Princess Anne On Hand For Unveiling

CENTREVILLE, MD. On Saturday and Sunday this Eastern Shore community was treated royally by the visit of H.R.H. The Princess Anne of Great Britain and her husband Capt. Mark Phillips. Princess Anne on somewhat of a state visit was invited to Centreville and Queen Ann County for the unveiling and dedication of a bronze statue of her namesake Queen Anne (1664-1714) of England. Princess Anne, much like her namesake was to have been, charmed and stunned the thousands who attended the ceremonies with her gentleness and courteous but stately manner. Queen Anne was a gentle person and did a great deal toward the shaping of the Maryland Colony, and is generally recognized as the one who did the most for establishment of the Episcopal Church on Maryland soil.

The unveiling of the statue of Queen Anne took place on the courthouse square in front of the historic 200 year old courthouse in Centreville. From the statue dedication which was hosted by acting Governor Blair Lee who for the most part on Saturday escorted Princess Anne to the official outings. A snappy U.S. Marine Corps played and drilled with expertise which only the Marines are noted. With rigid posture and rifles at "port arms...and half stepping", the Marine honor guard executed with finite percis executed with finite percis executed with finite percis. From head to toe, the Marines were "spit and polish."

Princess Anne was guest of honor at the Queen Ann High School for a luncheon, and then onto the Kent Island Yacht Club for a parade of boats which included "skip-jacks and bugeyes". Princess Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips were house guests at the Wye Plantation of Wye Island. The Plantation is owned by Arthur Houghton, head of Corning Glass works. A picnic was given on Saturday night for the Royal Visitors and enabled several hundred guests and newspaper personnel to become closer to the royal family. Many commented the following day "that The Princess was a very sweet and gentle person...very knowledgeable and understanding."

Princess On Hand

This 12 inch bronze statue of Queen Anne was dedicated by Princess Anne of England on Saturday in Centreville, Md. Queen Anne was honored for her contribution to the area later named for her. . . Queen Anne County. Queen Anne was also remembered on Sunday at Church services at Old Wye Church for her contribution to the establishment of the Episcopal Church in the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

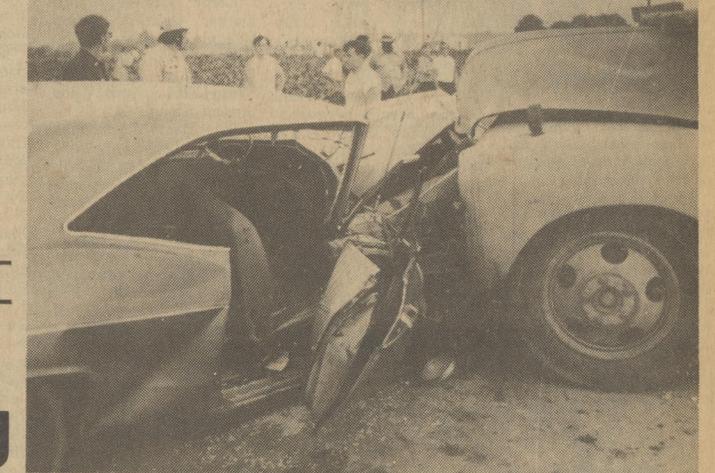

On Sunday morning, The Princess Anne and her husband attended church at the Old Wye Church, an Episcopal Church, which was built in 1694. The oldest structure was burned and the present structure was erected in the early 1700's. The Church is constructed of brick which were brought from England, and the pews are boxed. The Rector in residence is Rev. H. M. Richardson who delivered the address. The address was delivered from a pulpit located center way of the north wall extending out over the congregation. The Church is very unique in its design and architecture. It is colonial and very simple. Princess Anne remarked after the service on Sunday morning these very words and how much she was impressed with the structure as well as the message contained in the sermon. Rev. Richardson extolled the virtues of Queen Anne as being the one largely responsible for the emergence of the Episcopal Church on the Eastern Shore and especially in Maryland.

Delaware Route 14 proved to be a hazardous place to be this weekend as two persons were killed and eight persons were injured in two separate accidents. Early Saturday morning a car driven by Quinn Harmon, 19, of Harrington collided with a car driven by Teresa Nollmyer, 17, of Magnolia when her car allegedly crossed the center line. Two of the passengers in Harmon's car, Robert Hayes, 21, of Dover and Beverly Casson, 14, of Harrington were pronounced dead on arrival at Milford Memorial Hospital. Harmon remains in critical condition at Delaware Division in Wilmington while Nollmyer is in fair condition at Milford Memorial. Two other passengers in Harmon's car, Carvette Bryant, 13, and Deborah Fayden, 15, both of Harrington are in serious condition in Delaware Division. Another passenger Eugene Riley, 17, of Star Hill remains in fair condition in Milford. Saturday night the second of the two accidents on route 14 involved a 1953 dump truck operated by Austin Turcotte, 70, of Harrington. The truck was headed north on county road 429 when the brakes failed when Turcotte attempted to stop. He then attempted to make the turn onto Delaware Route 14 and went off the road, striking a mailbox and then returned onto the road where he hit another car. The other vehicle, a 1965 Chevrolet, was operated by Samuel Wahl, 65, of Goldsboro, Md. Mr. Wahl suffered a fractured hip and lacerations of the face. A passenger in the car, Bernard Hendrix of Goldsboro, Md., suffered head and chest injuries and is in critical condition at Delaware Division in Wilmington. Mr. Hendrix was trapped in the car following the collision and rescued by members of the Harrington Volunteer Fire Co. who had to use the hurst tool to free him. Charges are pending in both weekend accidents.

