Tucker discusses educational reform at Lake Forest High

How should the American school system change to meet the demands of the 21st century?

Marc Tucker, executive director of the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy, gave the public and the faculty of Lake Forest High School an overview of the future of American education when he spoke at Lake Forest High School Friday, January 9.

The Carnegie Forum published a report last spring advocating a total restructuring of the current educational system and of teacher education in general.

"It's easier to produce radical changes than incremental changes," said Mr. Tucker.

Mr. Tucker came to Lake Forest to tell people how current educational problems could be rectified through a system that would better prepare students to meet their future in an interdependent world economy.

"The biggest problem is the coming quality of our teaching force," said Mr. Tucker.

Teacher quality in the coming years will be down, according to Mr. Tucker, because the teaching profession isn't as attractive as other professions, nor does it have the professional standards of other fields requiring the same amount of education.

The task force, which produced the Carnegie Report, saw a need for increased productivity, performance and efficiency within school systems.

Mr. Tucker said such a change won't occur without a change in how the teaching profession is viewed.

"We aren't going to make it unless we attract first rate teachers," he said.

To attract such a work force, Mr. Tucker said teachers would have to be paid competitively with other professions.

Most teachers reach their total earning potential within 10 to 12 years of teaching, whereas, doctors and lawyers reach their top salaries further into their careers.

Mr. Tucker said the lifetime earning potential of a teacher isn't equivalent to other college educated positions, such as accountants and mid-level managers. Because of this, a number of teachers leave the profession after five to seven years.

Although Mr. Tucker did not suggest schools be run like businesses, he said the world of education could benefit from the laws of supply and demand.

For example, shortages in the business world create higher prices for the same or a higher quality product. In the teaching profession when there is a shortage of teachers, the profession decreases the quality of incoming teachers to meet their demand.

Lower quality teachers in turn produce students of a poorer quality. Mr. Tucker said that once the quality of the coming teacher force increases, the other educational problems will iron themselves out.

Other than competitive salaries for teachers, Mr. Tucker advocated changing the educational system of future teachers from a program where they receive a bachelor's degree in teaching to a standard liberal arts degree combined with a master's degree in intensive teacher education. The master's program would not just be an upgrading of what is currently taught on the undergraduate level.

The Carnegie Report also suggests the formation of a National Board of Professional Teaching Standards, which would maintain high standards but at the same time would give teachers the freedom to be professionals they have been trained to be. "People who are treated like professionals, act like professionals," Mr. Tucker said.

He said what is needed is "an incentive system that encourages the very best teachers to teach the most difficult kids."

Without a turn around in how the teaching profession is viewed, the current system will create problems, not just nationwide, but worldwide.

"It's a problem that's going to drag the whole country down," Mr. Tucker said.

The system the Carnegie Forum is suggesting is a fundamental change in policy which would lead to "a nation of people who can think for a living," Mr. Tucker said.

Mr. Tucker was questioned about whether such a system would allow for courses in agriculture and secretarial skills.

Courses in agriculture and secretarial skills would remain in the new system, with a shift in how they are viewed.

Harrington City Council gives annual report

by Colleen Lilly

The Harrington City Council brought forth its major accomplishments and failures for the past year at its annual meeting of the electors Friday, January 8.

Major legislation the Council worked on in 1986 included a new municipal code, which will continue to be an issue the Council works on in 1987.

A housing code for the City will be part of this project, as required by state law.

City Manager Volenik reported the summer completion of the Meatland shopping center, the beginning of the Peck Avenue housing development and the completion of the Harrington Senior Center during 1986.

In 1987 bids for the financing of the proposed City Hall will soon be taken by the Harrington City Council. The City is seeking the most economical financing banks can provide.

The City needs to raise funds to match a possible $58,127 grant from the state for Bicentennial Community Improvement.

A decision about the grant will be made today by the BCIF committee.

The Council has applied for a $235,000 grant from the state in order to loop the City's entire water system.

Looping the system would give the city access to the wells and tanks on the Harrington Fairgrounds, "as a reserve and backup to the existing system," said Mr. Volenik.

The paving of Mispillion Street and Milby Street is also on the 1987 agenda. A drainage ditch is planned for the area to help alleviate any flooding.

"Recruitment of new industries is ongoing," said Mr. Volenik.

One such new industry entering Harrington is the New York corporation, Port Lumber, which will locate its business east of Route 113 and north of the City.

Negotiations are continuing with 1st National Bank of Maryland for the construction of a microwave tower for credit card transmissions between Baltimore and Millsboro.

Mr. Volenik said that while the city sought to reduce the operating costs in Harrington's waste water treatment plant, a simple maladjustment of a plant wheel caused the City to receive erroneous readings. A problem the City rectified.

In the Public Works Department, concentration "focused on cleaning out storm drains in the city," according to Mr. Volenik.

Mr. Volenik said that as a result of cleaning the drains and installing new drains, most of the City's flood areas were cleaned up.

Simpson Road has an increased water supply as a result of the Public Works Department replacing two inch pipes with eight inch pipes.

The City used two sources of additional labor in 1986, youth employment and prison work release crews to help accomplish its goals.

The number of complaints the Harrington Police responded to is up over 37 percent over last year and Mr. Volenik said the number of criminal arrests has increased 56 percent over last year; yet, the search continues for a new police chief. Use of the Harrington Library was up over the last year.

Drunk driving increases in Harrington; Statewide highway fatalities rise

by Colleen Lilly

Traffic accidents across Delaware killed 138 people in 1986; yet, accidents along U.S. 13 in and around Harrington have resulted in no fatalities in the past three years, according to Traffic Planner, Fred Ziegler.

In the first nine months of 1986, only two property damage accidents have occurred on U.S. 13 near Harrington, Mr. Ziegler said.

Deaths on Kent and Sussex highways have nearly doubled over those of 1985. In Kent County in 1986, 44 people died as a result of highway fatalities, according to Francis A. Ianni of the Office of Highway Safety.

In 1985, the highway death rate in Kent County was 26.

Mr. Ianni contributes the overall number of highway deaths in Delaware to a number of things.

"My theory is people relaxed, and there was a slack in standard routine things," Mr. Ianni said.

The Office of Highway Safety placed an emphasis on highway safety the last three months of 1986, but not in the first nine months.

The campaign for highway safety began in September 1986 when Milford became Delaware's model city in an attempt to heighten awareness about seat belt usage.

Milford held the lowest rate of seat belt users in Delaware, with only seven percent of the population wearing seat belts.

In the 100 day campaign, Milford's seat belt usage went from seven percent to 33 percent.

This spring the Office of Highway Safety intends to use the same type of campaign in Seaford and Dover to increase the use of safety belts.

While Mr. Ianni did not have an exact percentage, the number of seat belts users in Harrington was under 12 percent, which was the highest percentage reported in Rehoboth.

Of the 138 traffic fatalities in Delaware in 1986, only 12 people were wearing seat belts.

Although the emphasis in the past several months has been on highway

Chick's in Harrington was the place to be Saturday, January 11 if you were an Elvis fan. Noted Elvis impersonator Lee Estrada sang such Elvis classics as "Don't Be Cruel," "Love Me Tender," and "It's Now or Never" to a crowd estimated at 150 people.

Mr. Estrada, who is from Vernon, N.J., has traveled worldwide performing with top names like Bobby Vee. Although his band didn't accompany him at Chick's, they normally tour with him on a yearly basis.

WAFB-FM in Milford co-hosted the tribute to Elvis, with morning host Tim Hopkins broadcasting live from the event.

Chick's is planning another promotional event in the near future.

Department of Agriculture to address gypsy moth problem in Harrington

by Colleen Lilly

Areas west and south of Harrington have now become the 'front' to an existing war in Delaware. The Department of Agriculture is continuing its battle against the gypsy moth.

"What we call the 'front,' mostly newly infested areas, is west of Harrington and south of Harrington," said Linda Tower Bradley, plant industry supervisor with the Delaware Department of Agriculture.

