth that emerges from the pupa is about 1 1/2 inches across the wing spread and varies in color from light brown to faint olive-green. There are usually two generations of corn earworms each season in Delaware.

Control - Inspect fields regularly after pods are formed. Treat when one earworm per three linear row feet is found or when small larvae become apparent on young pods.

Spider Mites - Damage - In Delaware, it is the two-spotted spider mite or strawberry spider mite that attacks soybeans in the summer. Plants turn light yellow, often become brown and eventually die under a severe infestation.

Description - Two-spotted mites are small, oval, varying in color from yellow to light green with a pair of dark spots on the body. There may be as many as 10 generations during the growing season.

Control - Treatment usually begins during July or August when early defoliation occurs on border plants. Treat entire field. We suggest checking your fields every three or four days by walking through them and if you see a problem that needs attention call the Kent County Extension Office at 736-1448 and we will do our best to advise you or make a farm visit if necessary.

Prepare Squash Economically

A wide variety of vegetables may find their way to your table this season in different forms. Some of the summer squash varieties are favorites in casseroles, used as side dishes, frozen for use out of season, and even canned as pickles.

Summer squash includes those varieties which are harvested while still immature and when the entire squash is tender and edible. They include the yellow crookneck, the large yellow straightneck, the greenish-white Patty Pan, and the slender green Zucchini and Italian Marrow. Some of these squash are available at all times of the year.

When you are choosing or buying squash in season, look for squash that are tender and well developed, firm, fresh appearing, and well-formed. You can identify a tender squash because the skin is glossy instead of dull, and it is neither hard nor tough. Try to avoid stale or overmature squash, which will have a dull appearance and a hard, tough surface. Such squash usually have enlarged seeds and dry, stringy flesh.

Marguerite Krackhardt, University of Delaware extension food nutrition specialist has a suggestion for Summer Squash Casserole that will save you time and money.

2 pounds yellow summer squash, sliced (6 cups)
1 can condensed cream of chicken soup
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 cup dairy sour cream
1 cup shredded carrot
1 8-oz. package herb-seasoned stuffing mix
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted

In sauce pan, cook sliced squash and chopped onion in boiling salted water for 5 minutes; drain. Combine cream of chicken soup and sour cream. Stir in shredded carrot. Fold in drained squash and onion. Combine stuffing mix and butter or margarine. Spread half of stuffing mixture in bottom of 12 x 7 1/2 x 2 inch baking dish. Spoon vegetable mixture atop. Sprinkle remaining stuffing over vegetables. Bake in 350 degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until heated through. Makes 6 servings.

Besides the delicious casserole dish, yellow squash and zucchini combine well simmered in their own juices and butter. Zucchini and tomatoes are great as a sidedish, too.

Pickles and relishes made from summer squash are just as flavorful, attractive, and economical as cucumbers, according to the extension specialist. Most consumers don't realize that zucchini pickles can be just as crisp and thinly sliced as cucumbers. At times it's easier to get zucchini than it is cucumbers. Ms. Krackhardt suggests this Sliced Zucchini Pickle recipe:

1 quart vinegar
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup salt
2 tsp. celery seeds
2 tsp. ground turmeric
1 tsp. dry mustard
4 quarts sliced, unpeeled zucchini
1 quart onions, sliced
Bring vinegar, sugar, salt and spices to a boil; pour over zucchini and onions and let stand one hour. Bring to a boil; cook 3 minutes. Pack in hot jars; adjust lids at once. Process in boiling water bath (212 degrees F.) 5 minutes. Remove jars from canner and complete seals unless closures are the self-sealing type. Makes 6 to 7 pints.

For a variation in taste, Dilled Zucchini Pickles can be made by following same recipe, but substitute 2 tsp. dill seeds for turmeric. Whether picking from your home garden or buying at the roadside stands, be sure to choose the tender well-formed and fresh appearing summer squash. Consumers then can be sure of perfection with their summer squash dishes.

The Green Thumb

Some folks may believe that money makes the world go around, but those who understand nature know better. Light is the unique source of energy upon which we depend for our existence and progress.

Light provides the energy for photosynthesis which produces all of our food. Without light there would be no green plants and thus no food for animals or man. The earth would be a barren, lifeless sphere.

The interesting plant growth phenomena we would like to emphasize at this time is the photoperiod. This response of plants to the daily duration of light and darkness is of great importance to home gardeners and horticulturists.

