Bulging At The Seams At High School School's Open

Schools in the Lake Forest District are scheduled to open their doors early this morning as students prepare to begin the school year. Although enrollment seems to be about the same throughout the district as it was last year, an official count will not be made until September 30. It won't take that long to tell that conditions at the local high school are cramped, however, as Principal William Griffin and his staff brace themselves for an anticipated 1200 students, in facilities built to accommodate 750.

Conditions are somewhat eased elsewhere in the district, although at W.T. Chipman School one trailer is expected to be used to accommodate a classroom.

Kindergarten in the district begins September 8. For students attending the Kent County Vocational Center, school begins there at 8:45 a.m. for the first day. School openings and closings are as follows: at Lake Forest High School: 8:10 a.m., bus arrival (no earlier), 8:20 a.m., school

Safety Is Harvest Factor

A recent survey indicates that almost twice as many lives will be claimed in September as in the average month around tractors and farm machinery, according to Ronald Jester, extension farm safety specialist at the University of Delaware's substation in Georgetown. Combines, conveyors and corn harvesting equipment will account for 32 percent of all non-fatal work-related accidents associated with farm machinery. Fingers will be lost in 38 percent of the combine-related field injuries. Most of these fingers will be severed when caught in or between moving parts.

Good safety habits are a must for anyone who operates grain harvesting equipment, says Jester. Engineers are developing safer machines every year, but safe use of the machine is still up to the operator. Researchers in Ohio found that the major causes of machinery accidents that resulted in permanent disability were factors over which the designer and manufacturer had no control. Many of these accidents involved grain harvesting equipment. Interviews with these victims revealed that the most frequent causes of accidents were:

- Conscious acceptance of risk by the operator.
- Hurrying to meet deadlines.
- Preoccupation.

The National Safety Council promotes harvesting safety during the month of September and offers the following safety tips:

- Operate and maintain harvesting equipment as directed in the instruction manual.
- Keep all shields in place.
- Shut off the power before unclogging, adjusting or servicing.
- Keep children and non-workers off and away from machinery.
- Adjust travel speed to conditions.
- Stay clear of ditches, steep hills, obstructions, etc.
- Operate elevators and augers with extreme care.
- Operate vehicles transporting harvest to storage or market with care, obeying all rules of the road.

Pre-Revolutionary Home Will Be Open For Benefit Inspection Tour Sunday

Author's Home Opens For Museum Benefit

Rigg's Little Mill will be the scene this Sunday, September 7, of a house and garden tour hosted by Mr. and Mrs. William Sparklin for the benefit of the Bowers Beach Bicentennial Maritime Museum. The house is located on Griffith's Lake near Milford.

Hours set for the tour are 2-5 p.m.; the admission will be $1.50. All proceeds will be turned over to the museum committee.

Rigg's Little Mill is the home of Anne Sparklin, author of "Big Thursday" and "Lilly Jo."

It is a house whose beginnings predate the revolution. Put together in the 1770's by Ezekiel Riggs, the building was made by joining two slave cabins built much earlier. Later other features such as a shed room, now a kitchen, were added. The house today accommodates modern living while preserving many of its original aspects, chestnut beams in the living room, splintered pine floors, Dutch pulpit staircase.

When first constructed it was on the upper branch of the Mispillion Creek, now the channel through Griffith's Lake. It was originally near the site of a grist mill. In 1816 when the property passed from Ezekiel Riggs to his son, David, it became known as Rigg's Little Mill.

David's daughter, Sarah, married William Griffith. She was the great-great-grandmother of Harrison Griffith, whose widow still lives close by. From the Griffith family came the name Sarah A. Griffith Pond and now, Griffith's Lake.

Mrs. Sparklin has lived at Rigg's Little Mill for 50 years. Sunday's tour includes both her home and her garden with its emphasis on wildflowers.

Board Hears Bus Policy

On Thursday, August 28, the Woodbridge School Board met at Woodbridge High School to discuss several items, including a resume by Mr. Pete Sizemore on transportation.

