Melvin suffers heart attack at Annual Citizens Meeting —Dies later in hospital

by David F. Coady
HARRINGTON - The Annual Citizens Meeting held last Friday ended abruptly when former City Councilman Curtis Melvin suffered a stroke while delivering a campaign speech. Melvin was given CPR by three registered nurses and an off-duty state policeman. An ambulance arrived within minutes of being summoned. Melvin died in Milford Memorial Hospital of an apparent heart attack. He was on the last sentence of his prepared speech when

The meeting had started with Mayor Al Mann delivering the "State of the City" address. The mayor cited the adoption of the new City Charter, the opening of a new motel and restaurant in the city, erection of a new city warehouse and garage and the installing of an 8" water main as the major accomplishments in the city during the past year. Mayor Mann said that the goals for the coming year are the updating of the municipal code and which elections are scheduled...... more improvements to the water lines

City Manager Norma Short gave the financial report. Copies of this report were given out to the public. The city manager also gave the sewage plant report and the streets department report in the absence of the responsible officials. Police Chief Carl McIlroy gave the police department report. The mayor then mentioned the districts in second, fifth and sixth.

The mayor introduced Sue Ellen Dennis as a candidate for the Second Election District. Dennis described herself as being 31 years old and employed by the Lake Forest School District. "I've done my homework and will do the best I can if elected." Dennis

Curtis Melvin was then introduced as a candidate to win back the seat he recently resigned. Melvin began in Dover while on call in Harrington his speech by saying that he was angry with himself for having resigned. He told Sue Ellen Dennis that...."We may have both wasted our time in filing for the council seat from the second ward, because no official city records indicates the seat has been vacated.

Melvin continued with his recent attacks on the operation of the City Police Department. He claims that allowing a city patrol car to be parked was wrong. Melvin claims that the state police could respond faster. He also questioned the purchase of seven raincoats for a three-man force. Melvin implied that Harrington's old raincoats are being worn by the Felton police.

Melvin was speaking about the prospects of a new city hall when he suffered a stroke. A prayer was offered for Melvin and the meeting adjourned shortly thereafter.

Du Pont pointed out that, since he was first elected in 1976, revenues derived from personal income taxes had increased from thirty-seven percent of total state revenues to nearly fifty percent, and that "conservative" projections put the figure over fifty percent in the next few years.

"If Delaware is to maintain its competitive edge in the future, and if it is not to become once again a hightaxing, high-spending state which closes the door on economic growth and opportunity for its citizens, then a tax cut must be a part of our 1984 legislative agenda," the Governor said. Du Pont did not, however, make any specific proposals for a tax cut, but suggested changes in other taxes such a franchise taxes, and called on the members of the General Assembly to put aside political differences for a discussion of how "to restore our

A salute to Jehu and Lillian Camper

For nearly eighty years Jehu Camper and assembled objects out of wood in a scenes and whimsical impressions of life in rural Delaware. Jehu will tell you he whittles for pleasure. He has never thought of himself as a commercial craftsman and does not sell his work. Even so, he is a man with a mission, for he is at heart an untrained historian and teacher who provides a painless education for younger viewers through his scenes of rural Delaware's

Through his wooden sculptures and assemblages the past is brought into the present and conversations develop between young and old. He created this wooden world as a supplement to the written word, as an historical resource and window to the past: "In traveling around our neighborhood, I would observe that the things our forefathers had used to make their livelihood were being destroyed. I knew that someday some people would want to see these things in their original form, so I conceived the idea of making replicas out of wood."

Most of Mr. Camper's works focus on of Harrington, Delaware, has whittled the lifestyle of turn-of-the-century rural Delaware. Small stores, domestic remarkable one-man effort to capture scenes, and amusing incidents are recreated in wood in amazing detail. Actually and adequately expressive of their time, they form a genuine contribution to the cultural history of our state. Jehu says, "Most of the things I make are in the rough, crude. But they represent some part of the folklore living our ancestors did when they were here on earth."

