Birds fly low and so do some airplanes, especially the crop dusters who have to get down to bird and bug level in their practice of "crop insurance" for farmers. As to the importance of the "dusters" and how they go about their

A Railway That Never Was

Local Rail Line Tied To Some Little Known Maryland History

by R. B.R.

The rail line which runs through Harrington has a second cousin, several times removed maybe, but a cousin none-the-less, and one not very many people know about.

It's the original "Eastern Shore Railroad", not the "Eastern Shore Railroad" referred to in Garth Townsend's Book, "The Entailed Hat", but an even earlier one. It might even be called the line that never was.

It started in 1836 with the Maryland House of Delegates which passed the "Eight Million Dollar Bill" for the encouragement of canals and railroads in Maryland. Interested in the bill, which provided a dollar in public money for every dollar's worth of stock sold privately by anybody wishing to build a railroad, was Littleton Dennis Teackle of Princess Anne, Maryland. Teackle, the most prominent citizen of Princess Anne, had made a lot of money in the brick business and was the builder of the "Teackle Mansion" which stands as a monument of sorts in Princess Anne to this very day.

Teackle chartered the Eastern Shore Railroad Company with himself as president and started selling stock. When enough money was raised, and Maryland, as agreed, came forth with some matching funds, the route was surveyed and work started. The surveyor was an Army lieutenant named Kearney who later came to fame in the old West. The route he laid out was 66 feet wide and 110 miles long from Elkton, Maryland to Somer's Cove, now called Crisfield. The line swung an arc from Elkton to the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal at Pivot Bridge. There, it went due south to Princess Anne, and at no point was it ever more than about a half mile from the Delaware State line. At Princess Anne the line swung southwest to Somer's Cove.

On the north end, 12 miles of grading was completed, including base for track, and bridge abutments. On the south end, grading was completed from Somer's Cove to Princess Anne.

In between, nothing was ever done other than procurement of the right of way, and Kearney's survey.

The road came to an end following the Panic of

Prompted By Budget Cut

29 Lake Forest Teachers Get Dismissal Letters

If proposed budget cuts go through in the State of Delaware, more than 20 Lake Forest school teachers are out of work, and letters advising them of such are to be mailed out, it was decided by the Lake Forest School Board Monday night. What this means is that all non-tenured teachers in the district, those who have taught two years or less, will be notified of their possible termination.

Included in the list is the entire English Department, all the members of which, are not yet tenured. Thus, it is expected some will be re-hired. Yet, because of legalities, all must get the letters. Tabled by the Board was a proposal by the transportation superintendent to redraw lines between the Felton, Frederica, and Harrington elementary schools. The subject will be re-opened at a special May 5th board meeting to be attended by the principals of the schools involved. Also discussed will be matters of athletics.

Another item of elementary school interest was the announcement by district superintendent, Albert Adams, that the Felton school will operate without an art teacher for the remaining five weeks of the school term. The art teacher took a maternity leave, he explained, and there isn't sufficient money for a substitute.

Two resignations were accepted by the Board, that of Mrs. Grundy, a high school teacher, and the resignation of wrestling coach, Dean Warren, who is moving to Ohio.

There was also agreement by the Board to accept the recommendation of Aileen Torbut, student president of the Office Education Association, that the third place plaque, won recently in a State competition, be placed in the school.

Also approved was $748.00 to cover the expenses of two teachers who will chaperone eleven students at the National OEA convention at Houston, Texas. The students will pay their own

George and Lynch Low Bidder On School Athletic Project

The Lake Forest School Board got the financial answer to the first phase of the $1.6 million athletic and sports complex at the board meeting Monday night and accepted the $255,800.00 bid of George and Lynch Contractors for the football field and running track.

Completion of the total project, which includes grandstands, locker room space, swimming pool and the track and field, is scheduled in two years. Tennis facilities are also planned if sufficient funds remain from the total of the local public works grant.

School Budget Cut Plan Draws 125 To Meeting

"Cut the State Department of Public Instruction in half."

This proposal was heard at a meeting Tuesday evening at the Lake Forest North Elementary School, where gathering of about 125 area citizens, including three candidates for the school board, a trio of state legislators, the entire school board and others, discussed the proposed cuts in educational funding as a result of the Delaware fiscal crisis.

The meeting, called a "Special Open Meeting On Proposed Budget Cuts", was hosted by the PTA. District Board President E.B. Warrington, as moderator presided of the panel of board members.

On Hand to answer questions were three democratic legislators, Rep. Ruth Ann Minner, Rep. Ronald Darling, and Senator Nancy Cook, a member of the Joint Finance Committee.

The discussion centered around a recommendation to the Finance Committee by The State School Boards Association. It included ways to reduce educational costs without reducing quality. Suggested were dropping the summer vocational program with the exception of the agriculture program; and raising the price of school lunches 20 cents. The lat-

Funds which are raised will be used to support the Foreign Student Exchange program. It is expected that Lake Forest will have another student next school year. which describes the relationship between aircraft operations and land use in the area surrounding the base.