A public hearing, scheduled for 7 p.m. January 15 at the Harrington Fire Hall, will shed some light on the current gypsy moth problem.

Results from the 1986 egg mass surveys and plans for treating infested areas top the agenda for the January 15 meeting.

Gypsy moths may sound harmless, but the damage they do can be deadly. The moths, which hatch into caterpillars in spring, feed on the leaves of oak and other hardwood trees. Continued feeding on the same trees can eventually drain them of their energy and kill them.

Although the Department of Agriculture does not have an estimate of the damage done to the trees last year, Ms. Bradley estimates "a couple of thousand acres in New Castle and Kent Counties" was lost to the appetites of gypsy moths.

Trouble with gypsy moths began in New Castle County and has gradually worked its way south into Kent.

"We've had this problem for a number of years, at least five or six years. The problem in Delaware now is primarily in the western part of Kent County. We're never going to get rid of them," said Ms. Bradley.

By stripping hardwood trees of their leaves, Ms. Bradley explains, the trees are forced to refoliate, something they're not designed to do. Stored carbohydrate energy used by the tree to refoliate is drained, and if done continually, can kill the tree within years.

Two insecticides are currently being used to treat gypsy moth growth. Ms. Bradley calls both insecticides "very environmentally safe" since neither is harmful to humans or other animals.

Bacillus thuringiensis, commonly known as BT, is a bacterium which kills caterpillars when they ingest it. In 1986, approximately 60,000 acres of Delaware were sprayed with BT, according to Ms. Bradley.

Dimilin, the other insecticide regulating gypsy moths inhibits the formation of the protein chitin, causing the new skin of a caterpillar to be defective when it molts.

The Department of Agriculture will again spray infested areas this spring. Because last year was the first year dimilin was used, only 17,000 acres of Kent County were sprayed.

Careless smoking kills two in Magnolia trailer fire

by Colleen Lilly

Careless smoking was the cause of a Magnolia fire, which killed a married couple Tuesday, January 6.

Richard E. Beavens, 62 and Pearl R. Beavens, 55, died from smoke inhalation and burns, according to State Medical Examiner, Dr. Ali Z. Hameli.

The Beavens' mobile home at 23 Dogwood Drive in Del-Haven Estates was completely engulfed in flames by 11:15 p.m. January 6, witnesses said.

Deputy Fire Marshal William A. Sipple confirmed the cause of the fire as careless smoking. He said Mrs. Beavens apparently fell asleep on the living room couch while smoking.

Mr. Beavens apparently tried to get out of his home, but was unable. His body was found near the back door.

The best advice Mr. Sipple has for other mobile home owners is to "install smoke detectors." The Beavens home did not have a smoke detector.

The fire was controlled by within thirty minutes by 23 firefighters from the Magnolia and Camden-Wyoming Fire Companies. Firefighters were dispatched to the blaze at 11:30 p.m.

Magnolia Fire Chief, Bruce E. Shockley, who lives next door to the mobile home, attempted to rescue the couple but could not because of the heat build up inside of the trailer.

Mr. Sipple explained, "Mobile homes tend to burn quicker."

Because older mobile homes have a metal shell, heat builds inside of the home, forcing it to burn more quickly. Once the fire is hot enough, the walls of the home melt, leaving nothing inside.

Mr. Beavens had worked as an automobile mechanic until two years ago when a stroke left him partially paralyzed.

Harrington City Council amends zoning code

by Colleen Lilly

The City of Harrington's zoning ordinance was amended by the Harrington City Council Monday night at the Council's monthly meeting.

The amended zoning code will now allow both public and private utility use of services provided by highly technological businesses and industries in the Harrington area.

Before Monday night's decision to accept the revision, industries using high technology to provide products, only did so for the public.

The change now also allows for private utility use.

In addition to amending Section 1100, Article 11 of the 1958 Zoning Ordinance of the City of Harrington as revised March 1972, the Council amended Section 1200 of Article 12 of the 1 code to give consistency to the zoning ordinance.

The change was made so that development in a Manufacturing Zone and development in an Industrial Park Zone would not be hindered.

Several rezoning requests brought before the Council will be going before the Harrington Planning and Zoning Commission for review.

St. Bernadette's Church on Liberty Street has asked for a rezoning of its property to commercial use from residential.

The Planning and Zoning Commission will review this request with the intent of allowing the site to become the new City Hall, provided the City buys the land.

Among the rezoning requests headed to the Commission is a proposal to turn the last piece of available property in Harrington into an industrial property.

According to City Manager George Volenik, Eastern Petroleum Service and the owner of the property immediately adjacent to the concrete plant on Route 14 want the property zoned for industrial use.

The last rezoning request headed before the Planning and Zoning Commission is one to allow William Gottf to make his properties at 224 and 226 Weiner Avenue into four one bedroom apartments for the elderly.

The Planning and Zoning Commission has 60 days to act on all rezoning requests. If approved, the requests come back to the Council for review. A public hearing concerning the requests will then be held, after which the requests go back to the Council for final action.

Among the Council's New Business, Councilman Dan Coleman wanted to know how the City's liability insurance is affected when Harrington Police are called to assist the Millford Police and vice versa.

Mr. Volenik said that if the police in Harrington are responding to a legitimate call in Millford, they are covered by the City's liability insurance.

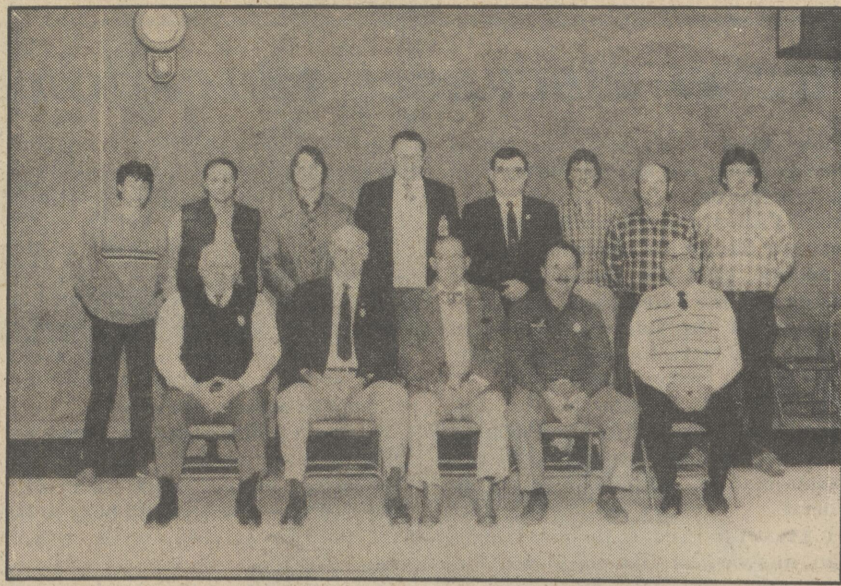

Millford's police on the other hand, are not covered when responding to a Harrington call.

Councilman Coleman also questioned whether the City was involved in any way with Simmons Cable's agreement to provide a converter for individuals wishing to go back to conventional television after the cable company's decision to raise their monthly rates.

Under Harrington's franchise agreement with Simmons, the City has no control in such matters, according to Mr. Volenik.

Among the Old Business discussed was soil erosion along Peck Avenue caused by the recent rains. Councilman Jack Wyatt wanted to know what could be done by the company building Diamond Court Apartments on Peck Avenue and Dickerson Street.

Mr. Volenik said something on a temporary basis would be worked out until plans for Peck Avenue are discussed. When he speaks with the developer, Mr. Volenik plans to suggest placing bales of straw in the erosion areas, until a permanent solution is sought.

Troop 76 needs leadership

by Colleen Lilly

Harrington's Troop 76 of the Boy Scouts is heading into 1987 with one major problem--no adult leadership.

Troop Committee Chairperson Mary Collum said, "We need some good adult leadership."

Because of business commitments, the current Scout Master Mark Stayton has stepped down from his Boy Scout position.

