Summer school to be planned for Lake Forest

By Barbara Brown

A six-week summer school program is in the offing for students in the Lake Forest District who may need remedial work in math and the language arts (reading and English) at the end of the year. Although plans have not been finalized, Superintendent William Cline told a receptive School Board Monday night that he proposes to use a portion of the basics skills funds made available to the district by the state of Delaware for the purpose of conducting a summer school that would be of particular help in alleviating the crunch the district faces because of its new promotion policy.

Cline said the summer school program could be of particular value to students who are on the border line - just barely not making it in terms of the minimum standards set by the District for promotion to the next grade. The summer school program in math and either reading or English could be offered free to students in the district because of the state funding. In addition, some make-up work in social studies or science might be offered on a tuition basis at the high school level. In the past the district has had no summer school. Students wishing such help have had to pay $45 to take summer courses in other districts such as Caesar Rodney.

Since the state funds would probably not cover the cost of transportation, this would most likely remain the responsibility of the parents. Lake Forest High School for junior high and high school students, and Lake Forest East in Frederica for those at the elementary level were mentioned as tentative locations for the summer school program. Both schools have air conditioning.

The District is eligible for six units - amounting to up to $15,500 each - in basics skills funds. Cline said it would be possible to use one of those units to hire ten to twelve teachers on a half time basis for six weeks in the summer. The remaining five units would be used in other ways to undergird the emphasis on basics skills. Hiring remedial math teachers during the regular school year and the purchase of textbooks and supplies are additional possibilities.

Individual Board members commented favorably on the summer school idea. More complete plans for the program will probably be submitted at the April meeting.

District Seeks Texts To Take Students Back To Basic Math

It will be back to the sum of six plus four for district students struggling to master the basic computational skills in mathematics. Supervisor of Instruction, Sol Markowitz, in apprising the Board of steps to be taken to remedy the poor rating in computational skills Lake Forest students received on the CAT (California Achievement Tests) given state-wide last fall, told the Board the district will scrap the Holt mathematics series as far as below-average students are concerned.

The Holt math series, which has been in use in the district for a number of years, is a mix of new math and a more traditional approach. The new math is aimed at helping Johnny to understand why six plus four equals ten. But it does not help him very much if he is still struggling to remember what six plus ten is. Markowitz said the new math provides an understanding of the "philosophical plausibility" of mathematics which "some might find delightful". But "for the kid barely making it at 6x8", it is merely confusing. Markowitz further said that he and the teachers had gone through the Holt texts and eliminated some of the more advanced chapters in number theory and geometry as far as teaching them to students who are below average in math. But even in its handling of the basic skills, Markowitz said the Holt text is a "no good book for average kids".

Markowitz told the Board the District was examining and would purchase texts in which the basic math skills would be taught in the traditional way. This would be for use with students having trouble in basics skills. For students ahead of the game, the Holt series will still be used to lay a foundation for the kind of understanding valuable in taking advanced math. State-supplied basics skills funds will probably be used for the purchase of the new texts.

Pool May Be Ready For Summer Use

The swimming pool originally scheduled to be completed at Lake Forest High School in February may be ready for first dips in June. If not complete by summer, it will most probably be ready for use when the 1979-1980 school year opens. In anticipation of this event, a pool committee has been meeting to develop plans for school and community use of the new facility.

Dr. Phelps, Principal at the high school, Monday night gave a preliminary report of some of the proposals heard by the committee. A three year plan which would begin with the use of the pool by the school and gradually expand to various forms of use whereby the pool might be in operation for a twelve hour day on a 7-day a week basis was one of the possibilities mentioned. Dr. Phelps said the new facility would eventually call for the hiring of a full-time aquatic director who would have total responsibility for its maintenance and operation. She also said it would be necessary to hire another person in the physical education department who could serve as an instructor. Other

It's the first day of Spring and the daffodils wouldn't have missed it for the world. With sixty degrees and fair skies the flowers were blooming all over Harrington.

Gas prices still on the rise

By Linda Fleming

The energy crunch is being felt locally and has been since gasoline prices began inching up just after the first of the year. Most area dealers have increased prices four or five times since January 1st and there doesn't seem to be an end in sight. Several dealers also admit their supplies will be seriously low by the end of the month.

Earl Butler, owner of Peoples Service Station at U.S. Rt. 13 and Clark Street, said his March allocation was cut 10% and he doubts that his supply will last past March 25th. If this does materialize, Butler said he would be forced to cut hours short as he did in 1973, during the oil embargo.

Then, he opened the station for two hours each day and stopped pumping when he had reached a pre-determined gallonage. This is preferable Butler believes to borrowing on next month's allotment and gambling against further cut-backs.

Gasoline sales at Peoples account for 50% of the station's profit. A slowdown at the pumps, though, has a rippling effect on his entire business, a concern repeatedly expressed by station owners. "When they don't stop for gas, they don't stop for anything else," he repeated.

His main concern now is keeping pace with frequent increases in price of the delivered product. Butler said his cost per gallon has been raised four times since January, all of which he has passed on to customers to maintain a slim profit margin.

A 2-2/3c profit per gallon is all most station owners claim to garner.

Because of the narrow profit, operators say they have no choice except to pass the increase on. Bob McCullough of McCullough's Tire and Service Center on U.S. Rt. 13, said his cost per gallon has increased 10c since January 1, 1977. His supplies have remained at a constant level but McCullough believes this, too, is just a matter of time.

According to McCullough the station owner is in a double bind when allocations are cut-back. "I may be able to see only half my usual gallonage, but I have the same overhead to meet. I can't let my help go even if my supplies are cut in half." McCullough predicts gasoline prices will continue to rise every week or two for some time.

If a shortage should develop as it did in 1973, he will follow the same course of action he used then - supplying his regular customers first.

David Dill, owner of Felton Arco at U.S. Rt. 13 and Del. 12, expressed a similar thought. "I'd have to limit out-of-state customers and look out for the local people first."

Dill, too, predicts he will exhaust his March gasoline allocation, which was cut 5%, by the end of the month. For Dill there is hope, however, in a provision which permits a healthier allocation to major business suppliers.

Price per gallon for Dill's Arco gasoline has also kept a steady pace, with five increases since January. A gallon of regular sold for 61.9 on January 1, that same gallon would cost 69.9 today. Like so many of his colleagues, Dill can't see an end to the increases in the near future. "I guess we're still lucky," he said, "overseas they're paying as much as $2.00 a gallon."

Strangely enough, the price hikes seem to have had little effect on volume sold. And while customers grumbled a month or two ago about a one or two cent increase, they seem resigned to the inevitable now, most owners agree.

The only difference Faye Lyons, co-owner of Bill's Amoco on U.S. Rt. 13, has seen is in the number of small cars on the road. The Lyons, who handle Amoco gas, rely on just 20% of their business from the pumps. Their prices have risen, but allocations have remained the same and prospects are good that there will be no cutbacks, Mrs. Lyons said. She believes this may be due to the fact that Amoco gas is ordinarily a cent or two higher than other brands.

Demolition begins on Bowers Beach property

The Bowers Beach Town Council has moved ahead with plans to force action on at least one property in town judged to be unsightly and a safety hazard. At the March 14 meeting steps already on the Schwann property were enumerated. The Main Street home was gutted by fire in February 1978.

This January a written request was sent to owner Alex Schwann asking for prompt demolition of the property. There had been no action taken on verbal requests made previously.

While demolition has begun, Schwann's arrangements are with acquaintances who are doing the work voluntarily. Although progressing slowly, he has pledged to complete the work as soon as possible. In cases such as this, the state fire marshal does have the authority to force compliance.

The Schwann property, which is located next to the firehouse, is also of interest to firemen who would consider purchase "if the price were right," a fire company spokesman has said.

Mel Harris, assistant chief of the North Bowers Volunteer Fireman's Association, also told councilmen that plans for rebuilding the burned-out fire hall are proceeding. A number of county, state and federal government representatives are working together to secure financial backing for the company. Rebuilding costs and replacement of equipment are estimated at $250,000. A small start has been made as a barrel placed in front of the damaged building has moved people to donate to the cause.

Also discussed were clogged drains on Main, Church and Williams Streets. This problem was especially evident in front of the Methodist Church to the extent that firemen pumped water from the area to prevent its entry into the church.

Water damage was also reason for the complaint of a Hubbard Avenue resident who claimed that cars driven too fast through that area of town at high tide cause the water level to raise 6-8". Police chief Irvin Evans suggested that license numbers of those cars be reported to him.

Evans also said that painting of the police car is underway and should be completed soon. While the car is out of service, Evans is attending the state police academy in Dover.

In other business, council heard that $1025 was spent for snow removal in February.

*A contract has been signed for sewer construction which should begin sometime in May. Mayor Donovan added that fill left from project could be used in low areas. Interested parties may contact the mayor to arrange for proper variances.

*The resignation of Joan Field as tax collector was accepted. A replacement will have to be appointed before tax bills are mailed in August. Tax collectors are paid equal to 7% of tax revenue. Mayor Donovan added that to hire an accountant to perform the same duties would cost considerably more.

*Also accepted was the resignation of Joseph Callahan as tax assessor. Callahan will leave for Iceland in June but will complete assessments before his departure.

Levy Court considers Bowers Beach aid

Kent County Levy Court commissioners heard an appeal at their March 13 meeting on behalf of the Bowers Beach Fire Company. State Senator William Murphy was present to request financial aid for the company which was burned out as the result of a March 6 blaze. President William J. Paskey, Jr. agreed to discuss the matter among commissioners and to explore avenues of funding. A meeting was planned between the Budget and Finance Committee and the Director of Emergency Planning and Operations with Bowers Beach firemen in attendance.

Murphy said he will also present a bill to the General Assembly for a state grant-in-aid in the amount of $25,000.

Frederica Senior Center and the possibility of an on-site nutrition program were considered following a presentation by Thomas Weyant, Director of the Kent County Office on Aging. To be eligible for federal aid under the Manna nutrition program a center must serve a minimum of 25 persons, which is below the number who regularly attend the Frederica Center, Weyant stated.

Frederica Senior Citizens may take advantage of a hot lunch at the Milford Senior Center, however transportation is not available. Weyant said the DAST bus which picks up elderly in out-lying areas already has a full schedule. The most feasible lunch program for the Frederica Center appears to be the current arrangement where senior citizens walk to the Frederica Elementary School cafeteria a block from the Center.

In other business, Levy Court authorized a loan agreement with the Farmers Home Administration for financing the Felton Sanitary District.

Accepted the bid of Williams & Company in the amount of $1,400 for an EDA audit.

Received bids for the lease of the McClements Farm. Bidders were Airport Farms, Harrington, $58.00 per tillable acre; Richard A. Wilson, Dover, $61.25 per tillable acre; Richard Bergold, Dover, $65.25 per tillable acre.

Approved an agreement between the county and a Garrison's Lake couple for release of a 2 foot encroachment on a sewer easement.

Administered the Oath of Office to Robert Holloway, of Harrington as a member of the Kent County Personnel Commission.

Funds for Bowers Beach?

By Linda Fleming

What type of funding might be available to help Bowers Beach Fire Company rebuild? That question will be explored in detail at upcoming meetings between the fire company and federal, state and county government officials. It is hoped that a joint financial agreement can be reached and that grants-in-aid may be available to offset the staggering $250,000 cost of replacing the building and equipment.

There appears to be little hope, however, for a federal grant; most grants have already been awarded.

The search for federal monies made by Senator Joseph Biden's office has been fruitless and prospects are bleak. Biden aide, Pat Bradley, said three options were considered but only one appears viable at the moment. He explained that the deadline for application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Small Cities program had passed on February 5th, a day before the fire house burned. A second alternative would ordinarily have made grant money available through the Economic Development Administration's public works program. Round III of this program, however, was not funded in fiscal 1978. Bradley concedes "there isn't much available" except in the form of a low interest loan. The Farmer's Home Administration has money earmarked for community facility financing. Bradley believes the federal, state and county governments may be able to join forces to provide initial financing so that a loan could be reduced to the point where the Bowers Company could easily handle repayment.

Bradley's assessment of the situation was reiterated by state Senator William W. Murphy, Jr. who represents the 18th senatorial district in which Bowers Beach is located. Murphy has worked closely with the fire company to set up a temporary communications network and is a liaison between the company and the state legislature.