Trapped Man Rescued

Three people were injured in this Saturday evening crash, one seriously when this 1953 Chevrolet dump truck's brakes failed and struck the 1965 Chevrolet operated by Samuel Wahl of Goldsboro, Md. The Evans Report

by Congressman Tom Evans

I have just returned from the United Nations Law of the Sea Conference in New York City, where representatives from 156 nations around the world are discussing issues vital not only to our state and our nation, but also to the world.
These issues include freedom of the seas, environmental protection, deep sea mining and territorial fishing rights.
I was impressed by the diversity in the representatives attending the Conference. Many different cultures -- with different levels of technology, different natural resources, and different political systems -- were represented.
Freedom of the seas is one of the prime concerns of our country. We must maintain access to all of the world's waterways, both for purposes of national defense and for trade and commerce.
One of the more controversial issues we dealt with is deep sea mining. In fact, the minerals that lie in pockets on the ocean floor have caused a classic confrontation between developing and developed countries at the Conference.
These minerals -- copper, manganese, cobalt and nickel -- are critically important to the United States. We are presently forced to import most of them: 98 percent of our manganese and cobalt, 75 percent of our nickel, and 15 percent of our copper.

The United States may need those minerals buried on the sea's depths -- both to insure domestic supply and insure against unwarranted price rises.
The developing countries want to delegate all responsibility for mining to an international authority that would regulate completely profits from and access to these minerals.
The United States and most of the developed nations want to mine these minerals through the free enterprise system, reliance on traditional treaty agreements and private companies. We support a dual system, whereby an international sea organization and private companies would mine simultaneously.
The developing countries, however, have refused to compromise.
The dialogue is continuing.
Should these agreements not be forthcoming in the near future, I feel the U.S. should proceed with deep-sea mining development in order to protect our interests.

Career Corner

by Buck Thompson

C.E. "Whitney" Grubbs is manager of underwater construction for Chicago Bridge and Iron Co. in Prairieville, Louisiana. CBI, one of the largest employers of welder-divers, pays an average of $44,000 a year for this work, Grubbs says. Some welder-divers earn as much as $78,000 annually.
But before you flip over this high-paying career, several factors may dampen your enthusiasm:
Grubbs says that "for every diver who makes $50,000 a year in the Gulf of Mexico, probably a half-dozen hitchhike back to California when the work slacks off in the winter."
This is cold, uncomfortable and sometimes dangerous work. It is so difficult that of the experienced welders who apply to CBI, only one in eight can make the changeover to underwater work.

Underwater welding is a small field which employs perhaps 100 "wet" welders in the U.S. Welding, not diving, is the main skill needed. So you start by learning welding in a vocational school or technical institute, in a community college welding program, or through formal apprenticeship. A number of diving schools teach underwater welding but these programs are designed to help you adapt welding skills you've already acquired. The Navy also teaches basic wet welding.
Employment is concentrated in the Gulf of Mexico coast and the North Sea, chiefly because of oil drilling and production, but docks and harbor facilities need repair in other regions as well. On the Washington state coast, for example, welder-divers earn base pay of over $24 an hour.
Automation is cutting down the need for divers who do less skilled work, but Grubbs says subsea robots can't replace the welder-diver and that the occupation is growing.
One nice thing about this work is that you can always earn a good living on land as a highly skilled welder in case the water business dries up.
The best book about the nature of this work is "Commercial Oil-Field Diving" by N.B. Sinkowski, (published by Cornell Maritime Press, Box 109, Cambridge, MD 21613).
Also write to the American Welding Society (2501 NW 7th St. Miami, Florida 33125) for the society's new free career booklet on welding and a list of welding and diving schools in this area.

'...in reality a princess...but under it all a Queen.'

The Eastern Shore of Maryland was visited this weekend by a Royal visitor...Her Royal Highness The Princess Anne...daughter of Queen Elizabeth II of England. Princess Anne was invited to this country to help dedicate a bronze statue of her namesake Queen Anne of England, who died in 1714 at the age of 49. Following her around during this two-day affair enabled the viewer to perhaps characterize in their own mind the ways of the Princess to be that of very kind and sweet young lady.

The pomp and pageantry that went along with the affair was really subdued by the queenly airs and royal presentations that this young lady possesses. For the most part those who had first hand presentations with her echoed these feelings. "A very dear and sweet...but knowledgeable young lady", were the kind of remarks about H.R.H. The Princess Anne. She seemed well at ease though as she and her husband, Mark Phillips, viewed the horse show at Gundston School near Centerville on Sunday. Many of the riders and performers had competed against the English equestrian team at the Montreal Olympics of which Princess Anne and Mark Phillips are members.

The sad aspect of it all was the fact that not many including the press were permitted to get very close to this Royal Visitor. Only once did she break with protocol and mingle with the people who had come to see Her Highness rather than the horses or the yachts (at the Kent Island Yacht Club parade of boats on Saturday). On Sunday upon leaving the horse show, she took the opportunity to stop and shake the hands of many school children from Queen Anne County School, many of whom were dressed in their band uniforms having performed for The Princess. She took the opportunity to greet these little people because the secret service...and members of the bomb squad could not prevent it. It was a great thrill for the school children whose faces lighted up when The Princess passed by them and shook their hands.

It is too bad that dignitaries must be showered with the protection which the secret service rendered to The Princess. One would think that maybe they were over doing it, for who would want to harm The Princess. As one security guard was heard to remark "...it is best to be safe than sorry". This is true, but sometimes they could relax their standards to allow the human side to come through. The Princess was showered with a great deal of protection and armed with a real arsenal...such as automatic weapons and machine guns. What price to pay for being such an important person...if around every corner there is an assassin. Was it likely an IRA member would be here...at the horse show...the yacht parade. It would seem highly unlikely. In addition to this any harm to a person such as Princess Anne would precipitate a retaliation beyond proportion to be sure.

In the final analysis one of the high lights of the two day affair was the opportunity extended to The Princess Anne to greet the high school students personally.

Ambassador -- Or What?

In recent days our attention has been turned to the out spoken ways of the U.S. Ambassador to the UN, Andrew Young. Although a capable person and one who drew attention years ago from then Gov. Jimmie Carter and Dr. Martin Luther King, the latest antics cause one to wonder if this sort of thing should be for another cause or promotion. The Ambassador to the UN, requires for the most part the air of peace maker, negotiator and a firm representative of all the people of this country. The late Adlai Stevenson was a perfect example of this definition...and surely the first Ambassador and former U.S. Senator from Texas Warren Austin was in that category.