The flowering of most plants is directly related to the length of the light and dark periods to which they are exposed. Some plants such as chrysanthemum, cosmos and poinsettia develop flowers only under short day conditions.

Short day plants develop flower buds and bloom when the hours of daylight are less than 12. This explains why most chrysanthemums and poinsettias bloom in late summer and fall.

On the other hand, long day plants like China aster, peas, sweet corn and grasses, form flowers when days are long with over 14 hours of light. Thus, these plants bloom more profusely in early summer.

Commercial florists and home gardeners may use the long and short day photoperiod characteristic to adjust the blooming date of their plants. Years ago for example, you could have chrysanthemums only during the fall. Now, by shading the plants when the days are long, you can cause them to bloom in the spring and early summer.

Or, by providing chrysanthemums with extra light during seasons of short days, you can have larger plants and delay blooming until a later period. This explains why we now have mums the year round rather than just as a football season flower.

The short day photoperiod phenomena is also responsible for the seasonal blooming of your Christmas cactus. The plants develop flower buds in September and October when the days are short. Exposure to artificial light before sunrise or after sunset may delay or prevent flowering. To ensure good blooming of your Christmas cactus, remove it from any well lighted part of the house during the fall.

There are also day-neutral plants which will produce flowers and fruit under either long or short day conditions. The tomato is an example of such a plant. It grows outdoors under by observing that breaking the long dark period in the middle, even for a short time, prevented the flowering of short day plants.

The study of photoperiodism can become quite complicated. As gardeners, we need only to be familiar with this phenomena and appreciate its importance in the flowering of our plants. In some cases we may use this knowledge to adjust the blooming season of certain crops.

was being taught in social studies classes but that more stress would be placed on these areas this year.

Lake Forest School bus routes - The routes are basically the same except for the changes which are stated below.

If parents or students have any questions concerning any bus they should call the school which they will attend for information as all schools have copies of their routes and con- tractors.

All drivers are given rosters of their new students along with their students' phone numbers and they are instructed to contact their students.

Here are the changes:

High School

Students living on Road 35, west of Frederica, Killens Pond road, north on Killens Pond road to Paradise Alley road and west to Paradise Alley road to dual; will now ride bus 42, Owain Gruwell.

Chipman Jr. School
Students living in Allen's Trailer Park that used to ride bus 13 will now ride bus 9, Mrs. Dixon's bus.

Lake Forest North
Bus 29 will now pick up students at Lake Forest Mobile Estates and those on Road 284 by Killens Pond park entrance.

Students living in Felton Manor and west on Road 241 to Road 240 to Plymouth road will now ride bus 3B, Fern Harrington.

Parents should remember that state regulations do not permit a bus to come down and pick up a student unless that students lives 1/2 mile or more off bus routes.

LITTLE KNOWN FACTS ABOUT PLASTICS

HOW THEY HELP US • ENTERTAINING ODDITIES • A LOOK AHEAD

During the 30 years since World War II, plastics, and indeed all other synthetics derived from petrochemicals, have become tightly enmeshed in the life-style and the basic economy of our nation.

Through the years plastics, in many applications, have become increasingly important as the preferred material or at least as an attractive alternative to many traditional materials whose growing costs are a reflection of both their scarcity and, in many cases, their high energy consumption.

In fact, it is realistic to say that plastics are proving to be one of the scientists' best answers to the growing materials and energy shortages we face. With traditional resources dwindling, the role of plastics is bound to grow in importance.

As is the case with many basic materials in our economy, plastics have felt the squeeze of the resource and energy crunch. But unlike many other materials, plastics can be dealt a double blow by any tightening in the nation's energy supplies.

The availability of plastics is linked directly to the availability of petroleum and natural gas, from which the basic plastic feedstocks are derived.

Until government resource planners come to understand that the best resource value of petroleum is as a non-fuel resource, the future ability of the plastics industry to produce the growing volume of materials necessary to fill the nation's needs will remain in doubt.

Our Safety, Jobs, Prices
This doubt can affect our safety, jobs and the prices we must pay because it would be difficult to find a production facility, a machine, an appliance, an office building or a household that does not depend in some way on the use of plastics.

The efforts of the plastics industry provide us with sanitary food containers, piping, building materials, upholstery, furniture, electrical insulation, hundreds of different machine parts, and thousands of other essential and useful products.

For the military, plastics provide essential parts in high-speed aircraft and atomic submarines that defend us.