Working at the county level is S. Allen Pikus, Levy Court Commissioner from Milford which includes the Bowers area. Pikus has pledged "to do everything (he) can to help Bowers Beach." Pikus anticipates being able to secure some financial support from Levy Court and is prepared to back Murphy in his request for a state appropriation.

Pikus believes that Bowers should be considered a unique situation which may warrant extraordinary decisions on the part of governmental bodies.

Fire protection at Bowers, in the meantime, has not been compromised. A trailer has been set up to house communications equipment, a fire truck is on loan from the Little Creek Fire Company and arrangements have been made through the office of Senator Bill Roth to secure a building to serve as a temporary fire house. Arrangements for transportation of the structure from Dover Air Force Base to North Bowers are still being investigated.

Oh, what Bert Parks missed

By E. Elaine Watson

There was no television coverage, no 10,000 people in the audience, and no Bert Parks to sing "There she is..." But to two Felton girls, Tammy Lynn Butler and Karen Dee Wothers, it didn't matter. They had the red velvet robes, the crowns, the thrones, and the titles of Little Miss and Miss Felton 1979. There was nothing lacking.

But there really weren't any losers that evening. Who of those in attendance could think of Chiquita singing "Farmer In The Dell", or Ginger doing impersonations of Fred Flintstone and Porky Pig, and call them losers.

And what about Loretta's sewing display, and Kay Marie's baton twirling to the "Star Wars" theme. Each girl's talent showed the result of hard work and much practice. Who could call them losers?

They made us smile. They gave us a moment of happiness, of entertainment. And they made a bunch of Moms and Dads beam with pleasure.

Thank you, Chiquita, Tammy Lynn, Susan, both Angelas, Betsy Ann, Ginger, Sandra. Thank you, Dara Ann, Denise Lynn, Loretta, Kay Marie, Chris and Karen.

Bert Parks doesn't know what he missed!

Little Miss Felton crowned

Karen Dee Wothers was chosen Miss Felton 1979, and Tammy Lynn Butler was given the Little Miss Felton title in competition Saturday night at the Felton elementary school.

Miss Wothers, who presented a piano medley in the talent portion of the show, was selected from among six contestants. Loretta Latocha was runner-up. She displayed a variety of sewing projects as her talent. Others competing were Dara Ann Everett, Denise Lynn Jacobs, Kay Marie Sylvester, and Chris Welch.

Little Miss Felton, 1979, Tammy Lynn Butler, captivated the audience with several cheerleading routines. Second place in the contest resulted in a tie between Soundra Lynn Stayton and Betsy Ann Harrington.

Also competing were Chiquita Blair, Susan (Becky) Chambers, Angela DeLong, Angela Marie Farmer, and Ginger Michelle Jensen.

Karen Dee Wothers, a sophomore at Lake Forest High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wothers. Tammy Lynn Butler, 3, is the daughter of David and Susan Butler. Her mother, the former Elizabeth Minner, was Little Miss Harrington twenty years ago.

Winners and runners-up received $25 bonds from the Felton Bank, V.F.C. Ruritanettes, Felton Fire Company Ladies Auxiliary and E. B. Warrington Farm Equipment. First place winners proceed to the Miss, Little Miss Delmarva Poultry Princess pageant in June.

Master of Ceremonies for the evening was Bob Draper, assisted by Joyce Breasure.

Low mortgages to be available in Sussex

Sussex County Council announced at their March 13 meeting that low cost mortgage funds will be available through the county by the end of March. Rate of interest has been set at 8 1/2 percent and those with an income of $30,000 or less are eligible for loans.

Applications will be accepted from any of the seven lending institutions approved for the program. Among them are: Delaware Mortgage Service Company, Wilmington; First Federal Mortgage Company, Newark; Sussex Trust Company, Georgetown; Lomas and Nettleton Company, Wilmington; First Shore Federal Savings and Loan Association, Salisbury, Md.; Colonial Mortgage Service Company, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Fidelity Bond and Mortgage Company, Philadelphia.

Council also proceeded with plans for a county library by awarding John P. Argo Construction Company with a contract for renovation of a Milton home. The successful bid of $141,000 includes replacement of the roof. The brick home which is located on the Broadkill River should be ready for use as a library by early 1980.

On a more pessimistic note, Council heard the testimony of County Engineer, Fred McKee, that faulty construction on a Middlesex Beach sewage system may cost the county an additional $600,000. McKee said that an error in laying pipes made by a predecessor was the result of cost saving techniques. The pipes were installed to a depth of two feet rather than the four feet required for proper gravity flow.

McKee suggested two alternatives to correct the problem. Pumps could be installed in individual homes or pipes to the approximately 75 affected homes could be lowered. Those houses built on higher ground are not affected. Residents of the small beach community near Bethany are still using septic tanks prior to full operation of the system.

Bridgeville sets Appeals Day

Bridgeville Town Council has set March 24 as Appeals Day for tax assessments. Appeals will be heard at the Town Hall from 1-4 p.m. Rate of assessment for city taxes and sewer bonds is $1.53 per $100 at 50% of the assessed value.

The Council also heard plans for the opening of a teenage recreation center on Market Street. Guy McClary said he will open the center after school hours from 4 to 9 p.m. and until 10 p.m. Fridays. Amusements will consist of pin ball machines and a pool table.

St. Jones project proposed

A newly formed group met last week to discuss a proposal to develop the St. Jones River for commercial and recreational use. Paul Scotten, of Dover, is the informal leader of the proposed St. Jones River Watershed Association.

The group would advocate dredging the river to permit barge passage to supply the St. Jones River Gravel plant. Another project would be construction of a jetty and creation of a lake for boating and fishing.

Sandtown may be site of new landfill

A Sandtown pit belonging to the state Division of Highways will be a Kent County landfill by the end of the year, pending the approval of a landfill permit. The Sandtown pit would replace the landfill near Houston which will soon reach its capacity.

"...the ultimate result is that the price at the tank will be..."

The peace treaty which lies ahead for Israel and Egypt is a stunning break through in an area of the world that for the past 30 years has known nothing more than war and bloodshed. Hopefully, the treaty -- the piece of paper -- puts an end to war between Israel and all of her neighbors...as well as peace and understanding between Arabs and Jews.

It was to be sure a great political victory even short lived as it was, for as President Carter was enjoying the accolades of this victory at this summit, his foes at home -- both within his party as well as without -- were demanding prosperity and tranquility here at home.

Again...the victory might be a short step -- which at the time of taking appeared to be a giant one...for the process ahead in the President's own words "...a step of uncertainty...and one into the unknown."

This game of world chess was put into play back when the President decided and declared recognition of mainland China. From that day to this, a giant rippling effect through the diplomatic channels. Russia so infuriated by this move, and still trying to stave off a SALT II summit meeting, began a siege of terrorist activities that caused the assassination of a U.S. ambassador while Russian guards stood by and observed it all, the Vietnam invasion, and the fall of Iran.

With the trouble in the latter and its ultimate loss of territory for us, it was more than just being put out. It meant the loss of valuable listening devices which were on the Russian border, the loss of oil and the untold sums of money spent in developing the oil fields in that country. It meant that Russia, who all the while had stood by as a quiet observer, would be able to move in behind our departure and pick up the pieces. The fall of the Shah and the loss of that country was a great, great loss for all allies.

With Iran gone, our backs were to the wall. We were pushed back into the sea. Our only hope...our only true friends left in that area were Israel and Egypt. Our President did a saving thing in salvaging our interest in that troubled area of the world.

Now...what we must do is shore-up both countries in order for us to insure our ability to get the oil. How could we operate in a war right now...if we had no oil...except what we have in this country. With this move by Egypt, there is an expression of hope by Sadat that this wave of good will will become infectious...and spread to other Arab countries. With the making of a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, it prevented for the time another war.

So...from the oil fields of the Mid-East there now springs something else from the ground. It isn't an oil well, but an olive branch. We have perhaps won in that peace in the world may continue, but the price for us might well be higher gas prices at the tank. There are those who predict that the oil companies were behind it all. Not necessarily so... there is no conclusive proof of this. What most Americans do not know is that Uncle Sam has been subsidizing the oil prices to enable us to buy gasoline and oil cheaper than any other nation in the world. It will cost more for us to produce oil and gas from our own wells. But...at least we have it available. The ultimate effect will be higher prices at the tank.

Point Of View

BY LINDA L. FLEMING

By the time this editorial is in print, the debate concerning rescision of the Equal Rights Amendment will already be history.

I can't resist, however, putting my thoughts on this page as I hope for the best from our legislators.

Delaware was among the first to ratify the ERA six years ago. Since then it has been considered and reconsidered by state legislatures nationwide, gaining ground in some states, losing in others. But little did I believe our state would be one to have second thoughts.

And now, here we are again, back at step one, with no less a notable figure than Phyllis Schlafley, undisputed leader of the national stop-ERA movement, debating her cause in the senate chamber. Her opposition, Eleanor Smeal, is president of the National Organization for Women. These two nationally known figures presenting their polar viewpoints -- it certainly brings one to pause and consider the seriousness of the decision our legislators will face.

So serious, in fact, is equality under the law, that only when we have a constitutional amendment to that effect, will men and women be treated equitably. The ERA will inevitably benefit both.

For only when people, all people, regardless of sex, color, creed or economic status, are protected equally under the law and have equal access to opportunity will our society be worthy of the adjective "free."

My Opinion

BY BRUCE B. LEVY

Reports are coming almost daily now regarding President Carter's alleged violation of financing laws in connection with his family peanut business during the time of his bid for the presidency three years ago. If I read the winds properly, the wolf pack is again gearing up for action.

Sad to say, the wolf pack I refer to is the Washington press corp, my brothers and sisters by profession. The power of the written word is omnipotent, make no mistake about it, and its potential for abuse is great as we have all seen in the past. The press is on to a very big story here; the facts should be brought to the light of day. But it is only the facts that should be exposed - not some reporter's self righteous idea of the way the events occurred.

As regular readers of this column realize by now, President Carter is not on my list of favorites - very few politicians are. However, Mr. Carter, like the rest of us, has a right to expect fair treatment and a right to a certain degree of privacy. If Carter is tried and convicted by the media before the entire, complete story is evident, it's the image of the press as a whole that will suffer (not to mention a possibly innocent man). If the press is to maintain its necessary role as the public watchdog, these types of things can't happen. The public is far from stupid.

Investigate the sequence of events. Probe deeply into the irregular financial details. Expose and report the facts. But please, fellows, leave the smear behind.

In case you wondered...

If you were confused last week about the Chipman Home being offered to the City for use as a City Hall, it was because we failed to clarify why the school board had not taken possession of the house as planned three years ago.

In March 1976 the home was offered to the school district in memory of the Harrington physician after whom the W.T. Chipman Junior School is named.

Subsequently, the offer was withdrawn by owners of the home, Suzanne and Kenneth Jones, daughter and son-in-law of the Chipmans. The Jones' attorney advised the couple that in essence the property would be a gift to the state as all school property is in reality state-owned. The couple decided instead to offer the home to the City where it would be locally owned and administered.

Lake Forest School Board member, Albert Price, president of the Board when the proposal was made to the school district, said that no formal agreement had ever been signed.

"I've been involved in education for a long time," he continued, "and I would have liked to see it used as a district office, but, as a citizen of Harrington, I'll be pleased to see it as a City Hall, too."

The Biden Report

By Joseph R. Biden, Jr.
United States Senator

We are witnessing American foreign policy at its best as we watch the negotiation of peace in the Mideast.

Our role as a nation, and particularly the diplomatic role of President Carter, in pursuit of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel may be hailed as one of the greatest foreign policy accomplishments in recent history.

If the long negotiating process which began at Camp David reaches a successful conclusion by the signing of a peace treaty in Washington then all of the efforts have been rewarded. And we can hail the courage, the persistence and the statesmanship of Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat but most of all our own president. It could not have happened without President Carter's dedication to peace in the Mideast.

My report last week dealt with the recent snow disaster and assistance available through the federal government. If anyone has questions on the types of assistance available, please contact my office by telephone my toll-free number: 1-800-292-9539.

I met with the Delaware Farm Bureau in Washington this week. Members of the Farm Bureau travel to Washington annually to discuss the impact of federal policy on the farms and rural communities. One of the key issues for agricultural producers is our foreign market for domestically produced commodities.

I have received a lot of mail from people around the state who are concerned over the fate of the Fenwick Lighthouse. Several months ago, soon after that historic light was turned off, I asked the Coast Guard to return the lighting fixtures. They have agreed to do it. The Coast Guard is declaring the lighthouse surplus to their needs and in a matter of time, the structure will be offered to the State.