Called the Air Installation Compatible Use Zone (AICUZ) Study, the document will be presented at a public meeting in the Dover Air Force Base Officer's Club at 7:30 p.m. The meeting is open to the public and copies of the study will be available.

The study has been prepared to promote compatible land use around Dover Air Force Base. The AICUZ study will assist local communities in the development of land use planning to protect the health and safety of citizens of communities near Dover Air Force Base and protect the flying operations at the base.

The AICUZ study analyzes accident potential and noise exposure created by aircraft operations. Using this information the base has formulated land use planning recommendations for the consideration of local communities and zoning authorities. With emphasis on compatible land uses and with noise attenuation measures for new construction in certain areas, compatibility problems can be avoided.

An AICUZ study is being prepared for all Air Force bases with active aircraft operations within the United States. The AICUZ program for Dover Air Force Base has been developed in cooperation with the Department of Defense and other Federal agencies.

Flying Low

To the witness on the ground, a "crop-duster" aircraft in a sudden pull up over a grove of trees, some power lines or a barn, the image is understandably conjured up that aerial applicators of chemistry on crops are daredevils left over from the barnstorming twenties.

As a matter of fact "Crop-dusting" from the air started at the very height of the barnstorming era, 1922 to be exact, and as might be expected the first aircraft used was a Jenny, the same Curtis JN4 used by the cow pasture acrobats and wing walkers, the Lindbergs, and "The Great Waldo Pepper".

But, while a "crop duster" pilot would probably make a fine aerial acrobat, and while he frequently comes perilously close to barns, a barnstormer he isn't.

"Crop duster" is set in quotes because it's a misnomer. The first one back in 1922 did use dust to control an outbreak of cotton-leaf worm down in the southland. It carried 250 pounds of dust and it was cranked over the side like flea powder with a device that worked like a flour sifter.

All that is changed now, the Journal learned this week on a photo excursion to Beiler's Crop Service located about a mile off Route 13 on the road to Hickman.

Yesterday's $300 Jenny, equipped with a sifter, has turned into Fifty to Seventy-thousand dollars worth of specially built airplane equipped with spray atomizers, the heads of which cost nearly $1,000.00 each. The daredevil pilot of yesteryear has turned into a skilled technician who must understand his chemistry, his environment and the damage he can do to it if he's careless. He not only must know how to handle an aircraft safely, but he has to know how to handle the whole range of pesticides and herbicides safely; how each should be applied, and under what weather conditions to not attempt application. Too warm a day, and heat rising from the earth will send his spray up and away. Too much wind and it simply blows away. Where it stops nobody knows. So, if there's doubt, the rule is don't! Careless dusters have been known to wipe out a bee colony next door to where they're "dusting" and that can wind up in court. It's also the kind of risk that sends insurance rates skyward.

Add that cost to the cost of insuring a $50,000 aircraft which practices near misses with barns and power lines; and then add both to the cost of maintenance, shop facilities, and hangar space, and "crop dusting" becomes an expensive business.