Most of Ambassador Young's critics find it hard to debate him for he uses the word "racist" to reflect upon so many. Although Mr. Young should not be silenced for his views, he should nevertheless avoid this sort of expression or expressions when it reflects on the position of the U.S. Ambassador to the UN.

Wollaston's Will Be Missed

You can say what you want about a small town, but for the most part they are about the best places in the world to live. Many times people in other communities tend to joke and poke fun at our "little community", but it is not the worst place in the world to live.

It is always sad when you lose something that has been a part of your community. In the case of Wollastons, this fine women's store has been a part of this community for the past 20 years or more. They will be missed! Ronnie Wollaston was a part of this community. Seeing and talking with Laura Belle Layton was also a pleasant event. Whether the price was always right or not was not always the governing thing. To have a women's store of the Wollaston calibre was a convenience to the community. For the most part a shopper did not always have to go out of town to get items generally carried in the store. To be sure, there were items which prompted shoppers to go elsewhere...either just to travel...or a certain item was needed...or it was on the way. But for the most part Wollastons did the job...and they will be missed. We are hoping that the owners of the shopping center or some reator will find a suitable replacement. We certainly hope so, but regardless of the outcome...WOLLASTONS...WILL BE MISSED.

Special Program Offered

The Lake Forest School District is planning to offer a special program for four and five year old children. The program will begin in September 1977 for children with learning difficulties caused by physical, mental, or emotional conditions.

Anyone who might have, or know of, a child whom you suspect might have learning difficulties is urged to call the Lake Forest School District Central Office, 398-3244 to arrange an appointment for screening and evaluation.

If you were heading a firm competing for a Federal contract for mousetraps, you would have to comply with a 120,000 word product specification before the Federal government would buy your mousetrap.

This is just one example of the intrusion of big government into our Free Enterprise System -- an intrusion which makes the small businessman an endangered species. It is sad but often true today that only big business can afford to compete with big government. We must assure that the backbone of our economy is the entrepreneur not the government bureaucrat.

A study by the Office of Management and Budget estimates that the total cost of government regulation to the U.S. economy may be as much as $130 billion. This was equal to more than 8% of our Gross National Product during 1976. In addition, the cost of Federal paperwork, estimated by the Commission on Federal Paperwork, is on the order of $40 billion per year.

Much of this regulation is needless intervention by big government which causes higher taxes, higher prices to consumers, higher costs of businesses, and inflation in the economy.

One of the biggest complaints raised by businessmen and state planning officials concerns long delays before the Federal government reaches a final decision. All too often it takes weeks and sometimes years before a proposed standard becomes a final order. For example, in 1959 the Food and Drug Administration proposed a national standard for the peanut content of peanut butter. The regulatory process and the appeals process were not exhausted and a "final order" was not announced until 1968--over 9 years after the first standard was proposed.

Another example of regulatory delay is the case of the Rock Island Railroad. The hapless Rock Island Railroad began a proceeding in 1963 before the Interstate Commerce Commission seeking to obtain a merger with the Union Pacific Railroad. For more than twelve years the Federal proceedings dragged on while the Rock Island plunged further and further into bankruptcy. By the time tentative approval for the merger came from the ICC, the Rock Island was no longer a desirable acquisition and the merger proposal was dropped.

The Government Affairs Committee on which I serve has recently examined the causes of delay in Federal regulation and will suggest ways to cut down on costly delays.

I believe that regulations should not remain on the code books indefinitely and that every regulatory agency should have the burden of proving its worth if it is to stay in operation. This would create an opportunity for regulation to be reviewed and ended when it is determined that costs outweigh the benefits.

Last year I proposed legislation to terminate Federal programs periodically unless they are proven worthwhile. This legislation is now widely known as "sunset legislation." I am hopeful that this Congress will put my idea into practice for long overdue reforms in Federal spending and Federal regulation.

Weekly Report

by Senator Joe Biden

This week I sponsored an amendment along with Senator Tom Eagleton that I hope will clarify beyond all doubt my 1975 amendment that prohibits the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare from using federal funds or withholding federal funds to require local school districts to bus their students away from the school nearest their homes.

In the past few weeks, statements by HEW Secretary Joseph Califano, in compliance with a memorandum from the Attorney General of the United States, indicate that HEW may be taking certain steps that directly contravene the legislative intent of my original amendment.

In a recent memorandum it now appears that Secretary Califano is interpreting my amendment as meaning that it is legal for the Federal Government to withhold funds from school districts which refuse to use consolidation techniques such as pairing or clustering. Thus, if a school system refuses to consolidate their schools as a part of their desegregation plan, they run the risk--under this new interpretation--of losing their much needed Federal funds.

The combined interpretation by Secretary Califano and the Justice Department, in effect, completely nullifies the congressional intent behind my first amendment. This congressional intent was clearly stated in the Senate report which accompanied the Fiscal Year 1977 HEW appropriations bill. The report set forth the text of a letter from then Secretary of HEW Mathews in which Secretary Mathews stated:

"Although that amendment is not an absolute prohibition against requiring the transportation of students, it would effectively ban the Department from requiring such transportation in virtually every desegregation case."

The amendment I introduced this week will restate that congressional intent to make it absolutely clear that HEW should not be in the business of bus-

Governor Signs Safe Boating Week Proclamation

Governor du Pont has proclaimed the week beginning July 3, 1977 as "Safe Boating Week in Delaware."

Calling for all boaters to "...work together to practice boating safety and make the slogan 'Safe Boating Is No Accident' a reality in Delaware waters", Governor du Pont urged all boat owners "...to take advantage of the courtesy motorboat examinations offered by the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary."

"Safe Boating Week" has been designated as the week including the July 4th holiday in order to focus attention on the hazards that occur on the nation's waterways; but safe boating practices should be the concern of all watermen the year round.