At a meeting earlier this week, a plan evolved in which the friends of the Fenwick Lighthouse will be able to take an active role in protecting the maintaining the structure. Anyone interested in participating in the effort to preserve the lighthouse and turn the beacon back on by joining that citizens organization, please contact my office by telephoning: 1-800-292-9539.

IRS RULING STILL "A FOWL"

Many of our poultry farmers are being asked to turn the other cheek and, again, the sting will be felt in their pocketbooks.

Already slapped once by denial of an investment tax credit on construction, poultry farmers who abided by an unfair IRS ruling in the first place are now refused retroactive tax credits.

This is in direct contradiction to the will of Congress, which last year corrected the IRS interpretation after Senator Herman Talmadge and I brought it to our colleagues' attention. As a result, the Revenue Act of 1978 contained a provision clarifying Congressional intent to allow poultry farmers to take the credit for construction. Structures must, however, be specifically designed and used in the housing, raising or feeding of poultry and their produce.

Delaware's economy is heavily dependent on the broiler industry and the bureaucrats at the IRS aren't helping us any. Over 3,000 poultry farmers in Delmarva stand to gain from my legislation. Potential benefits can be a shot in the arm to the entire Southern Delaware economy -- creating new jobs and increasing income for thousands. New dollars flowing into Delmarva benefit all Delawareans.

The Congress recognized the inequity and, last year, enacted this provision clarifying the intent of Congress and ending years of costly court battles. In 1971, the Senate Finance Committee -- of which I am a member -- expressed its will that the investment tax credit was for construction of special purpose agricultural structures.

Despite this, the IRS continued to deny the credit to poultry producers -- even though recent court decisions have ruled in favor of poultry producers!

Because Congress felt the credit was being unfairly denied to poultry producers, it enacted a provision I sponsored in 1978 making the investment tax credit retroactive to August 15, 1971.

Now, we learn the IRS is only allowing taxpayers who disputed the original IRS regulations to take the investment tax credit. In other words, taxpayers who could not afford to fight the IRS and who filed returns according to the service's misinterpretation are being penalized for following the law.

I believe this recent IRS ruling is yet another example of law-abiding working Americans being denied equity by "the system". I immediately wrote Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, of my indignation over this totally unacceptable treatment to poultry producers.

I have also discussed this with Senator Talmadge, Chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and we plan to introduce legislation to correct this situation.

The legislative intent of Congress is clear. The new provision is to "be effective for taxable years which end on or after August 15, 1971."

As I told Commissioner Kurtz, "Poultry farmers still being denied this investment tax credit are being treated very unfairly and in direct contradiction to Congressional intent. I urge you to take immediate steps to rectify this situation and abide by the intent of Congress."

Letters To The Editor

words of appreciation.....

Dear Editor:

The Lake Forest Athletic Boosters Club would like to publicly thank Mr. Bruce Levy for his outstanding coverage of Lake Forest sports this year. Bruce did an excellent job of reporting events at the Chipman School, as well as at the high school. His action photography also added special interest to his in-depth articles.

The Boosters Club takes particular notice of the sports coverage that Lake Forest receives in all the local newspapers. However, we feel that the "hometown paper," The Harrington Journal, has the responsibility to provide the best coverage. We congratulate Bruce Levy for putting the Journal in "first place" for its all-around fine coverage of sports.

As we enter the spring sports season, we know that we can expect the same fine reporting, and the same fine spirit of cooperation that Mr. Levy has given us in the past. On behalf of the Athletic Boosters Club, we say, "Thanks, Bruce, and keep up the good work!"

Mrs. Kay Buck

ELECTRICITY PRICING REFORMS

Over the past few years we've suffered tremendous increases in the cost of electricity. While part of the reason for the high prices is because of Arab oil price hikes and other inflationary reasons, the fact is the cost of electricity in Delaware is among the highest in the nation.

There is no good reason why electricity in Delaware should be among the most expensive electricity in all America. There is no good reason why utilities, unlike other business in America, should be guaranteed an automatic, 100 percent pass-through of fuel costs in the form of the fuel adjustment charge to consumers. And there is no good reason why Delaware consumers should not be allowed to lower their own electric costs through less expensive off-peak, time-of-day rates.

In short, I believe we must make every effort to reform electricity pricing policies to bring us long-term rate stability and ensure an adequate supply of electricity. I believe this can be done while assuring an adequate rate of return for the utility as well.

Our efforts in the past two years have been significant; the results have been substantial. I successfully persuaded Delmarva Power and Light to roll back its price increase under bond and that saved consumers millions of dollars. We completed an independent evaluation of Delaware's utility rate structure, funded by the U.S. Department of Energy, and on the basis of that study, I personally intervened before the PSC to urge immediate time of day pricing breaks for consumers. The PSC, however, voted down my request and thus making it more difficult for Delawareans to voluntarily lower their electrical bills.

One important effort we've made was to establish and fund the Office of the Public Advocate, which will represent consumers in all rate hearings before the PSC and which will advocate for the lowest rate possible. Evan Wilner, who is the new Public Advocate, has already intervened in the second round of hearings on the Delmarva Power rate case. I am sure that with his expertise, the residents of Delaware will be better represented before the PSC.

By Congressman Tom Evans

The cutoff of Iranian oil is another very clear reminder that America must reduce its dependence on foreign sources for our energy needs. One way to accomplish this goal is to encourage more exploration and development of domestic oil supplies. But another, and probably a more important step in the long run, is to develop alternative energy sources, particularly solar power.

Solar energy is safe, inexpensive, less affected by foreign boycotts, and in constant supply to our Nation. We must move aggressively to find ways of turning the sun's rays into useful power for our homes and offices.

It is projected that in less than 25 years solar energy could provide at least 10% of America's residential heating needs. But to reach this point, Americans must be encouraged to install solar energy units in their own homes. The most popular solar energy unit being installed today in Delaware for home use is the solar hot water heating system. The cost of installing such a system ranges between $1,200 and $2,000.

That's a lot of money, but fortunately both the federal government and the state of Delaware have programs to help people defray some of the costs of the system.

For instance, last year the Congress passed legislation which I co-sponsored giving a federal tax credit to persons who installed solar equipment in their homes. This tax credit is provided on the basis of 30% of the first $2,000 spent, and 20% of the next $8,000, up to a maximum tax credit of $2,200. One important point to remember is that a tax credit is better than just a tax deduction, since it directly reduces our actual tax bill.

The state of Delaware also offers a $200 tax credit for the installation of solar equipment. In addition, the state provides $400 cash grants to help meet the expenses of putting in solar hot water heaters. As I write this column, 10 grants are still available, and will be awarded on a first-come, first-serve basis to qualified applicants.

Residential homeowners who install solar energy units will do much to make our Nation energy efficient and energy independent. However, the real benefit of installing a solar energy unit will come in the form of lower monthly utility bills. It is estimated that a $1,500 solar hot water heating system which replaces a conventional electric hot water heating system will pay for itself in six years through a substantial reduction in operating costs.

For more information about available opportunities, please contact Mr. Dan Anslin in the Delaware State Energy office at 1-800-282-8616, toll free, or 856-5391 in the Georgetown area, or my Delaware office at 1-800-292-9541.

Twilight

Twilight comes on quiet feet when all is busy,
To do her work both near and far.
She calls "Hello" to her friend the Sandman,
Then closes Heaven's curtain and pins it with a star.

She creates a soft breeze,
And weaves a blanket of dew,
She floats in front of the sun,
Making the sky a darker blue.

She beckons the man in the moon,
To shine down on the earth;
Then makes ready her leave,
As a new day is given birth.

Twilight goes on quiet feet when all is sleeping,
For her work is done both near and far.
She calls "Good-bye" to her friend the Sandman,
Then opens Heaven's curtain as she takes away the star.

Standby energy conservation

Gasoline rationing was imposed only once, in 1942, and lasted for the duration of World War II. The federal government prepared for rationing again during the 1973-74 oil embargo, but never put the plan into effect.

Recently President Carter sent Congress a standby gasoline rationing and energy conservation plan. Each plan, to be approved, must receive an affirmative vote by each House of Congress within 60 days.

While gasoline rationing is in no way to be considered a foregone conclusion, it is nevertheless wise to be knowledgeable concerning government proposals.

Again, these are contingency plans designed only to allow the United States to respond to serious petroleum supply interruptions.

ing the rationing period. Ration coupons printed during the 1973-74 embargo were never used and are still in storage and would be used in the first quarter of any future rationing plan.

"I hope that perhaps a hundred years from now the change to inexhaustible energy sources will have been made, and our nation's concern about energy will be over. But we can make that transition smoothly -- for our country and for our children and grandchildren -- only if we take careful steps now to prepare ourselves for the future."

-President Carter. Speech to the nation. 11/8/77.

Q. Does the Administration have some idea of how many gallons the average automobile owner would receive should emergency rationing be imposed?

A. Some understanding can be drawn from a Department of Energy study of 1978. The DOE determined that the average automobile owner used 693 gallons of gasoline a year. If, for example, there had been a shortfall of 20% in our gasoline supply in 1978, and gasoline rationing imposed, there would have been an allotment per vehicle of about 540 gallons a year, or 45 gallons a month, or 1.5 gallons a day.

Q. Why was it decided to issue gasoline ration checks primarily on the basis of motor vehicle registration, and not use drivers licenses?

A. It was felt that motor vehicle registration was the most equitable system and the most effective way to reduce the possibilities of fraud. Using drivers licenses, for example, could lead to situations where persons who are licensed drivers, but don't have motor vehicles, could sell their gasoline ration coupons for a profit. Drivers also could seek (or already have) licenses in more than one state.

WEEKEND GASOLINE SALES RESTRICTIONS

The purpose of weekend gasoline sales restrictions is to reduce the demand for gasoline by limiting non-essential gasoline driving.

The plan would be used in the case of a severe petroleum supply interruption.

During the restricted hours, retail filling station owners or operators would be permitted to sell diesel fuel to all trucks, but not to automobiles.

In addition, gasoline or diesel fuel could be sold to these types of vehicles: emergency; vehicles registered as common carriers with the Interstate Commerce Commission; taxi-cabs, limousines and other commercial passenger carriers for hire; commercial marine craft; commercial aircraft; heavy construction and farm equipment; federal, state and local government

"Our determination to enact a strong, comprehensive national energy policy reflects our willingness to end this self-indulgence, this waste, once and for all. It is time for us to become responsible caretakers of the bounteous world that God gave us."

-President Carter. Speech in Houston, Texas. 6/23/78.

vehicles; energy production vehicles used in the process of obtaining and distributing fuels.

Assuming full compliance, it is estimated this plan would result in fuel savings of about 246,000 barrels of oil a day.

EMERGENCY BUILDING TEMPERATURE RESTRICTIONS

"Simply stated, conservation means thrift."

-President Carter, Town Hall Meeting, Bangor, Maine. 2/17/78.

The President submitted an Emergency Building Temperature Restrictions Plan which requires owners of most nonresidential buildings to maintain thermostat settings at no higher than 65 degrees Fahrenheit for heating and no lower than 80 degrees for cooling.

"I think the American people, since they don't have demonstrable shortages, they don't have lines at the service stations, they don't have interruptions of electricity to their homes, their houses don't get cold in the winter, in most instances they have not yet realized how serious it [energy problem] is."

-President Carter. Interview with magazine editors. 8/11/78.

Hot water temperature settings could be no higher than 105 degrees.

The water temperature restriction would not apply in cases in which the water is the only available source for dishwashing and where health codes require higher water temperatures.

It is estimated that full compliance would reduce petroleum demand by up to 360,000 barrels per day. Nearly one quarter of the petroleum consumed in the United States is used for space heating and cooling and for heating water.

EMERGENCY ADVERTISING LIGHTING RESTRICTIONS

The Emergency Advertising Lighting Restriction plan prohibits the illumination of advertising signs and window displays. However, it allows any commercial, retail or service establishment while open for business to light any advertising sign essential to identify the business, direct customers to it, or inform customers of the products or services it supplies.

It is estimated energy demands can be reduced by as much as 4,400 barrels of oil a day, with full compliance.

Information was compiled from a media report issued by the White House Press Office.