"He doesn't have the time to be a good Scout Master," Ms. Collum said.

Adults, male and female, are being sought by the Boy Scouts. Interested people attend a reorganizational meeting at 8:00 p.m. Saturday, January 18 at the Asbury Methodist Church.

Ms. Collum said in addition to a Scout Master, the troop needs Assistant Scout Masters. She said if the Boy Scouts couldn't get a fully committed Scout Master, they would gladly accept several part-time Assistant Scout Masters.

After new adult leadership is found to run Troop 76, Ms. Collum hopes to have a big recruitment drive.

"There's a lot of boys in this town. We need to get them involved," said Ms. Collum.

Currently, seven boys make up Troop 76. They are Tim Collum, Jorge Nichols, Ryan Morris, David Thompson, Ed Waishes, Chris Gillespie and Chris Weeks.

DUI increases in City

safety, according to Mr. Ianni, there are more people traveling because of lower gasoline prices and more fuel efficient, small cars on the road. With more cars on the road, more accidents are likely.

Mr. Ianni said Delawareans tend to think out of state people traveling through the First State cause the majority of the accidents but the facts show most of the accidents and deaths are the result of in-staters.

Mr. Ianni said 60 to 70 percent of highway deaths were crashes where the driver was driving under the influence of alcohol.

Police arrests for DUI driving have remained fairly stable from 1985 to 1986. In Kent County, 506 people were arrested by state police for drunk driving; and in 1985, 557 people were arrested.

So far in 1987, the Harrington Police have reported one arrest for DUI, following a high speed chase and an accident on January 1. Alicia Matthews of Harrington was released on bond, pending a court appearance.

Sergeant Jeff Cook of the Harrington Police said that while there's more publicity about not driving drunk, the number of drunk drivers in Harrington has increased substantially.

The Harrington Police arrested 59 people in 1986 for drunk driving and 19 for the same offense in 1985.

With three of the four Harrington Police trained in detecting drunk driving, enforcement is up overall.

Speeding was the most common driving offense in Harrington. While Sgt. Cook didn't have any specifics on the number of speeding tickets issued, he suggests people "watch their speed."

The initial fine for speeders going 15 miles over the limit is $35. Those exceeding the limit by 25 miles can expect a fine of $95.

Because this has been a particularly bad year on Delaware's highways, Mr. Ianni hopes the state legislature more seriously considers legislation advocating seat belt use.

"Maybe with these bad statistics, legislators may give it (legislation) a second thought," Mr. Ianni said.

Mr. Ianni would also like to see the legislature pass a bill which would ban open alcoholic beverages in a vehicle while driving and a bill outlawing radar detectors.

State Representative G. Robert Quillen, who voted last year against a seat belt law, said he would again vote as his constituents wanted.

"My constituents opposed the use of them (seat belts), so I voted no," Mr. Quillen said.

Mr. Quillen explained his constituents' opposition to a seat belt law. "They're opposed to the government telling them to do more and more on a daily basis," he said.

Mr. Quillen said he would also oppose legislation which would ban radar detectors. His stand concerning having open alcoholic beverages in an auto would depend on the specifics of the legislation.

State Senator Ruth Ann Minner said, "I have never supported a seat belt law." Senator Minner pointed out that if such legislation were enacted the publicity surrounding seat belt use would go away.

She said she hasn't been convinced yet that using a seat belt will ensure a person will be any safer on the road.

Senator Minner is checking into the specifics of legislation passed in California, which allows the use of a car device to determine sobriety and reduce the number of drunk drivers. If a person is too drunk to drive, this ignition sensor would not allow the person's car to start.

Such a sobriety sensor can be used by judges as part of DUI sentencing in California.

How she would vote on legislation banning open alcoholic containers would depend on the bill.

The opposition Sussex and Kent County residents have to seat belts is a national trend in rural areas, said Mr. Ianni.

Suggestions Mr. Ianni makes to avoid accidents:

- *Use headlights both in the morning and evening.
- *Use safety belts.
- *Avoid speeding.
- *Avoid following too closely in heavy traffic.

Possums put on comedy

This year's first production by the Possum Point Players will be the musical comedy I Do! I Do! January 23-24. The dinner theatre production by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt will be directed by Ferdi Perrone.

The two person play stars Anne Maloney of Georgetown and Clay Zambo of Lewes.

Dinner for the theatre production at the Millsboro Civic Center includes a buffet salad bar, roast beef and turkey or chicken, crab imperial, vegetables and a dessert, as well as a cash bar.

Tickets for the January production are available by calling 945-0417. Tables seat eight and are on a first come basis. Those wishing to sit together should order their tickets at the same time.

Theatre enthusiasts might want to consider a membership to the Possum Point Players productions. The Possum Point Players 1987 membership drive is underway and the group hopes to continue its tremendous growth in the last two years.

The group usually has produced three shows a year since its founding in 1973. The 1986 schedule included a January dinner theatre, a children's variety production in February featuring 48 county youngsters, being a co-host to statewide one-act play festival at Del Tech in March, a major musical in April, a champagne dessert comedy in July and a drama in November.

In addition to those regularly scheduled productions, the Players performed a Cole Porter review for various parties and events, raised funds for building renovation at Autumn Cabaret '86, and made a kids' Christmas Chorus available for six appearances during the holidays.

The 1987 season looks even better. It includes the January dinner theatre, musical in March, champagne dessert comedy in June and a children's show in November. In addition, the group is planning two separate bicentennial projects and a second cabaret-style fundraiser next fall.

Meanwhile, members and friends are working to renovate the group's home, a 5,000 square foot building in Georgetown.

The Possum Point Players Advisory Committee, a group of local business leaders and individuals, are working to raise funds for the renovation effort. They also advise the group in business matters.

The new membership year began Jan. 1. All members receive the monthly newsletter, additional discounts on season tickets, and voting rights at the group's monthly membership meeting each first Friday. Special donors receive additional benefits.

Tucker discusses educational reform

Secretarial courses would take on fewer routine clerical skills and would teach the student to think on his feet. Mr. Tucker foresees the future of the secretarial field emphasizing how an office is run, not just using skills in typing.

In agriculture, Mr. Tucker said more people are actually part of the field than the public may realize. He said the field has expanded from those who work on the farm to people on the Commodities Exchange, to people involved with fuel production and to individuals working in grain research.

Mr. Tucker said the farming profession has gone from a nation of farmers who knew little in the 1920's to "a nation of farmers and agricultural people who think for a living."

A reform in the educational system would continue such progress in agricultural development.

Dr. James H. VanSciver, superintendent of the Lake Forest School District, brought the matter of educational reform into perspective with the term, "accountability."

Dr. VanSciver said the American school system is still paying for changes made in the school system in the 1960's and 1970's.

Restructuring the school system involves the support of everyone involved, from the taxpayer to the future employer.

"We think we aren't going to get the kind of support we need unless the business community is behind it," Mr. Tucker said.

The task force which initiated such a reform was made up of individuals both in education and in business.

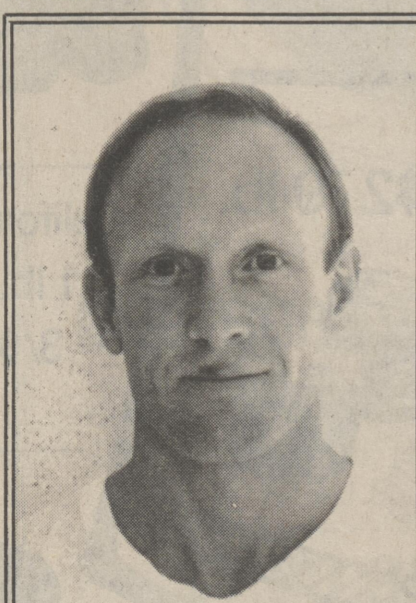

The cost of such a change, Mr. Tucker said, would be phased in over a 10 year period and would be an incremental cost, $48 billion more than the current system.

A Gross National Product that keeps on rising would help pay for such a system.

A Harris Poll also concluded the American Public would be willing to spend more for education if they saw more results for their money.