Lillian Camper, a superb craftswoman, has been caning chairs for nearly thirty years. She has been an active participant with Jehu in local heritage days, regional folk festivals, and the now-defunct folk-artists in the schools program. She has also assisted Jehu in his projects, making caned seats and upholstery for miniature furniture. On January 20 at 7:00 p.m. the Dover Public Library and the Delaware Folklife Project will jointly sponsor a "Salute to The Campers." The program will open with a slide-tape show produced by the History-Media Center of the University of Delaware. The [Continued on page 2]

Tribute to Curtis Melvin

Curtis Melvin, 55, of Harrington died Annual Citizens Meeting. Curtis could never be considered a quitter. He left high school during World War II and joined the Navy. Upon returning, Curtis went back to high school to earn his diploma. He was active in the Harrington Volunteer Fire Company, the Lions Club and CKRT Post 7 of the American Legion. He retired after working 32 years with the Diamond State Telephone Company.

After serving two years on Harrington's City Council, Melvin submitted his resignation. Not one to be known as a "quitter", he filed papers to win back his seat. As a tribute to his memory, herein is Curtis Melvin's final speech:

"I filed for re-election to council for two reasons. 1.] Candidates for election are given the opportunity to speak or make comments; 2. | I have been angry with myself for walking away from a problem. Walking away did not solve the problem, it got worse.

To Sue Ellen - We may have both wasted our time in filing for the council seat from the second ward, because no official city records indicate the seat has been vacated.

By charter of the city of Harrington, the city council is authorized to operate a city police dept., set the number thereof, salaries, etc. In my opinion this council is not living up to the charter, the police dept. is running Harrington until recently has never had a police chief that was a full time administrator, have never needed one and do not need one now.

How much administrative time is required for a three-man police force. [20 hours tops for a month, less than 1 hour a day].

Last November I stated that vacation time should be monitored. What happened? In December over $900 was paid to one man for unused vacation time which in my mind could have been taken without any disruption to the

That $900 would have bought a lot of chairs for those of you who are standing tonight. Why has a city patrol car been parked in Dover more than it has in Harrington for the last couple of weeks. [On Call - Personnel policy] [State Police Why was the most expensive vehicle to operate used, when a vehicle that operates for about 1/2 the cost has been parked in the garage out back or some place. I haven't seen it for a month until today.

Why does one buy 7 raincoats at $60 each for a 3-man police force. The old coats must not have been in too bad a shape, some were given to the Felton Police force and they are good enough part of. This would have benefited the for them, but not Harrington.

When was the last time you have seen a city police patroling the streets of town. If you live on route 13, you may have seen some patrol. Seems that Rt. 13 gets about 90% of what patrol we

Many people have mentioned to me that they call the police dept. and leave word to be called back, but never get a call [poor public relations]. [I could write many pages on complaints from court 6]. I did not want to get involved in court business.

The charter also states that the police commissioner shall investigate all complaints against the police department and report to council. On November 9, 1983, I received what I considered a very important complaint against the police department and also the city council. On November 16, I wrote the chief a letter of inquiry which contained 8-9 items that I felt needed discussion by council with the hope that we could resolve some of these problems in a mutual atmosphere. The letter I received back did not answer the questions, instead it was more like a smoke screen. It was from this and other problems. The Mayor called a special executive session meeting on November 30, 1983. At this meeting when I attempted to ask some of the questions so that we could work toward resolving these problems, I was shouted down and accused of trying to crucify someone, which was not the case at all, but I never got the chance to prove my intentions. This was not the first time a similar situation had occurred in executive sessions in the last year and a half. The truth of the matter is that I had a multi-point program to present to council for discussion, and maybe adopt at least city but most of all would help the police department | Discuss Academy $5000 a man] and save city money.

I could go on with many more problems but I'm sure I'm boring councilman Henry with my nit-picking, as he has often said.

In closing I want to point out one thing that gets to all of your pocket-

Last year's budget ending 9/30:

Combined property & Capitation

$114,246 taxes received Police department expenses

$119,304 [actual] Theoretically without a police force, there could be no taxes in Harrington, instead a $5000 surplus.

I certainly do not advocate this, but the bottom line here is that city council is responsible to the taxpayers of this

The police department is supposed to be responsible to council. Council should establish policies that treat all employees equal. This is what I have been trying to accomplish for the past 2 years and will continue for one more year IF I'm re-elected.

One more thing - CITY HALL - Last year at about the same time city hall was moved to this location, the building comm. was in negotiations on a plan at nominal cost to the public that I firmly believe the vast majority of the citizens would approve.

This plan and negotiations were almost sabotaged in a council meeting by a member of the building commit-tee. I hope....""....(It was at this point that Curtis Melvin collapsed. Just six words short of finishing his speech. The speech ended...."....these negotiations can proceed. Thank you."