The Delaware Marine Police advise boaters to do their part to insure safety on Delaware's waters by keeping vessels safe and seaworthy. Make sure to have the proper equipment and know your responsibilities as skippers.

For information on boating and boating safety contact the Boating Law Administrator at the Edward Tatnall Building, Dover, DE 19901.

Editor Moves To Wilmington Hospital

by Harry G. Farrow Jr.

HARRINGTON. Margaret (Margo) R. Farrow, Editor of The Harrington Journal will reside near the General Division of the Wilmington Medical Center for the next five weeks approximately. Mrs. Farrow who is under the care of Dr. Carlos Cucci of the General Division will continue to receive cobalt treatment during this period.

The official reason placed upon the decision to stay at the dormitory provided for out-patients to the Carpenter Clinic was to eliminate the strain of travelling back and forth to Wilmington. The treatments coupled with the car ride have created some nausea, and the doctors felt eliminating the car ride would tend to lessen her nausea. She must take treatment each day for a period of 10 weeks. She has had four and a half weeks of treatment.

Mrs. Farrow a native of Upperville, Va. is the fourth editor in the 64 year history of The Journal. The Journal was closed for two years during World War II. She was a former English teacher in Virginia and Delaware.

OLD WYE CHURCH

Note: The following sermon was delivered by H.M. Richardson, Rector of Old Wye Church, Wye Mills, Md. on Sunday, June 19, on the occasion of the visit of Princess Anne at the church.

by H.M. Richardson, A.B., M. Div. E.T.S.

"Baptised into union with him, you have put on Christ as a garment. There is no such thing as Jew and Greek, slave and freeman, male and female: You are all ONE PERSON in Christ Jesus." (Galatians 3:27-29)

Whether this text has been truly accepted by 20th Century Christians is certainly a matter which could be discussed at great length. The Apostle Paul, who stated these words in his letter to the Galatians was incensed at their behavior, particularly as they were new converts to Christianity. For one reason or another, they seemed to be missing the point of Jesus Christ as Savior, and were reverting to a legalism and a class-distinction concept which was anathema to him. It is truly unfortunate that we have lost so much of his concern in this matter.

The King James translation of the beginning of this chapter, might well carry some of the responsibility for our loss of concern, for it states it all so very gently... "O foolish Galatians who hath bewitched you?" The modern English translation, however, puts it much more bluntly and in truly Pauline fashion says... "You stupid Galatians...you must have been bewitched, you before whose eyes Jesus Christ was openly displayed upon his cross". In other words, how can you be so stupid as not to get the point that the real criterion is a matter of faith in Jesus Christ? It is not how we were born, not our ancestry, not how much we know, but our living relationship with God. Any denial of this concept, this unity of faith and unity of humanity, is basically a denial of our common baptism.

The classic phrase with which St. Paul brought his argument to conclusion still stands today as one of the great goals of modern life... There is no such thing as Jew and Greek, slave and freeman, male and female... you are all one person in Christ Jesus." In other words, Paul sees that all distinctions whether national (and ethnic) or social (slave and freeman) or natural (male and female) are abolished--all stand equally before the Lord through baptism.

This is perhaps a strange subject to be stressing this morning but it was recently brought about very personally when on my recent vacation upon joining a British-arranged tour of India, we were greeted jocularly with the statement, "Ah, some more blooming colonials are joining us". Yes, even today we set each other apart.

It is to be noted, however on this day and on this occasion that it was Queen Anne, of all British monarchs, who sought most of all to put the "Blooming colonials" on a more even footing with the rest of the English people. It was during her reign that the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge, founded the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, and through her active encouragement began its strenuous work in this country, a work which indeed planted the Anglican Communion firmly on this Eastern Seaboard and gave us the impetus of continuing expansion. Through her encouragement, Thomas Bray who had been appointed Commissary of the area, actually came to the colonies, saw what was needed and then returned to England to enlist and send out the clergy for this infant Church, and find a way to pay them.

It was also Queen Anne who assigned a "Bounty" for each parish church in the colonies, a bounty which consisted of a Communion set and a parish library. Because of others following her example such chapels at ease as this one, have communion sets donated by those whose eyes had been opened to a genuine need. It was said by Henry Wakeman, the classic historian of the English Church "Had it not been for the untimely death of Anne, the efforts of the SPG would have succeeded in procuring the blessing of the episcopate for the American plantations in 1714". And if that had occurred who knows what might have been in history.

Separated though we have been, and although there are many differences between us, there is still a great bond of unity between us, a bond which seemingly has allowed the U.S. to rejoice almost as much as the British in this Jubilee Year and its events.

It may well be that this sense of unity comes about thru our use of the same language, although accented differently, but even more basically our unity comes from our common understanding of our responsibilities under Christ. Certainly as we look at our world in all of its fragmentation, we have a tendency to shudder as we consider all that must be done. Even the Church today seems to be threatened with facing up to the reality that in Christ there is neither "male or female" as we argue about the ordination of women to the ministry, but whether we are threatened or not, we all know that the Pauline statement is the finest summary which exists of Christian goals in this world.

