Board proposes tax hike to boost teachers' salaries

district's Board of Education has been listening - or so it would seem.

The task force on January 30 put teacher's salaries at the top of a priority list for the district. On Monday night at its regular meeting, the Lake Forest Board of Education called for a referendum asking for a tax increase of $ .20 per $100.00 of the assessed value of real estate. The resolution adopted by the board proposed the money he set aside "...for the sole purpose of increasing salary, benefits and extra-duty pay..." for teachers.

The $ .20 rate hike, if approved,

Education has been talking, and the portion of the tax from $ .90 to $1.10 and bring the total tax rate up from $1.20 to $1.40. Since each additional penny in the tax gets the district on additional $5,000, the $ .20 would earn $100,000 per year.

The referendum will be held on May 8 along with the regular board election.

The board also discussed possible uses for the surplus dollars building up in the district's debt service account. On June 6, that surplus stood at $357,076.32. It should shrink to $304,337.37 by 1985-86 and grow again to $340,718.82 by 1987-88.

it should be used were subjects for disagreement. At any rate, a referendum would be required to get the money out of the debt service account and into the current expense fund would be required. It is likely that such a referendum may be added to the May 8 election agenda.

Several other events at Monday night's meeting impinged upon the board's difficulties in selecting priorities for the district.

1) The task force's emphasis on teacher salaries was underscored as the board accepted the resignation of How much of that money could be Dr. Paul Armstrong, chairman of the

He will go to William Penn, not far from his home, as soon as his replacement can be hired. The district will also need is retiring.

, Byrd hits campaign trail for Biden

The sainted names of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman and John F. Kennedy reverberated from the bunting-draped walls of Milford's Carlisle Fire Hall Monday night as some 500 Delaware Democrats turned out to hear U.S. Sen. Robert C. Byrd (D-W.Va.) speak in support of Delaware's Joseph R. Biden Jr.

Among the crowd in the jampacked hall were gubernatorial hopefuls William Quillen, Sherman Tribbitt and David Levinson. Byrd described Biden as a hard worker and an articulate speaker.

"He will go higher and higher and don't you think that isn't bread and butter for the people of Delaware,"

Byrd said. 'As long as Joe Biden is senator, you'll have three senators from Delaware. I'll be the third," he added.

Byrd criticized the Reagan administration on the national debt and cuts in education, school lunches and veteran's benefits.

Riden, who had been criticized by his Republican opponent John M. Burris on his Senate attendance record, was defended by Byrd.

"You can't be in two places at once,"

Biden, seeking his third term in the Senate, returned Sunday from the Soviet Union after three days of arms control talks with Soviet leaders.

Biden returned from the land of caviar and vodka to the domain of hot dogs and beer, which were dispensed freely at the rear of the fire hall.

When he added the name of Jimmy Carter to the hallowed list of Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy, a woman up front let go with an audible

"Did I hear someone boo?" asked Byrd. "Who booed?"

When the woman identified herself, Byrd said, "That lady has the courage of her convictions.'

He went on to say, "I didn't realize how good Truman was until Eisenhower became president."

The advance ballyhoo for the oldfashioned political rally played up Byrd's singing and fiddle-playing abilities which have been staples of his

West Virginia campaigns. Byrd explained that he "hasn't had the spirit to play" since his grandson was killed in an automobile accident on Easter Sunday, 1982.

Saturday night high speed chase leads to arrest

by Harry G. Farrow Jr.

HARRINGTON - A high speed chase on Saturday night between State Police cruisers, Harrington and Felton police patrol cars as well as the State police helicopter ended in arrest of Mac David Yowell. He was charged with multiple offenses including driving under the influence of alcohol, failure to stop at the command of a police officer, driving with no valid license, speeding including speeds of 100 mph in a 55 mile per hour zone, six counts of reckless endangering, theft of an automobile which was stolen from Continental Motors in Harrington, carrying a concealed deadly weapon and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Motorists driving north on U.S. 13 south of Woodside on Saturday night at approximately 11:30 witnessed State Police Cruisers driving at a high rate of speed. It was apparent that the motorist's car at the head of the pack was the one they were chasing as flashing lights from patrol cars lit up the night. The motorist turned out to be the car Mac David Yowell was Court of Commom Pleadriving. Yowell turned left off U.S. 13, covered a 24 mile route.

which would have been then travelling in an easterly direction onto County Route 426 (The Paradise Alley Road), and proceeded to the stop intersection of the Paradise Alley Road and the Killen Pond Road (384). Yowell then turned right and headed south on Route 384 toward the Harrington to Frederica Road when Frank Porter's store is located. Yowell then crossed the Harrington to Frederica Road and proceeded south again on Road 384. The 384 road leads to the Harrington to Milford road (Route 14). It was on Route 384 that the chase ended when the Yowell car crashed into a State Police cruiser.