Bill Towers, of Towers Auto Service, (U.S. 13, Harrington) also relies on his shop to support the business. Gasoline sales are so small a portion, in fact, that Towers has posted a sign to the effect that "no sale under $2.00" will be accepted. It just isn't worth his while to interrupt his work to pump less gas.

A cut-back in allocations has already caused two dealers to respond by cutting hours. In Harrington, Jim Beene, who operates the Phillips 66 Station on Clark Street, has announced an early closing on Saturdays (1 p.m.) until further notice. Beene, whose March allocation was cut 40% anticipates closing early on Wednesdays as well.

Ron Nichols of Felton Service Center at U.S. Rt. 13 and Del. 12, is closing one-half hour earlier and expects to cut back another hour by the end of March.

Nichols predicts another "bad month" before prices and supplies stabilize. He, too, has passed several increases on to customers since January. His business is 50% dependent upon the pumps, but many of his customers prefer to serve themselves, which decreases his profit even more.

A willingness to patronize stations who offer self-serve islands has cut noticeably into sales at Harrington Sunoco (at U.S. 13 and Clark St.). Roger Carrier, station manager, was the only operator to report a decrease in gallons sold. Carrier believes people are shying away from full-serve stations such as his, and taking the trouble to pump for themselves and save a few pennies per gallon.

QUESTIONS ON GASOLINE RATIONING

Q. What are the estimated costs?
A. The Department of Energy has asked for a total appropriation of $53.4 million covering fiscal years 1979 and 1980 for what the agency terms "Pre-implementation". Preliminary estimates are that it will cost another approximate $350 million to start rationing and $400 million per quarter to operate the plan. These costs would be paid for by a per gallon fee of about 1 1/2 cents, to be placed on gasoline dur-

A native of Harrington, Mr. Coleman, 55, is a graduate of Delaware State College. He commuted from Harrington to Dover in order to get a high school education. He has also studied at the University of Delaware and the University of Pennsylvania. He served in the South Pacific during World War II.

Mr. Coleman still lives in Harrington with his wife, Margaret, and a daughter, Fonda, a student at Lake Forest High School. The Colemans' other two daughters are Denise, a houseparent at the 801 House in Dover, and Tonya, a student at Delaware State College.

Weekly Reader Balloon Contest

It's a bird! It's a plane! It's a quarter of a million balloons!

The "Big Launch" at Lake Forest South Elementary begins Friday, March 23.

That's when students in the 5th and 6th grades will send 200 helium-filled balloons soaring into the sky as part of the new nationwide Writing Pals contest sponsored by Weekly Reader, the classroom newspaper.

An estimated quarter of a million school children throughout the United States are filling the skies with the Writing Pals balloons throughout this week.

Goal of the Weekly Reader's Balloon Contest is to generate interest in Weekly Reader's Writing Pals, a program aimed at building writing skills in youngsters.

Each bright yellow balloon contains a card. Finders are asked to fill in their names and addresses and mail the cards back to the school that launched the balloon. Then the children will write personal letters to the balloon finders.

A first prize of $500 will be awarded by Weekly Reader to the school that receives the card mailed from the farthest distance. One hundred runner-up prizes will be awarded.

Members meeting was called to order at 1:30 p.m. by Pres. Herb Hussy, prayer by Marion Brown, minutes read by Andy Anderson, Financial report by Merle Roth, both approved as read. Mr. Hussy and wife Edith (Herb and Edith) are Manna Food program representatives. Hazel Latch read a letter and spoke of the State Council of Senior Citizens, members voted to join as a group.

Letters from "Mom Stubbs" and "Jack Macklin", both from Florida. Jack wrote for his mother Ida. A letter was written asking if anyone knew anything about Elias O'Day, Sara Ann O'Day, James O'Day.

Fishing trip discussed, also air conditioning for summer.

Trips to Vermont and Williamsburg were talked over, no decision was reached. A trip to Concord Mall in April was planned. Meeting closed at 3 p.m. The Jolly Timers under the direction of Andy with Sylvia at the piano rehearsed Tues. as well as the Men's Chorus. Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 in the parlor of the center, the Brobsts Brothers gave a delightful hour of entertainment. Our Mr. Brobst (Mel) at the organ and Bob led us in singing, then Mel played the organ and Bob sang. They do it so beautifully. Bob told some cute jokes which brought laughter to all. It was a happy, short hour. Hope we will be blessed again.

Wednesday, 10 members of Frederica Center came for a visit to our center. Mrs. Anna Mae Short was hostess and met the members at the door with a shamrock to pin on them and handed them one of our wool flowers. The men served lunch in their usual good style. Mrs. Anthony treated everyone to green candy. Had a wonderful lunch, enjoyed the center and looking at the ceramics, played bingo in the afternoon. A nice day. Pool of course for the men.

Coffee Klatch, paper reading, Harrington Journal of course! Pool table hums, wood craft room smelling of paint. Mr. Stevens painted the doll house he was working on. Bowling at Milford Lanes. Tony Dulik was high again. Dominoes and cards as well as ceramics, flowers.

I want to make a correction. In last week's paper I said the material by Du Pont demonstrated by Les Willson was Vertex. It should have been Vexar. It was through the kindness of Mrs. Anthony's daughter Sara Donovan that we got the services of Mr. Willson. We truly appreciate the card Sara gave her mother, which she gave to our center. Film with George Godge, bingo, ceramics, pool, and visiting.

Exercises of the natural kind, pool, ceramics and then lunch. In the afternoon, Linda Fleming of the Harrington Journal came with her recorder and the members just talked. That will be in later under her article. Some of the things sure sounded good, cute and different. Life is interesting and we all have a story. Would like some of you

Gab Fest

by Pat Hatfield

A reader from New Jersey has called and said that I do not talk enough about my Christmas present, the little blonde Cocker, "Nikki". So here goes. He is no longer little. He was born on September 21 of last year, so on March 21, he will be six months old. In a Cocker's life span that brings him to a very clumsy, ungainly teenager, falling all over himself as he races to get the toy we throw.

With about seven toys on the floor he has a favorite, a small, soft red rubber shoe. He loves all his toys, but the little shoe is the only one he will fetch back when it is thrown. When the dinner hour is over and we are settled in our big chairs for the evening, he hunts until he finds this favorite toy and brings it to us for a game. We throw it until we are tired. I don't know how long he would last.

Our Declaration of Independence

Generation Output by Fuel Source

Prior to the 1973 OPEC oil embargo, Delmarva Power and many other utilities became increasingly dependent on oil as a generating fuel source. The construction of new oil-fired power stations and conversion of coal-fired stations to oil was caused by federal and state laws because oil was considered cleaner and less polluting.

With the sharp rise in the price of oil, and the ability of the OPEC nations to control the world-wide flow of this scarce fuel, came the realization that we had become overly dependent on oil. And one of the major factors affecting the cost of your electricity is the price of the fuel that's used to produce it.

The chart above shows the fuel plan at Delmarva Power for the 11 years beginning in 1977. As you can see, the intent is to decrease our dependency on oil, the most expensive fuel, and to increase the use of coal and nuclear power. Under this plan, oil will account for only 18% of the fuel we'll be using in 1988.

Felton Girl Scout

Activites Varied

Junior Troop 248

Junior Troop 403

Brownie Troop 9

Flag ceremony at the Mall

Girl Scouts in the Felton area are members of troops in Unit 33 of the Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council. There are six local troops at the Brownie and Junior levels. Meetings are held in the cafeteria and classrooms of Lake Forest North Elementary School.

One feature of Girl Scout Week in which some of the troops in Unit 33 participated was the Girl Scout Event held Saturday, March 17, at the Blue Hen Mall. Many are looking forward to the LAFF (Lively Arts Fun Festival) which will bring several thousand Girl Scouts from all over the peninsula to the Delaware State Fairgrounds on May 19.

Active troops in Felton are as follows:

Brownie Troop 9 - The leaders of this busy group of girls are Mrs. Darlene Shahan and Mrs. Gloria Rauding. This year the girls are working on their Brownie B's, specifically on "Be A Ready Helper". During one phase of this project they made cookies and took them to a nursing home where they shared them and sang Christmas carols. Asked about the highlights of their year, most of the girls mentioned a trip to see a puppet play - Pinocchio and a skating party which concluded with a trip to McDonald's. The troop plans to go to LAFF day in May.

The Brownies in the troop are Sandy Brown, Kelly Rawding, Kim Hopkins, Jodie McDowell, Adrea Riddick, Nancy Shahan, Crystal Sinegar, Cathy Stewart, Joanne Saulisbury and Amanda Wilmere. The troop meets in the Lake Forest North Cafeteria on Friday after school.

Brownie Troop 73 - The Brownies in Troop 73 were busy making butterflies the day we visited with the camera. Their leaders are Mrs. Margaret Hurd and Mrs. Patricia Walls. During the past year this troop has made Valentines, Christmas candles, snowmen, wreathes. The girls have also worked hard at selling calendars and magazines. They are planning to be a part of the LAFF day activities.

Brownies in the troop are Heather Morton, Tracy Scott, Hope Hertzberg, Christine Moody, Kelly Hurd, Kristy McDowell and Kitty Jones. They meet on Wednesdays after school in Mr. Topolski's classroom at Lake Forest North.

Brownie Troop 202 - Mrs. Carol Eymann and Mrs. Bonnie Walsh are co-leaders of the girls in this troop of first grade Brownies. A highlight of Girl Scout Week for Troop 202 was their participation in the Girl Scout Event in the Blue Hen Mall on Saturday. They were the only group of first grade Brownies to participate. The girls made woven place mats and did table settings as a part of their preparations for the day.

This year the girls have toured the Felton Post Office and the Dover Police Station. They have also worked with arts and crafts, learned songs and visited the Fletcher Nursing Home where they sang Christmas carols.

Brownies in Troop 202 are Stephanie Allen, Suzanne Eymann, Tonya Ordway, Cyndi Scheibner, Lisa Slaughter, Pamela Stevens, Maritza Trujello, Becky Walsh and Lucinda Wilmere. Their meetings are after school on Mondays in the North Cafeteria.

Brownie Troop 220 - Leaders of Brownie Troop 220 are Mrs. Sylvia Kemp, Mrs. Barbara Cord and Mrs. Jackie Sanders. The girls have been working for their Brownie B patches in the "Be A Discoverer" and "Be Safety-Wise" categories. In pursuit of this they have attended a performance of "Professor Kool", toured an ambulance, held a fire drill, worked on a first aid kit, reviewed traffic safety rules, put on a puppet show and made posters.

Members of the troop are Lisa Melvin, Ann Boyer, Tanya Kemp, Becky Sanders, Kelly Williams, Kelly Cord, Lori Schieferstein, Angie Kersey, Briget Tribbett, Tarrie Killen, Patty Blinn, Roberta Darling, Terri Hickman and Vicky Swain. They meet on Mondays after school in Mrs. Swain's Classroom at North.

Junior Troop 248 - A very active group of some 22 girls, Junior Troop 248 is led by Mrs. Iris Feutz, Mrs. Yvonne Armstrong and Mrs. Marie Woods.

This year the girls in Junior Troop have concluded a third great cookie sales campaign by selling 2,016 boxes of Girl Scout Cookies. The funds they have raised will benefit Girl Scouting in many ways and will help in the financing of the varied activities of their own troop.

Their activities have included a trip to the Magic Fingers Beauty Salon in Dover where they watched as one of their members - Monica Armstrong received a special haircut. The whole troop was given tips on hair care and skin care and heard about some of the requirements for becoming a professional beautician.

Activities planned in the near future are a Mother-Daughter Luncheon on April 7, a visit to the William Henry Planetarium on March 31, a covered wagon ride to be climaxed by a cookout (courtesy of Dr. Haines) LAFF day and a camping weekend scheduled for Trapp Pond in May.

Troop members are Regina Abrams, Monica Armstrong, Sandy Benjamin, Ronda Bernard, Pamela Cohee, Lorraine Darling, Michele Feutz, Tara Gladden, Sylvia Hicks, Stephanie McCullough, Carmella Paczkowski, Tina Payton, Debbie Perry, Pam Smith, Vicki Sanchez, Donna Vaughn, Shannon Vanheckle, Pam Voshell, Rebecca Williams, Teresa Wood, Lisa Woods, and Caroline Trujillo. They meet on Tuesday afternoons in the Lake Forest North Cafeteria.

The day we visited, they were working on St. Patrick's tray favors - a rainbow and a pot of gold - to be taken to Kent General Hospital.