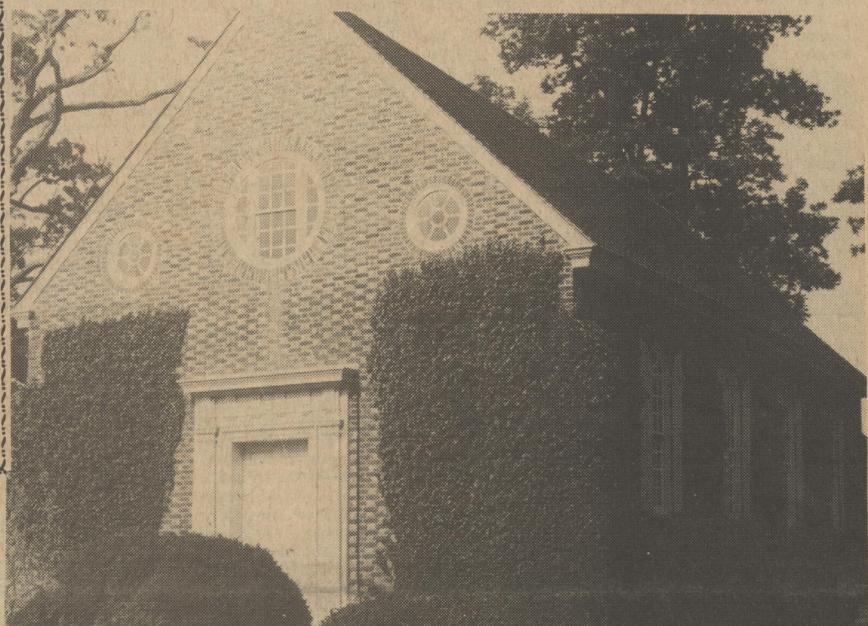

Yes, we know it, and we are generally aware of our own weaknesses and areas of privilege. A few moments ago we sang a great hymn. "Rise up O Men of God have done with lesser things, Give heart and soul and mind and strength To serve the King of Kings". Isn't it time that we made these words live in our lives?

LaVere Captured His Third Late Model Feature

Racing action was both wet and wild Friday evening as Ronnie LaVere of Milford captured his third late model feature of the season at the Georgetown Speedway.

turn allowing the pack of Robinson, Joseph, Les Nailor and LaVere to get by. Robinson could only manage to hold off Joseph for one go-round as LaVere moved into third.

A final turn tangle in the back of the pack sent young Mike Pruitt of Salisbury end over end off the third turn. Mike was taken to Milford Memorial Hospital where he was treated and later released. The Modified-Sportsman feature was only five laps old when Mother Nature started dropping rain bringing it to a halt. The feature will resume where it left off next week and will be the first event of the evening.

Davis spun off the third turn at the half-way mark bringing out the first caution of the race. As the field was readying for the restart, second place runner, Robinson pulled out of the field and into the pits with mechanical problems changing the order of the front three to Joseph, LaVere and Nailor.

Blood Bank of Delaware To Open New Center

June 22nd is the date set for the official dedication of Delaware's first total service community blood bank. The new blood center, located at University Office Plaza in Newark, is an expansion resulting from several years planning and preparation by area hospitals, the medical community, and Blood Bank of Delaware, Inc. (BBD). The ceremony will be conducted by Robert C. Kline, President of the Board of Directors, Dr. Richard H. Walker, President of the American Association of Blood Banks, will be the guest speaker. Blood Bank of Delaware is the largest and most liberal blood assurance plan in the nation, covering over 125,000 members and another 300,000 dependents. According to BBD directors, the new facility will enable them for the first time to collect, screen, process, store, inventory and distribute blood and components. Prior to this time, BBD member donors were recruited and scheduled to report to area hospitals where the actual blood work was done. The new center is expected to open in July, and will provide an updated and efficient blood delivery system for hospitals in Delaware and northeast Maryland. It will also offer a more convenient location for donors who do not have easy access to other drawing institutions. Service to hospitals is only part of the total picture. BBD must meet its obligation to replace blood for members hospitalized outside the State, which is close to 3,000 pints annually. Currently, (Continued to page 11).

Coast Guard Request Channel 16 Cleared

The Coast Guard is asking the boating public to help stop misuse of Channel 16, the international maritime distress and calling frequency. "Abuse of Channel 16 imperils the lives of all boaters," said Lieutenant Fred N. Squires, Chief Communications Branch, Third Coast Guard District. "The problem was especially bad during the 1976 boating season as operators showed flagrant disregard for proper radiotelephone procedure." If you had been listening to Channel 16 one Saturday afternoon, recently, you would have heard three calls in rapid succession from boaters requesting radio checks. Next came a call from the New York Marine Operator, and then, suddenly, a MAYDAY from a small motorboat off the New Jersey coast. Coast Guard Group New York responded, and immediately called a Coast Guard Auxiliary boat for assistance. The distress traffic was still on when SAM V. called BLUEBELL. "Hi! How are ya doing, fella?" asked the voice from BLUEBELL.

Through the crackling silence, it was almost possible to hear a shudder run through all those monitoring the distress channel. Shakily, the skipper of SAM V. asked BLUEBELL to switch to another channel. He had to ask twice. The use of Channel 16 (156.800 MHz) for casual social calls and idle chatter is by far the most dangerous abuse. And, the Coast Guard hopes that, during the 1977 season, the boater who just likes the sound of his own voice will become a rare-and, perhaps, extinct-species. Channel 16 is also the calling frequency. All boats carrying VHF/FM radiotelephone must monitor Channel 16 at all times, except when they are actually communicating on another channel. Calls to other vessels are initiated on Channel 16, but the boater must switch immediately to a working channel for further communications-unless he is in distress. The following is a list of DO's and DON'T's with respect to the use of Channel 16: Wait until Channel 16 is clear. Listen, especially, for distress calls. Keep your message brief. Schedule calls to other vessels in advance to avoid trying to contact a boater who is not listening. Switch immediately to an appropriate channel when the receiving party answers. Politely remind abusers (Continued to page 11).

Bodine Shatters World Record

Geoff Bodine of Bellingham, Mass. broke the world closed course speed record for a modified stock car on a one-mile speedway Tuesday (June 14) at Dover Downs International Speedway. Driving the Houseby Mack Truck Chevy-powered Mustang, the 28 year-old speedster toured the high-banked racetrack at Dover at a speed of 137.112 MPH (2.62.56 secs.) to shatter the previous world mark of 134.038 MPH set by Ray Hendrick in 1970. "I've never been a world record holder before," said Bodine following his run, "and it really feels great. I enjoyed doing this very much. Everything went smoothly and it really wasn't that hard to set up for this race-track. I think though," Bodine concluded "that when we come back for the Atlantic Coast '300' (July 17) we'll be able to go even faster."