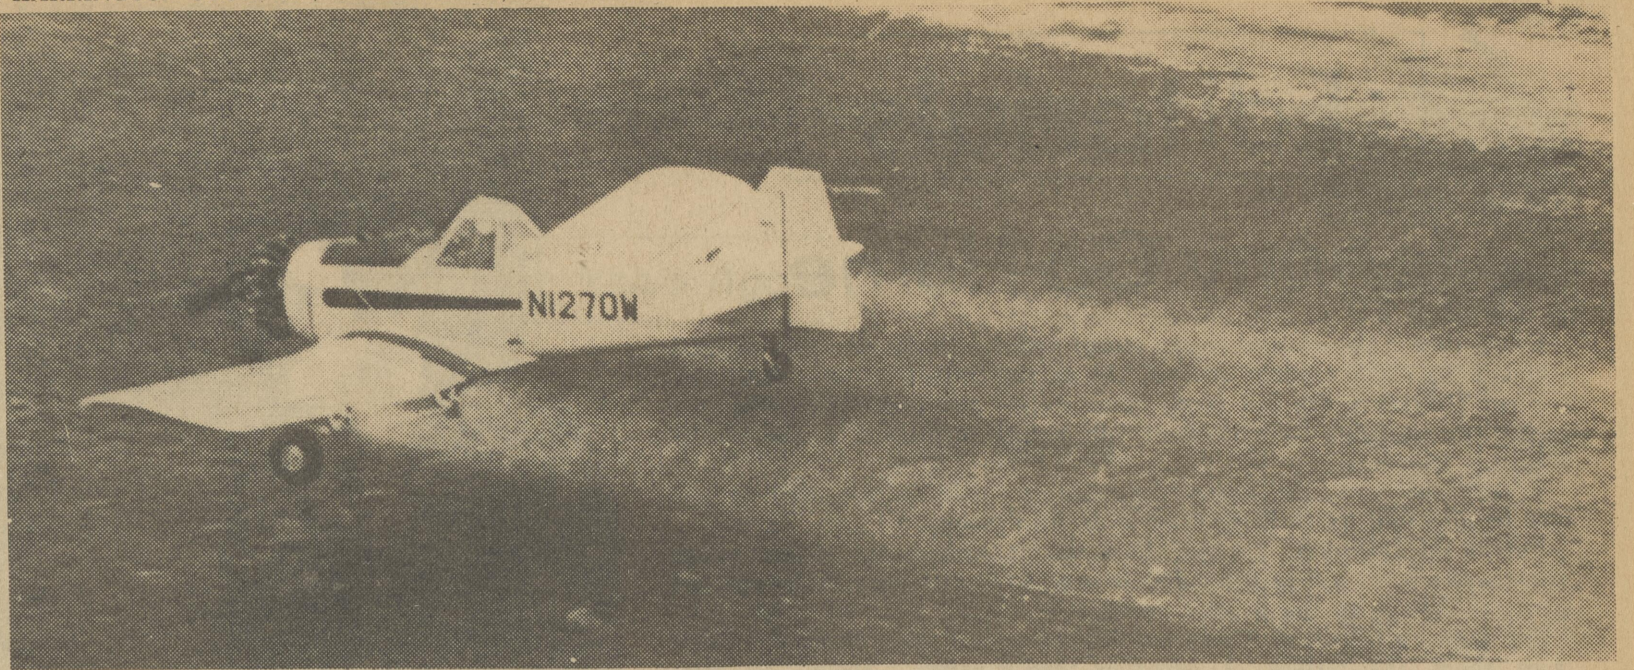

But, so are the bugs that can eat a farmer out of business overnight.

If army worms cut off one stalk of wheat per square foot in a field, the loss is one bushel per acre. This is why Beiler's exists. And it's why an estimated 20,000 aircraft around the world are busy every day at aerial application of pesticides aimed at everything from army worms to the plagues of locusts not unlike those referred to in the Bible.

Aerial application is quick, the most inexpensive way to treat crops, and the way that avoids crop damage.

Different chemicals and different weather conditions dictate the speed and altitude of an aerial applicator. And, in certain circumstances there are natural hazards of low flying birds and sudden updrafts both of which can jolt an aircraft. A pilot must thus be constantly alert.

The Crew at Beiler's Crop Service.