Junior Troop 403 - Mrs. Charlotte Young and Mrs. Judy Bickling are Co-Leaders of this junior troop of 12 active members.

This year's activities have included working on their Toymaker badge for which they made blocks from styrofoam and fabric. These were given to the hospital at Stokely.

At present Troop 403 is busy with some of the beginning steps on the Needlecraft Badge. Three of the girls are also involved in the school's drama program.

Active members of Junior Troop 403 are Sherry Brown, Mary Eymann, Kathy Karlson, Darlene Hill, Heather Hughes, Mira King, Karla Mahon, Tracy Murphy, Julie Sherwood, Kathy Sipple, Kim Sipple, and Karen Young. They meet on Thursdays after school in the North Cafeteria.

"Special girls, special citizens, special scouts" were the words Gloria Cornish used in describing three young women of this area who received some very special honors this Saturday. Shelley Catherine Barthlow, Teresa Hope Evans and Mary Frances Vinson achieved the rank of First Class Scouts for which they were commended in a surprise ceremony which climaxed the Fifth Annual Mother-Daughter Banquet for Harrington and Frederica troops in Unit 11 of the Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council.

Shelley and Mary Fran are members of Senior Troop 334 of Harrington; Hope is a Cadette in Troop 905, also of Harrington. Hope is a freshman and Shelley a junior at Lake Forest High School. Both girls are Harrington residents. Mary Fran is a junior at Milford High School. She and her family reside in Houston.

All three girls have had long and active careers in the various levels of Girl Scouting from Brownie through Junior and Cadette to Senior. They have, especially been involved in service projects, camping activities, travel and helping other Girl Scouts. To complete the requirements for the First Class rank they had to face and master four difficult and complicated challenges.

The First Class rank which they achieved on Saturday is the highest honor Girl Scouting affords. It is comparable to the rank of Eagle Scout in the Boy Scout program.

The First Class Ceremony at Saturday's banquet was conducted by Gloria Cornish, 1978 Director of the Woodland By The Lake summer camp program at Camp Todd. Also present to participate in the ceremony and to honor the girls by her presence was Carolyn Hickman, President of the Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council.

During the ceremony the three girls received their First Class pins which may be worn at any time and the First Class badge which must go on the Girl Scout uniform. All three honored their mothers with the presentation of a rose in appreciation for the love and support which has followed them through their years in scouting. They in turn were honored by their families with the gift of a corsage and a silver plate commemorating the occasion.

"May the high ideals and worthy goals which helped you achieve this special honor continue to guide you in the years ahead," was the wish expressed in a letter each girl received from President Jimmy Carter. A similar letter of recognition came from Delaware's Governor Pierre S. duPont who said, "I am aware of the time, effort and energy you have exerted in achieving this, and you are to be commended."

A third letter addressed to each of the girls came from Jane C. Freeman, National President of the Girl Scouts of America.

Shelley, Mary Fran and Hope were surprised and somewhat abashed by the ceremony during which a resume of their achievements and activities was read by Gloria Cornish. Mary Fran probably spoke for all three when she said that during the time she was participating in all the activities, she was unaware that they deserved so much attention. But she and the others found Saturday evening that all the little things can add up to something very important.

Banquet Activities Are Varied

The First Class Ceremony was indeed the highlight of the Mother-Daughter Banquet held March 17 at the Lake Forest High School cafeteria. But it was by no means the only event of the evening.

Seven Girl Scout Troops from Harrington and Frederica participated in the event which climaxed the annual anniversary of Girl Scouting. Chairman for the evening was Sheila Barthlow, Leader of Troop 905 and 334 which were in charge of planning the event. In addition to the First Class Awards, the banquet honored the Juliette Low World Friendship Fund and featured the International Year of the Child as its theme.

Before sitting down to dinner with mothers, special guests and sometimes fathers and grandmothers, the Girl Scouts conducted an opening ceremony with the presentation of the colors by a color guard made up of Brownies in the following troops:

Flag Bearers: Terry Robbins, Brownie Troop 506, Frederica and Michele Packnowski, Brownie Troop 677, Frederica; Color Guards - Lisa Trice and a sister Scout from Brownie Troop 332 in Harrington. Caller for the ceremony was Jackie Kehler from Junior Troop 879 of Harrington. Opening songs were led by Leona Jackson and Theresa Schneiderwert of Junior Troop 469, Frederica.

After the First Class awards, the traditional Girl Scout candlelight ceremony based on the Girl Scout law was conducted in honor of the Juliette Low World Friendship Fund. As this concluded a scout from each troop present came forward to present pennies donated to the fund which provides various forms of assistance to girls all over the world. Several methods such as waist measurements and ages were used to determine the number of pennies to be given by each Scout. The total, mostly in pennies, came to a little over $25.00.

Closing the evening with the retiring of the colors were the following Brownies:

Flag Bearers - Julie Betts, Brownie Troop 506, Frederica and Crystal Greenly, Brownie Troop 677, Frederica; Color Guards - Tammy Bowman, Brownie Troop 332, Harrington and Jodi Trittle, Brownie Troop 506, Frederica. Rebecca Brown of Junior Troop 686 in Harrington was Caller for the closing ceremony.

Special guests in addition to those previously mentioned were Doris Chambers, Field Supervisor and Product Sales Chairperson of the Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council; Mary Eisenberg, Board Member of the Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council; Linda Jackson - Team Consultant for Frederica; Frances Vinson, Team Consultant for Harrington; Mayor Arthur Cahall of Harrington; Mrs. Jane Smith, Member of Houston's Town Council; Linda Fleming, News Editor, and Elaine Watson, Composition Editor of The Harrington Journal; Nikki Maddison, AFS student from Australia; Petra Fiege, AFS student from Germany, and Marilyn Draper, Petra's host mother.

Troops represented were: Frederica: Brownie 506 - Margaret Trittle and Barbara Minnick, Leaders; Brownie 677 - Sherie Greenly and Faye Andrew, Leaders; Junior 469, Linda Jackson and Emma E. Shahan, Leaders.

Harrington: Brownie 332 - Mary Trice and Barbara Rause, Leaders; Junior 686 - Barbara Brown, Leader; Junior 879 - Charlotte Schuckman, Leader; Cadette 905 and Senior 334, Sheila Barthlow, Leader.

Not present at the banquet was Brownie Troop 684 of Harrington. Its leader is Gene Morris.

physical education personnel and students with life saving badges would also be utilized.

The Board set a date for a viewing of a film on aquatics for the handicapped, one of the anticipated uses of the pool.

In other business the Lake Forest School Board wondered about the condition of the girls' softball diamond at the high school. Board member Cliff Chambers said he had received numerous complaints from the girls. Chambers, who got up early one Sunday morning to pitch a ball out on the diamond, reported his throw did not make it to short stop. He claimed the soft condition of the field was responsible and said he had "played in better cow pastures." He also said clumps of grass were coming up on the diamond. Assistant Superintendent Luff asked for patience in the situation, saying fill dirt had been brought in and rolled but not dragged. He invited the board to inspect the field in a few days when work should be complete.

Parents Urged To Check Children For Lice

School officials are urging parents to examine their children for lice, which have been found in several schools recently.

Common signs of lice are itching on the scalp and neck or slate-colored bite marks. Oval and whitish nits, or lice eggs, are attached to shafts of hair, particularly behind the ears and on the back of the neck.

Most cases can be treated with a medicated shampoo and finetooth-combing. The nits are a nuisance and are often difficult to remove from the hair. Effective treatments are sold at most pharmacies.

Combs, brushes, and clothing should be steamed or cleaned with boiling water. Everyone who has had contact with an infected person should be inspected.

Good personal hygiene is the best guard against lice, but they may occur among all economic levels of the community.

Federal Funds For Lake Forest

The Lake Forest School District has recently received $43,378 to be used for improving the special education programs in our district.

These monies are being made available under Part B, P.L. 94-142 and are being used to provide an additional speech therapist for the district, a reading specialist for the high school, a vocational teacher for the high school, and a part-time home/school coordinator for the primary grades of the elementary schools. A certain portion of this money will also be used to conduct childfind activities that will identify and place handicapped preschool children in classes at the Lake Forest North Elementary School.

Anyone wishing to examine the plan under which these funds are being spent is welcome to come to the central office.

High School Schedules Freshman Orientation

An Open House and Orientation for next year's freshman class will be held on Tuesday, March 27, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Lake Forest High School Gymnasium.

The purpose of the program, which is held each year, is to explain the high school curriculum and graduation requirements to students and their parents. Department chairpersons will be available to answer questions pertaining to courses in their departments.

Students new to the district, the incoming ninth grade class and all parents are invited to attend.

For Your Information

Dear friends,

If you will think of recent funerals you have attended, we believe you will discover that each one left with you a memory picture.

The flowers, the music, the message of the minister, the general arrangements - all these are a part of that picture.

It is our task - as we see it - to make that picture just as beautiful and satisfying as it possibly can be made.

Respectfully,

Woodbridge Adopts Basic Skills Program

A Basic Skills Program was adopted by the Woodbridge School Board at their regular meeting on March 12. The proposal must now be submitted to the Department of Public Instruction by May 1, 1979.

If approved, plans are to hire a certified reading specialist for Woodbridge High School who would develop a program to assist students in meeting the minimum competency requirements in reading. Funds would also be used to provide materials for the program.

Remaining funds would be used to provide a new reading series for students in grades 1-8. A committee of faculty members and administrators would be appointed to review current reading series available. Evaluation instruments and procedures would be developed by Marie Shockley. A total of $12,591 is available for the basic skills program.

In other action, the board discussed, then tabled, a proposed policy for terminating bus contracts should enrollment decline to a level where this would be necessary. Termination may be based on seniority, age of the equipment, or number of students carried, although no firm decision was reached. There are several contractors within the district who operate three buses, others have one or two bus contracts.

Further discussion will continue at a special meeting set for Monday, March 26. Also to be discussed on that date is the 1979-80 athletic budget.

In other business, a committee was established to explore the possibility of holding a tax referendum to raise needed revenue for the district.

Funds were released to pay 40% of the costs incurred in repair of the greenhouse roof which was damaged by snow. The state will pay 60% of the expense.

Board elections were scheduled to be held on Saturday, May 12, 1979.

France Anna Arriola was hired as French/Spanish teacher at Woodbridge High School.

Resignations were accepted from Steven Kravitz, Woodbridge High School French/Spanish teacher, and Holly Ellis, English teacher at the high school.

A LENTEN MESSAGE

By Father John F. Cremin, Pastor
St. John's and St. Bernadette's

If there is ever a time when the crucifix and the cross come in for special attention, it is during these weeks that we call Lent. The message of the cross was hate; the message of Him Who was crucified was love. Because God hates sin, Christ was nailed to the cross; because Christ loves the sinner, He did not come down from the cross but willingly hung on that infamous gibbet. "With other men" says St. John Chrysostom, "especially great men, their deeds shine forth in their lifetime; but as soon as they die, their deeds go with them. But with Christ it was quite the contrary. On the cross it is all sadness and weakness. But as soon as He dies, everything comes to light, that we might learn that it was no ordinary man who was crucified." Well might we along with the centurion exclaim: "Truly this man was the Son of God." (Mark 15:39)

Because Christ is God, the King of kings, no detail of His death is insignificant - the heavens themselves did declare His glory. Especially noteworthy was the time of Christ's death. Christ desired death while in the prime of manhood. To the aged, death is often a welcome release. Had Christ died in old age would not man have said: His death was no sacrifice; He did not have much longer to live, anyway? Christ showed His love for men by dying in His youth. Christ died in the springtime - the time when all things are coming back to life. The winter of His death ushered in the spring of life. The day was Friday, the sixth day of the week - the day when God created Adam, for the Son of God was recreating man. The hour was the ninth - the hour when the day itself was declining, for the old order was dying, giving way to the new. The place of execution was outside the Jerusalem gates. Since the days of David, God had chosen Jerusalem as the place of sacrifice. That was reason enough for Christ to die there; yet He had still another reason - humility. Although a shameful death is humiliating, to suffer it in a conspicuous place - such as was Jerusalem - it is a shame worse still.