Sizemore, the director of transportation for several school districts, including Woodbridge, stated that this year it will be necessary to transport 1,901 students compared with 1,913 students last school year. The bus situation at Woodbridge has been taken care of with 22 contractors for 33 buses already contracted. The cost for running these buses for the year will be $284,756.40 not including $16,576.20 for four kindergarten buses.

Sizemore also stated that a few of the buses were not meeting government specifications for safety but the contractors had been informed and the necessary changes are to be made. He then asked the board to accept a handbook he had made up as the official handbook for the district. Each bus driver has already been given one of the handbooks. The Board commended Mr. Sizemore on the excellent job he had done on the handbook and accepted it as the official one for the district.

In other matters, the board accepted the resignations of the following: James B. Lynch, Principal of Bridgeville Elementary and North Bridgeville Elementary Schools, who resigned as of August 15; Mrs. Kathryn Stout, teacher, Greenwood Elementary School, who resigned as of August 30; Mrs. Betty Penrod, reading supervisor; and granted Mr. Earl Thompson a leave of absence until April 9.

The board also approved the appointment for the school year 1975-76 of the following: Susan Hopp, B.S., Madison College, speech and hearing therapist; William Degnan, B.S., Frostburg State College, physical education, Woodbridge High School; John W.

Logan, M.A., West Virginia University, reading specialist, Bridgeville Elementary; Richard E. Milne, B.S., Indiana University, band and chorus, Woodbridge High School; Sherry J. Goodman, M.Ed., S.U.C. at Brockport, guidance, Bridgeville and North Bridgeville Elementary; Susan M. Craig, B.S., Bowling Green University, librarian, Woodbridge Junior High and Greenwood Elementary; William N. Moffett, B.S., Cheyney State College, special education, Woodbridge High School; George Falk, B.S., Delaware State College, French and Spanish, Woodbridge High School; Sara E. Phillips, B.S., Mansfield State College, music, Woodbridge Junior High; Norris W. Hit-chens, M.A., West Virginia University, English and social studies, Woodbridge High School; and Rachel Lupkin, B.S., Temple, reading specialist. Mr. David Winski was recommended and approved for principal of Bridgeville Elementary and North Bridgeville Elementary for the school year 1975-76.

tary discussing the significance of the "minute" for today and the lessons it contains for the future; and a current events examination emphasizing issues and events from the past year.

High school seniors should see their principal for details on how to participate in this scholarship program. Applications must be filed no later than October 6, 1975.

Bicentennial Scholarships Available

"Bicentennial Seniors," a nationwide $250,000 scholarship program for high school seniors who will graduate with the class of 1976, is being launched this month by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

One national winner will receive a $10,000 scholarship and 102 state winners will receive $1,000 grants under the program. Winners will be selected first locally, then on a state-wide level. Two graduating seniors will be chosen in each state and the District of Columbia. Each of the 102 winners will also receive an all expense paid trip to Williamsburg, Va., from January 16 through 19 to attend seminars and hear noted speakers discuss educational and social issues facing this country today.

Students taking part in the "Bicentennial Seniors" competition must demonstrate an understanding of America's past and possible directions for the future and an involvement in the social and community issues faced by America today.

The spotlight this week falls on Mrs. Sally Needles, a woman well liked by all. Her maiden name was Sally Catherine Vickery. She was born and raised in Concord, Md. She is from a large family with six members living. She is the youngest. Growing up there, she married Francis Lowell Needles and lived on a farm near Burrsville, Md. When retiring she and her husband, who is now deceased, built a nice home here in Harrington where she now lives. She has three children; a boy, Allen, and twins, Faye and Kay. Allen has one child; Kay has a boy 10 in the 5th grade here, and Faye has two children.

The twin girls were born on Father's Day, such a wonderful gift - what man could ask for more. Mrs. Needles wedding day was Oct. 2, 1937. Their marriage was a happy one and she was another who worked right along with her husband in the field husking corn, picking tomatoes, serving wheat threshing and wood sawing dinner, and growing her own laying chickens. It was said by her neighbors she made the best iced tea in the neighborhood.