Mr. Tucker said several states have already asked for help in considering changes. Statewide forums on the issue are being held, as well as, special educational programs to bring the issue into the open.

The Carnegie Forum has already received the backing of two national teacher unions and the Educational Commission of the States.

Rotary Club News

by Melvin L. Brobst

The Harrington Rotary Club held the second of three dinner-meetings last Monday evening, January 5, at the Colony Inn Restaurant, when the guest of honor was Miss Elva Jane Warren, of Felton, who leaves for a year's study in Australia under the Rotary Foundation Program, the end of this month.

Besides Janie and her family, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warren, her brother Downes, there were representatives from the Lewes-Rehoboth, Milford, Federalsburg, Md., both Dover Capitol and City clubs, and the Camden-Wyoming Rotary Clubs in attendance.

The speaker was Dr. Howard Row of Dover, Chairman for the Rotary Foundation Scholarship Selection Committee that selected Janie from this area and sponsored by the Harrington Rotary Club, the first time in the club's history that such an honor was enjoyed.

Dr. Row spoke on the merits of the Foundation and pointed out that no relatives of Rotary members were eligible for selection, neither was the program an exchange project but selection was made primarily on merit, with each candidate serving as an academic ambassador from their home country to the one assigned for residence in the year's study program.

During Joanie's remarks, she called attention to the display table with articles from the First State she will be taking with her to leave with the various Rotary Clubs she will be visiting during her year in Australia, among them were two dozen Harrington Rotary flags presented to her by George Thompson, co-chairman for the evening. Mrs. Mary Trice, wife of President Roger Trice, gave Janie a gift, a coin purse for her personal use, presented on behalf of the club's membership.

Janie's residence in Australia will be in Armidale, New South Wales, situated near the east coast between Sidney on the south and Brisbane on the north. She will be living and studying at the University of New England, so named because immigrants from that section of our country settled there. Her field of study will be Agriculture Economics.

Among other guests were Kirk Mearns, District Governor for Rotary District #763 who brought greetings from the Wilmington Club, and Sam Marshall, area representative and a member of the Milford Club.

Gordon Rennie and his wife were responsible for obtaining the electric piano borrowed from the Lake Forest High School for the evening. The evening was arranged for by Melvin Brobst and George Thompson with the president of Harrington Rotary, Roger Trice, officiating.

The third such dinner-meeting will be held next year upon Janie's return. The first, a "get-acquainted" occasion, was held last May.

Gab Fest

Only 363 more shopping days until Christmas 1987! Now is the time to begin early! I hope you all had the same wonderful Christmas that we had with our family. My appetite perked up a little and I rejoiced in the fact that I had no pain. I watched my diet carefully. Of course I missed the chocolate and the cheese and the gravy, but I substituted creamed onions on my hot mashed potatoes and managed very well. I make my creamed onions with cream of celery soup instead of white sauce, and it is more flavorful.

Christmas morning between six and seven a.m. found our family and overnight guests around the tree, and we had our usual two hours of hilarious gift opening with squeals of delight and thank-yous. We had managed to surprise each other real good with our carefully selected gifts that sometimes brought tears of joy and tenderness. A huge buffet breakfast or brunch followed with scrapple, bacon, scrambled eggs, homemade breads, coffee and milk. We always say to each other, "This Christmas was the best ever," and this one was!

We did not get snow for Christmas, but we sure got lots of rain. Most of the notes in my scrapbooks reveal that most of our big snows, especially the blizzards, come to Delaware in March. The famous great blizzard of 1888 came in March. Dad's mother was a Seaford girl, and that afternoon she had gone to visit a girlfriend. When she was ready to go home in the early evening, they could not even get the door open. The snow had piled up and was still raging. She had to remain for several days.

I guess this is the first year that our family has not had the traditional Minnehaha Cake, but I was not able to do it. Ellen made the pies and homemade loaves of bread and some cookies in spite of her frantic schedule. My Christmas surprise gift from Dad was a new wall oven, so I made 75 mashed potato rolls. The oven was perfect in its performance and I am praying for health so I can enjoy it in the coming year. I like to bake things.

By the time we talk again, we will be facing a brand New Year. What a challenge. What a responsibility. How exciting!

Spirit and Life Tabernacle

Pastors and members of several area churches gathered at Spirit and Life Tabernacle to worship and hear the preaching of Bro. Willis from Spirit and Life Bible Church, Elkton, MD, on Saturday, December 13.

Spartans drop season opener

by Mike Dill

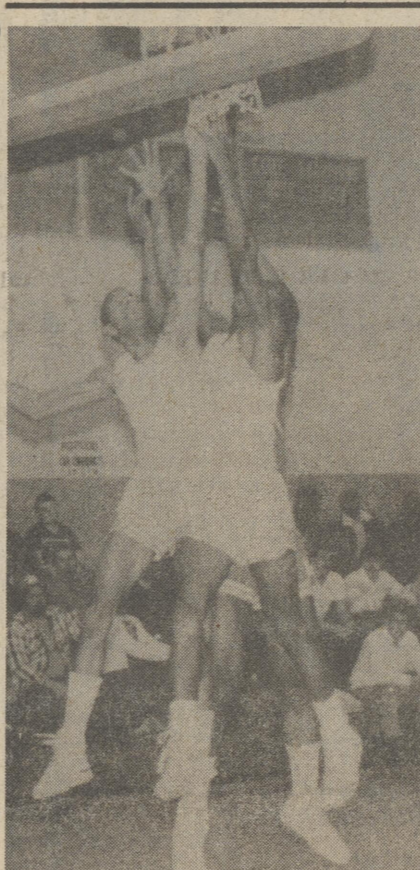

The Lake Forest boys basketball team started their 1987 conference slate with back to back losses to Woodbridge and Cape Henlopen.

In the season opener, the Spartans played host to the Woodbridge Blue Raiders, and fell victim to an outstanding game turned in by Heath Chasanov. Chasanov, son of Raider head coach Len Chasanov, pumped in 18 points and dished out 12 assists in a Magic Johnson-like performance.

The Spartans trailed by seven points at the half, and played the Raiders evenly in the 3rd quarter, but they could get no closer. The Raiders put the game away in the fourth quarter with a 23-13 spurt.

The Spartans hoped to rebound from their Woodbridge loss against Cape Henlopen, but again an outstanding performance did them in. Cape's Lando Biles fired in 26 points to lead the Vikings.

James Hicks continued at his consistent scoring pace with 18 points after scoring 15 points against Woodbridge. Chuck Bell, James Tiggs and Steve Sipple all pumped in eight points apiece.

LF grapplers crush Raiders

by Mike Dill

The Lake Forest wrestling team used seven pins to crush the Woodbridge Blue Raiders 47-11 in the conference opener for both teams.

Freddie Johnson, Brian Wyatt, Derek Dill, Tracy Johnson, Robbie Reed, Wendell Watson and Marvin Hicks all registered pins to lead the Spartans.

Later in the week, the Spartans traveled to Cape Henlopen to take on the Vikings. Despite pins by Marvin Hicks and Derek Dill, the Spartans dropped the match 43-24.

With two pins, it appears that Dill is back to his old self. After being named MVP his freshman year, and putting together three-straight winning seasons, Dill has recovered nicely from a leg injury.

Now that Dill is healthy, and Hicks continues to terrorize every heavyweight in the state, it may be just what the Spartans need to get on the winning track.

Roth announces Army contract for Wesley College

WASHINGTON--Senator William V. Roth, Jr., R-Del., recently announced the renewal of a five year, $2.9 million contract between Wesley College and the Army Command and General Staff College.

Roth, who worked to get the renewal and was instrumental in obtaining the original contract five years ago, said, "I am pleased that the Army decided to renew their contract with Wesley. Wesley has wonderful facilities and thanks to this contract, they will not go to waste during the summer months when their regular students are away." The contract allows the Army

Command and General Staff College to conduct training programs on the school's campus during June, July and August of each summer for the next five years. The Army officers who attend use the school's classrooms, dormitories and cafeteria. Approximately 1800 Army officers attend the college each summer.