One of the three people in the car was a three-year-old girl. Yowell who resides near Lincoln was taken to the Delaware Correctional Center near Smyrna to await arraignment in Magistrate Court #7 where bond was set at slightly over $16,000. Yowell was committed to Delaware Correctional Center to be held over for trial in the Court of Common Pleas. The chase

On the campaign trail... Biden has busy week downstate

by William T. Ficka

So you think you had a busy week! If your name is Joe Biden you most certainly did. But if it's not and you're like most of us, you were about as busy as a bear in hibernation compared to Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del.

Beginning with his town meeting in Bridgeville on February 13, Biden was as busy as a one-armed paper hanger. Let's follow the U.S. Senator on his whirlwind tour through lower

Delaware. On the night of his Bridgeville town meeting at the Woodbridge High School cafeteria Biden was unable to get a plane out of Washington because of the heavy fog. Not one to be deterred by a bit of fog, Biden hopped in his car and drove to Bridgeville. He arrived at the meeting only seven minutes late. About 60 people were on hand to greet him. He pointed out that he has held about 30 town meetings a year for the past nine years.

Biden fielded questions ranging from avian flu to social security with his usual aplomb.

Calling it "the single most important piece of economic legislation in year," Biden explained a tax proposal he has co-authored that would create a 10-to-30 percent tax schedule in contrast to the current schedule, which goes as high as 50 percent for those in upper income brackets.

Biden's tax proposal would permit only six deductions, which are: deductions for dependents, state and local taxes, mortgage interest, retirement plan investments, business expenses and charity contributions.

HE recommended an overhauling of the tax system that would eliminate "non-productive" tax shelters along with various loopholes and deductions. Commenting on Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign, Biden said, "I think Jesse Jackson is going to have a tremendous impact in the south."

He said Jackson "will end up being a good soldier," supporting the winner of the Democratic nomination.

"He sure is livening up the rhetoric, anyway," Biden laughed.

When we left the high school at 10:30 p.m., Biden was still answering questions from various groups who had approached him after the meeting was officially ended.

He woke up early Tuesday and headed for Milford where he spoke before the Chiefs of Police and met with members of a state agricultural advisory group for a business luncheon at Gary's Dockside Restaurant and Then Biden got back in his car and crossed over to Harrington where he visited The Harrington Journal and chatted and joked with editor and publisher Harry G. Farrow Jr.

While at the Journal word was received that Senator Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., had been trying to reach the peripatetic Biden. Biden returned the call and was reminded by Byrd that they were both scheduled to appear at "An Old-Fashioned Poliical Rally" in the Carlisle Fire Hall in Milford the following Monday.

Commentary

After leaving the Journal, Biden dashed down Commerce St. to visit the folks at Mid-Shore CATV.

Wednesday saw no hiatus in Biden's fast-paced downstate tour.

On the agenda was another town meeting at Wesley College in Dover. After the town meeting Biden scurried over to the Dover Air Base to catch a flight to the Soviet Union for talks on arms control.

Biden made the trip to the Soviet Union with Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine.

The two senators, who serve together on the Senate Intelligence committee, made the trip at the invitation of the Soviet Academy of Scientists, the leading scientific organization in the USSR. Plans had been made for the trip before Andropov's recent death.

Biden is also the second-ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and is chairman of the Special Committee on Nuclear Weapons in Europe of the North Atlantic Assembly, the parlimentary arm of NATO.

Biden returned from the Soviet Union Sunday afternoon. Just in time to put a few things in order, catch several hours sleep, and then begin preparations for the political rally in Milford on Monday.

All in all, it was a pretty busy week. You can say what you want about Senator Biden, but the one thing you can't say is that he doesn't earn every penny the taxpayers pay him.

Everyone agrees: The impact of an outbreak of avian influenza on Delmarva, if allowed to spread in the same manner as in Pennsylvania, would be catastrophic.