One day while helping her husband get their cows in the barn when they got out, and just as they thought they had the job under control, the bull turned on them and ran her back to the house. Her husband yelled, "Run, Becky, run," and afterwards told her he didn't know she could run so fast. Becky, her nickname, he gave her years ago. At the Center she helps in all kinds of ceramics.

Ladies Auxiliary Hosts Talent Show

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Milford Elks Lodge #2401 have announced plans for a talent show to be held in late October. The talent show will be open to all ages and all types of acts are wanted by the organization for participation in the show which will be held at the Milford High School Theater on Saturday evening, October 25, at 7:30 P.M.

According to Mrs. Margie Rogers, general chairman of the event, the auxiliary will earmark proceeds from the show for the Elks building fund. Mrs. Rogers also said she hopes the talent show will be successful enough that it becomes an annual event. Dennis Hazzard, Program Director for WTHD/WAFL Radio in Milford will produce and emcee the show.

There will be two categories, professional (those who are paid performers) and non-professional. Three top cash awards will be made for each. Those entrants under 16 years will be included in a separate group. Prize money totaling nearly $300 will be presented to the winners, as determined by a panel of judges.

including singers, dancers, rock groups, country music groups, comedians and similar type performers. Any person interested in performing in the show should obtain an entry form by September 26 by writing to Mrs. Virginia Wyatt, Route 3, box 711, Milford, Delaware, 19963. There is a $2 entry fee for each act.

"... is the world situation worse or is the news coverage better."

Years ago the one who reported the news often was held responsible by the readers. If the news was good, the reporter was rated a good guy, but if bad, the readers were ready to "wring his neck." If this were the rule today, the job of reporting would be open constantly for it seems that only the bad gets reported.

There is much wrong with the world today, but there is a lot of good that needs reporting as well.

As we passed through the Labor Day holiday, there was a chance to reflect on the labor situation and just how far it has come. From Samuel Gompers to Jimmie Hoffa, organized labor has had a turbulent existence.

Today labor's demand for higher wages and deficit spending by the government have been prime causes of inflation. As labor received record wages, this alone was not enough to catch up with the rising rate of inflation. The more one made the less one had left. We all see this today and feel it in our pockets.

We are not engaged in a war today anywhere on the globe. Yet at home we are engaged in a war...of economics...which is global. It is dollars versus dollars. A society of high costing items which precludes the working men as well as the rich men from holding onto his money and keeping his check book balanced. This kind of war may not cause blood shed, but it might ultimately lead to that.

Business and management are beginning to "pull in their horns." "Why...one wonders...work like the devil to attain more when in fact, you end up with very little at all."

If this happens on a wide scale, production could drop off so drastically that we will be unable to get even those things we once regarded as luxuries...let alone necessities. As we magnify the world situation, we find that the state of the world is pretty much as it has always been...the news coverage is broader to be sure, but it is questionable whether it is better.

Weekly Report

by Senator Joseph Biden

Almost a year ago, hearings were held before a Subcommittee of the Senate Banking and Urban Affairs Committee on legislation which I had sponsored on the need for comprehensive regulation of the condominium industry.

Those hearings clearly demonstrated the need for regulation. Too many people have been unnecessarily "fleeced" because they bought condominiums without proper safeguards.

And it is not only the consumer public that has suffered: honest businessmen have seen their industry's reputation unnecessarily tarnished.

The hearings last year dealt not only with the bill I had introduced, but with other legislative proposals on this subject, as well. This year, it was decided that the principle advocates of reform should get together on a common piece of legislation and the result is a bill recently introduced in the Senate by me, by Senator Proxmire and by Senator Brooke.

This bipartisan bill is designed to give consumers full information when they purchase a condominium unit; to provide minimum consumer protection standards to protect the interest of the purchaser, and to insure consumers the right to take private action in the event of fraud.

Two major changes from the legislation first proposed include the strengthening of the right of an individual purchaser to sue on his own behalf, rather than relying on the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to bear the brunt of enforcing all the rules and an incentive for individual states to enact and enforce their own standards, as long as they are at least as stringent as the federal standards.