"Not only is this an important source of revenue to Wesley College, but it also represents tourism dollars for the greater Dover area," Roth said. "This is an arrangement that is good for Wesley and good for the Army."

The contract was competitive and Wesley was the successful bidder. Final approval was given January 5 by Army Lt. General Charles D. Franklin and the contract will officially go into effect in June, 1987 and run through August of 1992. "From what I've heard, the Army has been very satisfied over the last five years with both the location of the school and the hospitality and excellent facilities offered by Wesley," Roth said.

The 114 year old school is an integral part of the Dover community. Wesley is a fully accredited four year institution of higher learning with an average enrollment of 1700 full and part-time students. Its 11 acre campus is located in the heart of Dover.

Bill Trice dies at age 68

Delmarva racing just won't be the same next year. William "Bill" Trice of the Trice Racing Team died Wednesday, January 7 of pulmonary cardiac arrest at Peninsula General Hospital in Salisbury. Sixty-eight year old Trice, best known for the cars he built for his racing sons Gary and David Trice, was buried Sunday in Parsonsburg Cemetery in Maryland.

Bill Trice started in racing more than 30 years ago as a racer, according to his son Gary.

"He raced in the '30s and '40s," Gary said.

Bill Trice took a break from racing and later reentered the speedways when Gary bought a car in 1969.

"He didn't think it was safe enough, so he got back into it (racing)," Gary said.

The racing urge must have come back at that time because according to Gary, "ever since he's back in."

Back in racing for Bill Trice wasn't the driver's seat, but instead, he became the man behind the scenes. He worked as the mechanic and as the engine builder for both of his sons' cars.

Although David Trice has since quit racing, Gary has remained on the scene, winning 16 feature events with cars built by his father.

"If he wasn't there, the race wasn't on. He was the man in the pits at both raceways," Gary said.

The Trice Racing Team races at U.S. 13 Speedway, Georgetown Speedway and at the Harrington Fairgrounds.

Gary will continue with racing this spring with a new Bud Olsen chassis he and his father picked out.

Without the expertise of their father, Gary and David might not hold their championships titles today.

The high point in racing for the Trice Racing Team began in 1976 when Gary became the Delaware State Modified Champion and David became Georgetown's Rookie of the Year.

Success continued for Gary throughout the 1970s as he went on to become Georgetown's Modified Point Champion in 1977 and 1978. He was also Delaware's Modified Champ in 1978.

In 1979 and 1983, Gary claimed second place in point standings at the U.S. 13 Speedway.

Team effort on the part of all family members including Bill Trice's wife Beulah, who worked for 17 years as a scorer at Georgetown, brought the Trice Racing Team into Delaware racing history.

Bill Trice's racing success will always be remembered on the Delmarva circuit. He is survived by wife Beulah, sons Gary and David and by four other children.

NCMS hosts Goodwrench 500

ROCKINGHAM, N.C.--North Carolina Motor Speedway becomes the next focal point for fans seeking outdoor entertainment with the Goodwrench 500 race weekend of February 26-March 1.

Race-hungry fans of the Carolinas-Virginia-Eastern Seaboard areas will be treated to 700 miles of fierce wheel-to-wheel action in the Goodwrench 200 for the Busch Grand National drivers on Saturday and the 500-mile Winston Cup feature on Sunday. The Unocal 76 Pit Crew Race, constituting changing four tires and installing 14 gallons of gas in the race car, will share Saturday top billing.

Preliminaries for the spring kickoff in the heartland of stock car racing will begin at 2:30 p.m. Thursday with qualifying for the prestigious Busch Pole Position Award. Winston Cup drivers will complete qualifying for the 40-car field on Friday at 2 p.m. followed by Busch Grand National qualifying.

Terry Labonte, defending Goodwrench 500 champion, had won three straight poles at NCMS before Tim Richmond ripped off a track record run of 146.948 mph last October prior to the Nationwide 500. Labonte, who has switched from Wayne King's Piedmont Airlines Chevrolet to Junior Johnson's Budweiser Chevy, is a two-time winner at NCMS.

Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt, winner of the last two Busch Grand National Goodwrench 200-mile races, will be shooting for a sweep by entering both events. His crew, headed by Richard Childress and Kirk

Pneumonia will keep Richmond from NASCAR's start

CHARLOTTE, N.C.--NASCAR driver Tim Richmond will most likely miss the beginning of the NASCAR season. He is battling pneumonia; it might take him four months to recover.

Richmond won't be one of the competitors in this year's Daytona 500, which will take place February 15.

The 31 year old stock car driver began feeling sick at the NASCAR awards banquet December 5 in New York. After checking into the Cleveland Clinic, Mr. Richmond found out how serious his condition was.

Hendrick Motorsports Team Owner Rick Hendrick said the number one priority right now is to get Tim well before putting him back out on the track.

Richmond picked up the biggest number of wins on NASCAR's circuit in 1986. He also led the Harrisburg-based Hendrick Motor Team to seven victories and eight pole positions.

Only Dale Earnhardt and Darrell Waltrip finished ahead of Richmond in the race for the driving championship. Richmond has been released from the Cleveland Clinic and is at home recuperating under doctor's care.

Coverdales head to East meets West competition

by Colleen Lilly

Two local Suzuki micro-midget race cars are headed to Tulsa, Oklahoma today to participate in an open competition Friday and Saturday, January 17 and 18.

Harrington Motor Company-Suzuki is sponsoring the cars, which will be driven by Milford residents Earl Coverdale and Bud Coverdale.

Gayle Smith, owner of Harrington Motor Company, said in this competition "the best cars east of the Mississippi meet the best cars west of the Mississippi."

Earl Coverdale, owner of Coverdale Insurance in Milford, said he expects to be turning the track in the low nine second area, at somewhere between 50 and 60 mph.

The Coverdales will be driving cars powered by 250cc. Suzuki engines on an indoor race track 1/8 mile long. Total weight of the 50-55 horsepower cars will be 550 pounds, including car and driver.

Earl Coverdale called the competition "really serious racing" since top competitors from around the country will be there.

Only 20 cars out of the 100 to 110 competing will qualify.

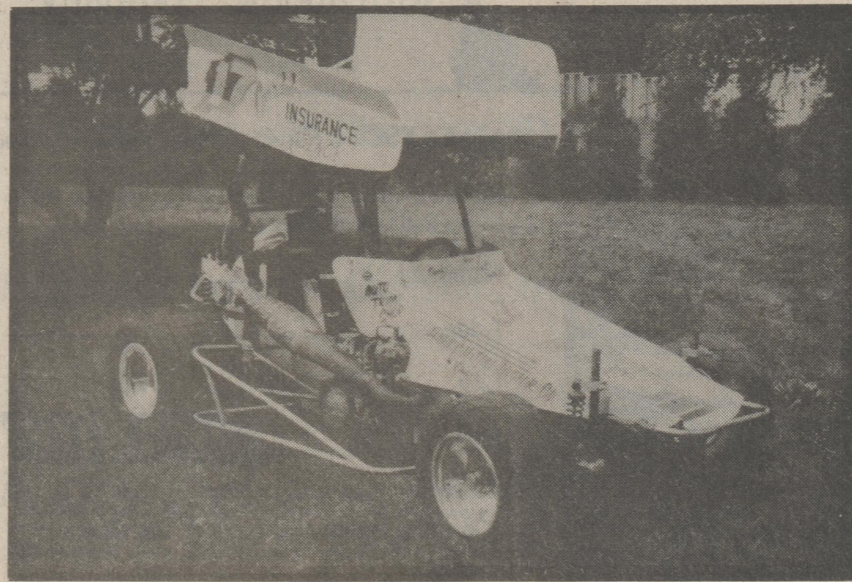

"We seriously expect to be there in the feature race," Earl Coverdale said.

"We've got the reputation to win," Gayle Smith added.