Peer pressure hooks many kids on drugs

Editor's note: This is the ninth in a series of articles on alcohol and drug use and abuse, mainly among teen-

Most teenagers find it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to cope with peer pressure.

"That's the biggest reason it's done (drinking alcoholic beverages and taking drugs) — the peer pressure. They figure the other kids are going to get on them and make fun of them. They want to fit in," said state trooper Sgt. Harold Brode who heads the Youth Division for Kent County at Troop 3 in

"In school, the drugs are more prevalent. It's easier to bring drugs to school than a pint of whiskey. Overall, though, the drugs and the alcohol problems are about the same," added

Most of the experts agree with Brode. It is the near-unanimous opinion of the experts that a youngster is first introduced to drugs and alcohol by his friends. The old-time scare stories of a sinister "pusher" lurking around schoolyards in an attempt to hook the kids on drugs are largely illusory. This part of the pusher's work is done for him by the kids' "friends." But once a kid starts using drugs, a pusher may try to induce him to experiment with more dangerous drugs.

Many adolescents try pot or other drugs out of curiosity. Others do it as an act of defiance or rebellion. But, in most cases, it is simply the by William T. Ficka and David F. desire to "belong," to conform to group standards.

> Many teenagers don't have the selfconfidence or sense of security that would enable them to resist the powerful peer pressure. Peer pressure is strongest during the > high school years and usually coincides with the weakening of parental authority. It is during these years that most youngsters first challenge the parental 'absolutes." Drug-using teenagers tend to associate with each other. Occasionally, a group of drug users will include someone who is "straight" but this is the exception rather than the rule. These groups usually have special hangouts where drugs are often bought and sold.

"We constantly check hangouts," said Brode.

Juvenile offenders are usually given help through the counseling services of the various social agencies. Peer groups engender intense loyalty in its members. It is the rare youngster who will risk being called a "fink" or "narc" by reporting the wrongdoing of another member. A report of the American family entitled Raising Children in a Changing Society (Yankelovich, Skelley and White, Inc.) indicates that drugs top the list of influences that make it most difficult for parents to raise children. Teenagers polled in a 1977 Gallup

Youth Survey listed "drug use and abuse" as the number one problem facing their generation. Delaware State Police records indicate that there were 490 juvenile drug arrests made in the state in 1982. Between January and September, 1983, 308 juveniles were arrested on

Most experts advise the parents to take a firmer hand and to establish high standards and clear guidelines. Marsha Manatt, in her book Parents, Peers and Pot advises "Parents, remember, it is better to occasionally feel like the local crank than to often feel helpless — especially when the welfare of your children is at stake. You can make a difference. And if you don't, who else will?"

Marion MacDonald retires

When Marion MacDonald came to them. stay long. Her husband, Ronald, had to be here temporarily on business, and she mainly came along for the ride. But all that changed when she met

University of Delaware Cooperative Extension Service. He had been looking for an enthusiastic young 4-H agent for Kent County, and was impressed when he met MacDonald. The daughter of an extension plant pathologist, she had earned a B.S. in home economics two years previously at Oregon State University. After that she had worked as an Oregon extension home demonstration agent with 4-H responsibilities.

Happily for all concerned, MacDonald accepted the job in Delaware, and her husband found work here, too. She filled the position admirably for the next 30 years, until her retirement in December. In all those years, she never lost the enthusiasm that first won her the job.

MacDonald says her twelfth trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago was every bit as exciting as the first, because she was always able to experience it through the wide eyes of the Delaware teens who had never been there before. She also never tired of watching timid youngsters blossom like sunflowers at Delaware State 4-H

When MacDonald joined the University of Delaware extension service, she was the only female 4-H agent in the state, and from a non-farm background to boot. Not surprisingly, some 4-H farm boys in Smyrna decided to have a little fun at her expense, challenging her to teach them how to achieve corn yields of 400 bushels per acre. She promised to look into the matter for for long.

Delaware in 1953, she didn't expect to Though agricultural production was not her strongest suit, when that sort of work needed doing she pitched right in and learned on the job. At the same time, she expanded the Kent County Dr. Samuel Gwinn, director of the 4-H program to embrace non-farm youngsters and non-agricultural activities. Under her leadership the number of youngsters participating in public speaking contests and the annual fashion revue grew considerably.

Two generations of youngsters enjoyed MacDonald's humorous poems and learned all manner of handicrafts under her wing. Many grew up to be volunteer 4-H leaders. One, Joy Gooden, is now second in command of the state 4-H program.