There is a pressing need for effective and comprehensive regulation of condominium developments and sales. The federal government has no coordinated or centralized regulatory approach and condominium sales have mushroomed at the fantastic rate of 2,000 percent in the past five years. What controls do exist are administered by a patchwork of agencies and they are not effective. The proposed, bipartisan legislation will go far toward correcting this situation.

The need for effective federal legislation to safeguard against oil spills in the oceans has never been more apparent than it is today.

In the past few weeks there have been news accounts of substantial oil spills in virtually every region where large-scale waterway transportation or production of petroleum occurs. The most recent example was the major spill in the waters of the Baltimore Port.

Despite intensive efforts to avoid or control oil spills, there were over 13,000 reported in U.S. waters in 1973, amounting to more than 24 million gallons.

While a majority of these spills occurred from vessels carrying refined oil, many crude oil losses took place at or adjacent to production sites, either in recovery of the product from beneath the oceans' surface or in transporting the product from the production site to onshore receiving facilities.

The seriousness of this situation is of striking concern to Delawareans because of announcements this summer that outer continental shelf (OCS) exploration sites have been nominated by the oil industry for oil and natural gas development in the Baltimore Canyon east of Rehoboth Beach.

I believe legislation measures to reduce the risks of oil spills must be designed with several basic objectives.

First, we must provide just, speedy and complete compensation for the problems caused by oil spills to coastal area property owners or parties such as fishermen who suffer damages in loss of fish, wildlife or other natural resources relied upon for economic subsistence.

Second, we should impose strict liability for all damages sustained without regard to proof of negligence or fault to reflect the inherently dangerous nature of developing and transporting oil and petroleum products in our coastal areas.

Third, we must place heavy responsibility and liability for oil pollution damages and clean-up costs on the operators of production sites and petroleum-transporting vessels. Only in this way will these parties have the needed incentive and motivation to develop and use the safest, most efficient equipment and methods of operation.

No scheme of public financing where the government assumes this responsibility and financial risk offers a similar guarantee of maximum effort to prevention of spills and increased clean-up technology.

Several bills are now before the Congress covering the oil spill liability issue, including a proposal I introduced, which was co-sponsored by Senators Muskie and Ribicoff. Whatever the final language of this legislation, two goals seem imperative - that it meet the objectives I've outlined above and that it be enacted soon.

We must move quickly before long-term OCS exploration and development commitments are made on the Atlantic, the Pacific and the offshore Alaskan shelves.

Career Corner

by Buck Thompson

printed in the Journal to serve youths

For the next three or four issues of this paper I hope to do a series on careers that are connected with the growing food crisis and the career fields that are in demand in this area. Great opportunities exist for those who enter this career cluster.

Hunger daily threatens roughly 1/5 of the world's people in areas of 40 countries. Even in some areas of our own cities and states, people can't take food for granted.

Briefly stated, the world food crisis is a result of population growth outstripping the techniques of food production. Not all areas of the world have good soil, adequate water and sun, a long growing season, or a knowledge of how best to use resources. Instead, many areas suffer from droughts or floods, insects, poor soil and lack of tools and fertilizer.

Population is growing at a dizzy rate in many nations. In 1830, the world population was 1 billion. In 1920, that figure rose to 2 billion; by the end of this year, close to 4 billion. And by 2000, there may be as many as 7 billion human beings on Earth, if present trends continue. These people will need food to survive. Many won't be able to get it in time. It is estimated that 93 million hungry mouths are added to the world's population each year.

America has long been the nation most able and willing to share its bread with other nations. In the last 20 years alone, the United States has given away about $25 billion worth of food. Today, we are having a debate on whether wheat should be sent to Russia. We have some food problems here at home and we're uneasy about upsetting our economy and causing hardship on ourselves.

Still, more food than we can use is produced in the U.S. This means that there are many opportunities if you would like to make your career one that helps feed a hungry world. Although the tasks required will call for people for various skills, these skills are primarily those used in agribusiness and marine science.

Agribusiness is a broader term than agriculture. Agriculture essentially means farming. Agribusiness includes farming plus all the business and technology aspects of making food available.