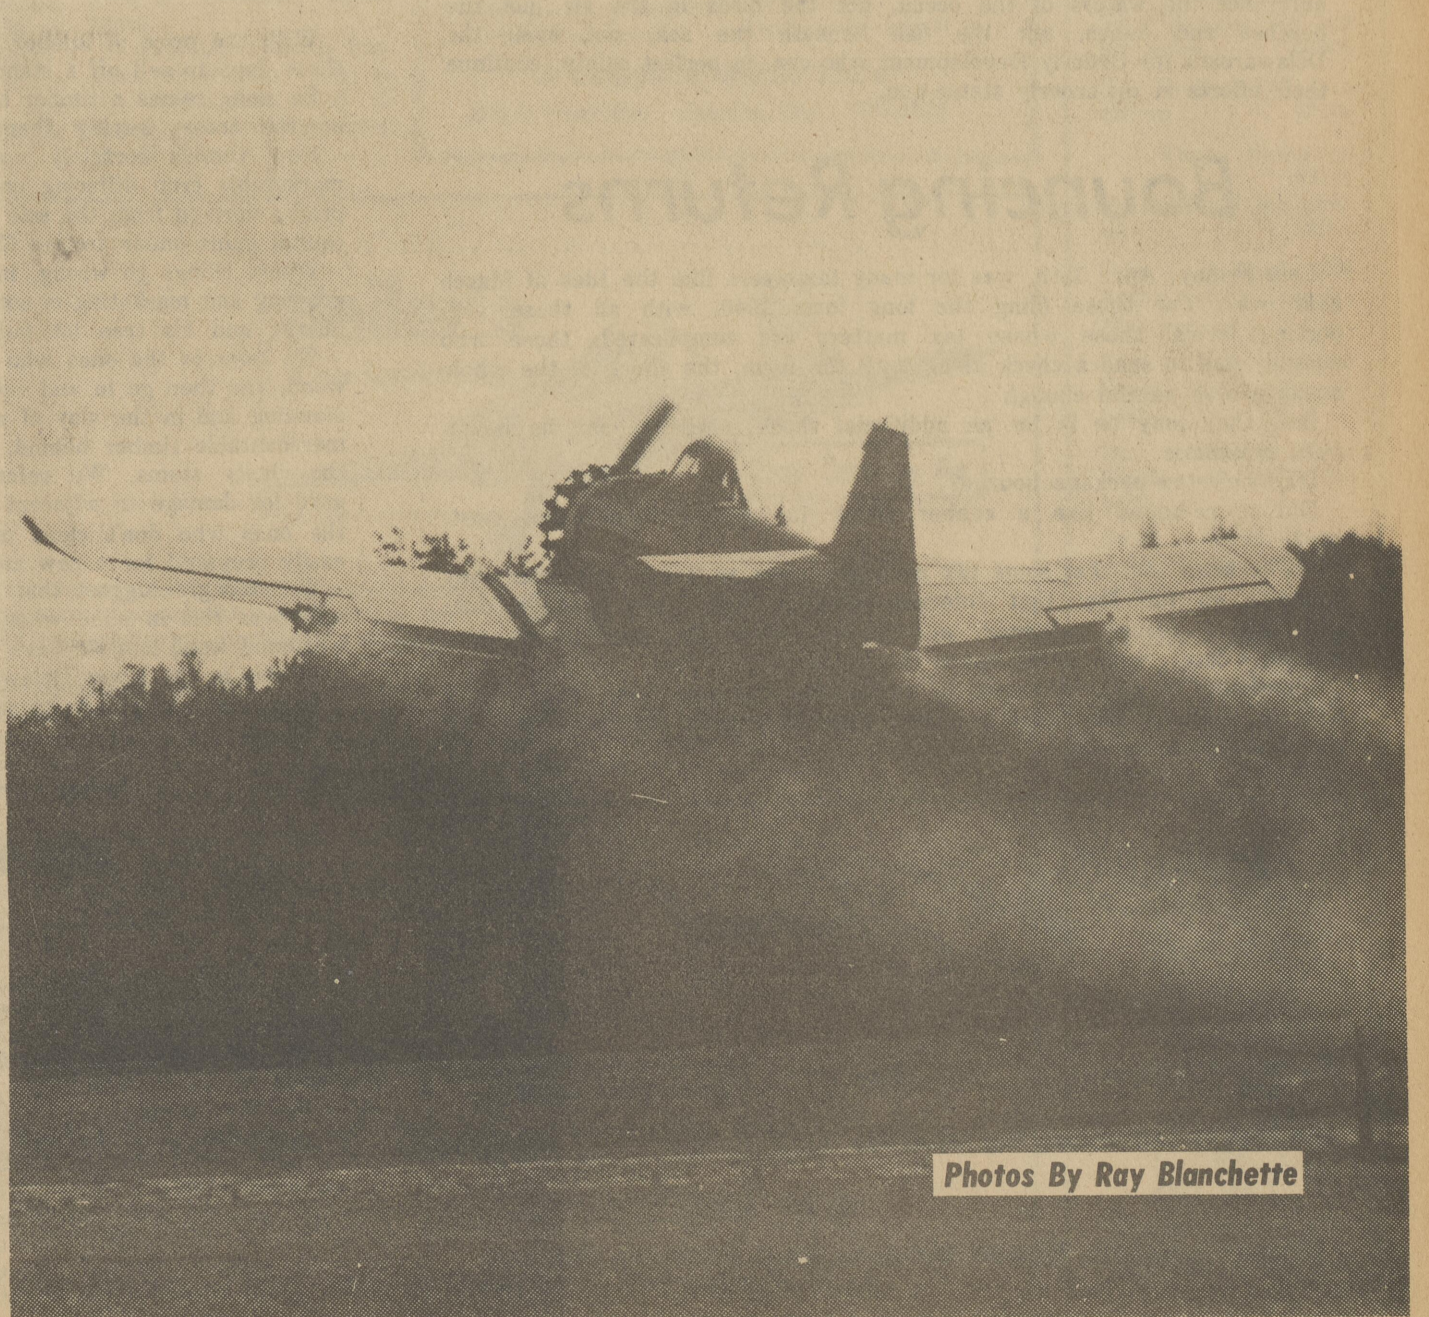

The business end of an aerial application aircraft is this wind driven atomizer device. It is English made and costs nearly $1,000.00.

Tanks on a "crop duster" are filled amidships. They are located for balance.

Ground support for the Beiler's operation comes from this tank truck which carries pesticides and herbicides so the applying aircraft doesn't have to return to home base for a refill.

College Chorus Sets Concert

The Wesley College Chorus, under the direction of Michael Larkin, will present its Spring Concert on Sunday, April 24 at 8 p.m. in Room 206 of the Wesley College Center.

Featured on the program will be an a cappella presentation of The Passion According to St. John, by Elizabethan composer William Byrd. Based on the Biblical text of the life of Christ, the work is a solid example of Byrd's church music.

Other compositions on the program are those of J.S. Bach, Mozart, Billings, Palestrina and Michael Larkin.

The public is invited to attend the concert, which is free.

76 GRANDPRIZE WINNER. This "Horned Owl with Mouse", by John Scheeler of Mays Landing, N.J., won first prize and $3,500 in the '76 Contest. This year the winner will receive $10,000 in this lifesized decorative class, an unheard of sum up to now in wildfowl carving.