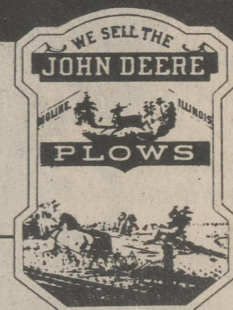

Because the micro-midget track at the Tulsa Oklahoma Fairgrounds is only an 1/8 mile long, Earl Coverdale said the limited straightaway will only let you, the driver, go so fast, but just the same, he expects to be going "extremely fast."

Bud Coverdale, owner of Bud's Auto Body in Milford said his brother Earl looked into this race last year, but this was their first trip out to Tulsa. He also expects to qualify.

Gary Smith, also a part owner of Harrington Motor Company, will be working as the "wrenchman" for the two cars.

Earl Coverdale's micro-midget, sponsored by Harrington Motor Co., will be competing against the best racers east and west of the Mississippi.

Paul and Anna Mae Elliott, Delmar, Delaware

We've seen they are committed to quality service and reliability in everything they do. And their innovative equipment and management techniques have saved us money we can reinvest in our farm. We've built a total of four chicken houses now.

And you know, we've never had a Perdue serviceman who didn't go into every single house. That's the mark of a good serviceman;

he doesn't have to ask how our chickens are doing. He makes sure he knows. So we trust Perdue because their advice is accurate and specific to our needs on our farm.

And that's important to us, because without our chickens, we would have had some mighty lean years on the farm. After all, it takes just 5 or 6 scorchers to burn up a year's worth of corn crop. But, growing for Perdue, we know we'll get 5 or 6 flocks of superior broilers in every house, every year. That's quite a substantial annual income we depend on. It's income we have to be sure of.

So you bet we're happy with Perdue. If we weren't, we wouldn't be giving this interview, 'cause we'd be with another company!"

Senator Minner's column

by Senator Ruth Ann Minner

Many times in this column, I refer to efforts initiated by members of the legislature to learn what new programs and proposals are being developed in other states, in an attempt to borrow an idea or two to use here at home.

The Council of State Governments Annual Meeting in New Jersey and the National Conference of State Legislatures Annual Meeting in Louisiana both provided legislators from Delaware to meet, discuss policy and learn from experts in various fields of problems that were of particular interest to state and local governments last year.

As an ongoing tool for communication, both organizations, CSG and NCSL, publish newsletters and magazines to continue the learning process for legislators throughout the year.

As an additional aid, samples of the most important and comprehensive legislation enacted in the various states are compiled in one guide and is distributed for use. Delaware efforts, for example, have been included in both the 1985 and 1986 issues of "sample legislation". The landmark Right-to-Know legislation, a law requiring employers to notify employees of hazardous materials used on the job (1985) and the L.U.S.T. legislation (leaking underground storage tank) which implemented a process for regulating the installation and maintenance of such tanks (1986) were both used as model laws for consideration by the other states.

Communication, as in any other business, is extremely important in government.

As a matter of fact, my first legislative initiative for the new session is an idea I got from the NCSL "State Legislature" magazine in which various new bills were highlighted.

I am currently in the process of researching a California law, which went into effect January 1 of this year, which created a test program for the purpose of reducing the rate of drunk drivers.

This program allows judges, as part of the DUI sentence, to require an interlock ignition device to be installed on the automobile of DUI offenders. Before starting the engine, the driver would first have to breathe into the analyzer. If the blood alcohol level of the driver indicates intoxication, the car would not start.

This law, the first of its kind in the nation, simply initiates a test program for the idea in a small number of counties in that state. It is much too early to determine its effectiveness, but with a problem as important as drunken drivers, particularly repeat offenders, I think every option should be considered.

I hope to have a complete summary about this legislation within the next week. If this appears to be a viable program, I will propose a similar initiative for use in Delaware at the earliest possible date.

Conservative Caucus of Lower Delaware supports President's arms deal

by David F. Coady, Chairman

"The Iran arms/spare parts 'sting' operation was a great victory for your administration" stated a letter from The Conservative Caucus of Lower Delaware, to President Reagan.

The letter went on to praise Lt. Colonel Oliver North for his ability to not only pull off the 'sting' operation, but, also, for managing to divert $30 million in much needed funds to the Nicaraguan Freedom Fighters.

The letter requested that President Reagan convey the gratitude of the Conservative Caucus of Lower Delaware to Colonel North.

The President
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20500
My Dear Mr. President:

I have been instructed, by The Executive Committee of The Conservative Caucus of Lower Delaware, to express, to you, the opinion of The Caucus, regarding the so-called Iran "scandal". It is our opinion that there is no scandal; that, quite the contrary, the Iran arms/spare parts "sting" operation was a great victory for your administration, and consequently for the United States of America.

We have deduced, from the newspaper and video media, that Lt. Col. Oliver North was able to sell to the Iranian Government, $12 million, in arms and spare parts for a total of $42 million. This has to be the biggest "sting" operation since the United States purchased Alaska from Russia, for next to nothing, over a century ago!

On top of all this, Colonel North was able to divert, out of this same operation, much needed funds to the Nicaraguan Freedom Fighters, at no cost to the American taxpayers! A cause in which we wholeheartedly support you. Sheer brilliance!

It is a shame to have such a great mind lost to your administration. We trust that our country is not to be deprived further of such strategic and tactical thinking exhibited by Colonel North, by any adverse effects on his Marine Corps career; he is a credit to both the Corps and the U.S. Naval Academy.

Please convey to Colonel North, the gratitude of The Conservative Caucus of Lower Delaware.
God be with you, and our great Republic!

Very respectfully yours,
David F. Coady

Clean water revisited

by Congressman Tom Carper

During the final days of the 99th Congress, a House and Senate conference committee hammered out a compromise agreement on legislation to reauthorize the Clean Water Act. When the conference report came before the House of Representatives on October 15th, I joined my colleagues in giving it unanimous approval. The very next day, the Senate did likewise.

At that time, I hailed the passage of the new Clean Water Act as particularly important to those of us in Delaware. Unfortunately, the President made what I believe was a penny-wise and pound-foolish decision by choosing to veto this important legislation. Since the 99th Congress had already adjourned, there was no opportunity to override the President's veto.

Last week, the 100th Congress convened and the first bill the House considered was the Clean Water Act. Virtually the same bill we passed last year, again passed with overwhelming support.

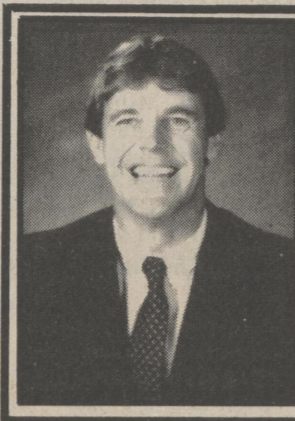

Why was the Clean Water Act the first bill passed by the House in the new Congress? Quite simply because the provisions contained within it are critical to the survival of our nation's water resources. Highlights of the bill include the authorization of funds for sewage treatment plant construction; grants to assist states in controlling nonpoint sources of pollution such as runoff from streets and fields; the prohibition of reduced standards for existing pollution control permits; more reasonable stormwater discharge requirements; stringent controls on toxic pollutants; and the establishment of programs to better monitor and reduce pollution in lakes and estuaries.

Passage of the Act will also represent a victory for Delaware and its inland bays. Last June, I joined with Senators Roth and Biden in writing to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to urge the inclusion of Delaware's Rehoboth, Indian River, and Little Assawoman Bays in the National Estuary Program. The Clean Water Act passed last week will direct the EPA to give priority consideration to eleven inland estuaries, including all three Delaware bays.

The Sewage Treatment Plant Construction Program reauthorized in the bill has already been a remarkable success story in Delaware. Only two Delaware communities of more than 500 inhabitants do not have sewage systems and secondary treatment facilities. Virtually no other state can make that claim. The funds from this program also provide for staff to monitor compliance with water pollution standards. Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control (DNREC) officials estimate that Delaware will be eligible for approximately $12 million in 1987 and 1988 under the new Clean Water Act.