Plastics have made possible tremendous strides in medicine through the development of artificial heart valves and arteries, bone replacements, soft contact lenses, dentures and the protective enclosures for pacemakers. Scores of sick room disposables such as hypodermic syringes, blood and plasma bags, depend on plastic. Even the doctor's symbolic bag is likely to be made of plastic these days.

Plastic packaging has contributed to enhancing our food supply.

If plastics were to disappear overnight the effects on us would be staggering.

Even a 15 percent cut-back in the supply of petrochemical feedstocks to the plastics industry would bring a layoff of 562,000 workers. And the changes in our way of life would be beyond conception.

Saving Our Energy
Plastics are relatively low energy consumers in production. Plastics' high utility to weight results in savings of time, money and energy in transportation. And plastics have proved to be inexpensive substitutes for many materials.

In many instances it takes far less processing energy to produce a plastic material than to recover an equivalent poundage of metal from ore. For example, it takes 3.44 kilowatt-hours to produce a pound of high density polyethylene as compared with a range of from 3.89 to 21.30 for other materials. And because of differences in density that pound of polyethylene can replace, for example, between two and five pounds of metal.

The ability of plastics to give us what we need at low cost brings us to the questions of energy and minerals policy and the need to decide on the proper use of our resources.

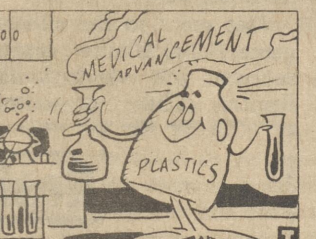

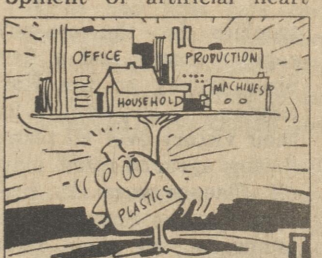

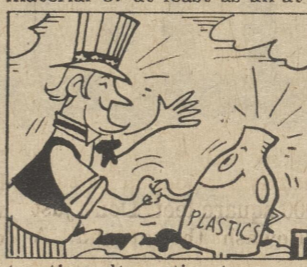

We need allocations providing a firm assurance of the petroleum supply that is necessary to meet our requirements for quality products at reasonable prices.

Allocations are not the final answer to the industry.

What we need is a priority status based on the national need for the products they produce. Without a priority status the nation's ability to make plans for future expansion is hamstrung.

There must be a realization soon that petroleum is most valuable as a non-fuel resource.

The Shah of Iran put it neatly when he noted that oil is too valuable to burn.

Richie Jackson won the first annual "Broadcasters Motorcycle Championship Race, while Dennis Varner took the 20 lap feature in the AMA portion of the double bill motorcycle program at Lincoln Speedway, Saturday night.

The ten-lap Broadcasters Championship starting line-up listed broadcasters from six downstate radio stations. In a tight duel that saw the lead change hands seven times, Richie Jackson of WDSO, Dover, beat out Steve Boadwine, WJWL disc jockey, Georgetown. Bobby Mogan, WDOV, Dover, trailed at the checkered flag by 15 bike lengths to take third. Whip Willis, WDSO, finished fourth, R. B. Burd, WSEA, Georgetown, took fifth, Wes Daffin, WDOV, Dover, sixth, Larry Sharp, WAFL, Milford, finished seventh. Mark Crouch, WTHD trailed in eighth spot. The riders competed on Honda XR 75 off-road racing machines.

Dennis Varner, Cochranville, Pa., fought off constant challenges of Bill Knox, Exton, Pa., and Larry Sweeten, Sicklerville, N.J., to win the "Big Bike" 20 lap AMA main event. Dover's Mark Tudor, who scored convincingly in the preliminaries finished fourth and Noel F. Portelli, Havertown, Pa., fifth.

A field of over 90 riders competed on the 1/4 mile track in eight class categories. The track surface became fast and slick during the latter stages of the program, causing many riders to fall - none were seriously injured, only shaken up.

The Lincoln Speedway will remain closed on the Labor Day weekend. The next regular weekly program of American Motorcycle Assn. racing will be presented on Saturday night, Sept. 7. First race of the 19 race card will go at 8 p.m.

Seed Your Fall Lawn Now

Whether you're planting a new lawn or repairing an old one, between now and September 30 is the best time to do it. David Tatnall, extension garden specialist at the University of Delaware, has some advice on both seedbed preparation and grass varieties to use.

Inadequate seedbed preparation is responsible for many lawn seeding failures, says the specialist. So don't cut corners. Be sure the surface of the soil is even and well-broken up. Remove stones and other debris. Old leaves, weeds, dead grass or thatch should be removed or mixed into the soil thoroughly.