Wildfowl Carving Show

OLD TIMERS TO JUDGE These three veteran Eastern Shore veteran carvers and naturalists will bring a grand total of 238 years of experience to judge the popular "Shootin' Stool Decoy Contest". From left to right they are Paul Marshall, 75, of Smith Island, the famed Lem Ward, 81, of Crisfield and Corb Reed, 82, of Chincoteague. All entries will be bobbed in a water tank to insure natural floatation.

Wildfowl Carving Contest Set For This Weekend

Close to 2,000 entries are expected in the Seventh Annual World Championship Wildfowl Carving Contest of the Ward Foundation, to be held in the Civic Center, Salisbury, Saturday and Sunday, April 23 and 24. The big 1977 show, the world's largest such event, will offer an unprecedented grand prize of $10,000 for the single top piece, for Decorative Lifesized Wildfowl in the professional class. First prize for a Decorative Decoy pair will be $2,000, and the prize money will top $25,000 in total checks.

"This $10,000 single prize is three times more money than has ever been offered before," said Knute Bartrug, Chairman of the Contest and of the Foundation. "Judging from the requests for entry blanks that have been coming, we will have work from the nation's best carvers, and we expect well up to 500 carvers to complete the very top talent from this country, Canada and Europe."

"The trend to more elaborate carving is sure to continue. Look for individually carved feathers, finer paintings, larger museum pieces with several birds. While the Ward Foundation can never forget our debt to the grand old-time decoy carvers of the past, we know that today's keen competition among professionals will bring out new and more elaborate truly new creations."

Three grand old Eastern Shoremen, hunters and decoy makers with a total of 238 full years behind them, will judge the "Shootin' Stool Decoy Contest," an event devoted to the classic gunning decoy. The famed and prestigious Lem Ward of Crisfield, 82, Paul Marshall of Smith Island, 75, and Corb Reed of Chincoteague, 81, all have forgotten more wildfowl lore than most men will ever know, and they will be judges before the bobbing tanks again this year. The carvers have all been asked to donate a bird here (for $10), and their generosity in this event helps pay for the show.

Entries in the Shootin' Stool contest will be then auctioned off to the public. This auction provided a chance for collectors to acquire at modest prices work of some of the continent's finest artist-carvers. Indeed, it is the only chance for many collectors to ever get a chance to bid on such top quality, very rare pieces.

The two annual Ward shows attracted last year 25,000 persons to the Civic Center. In the ten-year history of the Foundation, an estimated 150,000 visitors have come to Salisbury to see the shows. The Carving Competition is always held the fourth weekend in April, while

Now there may be a crime in there, but I don't think that she has committed it. I think it's a crime that we have not changed the law and that's why I will introduce my bill.

Happenings

by Carole Glasspool

Mr. and Mrs. William Ashley and children, Jennifer and Billy, of Woodbury Acres spent the early part of last week in Washington, D.C. and Virginia. They toured the Smithsonian Institute, Mt. Vernon, Luray Caverns, Arlington and various other points of interest. The Washington Monument has always, in my memory, been referred to as "The Needle" but young Billy Ashley has come up with a new nickname for the imposing structure. He refers to it as "The Pencil." After returning home for a brief respite the Ashleys were off again on Saturday to the Pennsylvania Dutch Country where they toured the Pennsylvania Railroad Museum. All sorts of trains are on display there from the earliest wood-fired engine to the latest diesel type. The Ashleys also saw the private plush coach that was used by Barbara Streisand in the filming of "Hello Dolly" and took a train ride to Paradise. How many of us have an opportunity to ride to Paradise and return? While traveling in the Amish country the Ashleys saw an Amish farmer plowing his field using three teams of horses. Elizabeth said she had seen four horses abreast plowing but never six. That's a rather unique six horsepower plow in this day and age.

When Karen Wilmore of Woodbury Acres tells

1837 when Maryland went broke and defaulted on commitments under the "Eight Million Dollar Bill". The company failed and so ended Teackle's dream, including the part of it which was to have one wing of his Princess Anne mansion serve as a passenger depot with his daughter as Station Master!

In 1840, a second "Eastern Shore Railroad" was chartered and acquired by grant from the State of Maryland, the original 66 foot wide strip of right-of-way of the first company.

No track was ever laid on this right-of-way except the stretch from Princess Anne to Crisfield.

Later, when the Delaware Railroad Company was chartered and pushed a line from Wilmington to Salisbury, passing through Harrington on the way, the Eastern Shore Railroad was extended from Princess Anne to Salisbury where it joined up with the Delaware line.

Still later, the Pennsylvania Railroad acquired the whole thing. And with it, went the old 66 foot wide right-of-way that belonged to the "line that never was" back in 1836.

And to this day the receivers in bankruptcy of the Penn Central, still get a dollar a year nominal rent from some of the farmers near Elkton, for use of the right-of-way. And now, still more Delmarva history is being made with the purchase of the Pocomoke to Cape Charles extension of the line that passes through Harrington, by a group from New York.