Bodine set the new mark with his car configured in accordance with the NASCAR superspeedway modified rules which will be in effect for the Atlantic Coast race. Following his record run, he brought his car back to the garage area and removed his 10" Grand National tires (required under speedway rules) and replaced them with four 15" modified racing tires normally used on other than superspeedways. Returning to the race-track, Bodine then astonished onlookers with a blistering 144.051 MPH performance to set an additional world modified mark for a modified stock car on wide tires. "We couldn't be happier," reported Dick Armstrong, owner of the Mustang Bodine drove into the record books. "This is what we came here for (to break the record) and Geoff did just what we expected. He's very methodical in his approach to driving and he did a heck of a job." Bodine's speed at Dover also topped the track record for a Grand National stock car which is held by David Pearson at 136.612 MPH. "It's nice to know that we can go faster than Pearson and Petty here at Dover," said Bodine, "but, you have to remember that we drive different equipment than they do. It feels good though and I can honestly say that I'm looking forward to coming back and racing here next month." Bodine's speeds at Dover will be recorded as twin entries in the record book. His 137.112 MPH run will go down as the world record for a modified stock car configured for superspeedway rules. His 144.051 MPH performance will be recorded as a world record for a modified stock car using 15" tires.

Atlantic Coast "300" To Be Held July 17

DOVER. NASCAR star, Lennie Pond will be but one of hundreds of people to drive their cars around the high-banked superspeedway at Dover Downs when the Atlantic Coast "300" Open House Day is presented on Saturday, June 25th.

The general public will be invited free of charge to take part in the Atlantic Coast "300" Open House and they will be allowed to drive their own cars on the speedway behind the official Dover, Downs Pace Car.

Lennie Pond, however, will be doing something different. Pond will drive Merle Smith's Monza, the superspeedway modified car that John Anderson put on the pole at last year's Patriot "300" at Charlotte, and at this year's NASCAR "200" at Daytona. Anderson's pole winning speed at Daytona was a blistering 186.335 MPH.

Pond will be here to check the car out for the Atlantic Coast "300" (July 17) reports Dover Downs

Mrs. Nellie Bausell Retires After 44 Years In Teaching

On June 15 some 30 first graders at Lake Forest South 'B' Elementary School said good-bye to their teacher, Mrs. Nellie Bausell, and to schooling for the summer. At the same time Mrs. Bausell was saying farewell to her final class in a teaching career that has spanned 44 years in schools from Virginia to Delaware.

Over the years Mrs. Bausell has taught in one room schools with seven grades and in most of the individual grades, one through seven. She has also served as reading consultant and special reading teacher.

Born Nellie Bowman, Mrs. Bausell grew up in Wythville, Virginia, a town she describes as being very much like Milford. The town received its name from George Wyth, the lawyer who taught Thomas Jefferson and others at William and Mary.

She attended Virginia Intermont for two years and later took courses in night and summer school to complete her B.A. at Radford. She received her M.A. at V.P.I. (Virginia Polytechnic Institute) and did 30 credits, mostly in reading, under Dr. Russell Stauffer at the University of Delaware. She taught in the reading clinic there for one summer.

Mrs. Bausell began teaching in 1932 in Virginia. Since then her career in education has been interrupted only once, the year her son was born. Some of her earliest experience was gained in one room schools in mountain country where she taught all seven grades. Recalling this experience, Mrs. Bausell doesn't remember it being as difficult as it might sound. The children, she says, were mostly from large families and used to helping with younger ones.

One school she particularly remembers was located in an isolated region in Wyth County, Virginia. Before being assigned there she warned her superintendent that the people of the area were particularly difficult. Mrs. Bausell and her husband did not find them so. They became very attached to those people many of them related by marriage who were literally like "one big family". Later Mr. and Mrs. Bausell purchased property and built a summer residence there.

Mrs. Bausell did find the people of Wyth County in those pre-World War II years relatively unsophisticated because of their lack of schooling and contact with the outside world.

Not all her years in Virginia were spent in one room schools. When she left Virginia for Delaware in 1956 she was teaching seventh grade reading.

When the Bausells came to Delaware, she served as Reading Consultant in Milford and taught 6th and 7th grade reading there. On coming to Harrington she taught third and fourth grades. AT the outset of the federally funded Title I program, she was Reading Consultant in the reading center at Harrington, working there with Dick Woodward and aides Kathy LeKites and Carol Sorden.

For the past five years she has taught first grade at South "B". During those years she has been assisted by aides Kathy LeKites (who has since become first grade teacher) and Evelyn Winebrenner.

Education has been a Bausell family occupation. Her husband Rufus Barker Bausell was teaching fourth grade in Harrington when he died. Her son, Dr. Rufus Barker Bausell Jr. teaches Research Procedures at the School of Nursing on the Baltimore campus of the University of Maryland.

Mrs. Bausell is leaving school, but she is not entirely giving up teaching. She has opened the Reading Improvement Center at 326 Weiner Ave. in Harrington where she plans to offer testing and tutoring in reading.

Although reading has been a specialty for Mrs. Bausell and she is especially proud of her class this year, a number of whom are ready to read at second and third grade levels, she says that it is not the subject that matters to her. She is as happy teaching arithmetic or any other subject. For her it is the children that matter. And it is the children she will miss most when school starts in September.

The presentation was made by Sherman Stevenson. According to its director, Alex Becton, the Chipman band has participated in eleven parade events this year. Of these only five were competitive. And in all five, the band presented a winning performance.

In competition for Junior High School bands, the Chipman band placed first in the Milford Halloween

Parade, received a trophy for Outstanding Performance in the Dover Halloween Parade, placed respectively third and second in the Seaford and Milton Christmas parades and finally, came in second in the annual parade at the Delmarva Chicken Festival held this year in Georgetown.

All this was in addition to various concert performances and providing the musical emphasis to countless school functions throughout the year.

Mr. Becton has served as band director for the past 5 years.

Layton Decorated

Chief Edward Layton of the Harrington Police Department was humorously decorated with oak leaf pins in honor of his demotion which he received at the last council meeting. Although Layton really was not demoted his title was changed from that of general to major. Presenting Layton with the leaves are left Arthur Cahall, Mayor of Harrington and right Dave Peterson City Manager of Harrington. The oak leaves were donated to the town by Harrington resident Ed McCormick.