What's at stake? Take a look at these figures, provided by Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. officials:

•Every week up to 10 million broiler chicks are placed on farms in Delaware and Eastern Shore Maryland and Virginia, hauled in converted buses in over 300 trips.

impact of an AI epidemic on the Shore could be much greater than that, however. "Economists tell me that for every dollar an industry generates, there's a ripple effect on the rest of the area economy of about $5. Even if only 10 percent of the broiler industry were affected, that's $80 million times five, or $400 million."

Given the virulence of AI, the threat is very real.

"One gram of contaminated fecal matter contains enough virust to infect a million birds," according to Dr. Ed Odor, head of the poultry diagnostic laboratory at the University of Delaware Georgetown substation. Put another way, a half-teaspoon of fecal debris on somebody's shoe is enough to start an outbreak.

Each person is a link in a chain, and the cooperation of everyone — not just people who grow poultry — is necessary in order to protect Delmarva's poultry industry, the pathologist said. "It's a maximum threat to a maximum industry and we need a maximum effort to isolate the industry. With layer flock in Rising Sun, Md., on

This is why Odor and others charged with protecting Delmarva flocks strongly urged Delawareans and other Eastern Shore residents to stay away from the Pennsylvania Farm Show earlier this year. "It's impossible to prevent all contact with Pennsylvania," Odor said, "But it is possible to greatly reduce the odds. We realize that 100 percent isolation is not realistic."

"On the other hand," he said, "we fell absolutely sure we would already have AI here if it weren't for the efforts we've made to date. So far these have been successful."

"If we do get it here," Stevens added, "we're prepared to take prompt action to limit its spread."

January 27, the danger has increased. There are other large table egg flocks in both Maryland and Delaware very close to the new quarantine area, which encompasses the northern end of Cecil County, Md. Lancaster County, Pa., where AI has run rampant since last November despite quarantine efforts, poses an even greater threat because of continued travel and commerce between Delmarva and the Lancaster area. What precautions are being taken to protect Delmarva broiler flocks? Flock supervisors are required to wear dispoable plastic boots, coveralls and hats on all farm visits, which have been sharply curtailed. Nows they see a new flock the first two weeks after it is started, then only on a limited basis, using strict sanitary precautions. This compares to seven or eight visits before AI became a threat. For a the industry was assessing the situation and making sure no cases of AI were lurking on Delmarva, no field visits at all were made. Between farm visits, supervisors are required to change clothes and clean cars. "We've urged utility and equipment reps to take similar precautions," Stevens said. "Those who have to go into the poultry houses are doing so.' Odor, in his role as pathologist for the University of Delaware's poultry diagnostic lab, ordinarily makes many farm visits in the course of a week. But he voluntarily grounded himself last October 15 in order to support industry efforts to protect Delmarva flocks from the influenza virus. With help from DPI's poultry disease task force and industry veterinarians, they began by testing all flocks on the peninsula for the presence of AI, to be sure the virus wasn't already lurking undetected on a farm somewhere. Results, fortunately, were negative.

Companies are now blood testing each flock before cleaning out all broiler houses. Manure is not being caked out unless it can be incorporated immediately, or stockpiled, now that the ground is frozen. Blood samples are also being taken from all flocks before they leave a farm for market or processing. Again, all results have been nagative so far.

Since mid-October, Odor estimated that between 3,000 and 3,500 poultry flocks on Delmarva have been blood tested for AI. In his lab alone, he and his assistants have run about 10,000 period fo time early in the crisis, while samples from 1,000 flocks. Other public and private laboratories have screened about twice that many. A test takes between 24 and 48 hours to run. "We've also been conducting postmortem examinations on birds with severe people, we've put in a lot of extra hours and we've had to hire extra help," he

If an AI outbreak should occur, the industry is poised for prompt action. DPI's poultry disease task force was established several years ago at the time of a threat from infectious Newcastle virus disease. It was mobilized again last spring after news of the first AI outbreaks in Pennsylvania (while the virus was still in its relatively mild form).

DPI has a grid map of the Delmarva peninsula on which the location of every commercial poultry flock is marked. (One stretch of land along Maryland Route 50 from Salisbury to Ocean City has the densest poultry population in the U.S.) Using this map, should an outbreak occur, the task force could slap a quarantine around the infected farm, promptly limiting traffic between that area and poultry farms in other parts of Delaware and the Eastern Shore. All agree, speed would be critical in containing the initial outbreak.