Why? Well maybe there's some thought the energy crisis will bring back the railroads, restore them to their former status as the most economical way to send goods and produce from point A. to point B. And who knows, maybe Harrington will once again see passenger traffic!

In the meantime, if anybody wants to start another railroad, there's a strip of right-of-way over in Maryland. Its embankments and grades are somewhat eroded now. A house or two might be in the way. A public road called "Old Railroad Road", and straight as a die, is built atop part of the old right-of-way where it crosses what is now U.S. Route 50 just west of Salisbury. And in most places fences cross its path. But, it's there beneath the trees and honeysuckle, still waiting for ties, spikes, fish plates an maybe even the wheels of a locomotive.

husband Tom to "go fly a kite" he goes and flies a kite. The big twist on this is that Karen goes and flies one, also, and so do the Wilmore children. The Wilmires, who up until two years ago resided in the Erie, Pa., area, have all become kite flying enthusiasts and not just flying them either. They make all of their kites and for the last several weekends have been traveling around to competitions. Karen recently won a box of donuts for a "most original" kite she had sewn - a replica of the American flag. They've been to Baltimore and last weekend in Middletown, Del. Joining the Wilmires in the highflying sport are Don and Karen Grissom and their son Don of Woodbury Acres. In fact, when the Grissoms arrived back at Philadelphia Airport last Saturday from a week-long visit with Mrs. Grissom's mother in New York, Karen Wilmore was there to meet them and transport them to the Middletown kite flying competition. So, the next time someone tells you to "go fly a kite," try it, you might like it!

Rev. and Mrs. Charles Urban of Pennsylvania are visiting this week at the Wilmires. Mrs. Wilmore is Rev. Urban's sister.

"Happenings" sends best wishes for a speedy recovery to the "Lady Editor" of the Harrington Journal, Margo Farrow. We miss you, Margo!

Happy Birthday to Miss Robin Kashner of Barretts Chapel Rd., Canterbury who will be fourteen on Saturday!

The rose family includes apples, pears, quinces, peaches, and apricots

Museum of the Foundation will also be open during this time. It is found in Salisbury State College, just off College Avenue, turn right from Route 13 at the south end of Salisbury. The Museum contains one of the nation's finest collections of both decorative and classic decoys, and features a sound and light color slide show on the history of the decoy. Admission is $1 for adults. The Museum features work of Lem and his brother, the late Steve Ward, for whom the Foundation is named.

Many of the top money winners from past competitions are on display, plus a large new piece from Grangier McKoy. There are also displays of early hunting equipment, and classic decoys of the past century by famed carvers of that era.

The presence of the Museum, plus the two world record decoys shows, have clearly established Salisbury as the center of wildfowl carving and art in the world. This exciting new folk art form has blossomed in just ten years from the most modest beginnings of a couple hundred entries, and very few really professional, full-time carvers, to an exciting nationally-recognized art form, with dozens of professionals with annual incomes well up into five figures, and prices for their work 10 to 20 times the fees of the '60's. Well-known art museums now feature wildfowl art, and the public is enthusiastic not only as collectors, but also as a concerned body of conservationists, devoted to the protection of our beautiful wildfowl populations.

Blue-Gold Game Begins 22nd Year

Plans are well underway for the 1977 Delaware Blue-Gold All-Star Football Game scheduled for August 13 at 2 p.m. at the University of Delaware stadium. The game, held annually to benefit the Delaware Foundation for Retarded Children, is in its 22nd year.

Both Area teams will be represented in this year's game as Mike Bensen will represent Lake Forest and George Jefferson will represent Woodbridge. Each year the Foundation makes grants to support projects of various local organizations involved with programs for the mentally retarded. Last year's game netted $53,000 and "seed money" grants were made to Delaware Youth for Human Services, a group dedicated to young handicapped people who will now be able to broaden their program; the Jewish Family Service to Help Support the Brandywine Social Club, an activity program for mentally retarded adults; the Mary Campbell Center for Scholarships to subsidize clients for long term or respite care; Delaware Curative Workshop to support a program for early identification of developmentally disabled children; Center of Religious Education to support a spiritual-social teen program; and John Charlton School in Camden-Wyoming to initiate a bowling program. Attorney James Garvin of Newark, Chairman of the 40 member game committee, has set this year's goal at $62,000. Attorney Garvin is the newly-appointed U.S. Attorney for Delaware and has been with the game for seven years. He previously served as Athletic Committee Chairman and was last year's Vice-Chairman. Supporting Attorney Garvin are two Vice-Chairmen: Jim Keegan of Hockessin, a Du Pont Marketing Manager in his fifth year on the game committee, and Angie Cataldi of Newark, Principal of Claymont Middle School, in his twelfth year with the committee. The Gold team is comprised of players from 20 schools and from the Blue are 19 schools. In addition to the ball players, cheerleaders representing schools in both areas will be announced by mid-April. The 66 ball players will each nominate a queen candidate from their schools and from these nominations the Blue and Gold queens and their courts will be selected. Gold selections will be made at Benjamin's in Dover's Blue Hen Mall on July 26. The Blue selections will be made at Pomeroy's in the Concord Mall on August 1. In 1974 the game committee inaugurated the "Hand-in-Hand" program in order to bring game participants into direct contact with the retarded children in this program. All players, cheerleaders, and queen candidates are given the opportunity of being paired with a "buddy" from one of the State's schools for the mentally retarded. It has proven to be an extremely rewarding experience for all involved and is really what the game is all about. A major portion of the game's proceeds result from the advertisements, sponsors and patrons which are included in the game program. Howard Cosgrove of Newark is Chairman of this year's campaign. Under the direction of Mrs. Judy Zucker of Westwood Manor, the upstate campaign is underway and will continue through April. Mrs. Doris Walls of Dover is heading up the downstate effort which will take place in May and June.