The occupations in the marine science cluster which interest us here include those grouped in aquaculture and fisheries science and management (fishing). Fisheries workers catch fish in rivers and oceans, while aquaculture workers raise fish as farmers grow crops.

In future weeks I will discuss some of the occupations in agribusiness, aquaculture and fishing.

DuPont Reports

I'm sure by now most of you are well aware of my very deep concern over this nation's energy crisis and the need to develop alternative methods of energy and new solutions to old problems.

One of those "new solutions" is the development of an electric car. Recently, in testimony on the Hill, the tremendous advantage of shifting our transportation system from its dependence on petroleum to use of electricity at the earliest possible moment was stressed repeatedly.

I, along with a large number of my colleagues, am sponsoring legislation to fund a project to demonstrate the commercial feasibility of electric vehicles, including the introduction of more than 7,500 of them over five years. Electric vehicles, which would be ideally suitable for urban private and commercial travel, can play a key role in reducing our dependence on imported petroleum for transportation. In addition, they would contribute to reducing urban air and noise pollution.

The importance of replacing gasoline as quickly as possible must not be discounted. We use approximately 50 percent of our petroleum for transportation and half of that is used for the automobile. Furthermore, while our immediate situation is hampered because about 1/5 of the petroleum we use is imported, scientists estimate that at the current rate of use, we will run out of petroleum by the end of this century.

By using electrical energy for fueling our vehicles, where the electricity is produced from nuclear energy or coal, we may therefore stop the flow of petrodollars and, at the same time, provide for the future existence of personal transportation in the country.

The Hill testimony pointed out that electric vehicles are a reality - not just a dream of the future. One of those testifying drove an electric vehicle from Detroit to Washington - at highway speeds. Significantly, the hearings showed that with the current state of the art, electric vehicles are suitable and adequate for meeting the needs of second and third family cars in this country. This is borne out by the fact that 50 percent of all trips are less than five miles long, while the driving range of existing electric vehicles is around 60 miles with the cars traveling up to 50 miles per hour.

The legislation we are working on addresses the consumer, industrial and institutional aspects of electric vehicle use and production. Parallel research support for mobile, energy-storage systems - particularly advanced batteries - will make it possible for electric vehicles to handle even our longer trips.

Heart Association Seeks Volunteers

The Delaware Heart Association needs volunteers to help it extend its high blood pressure screening program.

William E. MacIntyre, association president, said that the newest extension will be to make the service available to business and industry throughout Delaware.

"The Delaware Heart Association, with other affiliates of the American Heart Association, is concentrating a great deal of effort to alert the public to the dangers of high blood pressure and to make available the opportunity for all to learn whether they have it or not," MacIntyre said.

That work includes regular screening programs in Kent and Sussex Counties and an inner city program run at Wilmington community centers in April and May of this year. Percentages obtained at these programs conform closely to the national experience with high blood pressure, MacIntyre said.

In the Wilmington program, 572 had their blood pressure taken and 411, or 71.9 percent, did not have high blood pressure; 44, or 7.7 percent, had high blood pressure, even though they were under a physician's care; 53, or 9.2 percent, had high blood pressure and had been told but were not under a doctor's care; and 64, or 11.2 percent, had high blood pressure and had never been told before.

In Sussex County, 1,006 were screened during 1974-75 and 715 (71.8 percent) did not have high blood pressure; 110 (10.9 percent) had high blood pressure even though they were under a physician's care; 74 (7.35 percent) had high blood pressure and had been told but were not under a doctor's care; and 107 (10.64 percent) had high blood pressure and have never been told before.

In Kent County, 838 were screened in two programs. A total of 160, or 19.1 percent, were found to have high blood pressure.

Volunteers may call the Delaware Heart Association offices, 654-5269 in Wilmington and 856-7386 in Georgetown to sign up for the new program. Businesses wishing to have screening clinics for their employees may call to set up dates.