The penalty of death had fallen on the human race; "In what day soever thou shalt eat" God had threatened Adam, "thou shalt die the death." (Genesis 2:17) To lift this penalty, death had to be swallowed up by death - a life for a life. So Christ died that we might live. To be fair, however, the substitution had to be made freely. That was why Christ submitted to a violent death. Would it not have looked rather foolish for the Divine Physician to die from sickness? Had Christ so died, men could have claimed He had to die. That no such compulsion existed is implied by the fact that none of the Evangelists say: "He died." Instead, they state: "He gave up the ghost." And to stress even more this freedom of choice in dying, the Evangelists preface this statement with the equally significant words: "He bowed His head." Ordinarily men die, then bow their heads; Christ bowed His head, then died. "Death" explained St. Athanasius "so feared Christ that it would not strike Him without His permission." Christ withheld that permission until He had fulfilled the Messianic prophecies in all perfection. Only when He could say: "It is finished" did He command His soul to His Father and give Death the nod to strike by bowing His head. "No one takes my life from me" Christ tells us "but I lay it down of myself." (John 10:18) For Christ, then, death was a display of almighty power; it was one of His greatest acts.

Christ's death likewise revealed the unspeakable worth of a single soul. When appraising an article, the question is often asked: "What did it cost?" What is a single soul worth? It cost the life of the God-Man, our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. St. Peter tells us: "You know that you were redeemed from the vain manner of life handed down from your fathers, not with perishable things, with silver or gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." (1 Peter 1:18) That staggers the imagination. A human soul worth the life of God! Not even the whole world bears such a price-tag. "What will a man give in exchange for his soul?" St. Augustine says: "Behold His wounds as He hangs, behold His blood as He dies, calculate the worth of His dying. His head bent down to kiss, His heart opened to love, His arms outstretched to embrace, His whole body displayed to redeem." Behold the priceless value of a human soul!

LET US PRAY: O Divine Jesus, how quickly Your prayer for a sinner is heard! There are two thieves crucified with You - one is a sinner who refuses mercy, the other a sinner who begs it. A spark of love from Your Sacred Heart touches the heart of the poor thief hanging at Your right. He sees the patience with which You suffer, compares Your goodness with the wickedness of his life, and with deep contrition and confidence cries out: Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy Kingdom. Though You are treated by both Jews and Gentiles as the vilest of men, though like him You hang dying upon a Cross, completely forsaken and deprived of everything, he openly proclaims You the Master of the Kingdom of Heaven. He asks only a remembrance and You give him a Kingdom. With him we too say: be merciful to me a sinner."

Sports

Sometimes, making a basket can mean complete happiness. This boy tried and tried but just couldn't find the hoop. Later in the day, he scored and it's easy to tell how he feels about it.

Holding her olympic medal like it was made of solid gold, this little girl and her teacher keep a close watch on the scoreboard.

Editor's View

When the letter reached my desk two weeks ago, I didn't want to open it. I saw the return address on the envelope and was tempted to pitch it in the round file and pretend it wasn't there. It said Delaware Special Olympics.

Since taking the Sports Editor position at the Journal, I have been called on to cover many varied sporting events - from donkey basketball to drag racing - and it's been educational and entertaining to see how people relate to and handle athletic contests. Sports are really all about people, as is the news business in general, and the fun in reporting athletics comes from identifying with the emotions that are taking place in front of you. But sometimes, the emotions that are on display can be completely overpowering and, consequently, difficult to objectively report and analyze. When I finally opened the letter advising me of the upcoming Delaware Special Olympics to be held at the University of Delaware Fieldhouse on Saturday, I knew it was going to be one of those occasions.

Young children are a particular weakness of mine; if I could afford it, I'd gladly have a dozen or so. Watching a bright-eyed, healthy and exuberant child at play can reduce me to jelly. Watching a handicapped child at play renders me practically helpless. Because of this, I'll freely admit that I make attempts to avoid the subject and go out of my way sometimes to look the other way. But here was the event and the invitation. I knew in my gut that the Special Olympics belonged in the paper and, gathering my courage, made the trip to Newark.

I have searched my mind for ways to describe the way I felt upon entering the vast sports complex building and seeing in front of me 500 mentally retarded children. There were kids everywhere, parents in every place you looked, and volunteer officials keeping the atmosphere charged with excitement. I've turned it over in my head for a few days and still can't come up with the words to express the impact of seeing such a sight. I stood in the entranceway for 10 minutes trying to get myself together enough to walk in, load my camera, and go to work. The emotions that I wrestled with ran very deep. A religious person I'm not, but I was sure thanking somebody at that moment.

Going out onto the floor of the super-size gym, I started to mix with the crowds and watch the events. Nothing special - lots of basketball dribbling and shooting and plenty of just running around. No winners, no losers. I began to relax.

The pictures you'll find on the page are just a few of the day's moments that I managed to capture on film. What I couldn't capture was the feeling in the gym, the feelings that flowed from the kids toward each other and toward their teachers. I became aware of a special kind of love that was so obviously in the hearts of these retarded children. It was an eye-opener. It began to dawn on me that I had been missing the boat for a long time - I had never realized how the love and trust that these kids oozed from their every gesture could brighten the surroundings.

I also learned another important lesson, something someone in my line of work should have already known. I saw that, like music, sport is a universal language able to transcend all communication barriers. Maybe the child will never learn to read or to hold a job. Maybe the child will never break free of a limited, bewildering world. But everyone understands movement and feels the joy in watching or participating in some type of human motion. They rooted and cheered, both players and watchers, all day long. It hardly mattered if the ball dropped into the hoop or if the "team" won or lost, sport is sport and it brings joy to those who are involved. I was proud to be a part of it.

I came away a different person, profoundly shaken but somehow more in touch with what life is all about. Thank you, kids, I'll see you next year.

The medal presentations were a proud moment for the qualifiers.

The Phillie Fanatic made an appearance to the delight of the children who chased him all over the gym.

A lot of love passed from student to teacher during the day.

Harrington Day Care Center

By Carrie P. Brown, Director

On March 31, 1979, the Harrington Day Care Center located in the Sunday School rooms of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church will celebrate its tenth anniversary as a non-profit child care organization. Looking back to the very beginning of our program, we can certainly say that we are pleased with the way our Center has progressed since then.

In March 1969, the Day Care Center was opening Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., age requirements were from 2 years to 6 years. The center had a staff of seven members who had hopes of serving 37 children from Harrington and the surrounding areas. However, on the opening day the enrollment was only 14 children. Disappointing? Certainly, but the disappointment didn't last too long because by the summer of '69, the center had increased its enrollment to 62 children.

The goals of the Center then were to provide good, dependable care for children whose parents couldn't otherwise afford suitable day care and to make it possible for such parents to improve their financial well-being. The center would give first preference to low-income families.

Since then, the Harrington Day Care Center has made a few changes. One of these changes involves the hours of operation. The center now opens 5:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Another change is in the age requirement for children involved in the Center's program. Now, children between the ages of 1 to 14 years will be accepted for enrollment.

An increase in staff members is the third major change in the Center's structure. At present, there are 12 staff members who perform the various duties associated with running a day care center. Since the Day Care Center must follow rules and regulations as set-up by the federal government under Title XX, the child-staff ratios are as follows: 1 year to 3 year - one adult to 4 children, 3 years to 4 years - one adult to 5 children, 4 years to 6 years - one adult to 7 children, 6 years to 9 years - one adult to 15 children, 10 years to 14 years -

Ten Years of Service - Janet Stewart, Cook, Carrie P. Brown, Director, and Jean Thorpe, Teacher, have been with the Harrington Day Care Center since its establishment.

one adult to 20 children. We also have 3 foster grandparents, Mrs. Effie Raughley, Mrs. Ida May, and Mrs. Harriett Robinson from another program who help with the children. We have enrolled 382 children in the past 10 years.

the Director; Mrs. Jean Thorpe, teacher; and Mrs. Janet Stewart, cook, have been with the center since its establishment. The other nine staff members have been with us from 1 to 9 years. Each member in her or his own way has added

A decade of caring

However, one idea that hasn't changed is the emphasis the center places on promoting the emotional, social, physical, and educational, well-being of its children. This means the center services children regardless of social class, race, religion, or national origin. High priorities on the Center's list of long-range objectives include helping the child acquire a positive self-image and helping the child understand basic concepts in his world.

By maintaining a well-organized atmosphere, the staff members are able to introduce the children to various learning experiences. We do this through the use of a fenced-in playground, an ample children's library, audio-visual equipment and many other well chosen classroom supplies.

Perhaps, the most important factor of lasting these past ten years has been the dedication of the Day Care staff. Mrs. Carrie P. Brown, much to the operation of the Center and has made many valuable contributions to the Center. We graciously salute all of them. Incidentally, all of our teachers have had training in Child Care and Early Childhood Education.

In saying all of this, we are quick to note that none of this could have been possible without the cooperation of numerous people who took the time to get involved with our day care program. We, the Director, Staff, and Children of the Harrington Day Care Center would like to express our sincere gratitude and appreciation to everyone for helping us in one way or another during these past ten years.

We wish to say a special thanks to Rev. Quay Rice who helped to organize the Day Care Center along with the former Board of Directors; Mr. Walter Lang, president; and the other members. Some others involved in the program were Harrington Sunshine 4-H Club; Girl Scout Troop 879; Harrington Jaycees; Health Careers Club of W.T. Chipman School; Food Management Class of LFH School; Kent County Parks and Recreation Commission; Kent County Vo-Tech Child Care Center; Delta Kappa Gamma RIF Program; Bus Drivers of kindergarten and elementary school to and from the Center; Mr. Howard Wagner for advice; Mrs. Lucile Mann, volumes of Childcraft books; Mr. J. F. Camper; Mr. Kenneth McKnatt, our Santa Claus; Mrs. Ruth Nasser, our story lady; our parents with their donations; Rev. and Mrs. Bruce Shortell; members of St. Stephen's and many others too numerous to mention. A special thanks to our present Board of Directors, Mr. Robert H. Crawford, president, and all of the other board members who are always ready to help. "All of you have made these ten years truly a decade of caring."

and often does it without the command. His worst fault now is jumping against visitors with love and affection. This I am trying to eliminate. No matter how much visitors may love dogs they do not care to have their clothing clawed or torn. "The book" for training says to put your knee in his chest. Well, in the first place, his small chest does not come anywhere near our knees. So far, even a folded newspaper whacked sharply across his bottom has no effect. In all other matters of mischief, chewing, biting, and so on, he responds well to a sharp, "no-no."

This column seems to be turning into a pet discussion today, but I am sure the great majority of our readers have pets. A dear lady from Wilmington called for a long chat the other day. She used to live in Seaford and is a cousin of my dear friend, Wright Robinson. And in the course of our conversation, she mentioned her dog who is such a companion, but now, not too well. We are not making any progress in persuading Nikki and Morris, our big, yellow cat to make friends. The minute they are allowed in the same room, Nikki leaps at Morris and proceeds to maul him in affectionate ecstasy and poor Morris is so overwhelmed he just cringes in a corner until we rescue him. If he would only strike out at Nikki with his sharp claws a few times, I think it would stabilize the relationship, but Morris is no fighter. Speaking of pets, doesn't anyone need a beautiful cat with fur like black satin and loves everyone like crazy? We still have "B.K.", the Black Kitty, down in the shop following Dad around like a shadow. Or, maybe I should be taking orders for kittens! She has entertained a suitor for a few days...a beautiful snow white cat, who has now gone on to other conquests. I could probably guarantee either pure white kittens, coal-black kittens or black and white mottled. When Ellen was a little girl we had for some years a black and white cat which she named Old Mama Jeanie. She must have presented us with at least 50 kittens through the years, but in her last litter she just outdid herself. There were three kittens as white as the driven snow and there were three completely black kittens. It was a pretty and unusual sight.

Did I tell you the awful fate of our small Japanese chicken pets? During the blizzard, I think I mentioned that we found a large rooster wandering around our yard, half starved and half frozen. We put him in with the others, but he fought with "Silkie", the Japanese rooster. So Dad took Silkie and The Mrs. down to the shop in a cardboard box. Something, likely a rat, got into the box and killed both and ate most of the little hen. We miss them. The little rooster would come in the kitchen on Dad's arm, like a macaw, and crow upon demand. Well, as small Garith tells me, "Gamudder, that's the way life is."

Planting tips for vegetable growers

Warm weather is finally on its way, and as soon as the soil dries out enough around the state, planting of Delaware's commercial vegetable crops will begin in earnest. University of Delaware extension vegetable specialist Dr. Michael Orzolek has some planting tips which should help growers ensure a good harvest this year.