"We're not talking about controlling AI," said Odor. "Elimination is the only

Roy Miller, Supervisor of Fin Fisheries, Division of Wildlife, Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control was the main speaker. Miller's topic was "Careers in Fish and Wildlife." He discussed the educational requirements, responsibilities and opportunities in careers such as: Marine Biology, Game Warden and Conservationist. Miller stressed education as the most important prerequisite for this field. He stated that a 4-year degree is necessary, but a Master's degree is more beneficial, as

His division supervises the control and preservation of local wildlife including beaver, falcons, ospreys, pheasant, quail and deer. He mentioned the fact that 36 wild turkeys were recently released in the Thompsonville area with the hope they will start breeding. Wild turkeys have been non-existent in Delaware for 200 years. Banding wild ducks is another duty.

The Division monitors salt water fish in the bay, which is caught, sorted by species, measured and weighed. Shell Fisheries come under this division and shell fishermen must be checked according to the division's rules and regulations.

A series of Marsh Studies is being conducted with regard to wildlife and pollution. The Marine Police are responsible for search and rescue operations as well as Miller and the staff are responsible for routine patrol on Delaware waters.

Over The Backvard Fence

Gab Fest by Pat Hatfield

Smooth your apron down and start up the rocking chair. I feel like having a good chat with my friends while I recover from a busy morning. decided to treat the family (and myself) to a lemon meringue pie. I thought first of coconut cream, but the lemons were looking at me reproachfully, and I knew they needed to be used while still good. I put off making pies, even though they are a great favorite, because I have never found the job too

The single shells or the pre-baked ones are the worst, and these we like best. Dad was late getting down to breakfast, so I started on the pies early. I am a slow, methodical worker and it takes me forever. So, I start to get the crust ready first. I'm never real sure about the results until the shells are in the oven. Through years of experience I have come to the conclusion that really supper pie crust does not handle well. It is hard to work with. This morning was no exception, so I struggled along with it until I won and it was in the plates, pricked with a fork into the oven, and I relaxed, knowing that it would be the melt-in-your mouth kind. By being firm with myself I did not let the shells burn. There have been times! So far, so good.

The next thing I hate to do most is grate the lemon rind. In fact, I hate to grate anything, because I usually end up by grating ME! And you get such a smidgeon of the grated rind for all the effort you put forth. Sometimes, I cheat and use the lemon filling that comes in little boxes, and it is good, but not THAT good. At about this stage I begin to wonder why I always say that I like to cook.

Then I squeeze the lemons. I'm not too fond of this job either, but it gets done and added to the grated rind and the seeds picked out and the juice wiped off my fingers and it is set aside to await further developments.

Thank you volunteers! Smile! There is one thing more exasperating than a wife who can cook and won't and that's a wife who can't cook and will. Robert Sylvia Meredith was leader of Bible Study Monday morning. Virginia Smith was at the piano and Sylvia directed the singing of the very special music. Sylvia's study for those present was John, chapter 3, verses 1-5. A prayer by Sylvia and a closing hymn brought the hour to a pleasant close with Elsie Vinyard Monday afternoon.

Friday, the "Senior Chorus", went to Delaware Care Center (Argo's Corner) near Milford. Virginia Smith tickled the ivories and Sylvia directed. Julie Astfalt sang a solo "How Great Thou folks participating in the foregoing events were Frances Wright, Etzel McCready, Cecil Meredith, Mildred Vincent, Mary Sapp, Roxanne, Marion Brown, Mamie Adams, Gladys Hill, Thelma Legates, Tony Perrone, Andy Anderson, Elwood Morris, Clara Judy, Ethel Holden, Catherine Donovan, Jo Burke, Florence Minner, Juanita McClain and Louis Gerardi.

Next I break the eggs, carefully separating them and watching that not a wisp of the yolk gets into the whites. All of you who cook know that they will not whip if this happens. Then I do the yolks slightly beaten, and they are set

The cornstarch and water are now measured and set aside. (By this time I have enough little bowls setting around to look like I'm preparing lunch for a nusery school.