Lint Mystery Part I

If you occasionally notice that your clothes are coming from your washer with holes in them, are discolored, or covered with lint, you might be tempted to blame your washer's performance. But before you do, think about your own laundry room performance, suggests Coral Morris, extension homemaker, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

You may be causing the problem through poor laundering techniques. One of the most irritating problems on washday is finding lint all over your clothes when you remove them from the washer. Unless you've washed a forgotten Kleenex in someone's pocket, the source of this lint can be a mystery. Some lint will always be created by the washing process, but excessive lint is a problem. Occasionally, a residue is left on the clothes which is mistaken for lint. Probable causes of lint or residue can be due to one or more of the following: (1) Improper sorting - combining lint-givers (terry cloth, chenille) with lint-catchers (corduroy, velveteen, most man-made fabrics).

(2) Overloading - causes abrasion which created lint.

(3) Not Enough Detergent - sufficient detergent is needed to hold lint and soil in suspension during the wash cycle so it isn't deposited on the clothes.

(4) Improper Use Of Fabric Softener - a chemical reaction between most fabric softeners and detergent in the wash water will create a white deposit on fabrics which can be mistaken for lint. Don't combine fabric softener with detergent in the wash cycle unless the product directs you to.

(5) Pilling - often mistaken for lint. Man-made fibers, such as polyester, acrylic, or blends of these fabrics have a natural tendency to "pill" due to abrasion from normal wear. If a fiber breaks, it simply balls up on the fabric surface, since man-made fibers are stronger and do not break off completely. This is a characteristic of the fabric and cannot be prevented.

(6) Changing to a Non-Phosphate Detergent - some of these detergents may react with hardness minerals in the water to form a precipitate which can be mistaken for lint. If this occurs in your wash, you might consider using your former detergent or changing to a liquid laundry detergent. Installing a water softener to eliminate hardness minerals from the water supply is another way of solving this problem.

(7) Undissolved Granular Detergent - if cold water is used, or if the washer is overloaded, some granular detergents may not dissolve completely, leaving a white, powdery residue on fabrics. For this problem, use a liquid or cold water detergent for cold water wash. In addition, make sure clothes have ample room to circulate. Predissolving granular detergent in hot water before adding it to the wash is another solution.

If you have been thinking of reseeding or establishing a new lawn, this is the time to do it. The best time for seeding a lawn is between August 15 and September 15. At this time, days are getting shorter and the nights cooler - excellent conditions for the establishment of bluegrass and fescues. Since new seedlings should reach a height of two inches before freezing weather, any delay in seeding after September 15th will reduce the chances of success. Late fall seedings are sometimes necessary; use a mulch to hasten germination and protect the young seedlings. Make seedlings as soon after April 1 as the soil can be properly prepared, if spring seeding is absolutely necessary.

We recommend several blends of grass depending on your specific growing conditions. These are (1) sunny lawn with isolated shade trees-high quality. 75 percent Merion Kentucky bluegrass, 25 percent Pennlawn red fescue. Produces an attractive lawn but Merion may not persist well under stress of certain diseases, drought and low fertility. Seeding rate: 3 pounds per 1,000 square feet.

(2) Sunny lawn with isolated shade trees-high quality. 40 percent Kentucky bluegrass-Merion, 35 percent Kentucky bluegrass (Ken-blue, Windsor, Newport, Park, Fylking, Cougar, common - use 2 or more) 25 percent red fescue. Blend of bluegrass varieties helps this mixture withstand a variety of stresses. Seeding rate: 3 pounds per 1,000 square feet.

(3) Shady lawn with some open areas. 25 percent Kent open areas. 25 percent Kentucky bluegrass (use 2 or more of varieties shown in Mixture No. 2) 75 percent Pennlawn red fescue. Seeding rate: 4 pounds per 1,000 square feet.

(4) Sandy soils of southern Delaware. 50 percent Kentucky bluegrass (use 2 or more of varieties shown in Mixture No. 2) 45 percent Pennlawn or Chewings red fescue-5 percent Redtop. Chewings fescue is preferred under moderate shade. Seeding rate: 3 1/2 pounds per 1,000 square feet.