The first step in making sure you have a successful growing season is to use good seed. So be sure you check the germination level of the seed you intend to plant. This way you'll get a uniform stand and a crop worth harvesting.

Seed lots which test below 70 percent germination aren't worth bothering with, as they'll produce plants of low vigor, warns the specialist. Such seedlings will be unable to develop properly under the sometimes difficult growing conditions of a Delaware spring.

High germination and seedling vigor are especially important for early-planted seed which must sprout and develop in cool, wet soils and cool nights. In themselves, these conditions favor slow plant growth, and weak seedlings will be even slower to develop. They will also be more susceptible to mechanical damage, chemical injury (especially from herbicides), and early insect and disease problems.

Also give careful consideration to the condition of your soil before planting. Check soil temperature and moisture as well as air temperature, so that you won't run into problems such as the crusting that develops when a heavy rain is followed by high temperatures. Also, don't try to rush the season. Planting into wet soil with a temperature less than 50 degrees Fahrenheit will produce uneven stands and may delay maturing of a crop.

Inspect your planter and/or transplanter to make sure they're set for the correct depth. Also make sure the press wheel firmly covers the seed and that the root ball of the transplant comes in direct contact with the soil with no intervening air pockets. Deep seed placement may be necessary under dry soil conditions, but Orzolek does not recommend planting seeds deeper than 1 3/4 inches.

Many problems during the growing season and at harvest stem from poor seedbed preparation. A firm, level seedbed will ensure good soil contact and moisture for the seed. It will help guarantee an optimum plant population with uniform emergence. And it will help control weeds.

With mechanical harvesting equipment, level fields are also essential since ridges or gulleys can result in substantial raw produce loss. You can also reduce your harvest time by keeping your fields level.

Take the trouble to get off to a proper start by following these tips and save yourself a lot of time and money later on.

March 24 - Sheep Project Training - Newark.
March 29 - Livestock Club meeting - Hills Farm, 7 p.m.
March 30 - Entry Deadline Dress Revue.

50 4-H'ers welcomed 4-H's spring season recently by attending a Jr. Leader weekend held at Camp Arrowhead. Activities during the weekend centered around the roles junior leaders and club officers play in a 4-H club, how to conduct a meeting and the qualities of a good leader. There was plenty of time for fun as 4-H'ers renewed old acquaintances and made new friends. We'd like to thank all those Jr. Leaders who helped make Jr. Leader Weekend a success. Special thanks to Landy Correll and Jim Hukill for presenting workshops, Faith McIlvain, Pam Knopp and Charlie Chaffinch for planning the party, Teresa Tharp, Cindy Baynard, Brenda Hudson and Stephanie Truitt for Vespers and Mike Penuel and Vance Phillips for recreation. A special thanks to the entire planning committee.

Seven Sussex 4-H leaders recently joined over 60 volunteers at a State 4-H Volunteer Leader Workshop in Newark.

The keynote speaker was Jerry Webb, Agriculture Editor at the University of Delaware. Focusing on the role of the leader, Mr. Webb discussed parent participation, why youth join 4-H and why others drop out.

Also included in the training was an awards and incentives seminar presented by Joy Gooden, New Castle County 4-H Agent, and Kathleen Wiebel, Sussex 4-H Agent.

Rev. Jerry Knotts of the Newark United Methodist Church was the luncheon speaker.

Volunteers attending from Sussex were: Ruth Hudson, Elaine Hill, Jean Wilson, Ken and Doris McIlvain and Doug and Marguerite Moore.

The first hints of spring bring a gentle reminder that the Fashion Revue is not far away. This year's event is scheduled for April 21 at Sussex Central High School. All 4-H'ers enrolled in the clothing and learning the 4-H way projects are eligible to enter. To participate members should construct a garment of their choice and will be asked to model it on stage. Entries will be judged on construction, fit and the contestants modeling ability. Top winners from the Revue will be modeling their garments at the Link Spring Fair. Clothing judging is also scheduled for the same day. Members will judge between 3 and 5.

Harrington Sunshine

By Kirk Ryan

The March meeting of the Harrington Sunshine 4-H Club was called to order by president Kelley Ryan. Crystal Gerardi led in the pledges. Karen Walters read a poem and Denise Cain read from the Bible. Roll was called and collection of dues was made. The Treasurer and Secretary gave their reports.

Coming events for April are the Easter Seal Campaign, Easter Egg Hunt for the Day Care Center, and making Easter favors.

The Talent Show and County Demonstrations are being rescheduled for a later date. Mrs. Everline told us the Reddy Foods contest is March 31 and we will have a practice for this on March 26 at Prospect Church at 7:00. Also the members who sew should get ready for the Dress Revue. Our club is also making plans for a bus trip this summer. Mrs. Everline and some members told the club about our 4-H Camp Barnes which is held in June.

Kelley Ryan's health report for March was called, "If the Shoe Fits, Wear It." The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served by Denise Cain and Ron Wright.

Members of the Lake Forest team placed first in the State Competition. Members of the team and individual placings were: Theresa Carter, 1st place; Bruce Eccleston, 4th place; Genia Gerardi, 5th place; and Terri Layton, team alternate. Team coach was Mike Coverdale.

Now's the time to control Johnsongrass

Johnsongrass is a sturdy, perennial grass plant that thrives well and spreads rapidly. It reduces crop yields, increases the cost of producing a crop, creates ill will among neighbors and is a serious burden to farmers.

Since 1970, it has been unlawful to knowingly contaminate uninfested land and to knowingly allow Johnsongrass to grow to a height of 24 inches. If your croplands do have some Johnsongrass, you now have a good arsenal of weapons to help combat this costly weed.

Johnsongrass control can be achieved by:
1. Avoiding the spread of Johnsongrass on machinery.
2. Using tillage techniques that enhance the kill of Johnsongrass rhizomes. Fall plowing and chisel plowing are examples.
3. Using herbicides properly to kill existing Johnsongrass stands and prevent new seedlings from germinating. Roundup, a very effective Johnsongrass killer can be used in several methods to kill existing Johnsongrass. There are several herbicides that can be used for several crops to prevent germination of Johnsongrass.

Farmers warned of potential soil erosion

The Delmarva poultry industry recently announced that substantial growth in broiler production is under way. This is expected to create a market for an additional 20,000 acres of corn and 23,000 more acres of soybeans on the peninsula. Observers predict this annual rate of growth will continue, at least for the short run.

With favorable soybean prices in the picture for 1979 as the result of this increased demand, local soybean acreage may well increase. In some cases farmers may plant beans on land that might not or should not otherwise be tilled. Soybeans have a loosening effect on soils and this can lead to serious erosion problems on some of this land unless precautions are taken, warns University of Delaware extension agronomist Dr. William Mitchell.

The soil-loosening effect of the soybean is related to its tap root system and the ease and quickness with which both root and top growth decompose, explains the agronomist. The plant is relatively high in nitrogen, which makes it an ideal food supply for the soil microorganisms which are largely responsible for converting it to humus. As a result, soybean straw or dead top growth doesn't provide the protective soil cover or the soil binding qualities associated with corn stover and roots. Because of this the soil is easily worked, but it is also easily dislodged by wind and water.

Erosion is less likely to occur on large, level fields than it is on portions of fields next to streams where the slope increases and runoff is encouraged by the lay of the land. These fields are especially difficult to manage if the topography is irregular as it is around some of the fingers of land in eastern Kent County, for example. In such cases it is almost impossible to avoid having some of your rows oriented up and down the slope.

Fields like these have suffered from erosion for decades, and in recent years some have been retired because of lack of topsoil and lost fertility. Now, with a better price and demand picture for soybeans, some of this land will go back into cultivation.

When this happens, Mitchell urges growers to consider some of the practical ways to hold the soil in place in these highly vulnerable fields. Not only will this protect valuable topsoil-it will also usually increase yields.

The first step in preventing soil loss in these fields is to avoid fall plowing. Soil losses are two to three times greater following soybeans than corn, and the problem is much more serious when the land is fall plowed.

Where land is sloping and subject to severe erosion, the agronomist also recommends adoption of a no-tillage program.

Cultivation can be disastrous-especially when rows are placed up and down the slope. High-intensity summer storms can be especially destructive. Avoid this problem by using drilled instead of row-planted soybeans. This will eliminate cultivation and also provide a complete canopy somewhat earlier in the season. The canopy will dissipate some of the force of heavy rain which otherwise would strike the soil surface directly, dislodge soil particles, cause puddling, and trigger an erosion problem.

Natural waterways should be grassed or sodded and taken out of production.

Your best solution is not to trap the eroding soil as it moves off the field onto a grassed waterway or diversion ditch, but to keep it from moving off the field in the first place. You can do this most effectively with no-tillage, points out Mitchell. In most cases, when the soil stays put, your fertilizer materials and pesticides will also remain where they belong. And at the same time you control erosion, organic matter or humus will be accumulating in the soil. The result of such conservation measures should be increased yields and profits.

Statement from the Soybean Assoc.

American Soybean Association (ASA) leaders meeting in Washington, D.C. have reaffirmed with government leaders ASA's policy against allowing soybeans to be planted on setaside acres.

"ASA Board members and state association presidents have met with Congressional and governmental leaders all week," said ASA president Merlyn Groot. "We have voiced our opposition to some of the current government discussions that would allow soybeans to be planted on land diverted from other crops. Soybean farmers believe this action would be counterproductive to the interests of farmers and consumers because in the long term it would add to the problems of inflation. If soybeans were planted on setaside acres, the resulting lower soybean prices would actually lower soybean production. As a result, the lower supplies would increase prices in the future."

Conservation program takes new direction

Funds totaling $59,584 have been allocated for the Agricultural Conservation Program in Kent County, and 42 farmers are participating thus far.

Primary concern is with saving soil, improving woodlands, keeping lakes and streams clean, and cleaning up after natural disasters damage farmland. The purpose of the program is to "identify conservation problems, encourage farmers to take action to correct those problems and, where needed, assist them with cost-share payments."

Make this the year of the strawberry in your garden

It's not too early to make plans for raising some of everybody's favorite fruit--strawberries.

This popular small fruit is easy to grow, says University of Delaware extension garden specialist Dave Tatnall. Strawberries take up little space, thrive with ordinary care, have few serious pest problems, and can produce amazingly big crops--at least a pint from each original plant.

You can plant strawberries as soon as the ground is easily worked in early spring. Late March through mid-April is the best time.

Fifty or 75 plants are usually adequate for the average family. Buy only stock certified "virus-free."

Select a sunny, well-drained location for your berry patch. It could be part of your vegetable garden. Prepare the soil as you would for any garden--spade or rototill and level the surface. When working the ground, mix in some fresh mushroom soil, compost or similar organic matter. Then spread about three pounds (six cups) of a 5-10-10 or 5-10-5 fertilizer every 100 square feet and thoroughly rake this in.

Set the plants in rows four feet apart, with 18-24 inches between plants in the row. Make holes big enough so that the roots are not crowded. And be sure the crowns (bases) of the plants are level with the soil surface. Press the soil firmly around each plant, then give it a pint of water or liquid fertilizer.

Don't get too excited over dreams of lush berries from your garden this summer, though, cautions Tatnall. You should remove all the flowers this first year (except for everbearers), he explains. This encourages more vigorous plant growth, and will result in greater yield next year. Allow all runners to develop until early fall. Keep rows about 24 inches wide, with a 24-inch clearance between them. Hoe or hand weed your strawberry plants frequently and thoroughly.

Spring tasks for horseowners

Most horses lead a less active life during the cold winter season, so when spring comes, you'll need to get your horse ready for more intensive use.

Now is the time to trim your horse's hooves and reshoe him if necessary. Also, treat the animal for both internal and external parasites. In addition, it is important to vaccinate all horses to protect them against the diseases tetanus, encephalomyelitis and possibly influenza.

Inspect, repair and condition all pieces of equipment. Saddles and all leather straps should be cleaned, treated with neats-foot oil, and cleaned again with saddle soap.

Disinfect saddle blankets or cloths against bacteria, fungus and insects. Wash once then soak in disinfectant. Wash several times more and rinse thoroughly.

Tip from DPI

It has been brought to our attention that the use of PVC type (plastic) pipe for gas lines is not permissible above the ground inside buildings. Metallic pipe must be used for this type of installation. We have heard that there are a few such installations in poultry houses. In the interest of safety, compliance with the law as well as insurance requirements, these installations should be changed. If you are building a new house or remodeling, be sure to specify metal piping for gas lines.