MacDonald's unstinting efforts on behalf of youth have not gone unrecognized. In 1971 she was the first woman in the nation to receive the Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of Extension Agricultural Agents. In 1976 she was given a similar award by the National Association of Extension 4-H agents. In 1980 she was presented with the Community Citizen Award by the Capital Grange of Dover.

Now that she has retired, MacDonald has no thought of going back to the West Coast. "Delaware has made a home for us," she says. "We love it here and plan to stay.

She is looking forward to relaxing, doing needlework, working with ceramics and other crafts, and spending more time with husband. But her friends, neighbors, and fellow extension professionals will not let her sit idle for long. Already they're pushing her to become a 4-H volunteer. As everyone knows--including MacDonald herself--she won't be able to stay away

The week in Harness Racing

-- A Round-up

by Harry G. Farrow, Jr.

The Meadowlands signed a two-year pact with standardbred horsemen, drew the opening night Cam Fella Invitational and staged its first morning of qualifying races last Tuesday as final steps were taken to open the 194-night harness meeting on Friday, Jan. 6, which drew a crowd of 28,000. The agreement with the Standardbred Breeders and Owners Association of New Jersey included provisions for the simulcasting of Meadowlands races to Atlantic City through May 19th.

J.J.'s Cornell, trained by John Turner and driven by Herve Filion, drew the rail in the opening night feature and won the $35,000 Cam Fella Invitational in 1:56.4 which coincided with the last public appearance of the two-time Horse of the Year. Cam Fella, who won his last 28 starts and more than $2 million in 1983, has been retired to JEF's Standardbred Country Club in Columbus, N.J., but was paraded before the Meadowlands public on Friday night and honored in winner's circle ceremonies.

The Cam Fella Pace drew a field of 10 free-for-allers, including Perfect Out, the last horse to beat Cam Fella (last May). Another entrant, Monkey Wrench, finished second to Cam in his final career start on Dec. 10 at Greenwood Raceway.

J.J.'s Cornell was made the 3-1 morning line favorite by Meadowlands linesmaker Charlie Singer. The handsome chestnut son of Nero made 37 starts last year, posting nine firsts, eight second and six thirds for earnings

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA - A record Pearson. purse of $1,164,698 has been posted for the Daytona 500 NASCAR Winston Cup Grand National stock car race on February 19.

The winner's share of the 500 purse could reach $150,000, depending on contingency awards and lap prize money. Cale Yarborough won $119,600 for his last-lap victory last year.

The grand National drivers open the 1983 season with Busch Pole Qualifying for the Daytona 500 on Sunday, February 12. The Daytona 500 field will be determined by a pair of UNO 125-Mile Qualifying events on Febrary 16, each paying a total of $100,000 with $20,000 to each winner.

Record purses for non-Grand National events during the Daytona International Speedway's annual Speed Weeks will greet competitors during the February kickoff of 1984 automobile

The largest increase will be for the Goody's 300 Winston Racing Series event on Saturday, February 18, for Busch Late Model Sportsman cars of NASCAR. That will jump $31,000 to $231,925, the richest Late Model Sportsman purse in NASCAR history. Last year's purse was an even

The Darlington Dash Series cars, which will compete in the February 17 Florida 200, will be after about $70,000, up from $65,000 last year, and the February 12 ARCA 200 Talldega Super Car Series race will offer close to $70,000 compared to $64,115 last year.

Grand National stock car drivers aren't waiting until the opening of Speed Weeks to find out how their 1984 rides are working as virtually every one of the sport's big names will test at the Daytona International Speedway during January.

The top speed reported so far has been a 197-plus lap by Nei Bonnett, who this year will drive a Junior Johnson-prepared Chevrolet. Others hitting high numbers have included his teammate, Darrell Waltrip, and David Still to test are such drivers as Richard Petty, Cale Yarborough and Dale Earnhardt.

"I think the pole speed (for the Feb. 19 Daytona 500) will be right around 200 mph," said Waltrip. "I know I'd take 200 and let the rest aim at it."

Yarborough topped 200 last year on his first qualifying lap, but then crashed on his second round and Ricky Rudd ended up with the pole at 198.864

"It may be 200, but it won't be me," said Pearson. "I saw what Cale did at 200 last year. No, thanks."