Lime and fertilizer should be applied before starting seedbed preparation. Soil tests can be made for a dollar by bringing soil samples to the County Extension Office. With these test results proper amounts of lime and fertilizer can be added. If your soil has not been analyzed apply at least 80 lb. of ground limestone and 20-30 lbs. of 10-10-10 fertilizer per 1,000 square feet. Work lime and fertilizer into the soil to a depth of 4-6 inches. This will encourage good root development. After sowing seed, mulch may be added to the surface of the new seeding. Mulching helps young seedlings. It helps prevent erosion and will hasten germination by keeping the soil moist. Straw, applied evenly at the rate of about one bale for each 1,000 square feet of area is one of the best. Complete coverage of the soil should be avoided; coverage should be thin enough to expose a large percent of the seedbed.

Light watering with a fine misty spray each day that it does not rain will keep the soil surface moist. Watering should continue until the grass is established. Don't mow until the grass is almost 3 inches tall. Lawns planted in September seldom need mowing before the following spring, but they should be cut if some of the grass gets too tall.

If more information is desired for a new seeding or on established lawns, write or call for our booklet "The Art of Lawn Care". Address P.O. Box 340, Dover, De. 19901, or phone 736-1448.

It Seems To Me

Quilts and more quilts. It appears that this fall and winter will see quilted fabrics used as never before. Not only the Americana influence on fashion but the Chinese influence too will be a factor.

Already, we see the coolie type jackets and coats with mandarin collars and frog closing made in a variety of quilted fabrics. The Chinese direction is a strong fashion influence this year for children as well as adults.

As always, fabric stores are ready to assist the home seamstress in finding fabric to make her own adaptations to the fashion scene. You'll find quilted materials in everything from patchwork - to wools - to sheers - to luxury items. You'll find, too, that many printed quilts come with coordinated fabrics which are not quilted. This allows you to make jackets with plain skirts, pants or dresses, or a quilted skirt with a plain top. Your creative urge will start working once you see the new fabrics.

If you are turning down your thermostat a bit this year and wearing an extra layer of clothes, consider the quilted jacket. It is light weight and warm to wear in chilly buildings.

Most quilted fabrics are easy care because of the light weight polyester fiberfill used for filling. But check care directions to be on the safe side.

Sewing with quilted fabrics presents no particular problems, but you may want to consider ways to eliminate bulky edges. Instead of using the quilted fabric for facings or undercollars, you might use a matching or contrasting unquilted fabric. Or you can remove the stitching in fabric scraps you have left after cutting out the garment and use the top fabric only for facings.

Closures in quilted fabrics offer several possibilities. If you choose the traditional buttonhole make a practice one first. Machine buttonholes may be more serviceable than bound, although bound buttonholes can be made without difficulty. Remove the filling from the patch piece before stitching to the garment. If you are using a Chinese style, use frogs or ties. Zippers too are adaptable to certain styles.

Quilted fabrics tend to add an appearance of bulkiness to the figure, so maybe they aren't for everyone.

Speedway May Have Bike Races

The growing popularity of 10 speed racer type bicycles, plus the desire of many bike owners to race their 10-speed racers in organized competition, prompted Warren Price and Gayle Smith, co-promoters of Lincoln Speedway to investigate the possibility of adding the pedal powered machines to their regular Saturday night motorcycle racing programs.

Before the joining of motorcycles and bicycles into a double header program one important question had to be answered - could 10 speed racing bicycles safely negotiate the 1/4 mile dirt oval at the Lincoln Track?

Bicycle racerman Bill Dodge, operator of two bike shops (Milford and Rehoboth) agreed to run track tests at Lincoln using his personal custom built racing bike. The bicycle was the same machine that carried Bill Dodge and his team of riders (Mark Burton - Dave Dockety - Layton Moore), to a third place finish in the 1975 YMCA "Mini 500" Bicycle Race at the Dover High School 1/4 mile cinder track.

Following the test, Dodge stated, "The Lincoln Speedway track will be a super track for ten speed bikes." He went on to explain, "I tried various speeds, rode four or five different patterns, and I could go flat out through the turns - thanks to the sweeping turns, I had no fear of falling off the bike. It's truly fantastic track for bikes."