Now we are ready for the heavy stuff. The sugar and hot water are measured and put upon the stove to bring to a Then the cornstarch mixture is added. I stir for fifteen minutes and the whole mess looks like a soft pudding. I dip out a spoonful of the hot mix into the beaten egg yolks, stir briskly, and add this to the hot pudding. Cook five minutes longer, stirring madly. Off the stove and add the butter and the lemon juice and rind. Pour into the baked shells. Start the meringue, adding a bit of cream of tarter and the sugar. Then the meringue is piled onto the filling. My mother always trailed her meringue around in a pretzel pattern so she could see the lemon filling is spots, but I like mine covered up and high.

Then they are back into the oven to toast. And right here I take a stand beside the oven door and I tell myself sternly, "Don't you dare move and don't you dare think of anything else but pie until it is safely out on the cooling rack." One second too much can blow the whole thing.

I'll bet you are all laughing at me for making such a fuss over two lemon meringue pies. I'm laughing, too. It is a lot of work for me and it was just as much work when I was 28 as it is at 80. But when the family comes in yelling with joy, that is my reward. Old Mom is still around and doing her job with

The February meeting of the Prospect United Methodist Women was opened at 1 p.m. on February 16th with Phoebe Anthony leading us in devotions. Using the Christian Home as her theme, Phoebe read the 13th Chapter of First Corinthians followed by all praying the Lord's Prayer. Phoebe told us that Home is a precious word and the oldest of all institutions and created by God. Homes need a firm foundation characterized by love with Christ as the Center and God as the Head. A Christian home is the closest thing to heaven on earth. Phoebe gave us a reading explaining that home is a place where love abides in contrast to a house. She then read two poems, 'Thank God for Christian Homes" and "Monkey Business." All sang "An Evening Prayer" and then Phoebe gave us a quiz and presented each one with a 1984 calendar tract.

Owl Time

Our friends, Bonnie and Wayne, live in the country near a remote crossroads out toward the state line. Beyond the mailbox, across the road, is a moderate patch of woods with a good stand of oaks and swamp maples, with a few hollies thrown in for good measure. A large cut-off woods to the south is a tangle of laps, briars, and honeysuckle vines. Laps, for you not familiar with such, are treetops left from logging, or simply blowdowns that provide sanctuary for wild creatures. And wild things abound. Squirrels, rabbits, foxes, quail, a host of singbirds, the occasional deer, and a few Great Horned Owls.

I mention owls mainly because Wayne said that he was awakened by one hooting near his bedroom window in the wee hours recently. Great Horned Owls are fond of black winter nights for singing their eerie, lonesome songs. It's hard not to shiver when you hear the ghostly calls. It is a sound that puts humans in touch with prehistoric ancestors. Gets us back to basics, and slices away sophisticated facades we modern folk pretend to. On the coldest, darkest nights these big-winged predators seek their mates with mutterings that penetrate the far corners of wood and field. Small animals freeze in fear. It must be supposed that lady owls respond to the five-note call as their human counterparts do to the crooning of Sinatra,

Manilow, or Kenny Rogers. Romance

Umpire George Magerkurth came over to Leo Durocher before a Dodger game and asked, "Who's your pitcher today, Leo?"

"Guess!" snapped a smiling Durocher. "That's all you did yesterday." Mel Ott once slapped a $500 fine on a pitcher for coming in with a fat pitch on an 0-2 count that was knocked out of the park.

To avoid duplicating that mistake, the pitchers became extremely careful. A week later a rookie was sent in to relieve and got off to an 0-2 jump on the Farmers curse the owl. The bird with large eyes will take the odd chicken, or barnyard duck, and even a small pup or kitten if left unprotected at dark. But filet mignon to an owl is a fat rat or plump mouse, and these comprise the main fare of the feathered slayer. The awesome hooks on owl feet are deadly as an aeon of inbred instinct.

Collectors of bric-a-brac favor owl figurines in glass, wood, metal, or porcelain. Some folks think owl forms are good luck. Other legends claim when an owl lands on a barn roof, something on the farm will perish. Entirely possible, but hardly supernatural. Rodents are definitely in peril. What supernatural ties owls may have, are largely born in the fertile minds of superstitious souls. They are mysterious only because of habitual nocturnal comings and goings.

Fables ascribe wisdom to the bird. Greek and Egyptian philosophers symbolized the owl in this manner as well. Cartoons depict owls in the role of judge or decision maker. I must confess to personal fascination for the association with the writer's family

When you hear the owl, pull your covers a little bit closer under your chin. It will be cold. If there be any mysterious connotations, let the cloak fall. Owl Time is a good time. We are here to have fun. We hope you are too.