Hopefully, when the new Clean Water Act arrives on the President's desk for a second time, he will sign it. It is time to stop dragging our feet and get back to the task at hand. Both in Delaware and across the nation, we must move ahead with our commitment to preserving one of our most precious natural resources: clean water.

District Dialog

"History"

USA Today has recently produced the most informative tool with which the U.S. Constitution's birthday may be both studied and celebrated.

Entitled USA Freedom, the tabloid presents a myriad of perspectives for dealing with the information surrounding the most important date in our history.

Some points worth noting deal with education.

Thomas Jefferson, a Virginia lawyer and author of The Declaration of Independence, warned that, if the common people aren't educated, the new democracy would not survive. "A nation which expects to be ignorant and free, expects what never was and never will be."

He fought long and hard for a public school system. Not unlike contemporary situations, funding was an issue. His "Bill for the More General Diffusion of Knowledge" would have levied a school tax. It had been soundly rejected four times since 1778.

"Let our countrymen know," said he, "that the tax which will be paid for this purpose is not more than the thousandth part of what will be paid to kings, priests and nobles who will rise up among us if we leave the people in ignorance."

Early education began on the farm. The majority of our new country's families lived on farms and produced what the families needed to live. This enabled youth to enter apprenticeships to learn how to operate the farms. The arrangements were informal and provided for youth to study under the tutelage of experienced adults in a variety of experiences.

A popular belief was to have teachers sign a loyalty oath before teaching in local schools. A majority of New York school masters required prospective teachers to certify age, conditions of life (whether single or married), temper, prudence, learning, sober and pious conversation, zeal for the Christian Religion, affection for present government and conformity to doctrine and discipline of the Church of England.

Debate raged on the topics of instruction in religious matter, schooling for women, state systems of education and a federal university.

Textbook author Noah Webster promoted a three-pronged plan for making the education of its youth the top priority of the new country. A strong public school system bolstered by attentive and supportive parents and good newspapers and travel would best get this goal accomplished he thought.

He advised each state to follow Connecticut's lead and establish a four-month public school system. "Here the rough manners of the wilderness should be softened and the principles of virtue and good behavior inculcated."

Students were to have, according to Webster's plan, instruction in the fundamentals, speaking, reading and writing the English language correctly and have a working knowledge of arithmetic and a fundamental understanding of history, geography and politics. Relevant instruction was also part of his plan. "Those destined for farming should study practical animal husbandry, and those who will be active in business should study trade and commerce."

With all the dialog regarding the topic, the Constitution makes no mention of a federal commitment to education. Scholars feared an undue centralization of schools.

It was nearly two hundred years ago when this debate took place. We celebrate the 200th birthday of the U.S. Constitution on September 17, 1987.

Yet these comments sound all too familiar. Two centuries later, in 1986, we still discuss these matters with a great deal of enthusiasm.

But this is more than just another case of history repeating itself.

...It is a matter of our future.

The hero in each of us

by U.S. Senator Bill Roth

The media accounts of the recent Amtrak train accident tragedy that occurred just west of Delaware in Maryland have saddened us all. We have all taken a moment to grieve for the victims and their families. At the same time we have heard inspiring stories about heroic acts by ordinary citizens, who with total selflessness, have gone the extra mile to help their fellow man.

The accident, which took the lives of 15 passengers and injured some 170, was unfortunately the worst in Amtrak's history. The horror of the accident and its aftermath is something none of us will soon forget.

I don't know if there is anyone you could actually call an "ordinary hero" for any heroic act is truly extraordinary. But seeing ordinary citizens inspired to go to great lengths to help others involved in a tragedy, reminds us of the potential greatness in all of us and the support of our fellow man.

During the aftermath of the Amtrak train accident, thousands of area residents turned out to give blood until the amount donated far exceeded what was needed. Local hospital staffs, firefighters, police, the Red Cross and the National Guard reported immediately and voluntarily for work that Sunday and put in long hours that night to help the victims of the accident. Residents near the scene of the accident came out of their homes to help the victims, offering blankets, food, telephones or just a place to warm up inside their houses.

Immediately following the accident, even the victims on the train reached out to help each other, some on a one to one basis, others assuming leadership in evacuating the train. People, who minutes before had been total strangers, joined together and touched each others lives in an irrevocable way.

The tragedy of the Amtrak train accident has touched all of us. But, certainly if there is an uplifting note about the whole horrible thing, it is the reminder that in each of us exists a "hero" who takes responsibility when the chips are down.

Insurance Commissioner names Mulholland to post

Insurance Commissioner David N. Levinson announced on January 5th that Catherine S. Mulholland has been named as the Insurance Department's Director of the Bureau of Examination, Rehabilitation and Guaranty. Levinson also announced the appointment of former Sussex County Administrator Joseph T. Conaway as his Chief Deputy. The Bureau of Examination, Rehabilitation and Guaranty oversees the solvency of Insurance Companies Delaware, and according to Levinson, is responsible for oversight of 75% of the Insurance Department's budget.

Levinson stated, "This reorganization brings to the Administration of the Delaware Insurance Department the double barreled firepower that Delaware citizens deserve. We have conducted a nationwide search for both a top administrator and a Director of Berg, and we have found them right in our own backyard. I do not believe that anywhere in the country there is a stronger insurance regulator of company solvency than Cathy Mulholland, and Joe Conaway's aggressive management style and creative programmatic ability is a proven commodity in our state."

Mulholland stated, "The creation of the Bureau by Commissioner Levinson has been one of the most important innovations in Insurance regulation in any state in many years. I look forward to the challenge and responsibility of this new position."

Conaway stated that he was honored to have been appointed Chief Deputy. "I have watched Dave Levinson restore public confidence in Delaware's Insurance Department. Under Dave's leadership, the office has taken a new direction to more fully serve the interests of Delaware citizens. I have always considered myself a doer, and I am privileged to accept a position with Delaware's ultimate doer, Dave Levinson. Dave doesn't just talk about problems; he solves them. When Dave Levinson gets involved, things get done."

Mulholland received her B.A. from the University of Kansas and her law degree from Villanova University. She represented the Delaware Insurance Department as Deputy Attorney General from 1981 until 1985. Conaway received his B.A. from Villanova University and his Masters in Administration from the University of Delaware. He has twenty years experience in Public Administration in Delaware, including being principal of the consolidated Woodbridge School until 1973 when he became Sussex County Administrator.

The swearing in of State Auditor

Thank you all for coming today and for sharing this time with me. I especially want to thank Judge Keil for doing me the honor of performing the ceremony and for his kind words. As he mentioned, we go back a long way. The first campaign I played an active part in was his for General Assembly -- before I was old enough to vote. I was aware then as I am today of the very great honor it is to be elected to public office.

All over Delaware today, people who, in November, received that honor are taking up the very great challenge of public service. And, for all of us, it begins with swearing a public oath, giving our word that we will put the good of the public before any other consideration as long as we are in office. We pledge ourselves to your service.

And by this ceremony, we are transformed from private citizens to officers of the government. It is one of the recurring miracles of democracy.

In taking the oath, we take up an obligation to give the best of ourselves, of our talents and our energies, to the government we serve and to the people whom that government represents. Our duty becomes clear. Our priorities become a matter of public record.

I know all this because I so clearly remember the first time I was sworn into office. There is a moment, one very distinct moment, when you feel changed. You have joined the service -- the public service. You have a new career. And for all your term in office, you are -- first and foremost -- a public servant.

Now that I have served a term, of course, I know a little better what the job is like, just what the demands are, and something of what to expect for the future. It is my sincere belief that some of the greatest challenges of our time will fall to the fiscal officers of the governments of our nation, our states and our cities and counties. Nothing has a greater impact or broader consequences than the condition of the economy. We all face a time when we must learn to cope with new situations, new industries, new information, new demands on our resources. We can no longer expect a natural process of unlimited expansion. Government needs to respond to these new situations speedily and responsibly.

Government fiscal officers must be willing and must be able to make government as cost-effective as the best-run business -- and then some.