Versatile Danny Ongais has entered the SunBank 24 at Daytona, which opens Speed Weeks Feb. 4-5. He'll have a pair of Lola Chevrolets....The unique Eastern El Interamericano race, which pairs South American stars with leaders on the Champion Spark Plug IMSA circuit, has completed its lineup. Teams were drawn out of a hat and 1983 champion Joe Varde will share his ride with Chile's Juan Carlos Ridolfi. Argentina's Formula 2 star Guillermo Maldonado will be paired with veteran Amos Johnson....Entry blanks for the Daytona 500 are in the mail and indicate a record posted purse of $1,164,698. Added monies are expected to push it close to $1.2 million, well above last year's record payout of $1,015,577. The purse for the Feb. 18 Goody's 300 late model sportsman race is also way up, to $231,000 from $200,000.....Racing's first national radio talk show debuts Jan. 10 with Bobby Allison as the guest. Birmingham announcer Eli Gold will be the host for the show, which will be carried by over 100 stations. International Speedway has been leased virtually every day in January by teams getting ready for Speed Weeks and the world's richest stock car race, the Feb. 19 Daytona 500. "It's cold back in North Carolina and it's warm here," says car owner Junior Johnson, "but we don't get a chance to really enjoy the weather. From the time we get up until the time we go to bed, we're at work.'

Driver David Pearson adds, "It's something you have to do. You can get more done in two days of testing than in all the practice sessions before the 500. Is it fun? Is any work fun?"

The list of Winston Cup Grand National drivers who have leased the track on various days during January reads like the sport's future Hall of Fame: Darrell Waltrip, Bobby Allison, Richard Petty, Cale Yarborough, Neil Bonnett, Dale Earnhardt. That's just a

Some did their work in December, such as Ron Bouchard.

"We came early because it was more convenient," says Bouchard. "If we hadn't felt satisfied then, we would have come back. With all that money on the line (the 500 purse is almost $1.2 million), you have to be ready when the time comes.'

The track is reserved through general manager John Riddle, and non-racers need not apply.

"A fraternity at the University of Florida chipped in once and tried to rent the track," says Riddle. "They wanted to come over and have some fun with their hot cars. We politely turned them down; the speedway is for racers only.'

A typical test day is a long one. The crew is in the garage area by 6:30 a.m., getting the car ready for the 8 a.m. opening, and drivers test until the 5

"But that isn't the whole day," says Junior Johnson, whose two-car Budweiser team has Waltrip and Bonnett in the driver's seats. "Then we all get together and go over what we've accomplished during the day, and what we hope to accomplish the next day." The all-day session is a grind. The driver takes the car out for a few laps of the 2.5-mile, high-banked trioval, adjustments, then goes out again.

"It's boring," says Waltrip. "Out for a couple of laps, back in and sit around. I guess I go out 10 times during the day. You're doing the same thing all the time. But it's the only way to get something done and figure out how you stand. No one else is on the track to get in your way, so you can try anything

"You really can't project a speed for qualifying, because the weather might be different and the track certainly will be different. You just try and get good speed, and get your car where it's comfortable for racing."

Bonnett says he looks forward to testing, particularly at this time of

"I haven't been in a race car since the last 1983 event at Riverside, Calif. (Nov. 20)," he says. "This is like baseball's spring training for me. I've been off 5-6 weeks and believe me, you just don't jump in a car and go over 190 mph.

"The car is ready -- heck, everything on it is new. But I need to get myself ready, to get back in shape. I need a tune-up more than the car does."

Pearson adds, "You come here wondering if your ideas will work. It's expensive to bring all these people to Daytona, but you have to do it.

"When Speed Weeks start, you can't set your own schedule. We practice in sessions then -- the Grand National time comes and you go out and discover a problem, then you come in and the crew makes adjustments. You'd like to go right back out and try the car, but then the sportsman cars might be on the track so you have to wait.

'If you lease the track, you can try and try and try. You can double-check everything. It's boring, but you learn a

The testing sessions will end in late January and then the track will close to prepare for the annual Speed Weeks, which opens Feb. 1 with practice for the SunBank 24 of Daytona for IMSA GT cars Feb. 4-5.

When Frank Leahy was coaching Notre Dame, his father-in-law, who had no interest in football, visited him before a big game.

Leahy's little boy came into the living room carrying a football. "Will you play football with me, Grandpa?" asked the boy.

"I don't know the first thing about football," answered the old man.

"That's funny," replied the youngster, "Daddy said when you kicked off that we could get a new car."