Apply a complete fertilizer just before you seed. Rake this lightly into the soil. Tatnall advises using 20 pounds of 5-10-10 or 10 pounds of 10-10-10 fertilizer for each 1,000 square feet. He suggests, however, that the homeowner have his soil tested first.

The most desirable grasses grow best in a neutral or near-neutral soil. If you haven't limed for several years, or if a soil test indicates the need for lime, apply it before seeding.

Lime is one of the cheapest materials available for use on a lawn. Don't be afraid to use as much as you need, says Tatnall. It may take as much as 100 pounds for each 1,000 square feet. Don't just whitewash the ground. A little lime looks impressive but it doesn't do much good. Distribute seed evenly in the recommended amounts. A fertilizer spreader does a good job. It's best to sow half the seed in one direction and the rest at right angles for good, even coverage. Cover the seed lightly by raking and firm the soil with a light tamping or rolling.

Protect the seedbed with a light covering of clean straw or burlap. The mulch holds in the moisture and speeds germination. It also keeps the ground warm. Mulch is usually necessary only where steep slopes are involved or seeding is a little late in the season.

Keep the new lawn moist until the seed germinates and seedlings have a good start. Bluegrass usually takes about two weeks or more to germinate. Fescue takes ten days and ryegrass takes five to seven.

The kind of grass you use depends on the soil and growing conditions, the use when you seed a fall lawn, use a mixture of about 75 percent bluegrass and 25 percent creeping red fescue for best results.

On the sandy soils of southern Delaware, bluegrass does well during the spring and fall, but it's often dormant and unattractive in hot, dry summer months. Under these conditions it's best to use bluegrass under light shade.

Tatnall recommends you use a mixture of bluegrass varieties when you do use it, since this gives you some protection against diseases or other problems that may affect one variety.

Red fescue is a fine textured grass commonly grown with Kentucky bluegrass. It's also well suited to Delaware conditions. Fescue tolerates low fertility, partial shade and drought conditions. Mixed with bluegrass it's quite adaptable. The proportion of fescue to bluegrass in any seed mixture is dependent on the amount of sun the lawn will get, as well as the type of soil.

If you would like more information on lawn care, Tatnall suggests you get a copy of the University of Delaware publication, "The Art of Lawn Care." For a free copy write, Mail Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, Del. 19711. Or call your county extension office in Newark, Georgetown, or Dover.

the lawn gets and the amount of care you're willing to give it. Many kinds of grass are sold for lawns, but only a few produce a dependable, permanent lawn with average care.

Kentucky bluegrass, the queen of the cool season grasses, is found in most of the high quality lawns in Delaware. It's especially well adapted as a full sun grass on the heavier soils of New Castle County. But

TEACHING THE "UNTEACHABLE"

Students with learning problems, who were previously excluded from public schools, are now receiving the attention they deserve.

The U.S. Office of Education estimates that there are approximately 4,500,000 children in this country with some form of handicap, ranging from liping and mental retardation to emotional disturbances and physical handicaps.

"Educators have made a commitment to give special attention to students with learning problems," says George H. Stern, president of Monterey Learning Systems, Monterey, California, one of the country's leading publishers of programs for children with special needs.

The problem of teaching students with special needs came into the forefront of American education in 1970 when the Federal District Court in Pennsylvania ordered that state to provide education services for all children, regardless of the severity of their handicaps or disabilities.

In response to the Federal Court order, the Department of Special Education in Pennsylvania observed special education programs around the country and selected a comprehensive special education program published by the Monterey Learning Systems.

This landmark court decision in Pennsylvania set a precedent being followed across the country. Similar "Right to Education" suits have been filed in at least 15 states.

At the same time, the effective way in which Pennsylvania dealt with the problem of special education led educators from across the entire country to visit that state and observe their program. Now, the Monterey Learning System is being implemented in some 30 states, with more than 10,000 children.

One state commissioner of education pointed out that a reason educators have chosen this program—which includes language, reading, fluency, articulation and arithmetic—is its emphasis on teacher training. It provides, as Monterey president Stern points out, "Methods and procedures for use with children who have special needs."

Before implementing a school system's program, Monterey's professional consultants hold teacher training workshops within each school district. Refresher courses are given to help teachers continually refine their techniques. Consultants also regularly conduct on-site visits.