County Approves Bond Sale For Home Mortgage Program

by Grace Thackeray
 GEORGETOWN - Approval of bond sale by the Sussex County Council March 13 puts into effect a low-interest home mortgage program for county residents.

Proceeds from the initial $20.9 million sale of bonds will be used for mortgages carrying an interest rate of 8.5 percent and will be available to persons with annual gross income up to $30,000.

Buyers are already lined up for the March 29 bond sale, according to county administrator Joseph T. Conaway. Mortgage applicants need not wait, however, to contact one of the seven lending institutions participating in the mortgage program.

The seven banks and lending companies approved by the county council are: Sussex Trust Co. in all county locations; Colonial Mortgage Service Co. and Fidelity Bond and Mortgage Co., both in Philadelphia; Delaware Mortgage Service Co. and Lomas and Nettleton Co., both in Wilmington; First Federal Mortgage Co., Newark; and First Shore Federal Savings and Loan Association, Salisbury, Md. Wilmington Trust Co., acting as trustee in administering bond money to the banking institutions, will not lend mortgage money to applicants. The county is proceeding with its mortgage program despite official state order that the county's plan be scrapped since the Delaware Division of Housing is effecting a similar statewide program.

Under the state program, proceeds from $20 to $30 million in revenue bonds would be made available to families with incomes up to $16,000 or $22,000, depending on the number of persons in the family.

County officials believe their program will be more appealing to home buyers because of the higher annual income criterion. Also, sources have indicated that the state anticipates a half-percent higher interest rate on loans.

Wise Home Buying Helps Avoid Heartache

Purchasing a new home is no casual investment. It's probably the biggest buy you'll ever make.

It pays to look first at every angle of the deal. Making a poor choice could be the most regrettable financial error of your life.

According to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, two out of every three buyers select a used house. HUD's free booklet, Wise Home Buying, can help make the house hunting a little easier, whether you're looking for a new house or an old one. For a free copy of the booklet, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 657G, Pueblo, CO 81009.

The old rules about home buying are changing with the times. Bankers used to say you should never pay more than two to two-and-one-half times your annual family income for your home.

Another way of putting it was, don't budget more than one-fourth your gross monthly salary for monthly housing expenses, including heat, utilities, and maintenance.

Today, some families are spending more than 30 percent of their gross monthly income on housing. But to make a realistic decision, consider what you're willing to give up and what you're not. And don't get in over your head.

You'll also need cash for the down-payment and closing costs. Quite often these can be greater than you expect. Closing costs will include the title search, transfer taxes, insurance, and origination fees. Be sure your contract specifies who will pay for each item — buyer or seller.

When you shop for financing, be as thorough as you were for house shopping. There are many ways to finance a home. You may be able to assume the remaining mortgage on an existing house. This will make closing costs considerably less, and the interest rate on the old mortgage may be much lower than prevailing rates.

Or you can look into mortgages that are insured by HUD-FHA or guaranteed by the Veterans's Administration. If you are an eligible veteran, FHA-insured financing generally enables home-buyers to make a smaller downpayment, and frequently to make lower monthly payments. You can check with your local FHA office for details.

Finally, you may choose conventional financing from a savings-and-loan association, a commercial bank, a mortgage banker, a saving bank or an insurance company. Just shop around, and compare interest rates, down-payment, fees, and terms of repayment.

Ready to take the plunge into homeownership? In most cases it is a good idea to use a real estate broker. Multiple listings and your broker's ability to pre-screen houses can save you many a wild goose chase. The broker may even help you get financing. And, the usual 6-10 percent commission is paid by the seller.

Keeping Household Records: What To Keep Or Discard

Hoping your cancelled checks from 1952 will become a family heirloom? Or are you just afraid to throw away receipts or cancelled checks you might need some day?

It's hard to know what records to keep and what you can safely discard. If you're re-organizing your family or household records (and most of us are now that tax time is here again, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has revised a pamphlet to help you.

It's called Keeping Household Records: What to Discard, and it tells you what you should keep for tax purposes, and what you can safely throw away. To get your copy, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 638F, Pueblo, CO 81009.

Every family household has some important records, like birth certificates, marriage certificates, or citizenship records. These should be kept in a safe deposit box you can rent inexpensively at your local bank or savings and loan company.

The box rental can be claimed as an income tax deduction if you store documents from investment properties or securities in it. But the box should not be used as a catch all for souvenirs

A home filing system is necessary to help home owners locate tax records, receipts and warranty information. But not all records have to be kept indefinitely, and not all should be kept at home. Home owners should take the time to learn what's important to keep. Photo by Ronald MacArthur.

Planning Makes Moving Easier

If you've ever moved an entire household to another location, you know what a traumatic experience it can be. Few people can afford to leave town beforehand and let professional movers take care of all the packing and unpacking.

What little can be done to eliminate the initial pain of leaving familiar surroundings, Barbara DeMesse, extension home economist at the University of Delaware, suggests that you ease the strain on the nerves and the wallet through advance planning. Whether you move locally or to another city or state, there are several ways to simplify what seems like an endlessly complicated process.

Ms. DeMesse recommends starting with items that can be packed days or weeks in advance, such as books. Moving experts say that books should be packed in oblong cardboard cartons, rather than the large square type available at supermarkets.

Oblong boxes hold the weight of the books better, and the movers can take more than one at a time. The large square boxes usually have to be carried separately.

As you finish packing each carton, label it with a brief description of the contents and the room. It should be placed in when it reaches your new location.

This can be done in advance of moving day and eliminates much unnecessary hauling at the other end. You can also hasten the packing process by taking up carpets and taking down draperies. Mirrors and pictures should also be removed from walls at least one day before the movers arrive.

If you pack these large, breakable items yourself, place them in cardboard, tie them securely and put them upright against a wall.

If your major appliances are going with you, arrange for an electrician or plumber to disconnect them the day before.

It is important to defrost, clean and dry your refrigerator thoroughly in advance. Leave the door open and unsafeguard against mildew and unpleasant odors.

Before starting to empty cabinets and chests, pack all the odds and ends in the corners of each room so that you will have more space to stack cartons.

When packing china, glassware and dishes, separate them with newspapers and stand them up on a base of linen. Dishes, like eggs, are less likely to break when stood on end rather than packed flat. Packed cartons should weigh no more than 50 pounds.

Newspapers make good packing material, but Ms. DeMesse does not recommend using them to wrap silverware because newspaper hastens the tarnishing process.

Don't pack jewelry, money or important papers. It is best to move valuable personal items of this kind yourself.

Sometimes it's necessary to store furniture for a short time before setting into your new home. Be sure to check the cost well in advance.

Unless your mover is able to give you a few extra days of intransit storage, you may have to pay an additional loading and unloading charge.

Wearing apparel should be thoroughly cleaned if you expect to store it for any length of time. And

Waging War On Lawn Weeds

A weed-free lawn is a rare sight indeed. Most of us will never have one, but that doesn't keep us from wishing for a little more "real" grass in our lawns, just the same.

Somewhat, unwanted weeds always seem to flourish better than the beautiful grass we want to grow there. Early spring is an excellent time to deal with these persistent lawn pests.

To help homeowners cope more successfully with them, University of Delaware extension garden specialist Dave Tattal has drawn up a list of 25 plants he considers to be your lawn's worst enemies.

He's put this list in a fact sheet, together with some suggested controls for them.

A look at his inventory helps to explain why the average home gardener gets so frustrated trying to grow an attractive lawn.

For one thing, the weeds you're fighting fall into several categories, each requiring a different kind of control.

There are annual broadleaf weeds like henbit, chickweed, knotweed, and black medic. There are perennial broadleaf weeds such as cinquefoil, dandelion, ground ivy, nutgrass, plantain and sorrel.

There are annual grassy weeds like annual bluegrass, crabgrass and foxtail. And finally there are the perennial grassy weeds, including bentgrass, Bermudagrass and coarse fescue.

Keeping your lawn properly limed and fertilized and the soil well-drained is your first line of defense against many of these pests.

Handweeding will also help in some cases. But for serious infestations you may have to go to some type of chemical control.

In order for herbicide treatments to be successful, however, the chemicals you use must be targeted for the weeds you're trying to get rid of.

Some herbicides work selectively on broadleaf weeds only; some provide selective control for crabgrass and other annual grasses; while in the case of perennial weed grasses the only available materials are those which will kill everything in your lawn, including the grass.

In his fact sheet Tattal discusses these various herbicides and their limitations. He then goes on to provide a description and control recommendations for each of the 25 weeds you're most likely to encounter in your lawn.

Vets Taking Advantage Of VA Housing Loans

WILMINGTON - Veterans used fewer Veterans Administration housing loans during 1978 than during 1977, but during the past three years housing valued at $38 billion has been bought by veterans under the loan guaranty program, Robert J. Ryan, director of the Wilmington VA Medical Center reports.

Since 1965, housing bought by Vietnam veterans under the VA program has totalled about $47 billion, Ryan said. This younger group of veterans has bought 1.8 million houses.

Housing guaranteed by VA during the past three years exceeds by nearly $10 billion the assistance provided veterans during the entire decade of the 1960s.

According to VA loan guaranty data, nationwide housing starts rose slightly during the third quarter to an annual rate of 2.07 million units. VA housing starts have shown the same general pattern as nationwide data.

On a seasonally adjusted annual basis, VA starts reached 135,000 in October. This was the largest annual rate recorded since April.

This means that the total VA housing starts for 1978 should be only slightly lower than 1977, which was the highest total in 21 years.

Veterans interested in home buying through the VA loan guaranty program should contact their nearest VA regional office, veterans service organization or veterans assistance center.

Insuring Safety In A Mobile Home

When considering the purchase of a mobile home, safety should be a prime concern. Mobile homes are required by law to conform to federal standards. However, the Better Business Bureau cautions consumers to be responsible buyers by thoroughly investigating before making their purchase to help ensure years of safe and comfortable living.

All mobile homes built for sale in the United States after June 15, 1976 must conform to the National Standard for Mobile Homes established by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

This federal standard covers nine basic parts of home construction:

- Planning considerations.
- Including ceiling heights, light ventilation and exit facilities.
- Fire safety (for example, smoke detection systems).
- Body and frame testing, such as structural load tests and test procedures for roof trusses.
- Thermal protection.
- Plumbing systems.
- Heating, cooking and fuel burning systems.
- Electrical systems.
- Transportation, covering such areas as design of the house to withstand rigors of highway movement.

If the home is built according to this standard, the following displayed items will assure the buyer that it is built as specified:

- 1) A seal affixed to the house specifying that the manufacturer has built it in compliance with the HUD standard:

- 2) A diagram provided by the manufacturer showing the required number and position of placement piers as well as the positioning for anchoring devices.
- 3) A certificate posted inside the home attesting to the performance levels that can be expected from the heating system within a specified range of outside temperature and wind velocity.

4) Maps indicating the zone (North, Middle, or Hurricane) for which the home has been built, and specifying the degree of severe weather the roof can be expected to withstand, provided the home has been properly anchored in accordance with the manufacturer's specifications.

Do not automatically consider a unit to be satisfactory because it conforms to the federal standard. Go one step further and inspect the home.

Ask questions about the areas covered by the standards. Ask to see the manufacturer's printed literature with the unit's specifications.

These will explain the construction of the mobile home, i.e. vapor barrier, insulation, heat ducts, etc. The more known about a unit, the better.

Important safety features to check for in a home involve precautions against fire and wind damage and include:

- Two doors to the outside easily opened from the inside and located far enough apart so that at least one will provide exit in case of fire.
- "Kickout" windows in each bedroom that are large enough to allow exit.
- A smoke detector with an alarm located just outside the sleeping area.

Each buyer of a mobile home must be given an owner's manual which provides information concerning proper home maintenance, avoidance of potential safety hazards and remedies available under the National Home Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974. Be sure to read and understand the entire manual and follow the instructions.

The Better Business Bureau reminds consumers that, after buying a mobile home, the responsibility of keeping it safe is an ongoing job.

and unimportant papers. When does a paper become unimportant enough to discard? Well, for tax purposes, generally you can safely discard receipts and tax deduction records after three years.

The Internal Revenue Service has three years in which to audit your federal income tax return. But the limit is even longer under special circumstances.

If you fail to report more than 25 percent of your gross income, the government has six years to collect the tax or start legal proceedings. And, if you file a fraudulent return or if you fail to file a return, there are no time limitations.