Spartans Edge Raiders 82-59

Moore Sets New Record In Hurdles

Bill Moore's 42.6 clocking in the Intermediate hurdles set a new Lake Forest record as the Spartans won a tightly contested track meet 82-59 against Woodbridge here on Monday.

Lake Forest had not beaten Woodbridge for several years, but finally put the contest in the win column by sweeping the next-to-the last event, the pole vault. Gusti Voshell's clearance of ten feet, six inches, was followed by efforts of ten feet by Kelly Woodward and Allan Walth.

Blue Raider sprinter Watts won the 100 and 220 yard dashes, while teammate Greg Rowe annexed the discus and shot put with a pair of the best performances seen here to date. Rowe spun the platter 145 feet, 4 inches and hurled the 12-pound-shot 50 feet, 10 inches. He's a threat to win both in the state meet.

Danny Parker was a double winner, taking the mile in an excellent 4:46.2, then going 880 yards in 2:12 mile, with Dave Richter of Lake Forest and Mesibov of Woodbridge going 2-3 in the 880.

Wilson Fry, a Spartan sophomore, ran his fastest two mile yet, 10:37, as Woodbridge's George Williams surprised by finishing second against the distance rich Spartans whose freshman prospect, Bill Mitchell, was third.

Tony Barner and Ron Loper ran 1-2 in the 440, then teamed with Bill Moore and Dave Richter to win the mile relay.

Woodbridge has excellent long and triple jumpers as Lake Forest's tough, Mike Bensen was edged in each of his specialties, losing by 1/2 inch to Murray (19-8) in the former and by 6 1/2 inches to Burbage (41-7) in the latter. Spartan Stacy Sams did 19-5 in the long jump.

John O'Toole and Jerry Custis had fine second place efforts in the discus (121-10) and high hurdles, respectively. Custis tied his school mark (15.8).

Lake Forest swept the final event, the high jump, with Tim McCombs and Joe Nored, each clearing 5 feet, 8 inches, with Chris Palmisano going over 5-6. Palmisano is built closer to the ground than most scholastic horizontal leapers.

NASCAR's Baby Grand Division Set To Race At Dover Downs On May 14

NASCAR's Baby Grand Division has been signed for a 50-mile race at Dover Downs International Speedway to take place on Saturday, May 14th, the day before the Mason-Dixon "500" Winston Cup Grand National race. Inaugurated last year by NASCAR, the Baby Grand Division is comprised of compact cars such as Pintos, Vegas, and Mavericks. The cars are painted up much the same as the Grand National cars with many of the color schemes matching identically with the cars of Petty, Pearson and other Winston Cup stars. Larry Pearson, son of famed Purlator driver, David Pearson, is a regular competitor in the division.

With the Baby Grand race scheduled for 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, the Mason-Dixon race activities have been expanded to 4 days beginning on Thursday, May 12th. At 7 a.m. on Thursday, the Grand National cars and the NASCAR inspection process will get underway. The initial practice session for the Mason-Dixon "500" will start at 1 p.m. on Thursday and gates will open to the general public at that time. Friday's schedule will see the Baby Grand cars and drivers sign in and begin their inspection process. Grand National practice will also start at 8 a.m. on Friday.

For the first time, the two Mason-Dixon "500" pole positions (Starting positions 1 and 2) will be determined by time trial runs on Friday (1 p.m.). The entire entry field is eligible to take time trials for one of the two slots, but only the fastest two cars will be awarded these front row positions. The remainder of the starting positions (3 through 40) will be determined by another time trial session on Saturday at 1 p.m. Friday's activities will conclude with alternating Grand National and Baby Grand practice in the afternoon.

Saturday's schedule calls for Grand National and Baby Grand practice at 8 a.m. followed by Baby Grand qualifying for all starting positions at 11 a.m. Following the Saturday Mason-Dixon qualifying session at 1 p.m., the Baby Grand will compete in their 50-mile race at 2:30 p.m. The race will be followed by final practice for the Mason-Dixon "500" and the Eastman Kodak Camera Day activities.