Instructors work on a one-to-one basis, presenting students with increasingly difficult activities. At each state, rewards in the simple form of praise, for example, are given to help confirm what the child has learned and to bring out further responses. Daily evaluation of results enable teachers to adapt the programs to fit each child's own capabilities.

Since the program was begun in Pennsylvania four years ago, the Monterey approach has achieved national recognition. The program was awarded the Educational Pacesetter Award from the President's Advisory Council on Supplementary Centers and Services, and a Certificate of Merit from the State of Pennsylvania, for outstanding service in the field of education. It also received National Validation by the U.S. Office of Education as one of the 107 exemplary projects in the nation.

Today, Monterey Learning Systems is being used in public and private schools, and institutions, as well as on Indian reservations—anywhere a child needs help in realizing his full potential as a human being.

Xeroradiography Unit To Be Installed At Kent General

Xeroradiography - a new and unique method of detecting breast cancer in women will soon be available at Kent General Hospital. What is Xeroradiography? How does it work and how effective has it been in detecting breast cancer?

Xeroradiography combines the basic concept of a xerox office copier and x-ray to produce a blue image of the area being photographed on to special paper. Xeroradiography has been an asset to physicians and radiologists alike. The Xeroradiographs are fast, convenient and because of the sharpness of detail, easier to read and interpret. It takes only 90 seconds for a xeroradiograph to be developed which enables the physician to read the recording immediately, thus eliminating the need to re-call the patient for further examination.

Breast cancer is the foremost killer of women - one out of every 15 women will develop breast cancer and in the past 35 years there has been no reduction in the mortality rate. Women everywhere are aware of the necessity for yearly check-ups plus self-examination of the breasts. However, by the time a tumor becomes palpable, or easily felt, if it is malignant, the chances for survival has dropped to 40-45 percent. It, therefore, became apparent that a more refined method of detecting tumors had to be developed.

By using Xeroradiography, tumors as small as 1 millimeter can be seen which are many times smaller than tumors which physicians can detect in a physical examination. According to the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute, 80 percent of breast cancers discovered as a result of using Xeroradiography showed no axillary node involvement, which simply means that it had not spread to the underarm area and thus reduced the necessity for radical surgery.

This examination will be available at Kent General Hospital to women on an appointment only basis by referral of her attending physician. It will take approximately 20 minutes to one-half hour for the exam.

Food Prices Warrant Look At Nutrition

Buy food for nutrition, not just for the prize in the box. That's the advice of an Extension Service nutritionist at Clemson University.

"Money is too precious now to squander it on non-foods," says Mrs. Marie Hindman, "and the consumer who does so has no right to complain about high prices."

She points out that some authorities estimate about 30% of the foods in supermarkets could be eliminated with no nutritional loss to anyone.

Even foods with certain vitamins added aren't necessarily as good as the real thing, according to Mrs. Hindman.

As an example, she cites imitation orange juice which lacks, among other things, valuable trace minerals.

"There's more to orange juice than Vitamin C," the nutritionist notes. "Juices aid digestion and also have other nutrients and natural fruit vitamins and minerals are always more costly than natural cereals such as bran and oats, according to the nutritionist."

"In addition, some of the newer fad cereals have coconut fat and not at all healthful added—another source of saturated fat," she adds.

Those prizes in cereal boxes don't contribute to holding down food prices either. According to Advertising Age, cereal manufacturers spend $60 million annually on trinkets for product promotions.

consumer pays astronomical prices and receives very little in return.

Sugar-coated cereals fabricated from refined flour and sometimes coated with synthetic vitamins and minerals are always more costly than natural cereals such as bran and oats, according to the nutritionist.

"In addition, some of the newer fad cereals have coconut fat and not at all healthful added—another source of saturated fat," she adds.

SAFETY WITH STYLE

If you're one of the more than 100 million drivers in the United States, experiencing the full joy of a motor trip depends in a large degree on the automobile you drive and the expertise with which you drive it.

Things were a bit different at the turn of the century when a motor trip was strictly a sporting occasion, often fraught with hazards. Motoring was more of a pastime then, a sport for a handful of gentlemen who drove vehicles that were really mechanized carriages, retaining all the appearance of a horse-drawn bug-

We've come a long way since then and most Americans, when choosing a new car, now consider safety as important a factor as styling. Volvo, for example, which redesigned its model line for the first time in eight years, reshaped the front end of its new 240 series for safety as well as styling, based on lessons learned from its experimental safety vehicles. The 240 series has more than 30 major engineering changes, including a totally new front suspension system.