During the test runs, Dodge turned in lap times of 31.8-32.0 sec. for an average speed of 27.5 mph. "and that was about a three quarter effort pace", he revealed. "I could go quite a bit quicker if I gave out with an all out effort for a lap or two."

The first bicycle program is scheduled for Saturday night, September 6th. The races will be "Open Competition" meaning open to anyone.

Those interested in entering may do so at the track after 4 p.m. and before 6 p.m. on Sat., Sept. 6.

What is required to race? Bring a 10 speed bike - protective headgear (Motorcycle-bicycle or football helmet) - and gloves. You must have a race number plate for numbers to be assigned by the track officials.

Entry fee: Pay regular admission price for your age group, plus $1.00 for insurance. Once entered, experienced bicycle officials will explain the procedure - suddenly your group is called on the track and you have instantly become a 10 speed bike racer. For further information, call 302-422-3384 or 302-697-1550 24 hours a day.

"There are many very expensive racing bicycles on the market, but a racing bike will only go as fast as a rider is capable of pedaling," Bill Dodge said. "Physical condition is important, most racers keep fit by riding - and the Lincoln Track will be ideal for riders of all age groups."

Long range plans for bicycle racing at Lincoln Speedway include: installation of a Moto-Cross course for both mini motorcycles and bicycles (they already market a competitive Moto-cross bicycle).

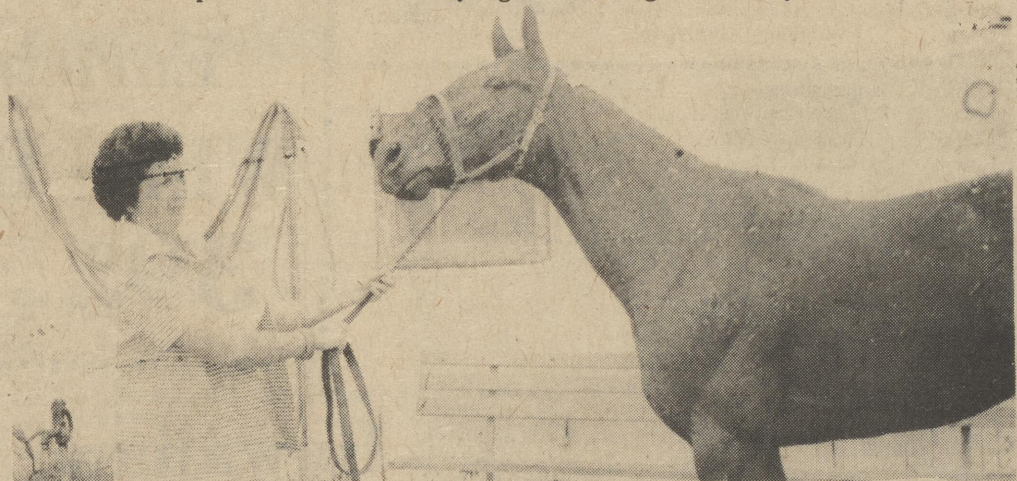

A variety of local and national events sanctioned by a major bicycle sanctioning body are planned for next year, with even greater aims for a couple of years in the future.

"Bicycle enthusiasts are assured a place to race at Lincoln", co-promotor Gayle Smith said. "We'll go all out to see that they have a first class surface to race on. We also look forward to the day when they have their own special events and race meets on separate dates - that could come in the very near future."

Lincoln Speedway is located on U.S. 113, 2 miles south of Milford, Del.

Olin Davis of near Harrington holds Norman Brown, 2 yr. old 2:03.4, by Brown Star out of Knock-out Lady, who will be entered in the Delaware Development Fund on Saturday night at Harrington Raceway.

Herbert C., 3 yr. old colt by Rippin Good, owned by Herbert and Cathleen Cain of Harrington will be campaigning at Harrington Raceway for the fall meet. Herbert C. has won 9 of 18 races this year. The colt is being held by Mrs. Cathleen Cain.