On Sunday, pre-race activities begin at 9:45 a.m. and the 9th annual Mason-Dixon "500" will start at 12:05 p.m.

Gab Fest

by Pat Hatfield

Yesterday was a perfect summer day (in the middle of April!). We took advantage of it by house-cleaning. While this does not resemble house-cleaning as I did it twenty years ago, a good thing came my way. Grandson Teddy was home from school on spring vacation, and he is a great little worker. He cleaned all the windows, inside and out, in this big, old farmhouse. I trailed along with cleaning supplies, instructions, and moral support and Granddad held the bottom of the tall ladder safely while I stood and trembled for fear my little climbing monkey would fall. But he didn't and we are enjoying the results. Today he is raking the yards for Grandpa.

The summer screens are in the doors and windows and now I can stand at the sink and smell the freshness of the early morning as I start the coffee and heat up the pancake griddle. As we quote before, "April's promises are kept and everyone is green." The miracle of the leaves is here. Only a few days ago...black branches against a gray sky; Now vivid green leaves against the blue. I went out just now to check the two backward ones. The sugar maple, always a little braver than her sister sycamore, has small leaves the size of a baby's palm. The sycamore has wee leaves about the size of my thumb nail.

I went into the closet this morning to put away some empty fruit jars to have them ready for the canning and freezing season. These particular jars had contained peaches, applesauce, strawberries and tomatoes, and I wondered what I would fill them with this year. I stood there, remembering, and a whole new train of thought entered my mind. I was a little girl again, dressed in a clean gingham dress with white starched pinafore and my tightly-braided pigtails tied with bows of ribbon. In those days, whether it was an afternoon call on a farmer's wife or an evening meeting of The Ladies' Aid of the church at a farmer's home, little children sat quietly and were seen, but not heard, unless spoken to. So we had ample time to listen and observe the ways of our elders.

And one of the questions the farm women always asked each other in the days of late autumn was, "Do you have all your jars filled?" Each family had literally hundreds of mason jars, and they strived to get them all filled before winter with something edible. Then they could relax and think of Quilting Bees, Box Socials and Corn Huskins, providing the fall butchering of the pork was finished, the back bones and spareribs put down in brine salt enough to float an egg and the hams cured and into their hanging cloth bags in the smokehouse. Then a new topic of conversation entered the picture. I would hear one neighbor lady say to another, "Have you cut a ham yet?" Back bones and spareribs and sausage and scrapple were abundant, but not worthy of comment, but there were only so many hams, and they were high on the preferred list, so they were held back a bit. Usually one was cut when we had the preacher and his wife to dinner and for holidays. And if a lady in the neighborhood was so indiscreet as to be lavish with this delicious commodity there was a shocked look and someone would say, "She has cut a ham already". I would shiver a bit at this awful deed and sit up a bit straighter when my mother reassured them that our hams were still intact in the smokehouse.

Another question always asked in those long-ago conversational groups was "Are your hens laying well?" Eggs were not only an important item in the diet but any not used were sold. The money was always set up as reserved for the lady of the home and women depended on the "egg money" to procure the small necessities of life...hairpins, straight pins, needles and thread, and sometimes when the hens just outdid themselves, one might be able to save back enough for a new hat.

I often think of how many eggs we consumed in those days. We often had them for supper as well as breakfast and often if a housewife was called upon to help her husband a bit in the fields, they just ran in at noon and fried a panful of eggs. And no one worried (or knew) about cholesterol or proteins or anything else.

At the April 12th meeting of the Harrington Century Club Mrs. Maurice Bowers, librarian at The Milford Library, told us some entertaining stories. She reminded us that anyone in Kent County is entitled to have a membership card, and to use the library. She solicited memorial books.

Our last scheduled meeting before the summer vacation is on April 26th. On April 27th at 7:30 we are giving a card party, everyone is invited, toll $1.50.

ter figure, it was claimed at the meeting, would increase revenue statewide by approximately $2 and one fourth Million Dollars. The idea for cutting the Department of Public Instruction was not accompanied with a price tag. But it, and the other proposals were well received at the meeting where the concensus seemed to be generally, that nobody wants a decline in the quality of education.

appointment of Thomas W. Spruance as State Organizational Director for the Republican Party. Spruance will be working with the state committee and will be focusing his efforts on the basics of political organization - voter registration, volunteer activities and communication with all levels of the Republican Party Leadership, particularly as it pertains to candidates for federal elections.

Brown said, "We are very fortunate in having someone with the political background and experience of Mr. Spruance working for us in Delaware, and look forward to a great deal of accomplishment through our joint efforts." The position of state organizational director is a new concept developed and funded by the Republican National Committee to assist party leadership in efforts to strengthen and expand the Republican Party Organization.