New Wheat Allotment to Be Established

A new farm wheat allotment may be established for 1978 crop wheat acreage for farms that did not have a 1977 allotment, if they meet eligibility requirements, and file an application in the Kent County ASC Office in Dover.

A 1978 wheat allotment will be established automatically for most farms that had a wheat allotment in 1977.

Some of the requirements for a new farm wheat allotment are: 1. The operator must expect to receive more than 50 % of his income from farming. 2. Neither the farm owner or operator must have an interest in any other farm at the time of making the request which will have a 1978 wheat allotment established. 3. The person making application must have had at least one year of wheat production experience in a prior year.

Applications for a new farm allotment must be filed at the County ASCS Office on or before July 1, 1977.

The Green Thumb

Now is the time to decide whether to save your strawberry bed for next year or not. Strawberry beds can be fruited a second, third and even a fourth time. However, your greatest yield and berry size is usually the first year. If you don't have any major weed, fertility, nematode or disease problem you can renovate. Before the fourth year you should have already started a new strawberry bed in a new location. Don't plant strawberries, tomatoes, eggplant, potatoes, peppers, raspberries or blackberries in the area of the old bed for three years. There are several soil-borne diseases that attack strawberries which will also attack these plants. If you can renovate your bed the following steps should be taken. Renovate the bed immediately after the last harvest. Mow off the tops of the plants being careful not to injure the crowns. When the tops are dried, rake off the dead leaves. If you have a large patch you can use a drag harrow and go over the beds two times to remove the leaves.

Narrow the row width to 10 inches, a ten inch row at renovation will probably be twenty two inches at harvest. You can remove all the plants on one side including the mother plant leaving the plants to start the bed, this is probably the best procedure. You could also remove plants on both sides leaving the mother plants. Another way is to pull out the mother plants leaving the young plants which are on both sides.

Depending on the varieties vigor, remove half to two thirds of the plants within the row so that they are approximately 6 inches apart in all directions. Vigorous varieties are Sure Crop, Raritan, Midway, Guardian, Red Chief and Sunrise. In most cases too many plants are left resulting in small fruit and low yields. This can be done by running a spike or spring tooth across the rows at about a forty-five degree angle. Or you can remove some of the teeth in a rotary type tiller and straddle the row. The final thinning should be done with a hoe. At renovation it is a good idea to apply a herbicide. Two of the herbicides which can be used are Diphenamid or Dacthal. Once you have applied the chemical apply enough water to equal an inch of rainfall. These products should be watered in to be effective. The next step is to apply some fertilizer, apply about 20 ozs. of ammonia nitrate (about 1 pint) or 40 ozs. of a 10-10-10 (about 2 1/2 pints) per 100 foot of row at renovation. Broadcast over the row when the foliage is dry. Brush the fertilizer off the leaves to avoid leaf burn. Then in mid August broadcast a pint of granular 10-10-10 per 100 foot of row when the foliage is dry. Lime should not be necessary unless a soil test indicates it.

Strawberries need to receive about an inch of rain per week up until mid-September. Lesser amounts should be supplemented by adequate irrigation. Do not irrigate after mid-September. The next step which goes on throughout the year is to remove excess runners because they tend to reduce yields. Use a mulch of clean straw, pine shats, hay, or similar material to control weeds and provide winter protection. Apply between Thanksgiving and December 15. Remove the mulch in the row when plants begin to show a little yellow. This will delay the bloom enough to reduce the possibility of frost damage. This is very important for very early varieties.

If you have a strawberry bed that is in good condition and no major problems, renovation can increase yields and berry size. A little bit of work now can give you great dividends next year and the years in the future. However, fruiting the strawberry bed past the fourth year gets to be very risky as far as harvest goes. The chances of having a major insect or disease problem are great. So by the fourth year you should be starting a new patch.

Program To Begin

(Continued from page 1). special activities. The playground activities will include active group games, Arts and Crafts, and table games while special activities will include swimming, field trips and special event day.

A registration fee of $7 includes all of these activities. For an additional $4 each child may attend Camp Long Oar at Killen's Pond State Park. This is an overnight camping trip where the children spend one night in a tent, learn how to build a campfire, put up a tent, cook a meal outdoors, learn to identify trees and wild life, and participate in swimming, fishing, and hiking.

The playground locations will include Lake Forest North Elementary, Lake Forest East Elementary and W.T. Chipman School. Registration forms can be picked up at any of the schools or at the Kent County Parks and Recreation Department at 417 South State Street in Dover.

Blood Bank

(Continued from page 9). this burden is being carried by the Wilmington Medical Center, St. Francis, Kent General and Beebe Hospitals. The program proposed by BBD will save those hospitals thousands of dollars each year, as well as staff time and inconvenience. Other phases of the program include the implementation of a self-contained mobile unit to provide more convenient service to donors in Kent and Sussex Counties, and later, additional blood centers may be considered, based on geographic needs.

Gab Fest

by Pat Hatfield
We felt reasonably sure that the mocker who entertains us with her beautiful song must have a nest close by. So, the other day when Ellen and I were doing a bit of gardening and grooming the yard we stopped to admire the growth of the syringa bush...and found ourselves looking right at a nest. Tipping the bushes ever so gently and standing on tiptoe we could see four aqua-blue eggs heavily spotted with brown. Then we noticed Mama Mockingbird perched on a wire nearby and getting very much disturbed. We moved away rapidly, and now when we pass the syringa we do so with heads averted and pretending we have no idea what she is up to. However, while she is teaching the babies to fly, Morris will have to forego his daily walk in the yard.

My friend, Janice, was telling me her bird story after church the other day. She has Scarlet Tanagers, and the male came quite close to her house. She was shelling peas; and in a few moments, the female came, too, and stood listening to the peas fall into the pan, cocking her small head from one side to the other at the sound. This is the first report I've had about Scarlet Tanagers. There were so many of them singing in the trees when we lived in Virginia.

The children brought home a copy of the Woodbridge Junior High School newspaper and, as always, I read it with much interest. And in there I found something lovely. I'm so interested in any budding talent, and especially in the field of poetry. Here is a beautiful poem written by a child named Donna Smith. I do not know her, but I hope she keeps writing. She calls her poem, "Ladies of the Seasons", and I will share it with you.

"I see Fall as a lady with short, auburn hair, Spreading her colorful garment everywhere. I picture Winter as a lady with hair a dark brown

Letting her long, white hair float softly to the ground. I see Summer as a Lady with hair of golden blonde Taking off her green cape and setting it on a lawn. But Spring is just a child running o'er the land.

Spring is just a child with flowers in her hand." Congratulations, Donna, whoever you are. Keep up the writing.

What a fine time everyone had at Old Timer's Day. And the weather was perfect, too. Tess had her family visiting her from New Jersey and they thoroughly enjoyed it, especially the street dance. Bob is a city man, born and bred, but he's just a country boy at heart. He loves southern Delaware and the small towns and their culture delight him. Incidentally, while sitting on the porch he suddenly exclaimed, "Why doesn't somebody fix the 'A' in Delaware on the postoffice sign? It's missing." How about that? And I see it every day and hadn't noticed. I'm one to talk about being aware. People came from far and near to enjoy the dancing or the music or both. The crowd was estimated at 700 or better. So, there is a need.

Items for Coming Events should be submitted two weeks before the event. If submitted earlier they will appear as space allows.

Crop Rotation Can Reduce Insecticide Needs

A good crop rotation plan can reduce the needs for excessive soil insecticides. Every year many corn farmers in Kent County suffer erratic stands of corn. Many times it is because of insect problems which went unnoticed because the farmers did not observe their fields regularly. There are several insects which frequently cause reduced stands in Kent County. Some of these are billbug, wireworm, rootworm, cutworm, nematodes, and flea beetle.

Many of these insect problems can be reduced or prevented by the use of soil insecticide applied at planting. Here is where many insect problems occur: where corn is grown year after year on the same land; where no-till corn is planted after corn or other crops; where corn is planted into ryegrass cover crop and where the field has a history of insect problems.

In any of these situations the farmers should use a systemic soil insecticide and observe the label for application methods and rates depending on the insect problem.

Farmers who follow a good rotation and have not experienced an insect problem, generally will not need a soil insecticide, however, a lot of farmers feel that it's a good investment. Farmers that do not use a soil insecticide should regularly scout their fields to insure no problem occurs. Even though a soil insecticide is used, an insect problem could still occur and need further attention. Cutworms cannot be controlled by a currently labeled at planting insecticide. They can be controlled by a number of chemicals if the worms are observed early and thus good field scouting can recognize a problem before it's too late to save the corn. Cutworms are more likely to be a problem in no-till planted corn. These fields need to be scouted when the plants are 2 inches tall and an insecticide applied when 15 % or more of the plants show some damage or when 5 % of the plants are cut off.

Now is the time to determine whether insects are responsible for reduction in your corn stands. Treatment may be necessary or you might just take notes, so you know which fields need treatment next year or the next time corn is planted in the field.

Housewise Helps from the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service
 By Lynn Hershey

Do you have any room left on your kitchen counter? Are you bored with your newest toys (crepe maker, hot dogger, bacon broiler, food processor, fry baby)? Well, shove everything aside and make room for a brand new plaything. It's called a fruit ripener. Yes indeed, now there is a handy little item you buy just for ripening fruit. No well-dressed home should be without one.

Go ahead and laugh. I did, because somehow a fruit ripener represents the ultimate in civilized nonsense. We pick fruit rock-hard and green, then buy something to make it edible. It's sort of like melting ice to get water to make ice cubes.

But hang on, maybe the inventor isn't so crazy after all. When supermarkets offer tomatoes resembling green golf balls, and peaches you can't slice, perhaps it's time for the best fed nation in the world to market fruit ripeners. In fact, the F.R. could be displayed in supermarkets right next to the under-ripe produce. I'm surprised they haven't thought of that already.

 In case you are seriously interested in this latest merchandising marvel, look in larger department stores and specialty shops. The F.R. is about 15 inches high and 15 inches in diameter, with a clear acrylic lid appropriately pear shaped. Vent holes permit air circulation but concentrate the ethylene gas naturally given off by the fruit to produce ripening.

Marguerite Krackhardt, Delaware extension food and nutrition specialist, says a F.R. is O.K. for ripening green pears, apples, bananas, mangos, avocados, tomatoes, plums, nectarines, apricots, peaches, some citrus fruits, and melons (except watermelons).

She does not recommend it for use with fruits grown locally or in your own garden, since these are normally picked at the peak of ripeness.

Because the ripener works quickly, it requires careful watching lest the fruit become overripe. For example, green bananas placed inside the F.R. in the morning will be ready to eat by early evening. If you forget and leave them there all night you can conveniently throw them out the next day.

The F.R. is supposed to work better than the old-fashioned brown paper bag. But I'll stick to the old way, thank you. Maybe you think it's stubbornness. Or thrift. But it's not. It's just the principle of the thing.

And in case you're wondering, I don't own a crepe maker either-or a hot dogger, a food processor, a fry baby, a bacon broiler, etc., etc., etc.

Acreege Report Requested

Farmers who have planted corn or grain sorghum should report their acreage to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) as soon as planting is completed or no later than September 1st. Report wheat and barley acreage by July 1st or before harvest if possible, Lister Hall, Jr. Kent County Director advises. The report should be made in person at the Kent County Office in Dover.

"So far 162 farmers in Kent County have reported their plantings," Hall said. Farmers who have planted acreage in 1977-crop wheat, corn, grain sorghum or barley, and fail to report such acreage may be ineligible for program benefits in 1978, Hall emphasized.
 According to proposed legislation, if the Secretary of Agriculture declares a set-aside for 1978 crops, 1977 planted acreage could be used to determine set-aside requirements.