The time has come when people should be paying less for government, not more. Essential services can and must be provided with a minimum of waste and a maximum of efficiency. Just like the economy, government cannot expect limitless expansion.

In Delaware, we are fortunate to have a sound economy and a healthy business climate. We have seen in recent months, the difficulties encountered by other

SALT-FREE LIVING

By Edwin Feulner

Reagan administration critics, from Harvard Yard to Red Square, are saying "nyet" to the president's decision to deploy another cruise-missile-carrying B52 bomber.

The long-expected decision, which brought to 131 the number of B52s outfitted with cruise missiles, puts the United States over one of the limits set by the Carter-Brezhnev SALT II agreement of 1979 -- an agreement so bad the Democrat-controlled Senate refused to ratify it.

Now the arms control groups in Washington and elsewhere are wringing their hands. Woe unto us. And Capitol Hill is alive with the usual rhetoric from the usual faces, charging President Ronald Reagan with all sorts of crimes against humanity.

The truth, of course, is that the United States has been living out a fantasy these past few years, abiding by a non-binding agreement that is a stinker if ever there was one.

The boss of the Soviet Union has operated under no such delusions. While mouthing all of the proper arms control platitudes, Mikhail Gorbachev and his predecessors long ago gave SALT II the heave-ho.

According to the authoritative U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, Soviet violations include the following:

- Development of two new intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs), the mobile SS-25 and the rail-mobile SS-X-24, violating SALT II's prohibition of flight-testing or deploying more than one new ICBM.
- Exceeding the SALT II ceiling of 2,504 "strategic nuclear delivery vehicles," military jargon for land- and submarine-launched missiles, strategic bombers, and air-to-surface devices such as the cruise missile. This is the same provision the Reagan administration is accused of violating.
- Encoding electronic data (known as telemetry) from missile tests, contrary to SALT II's provisions for measuring compliance with the treaty that never was.

According to informed experts, the Soviets also may be violating another SALT II provision -- the limit of 820 multi-warhead ICBMs the treaty allows each side.

As the Arms Control Agency said in a December 9 statement, "The U.S. government has repeatedly sought correction of Soviet non-compliance and gave the Soviets over a year-and-a-half to correct that situation. If the Soviets are serious about exercising restraint, the U.S. government would welcome it."

President Reagan announced last May that he would base future U.S. nuclear weapons decisions on U.S. national security needs, not on the non-existent treaty.

He did just that. And it was the right choice. (Feulner is president of The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based public policy research institute.)

Shelmerdine, has won the Unocal 76 Pit Crew World Championship for the past two years.

Racing's old guard of Richard Petty, Bobby Allison, Buddy Baker, Cale Yarborough, Benny Parsons and Harry Gant are being challenged by young lions Tim Richmond, Bill Elliott, Geoff Bodine, Bobby Hillin, Rusty Wallace and Ricky Rudd.

Slap-dab-in-the-middle of those groups are perennial victory threats Darrell Waltrip and Neil Bonnett. Just getting started, but demanding attention, are last year's rookie headliners Alan Kulwicki and Mike Waltrip and this year's leading rookie contender Davey Allison.

Add Sterling Marlin, fresh from Hoss

Ellington's Chevy to Labonte's vacated seat, and Ron Bouchard succeeding Marlin with Ellington, and the racing pot boileth over.

The Busch Grand National division is no longer short of name drivers either with such stalwarts as GN champ Larry Pearson, Brett Bodine and Dale Jarrett fulfilling their racing heritage last season with wins against the likes of Jack Ingram, Tommy Houston, L.D. Ottinger and other veterans.

Winter is still upon us, but another racing season is just around the bend. NCMS ticket offices report brisk ticket sales since before the holiday season, and a near capacity crowd is anticipated for the Goodwrench 500 weekend.

City Council presents report

"We saw a dramatic increase in the use of the library," Mr. Volenik said.

Mr. Volenik attributed the 50 percent increase in juvenile use of the library to an increase in the number of juvenile books available and to the interlibrary services Harrington offers.

"To put a modified system on line", Mr. Volenik said, City auditors, with the help of Norma Short, correlated the City's existing records.

After the Harrington City Council presented its annual report, Harrington Mayor Alfred Mann introduced the candidates for the upcoming election. In the Fifth Ward race, of the two candidates running for office, only one was present to speak.

Gene Currey, owner of Stone's Hotel, told the Council and the 10 other people present at City Hall his background.

Mr. Currey, who attended schools in both Harrington and Milford, is running against James Temple, the incumbent in the 5th District.

Mr. Currey, who said his family's "back in town to stay" also said, "I feel I can help the Council and the City progress in the way the City's run."

Running unopposed in the 6th District is N. Watson Brown. Mr. Brown, who served as a teacher in the Wilmington public school system 32 years, said, "Harrington's a fine town. I'd like to keep it that way."

In the race for mayor, the challenger Harry G. Farrow, Jr. was unable to attend the electors meeting.

Mayor Alfred Mann, who has served as mayor for the last six years, said he hopes to see the progress of Harrington continue.

While Mayor Mann said Harrington was "slack in civic practice," he said, "Civic pride has improved a lot."

Citing the city's well kept homes and well kept shrubbery, Mr. Mann said, "Harrington has a lot to be proud of."

Mr. Volenik took the responsibility for not advertising the annual meeting more than two days before its occurrence.

The meeting should have been published in a newspaper of general circulation "at least 10 days prior" to the meeting, according to the Harrington City Charter.

Department of Agriculture to address gypsy moth problem in Harrington

"The state has a suppression program. We're not trying to eradicate it, we're trying to suppress the insect to a level we can live with," said Ms. Bradley.

Funding for the gypsy moth suppression program comes from both the state and the federal government. The U.S. government reimburses half of the costs involved with the insecticide spraying through Cooperative Force Pest Management money.

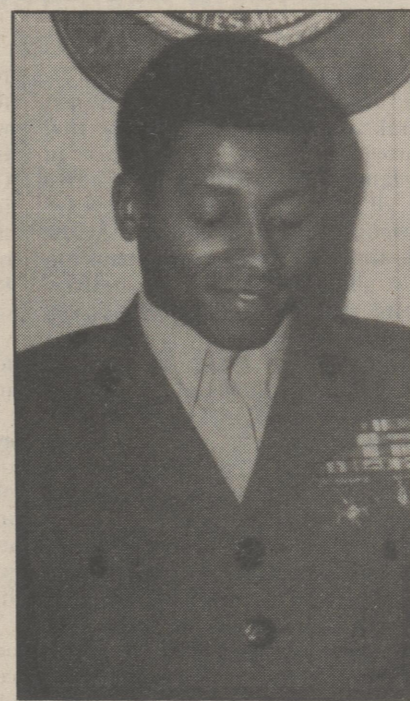

While federal funding won't come until spring, no problem is anticipated in receiving funds this year. At some point, federal funding may run out, Ms. Bradley said.

"We don't know how much we'll be getting from the federal government," she said.

The state budget for the project is approximated at $130,000 and will cover the spraying of 13,000 acres, according to Ms. Bradley.

The most infested areas will be treated first by the Department of Agriculture. For people owning infested oak and hickory trees not covered in the state's spraying project, Ms. Bradley recommends having a private contractor spray the trees, especially if the trees are slated for sale as timber.

states which find themselves dependent on a particular business or industry, and thus, out of luck when there is a downturn in that segment of the economy. Here in Delaware, we have such a variety of resources that our potential for fiscal health is enormous. I believe the future of Delaware to be diamond bright. In this bi-centennial year, we can look back on two centuries of prosperity and plenty, and hopefully forward to many more centuries of progress and of peace. We have the capacity to build a shining future for ourselves and our posterity.

The promise of tomorrow starts with our commitment today to demand the best of ourselves, to do something every day to make life better in times to come. It is my very great honor and privilege to stand up in public today and promise to give you my best for as long as it is your pleasure that I serve.

Again, thank you all for coming. I hope you all will join us for brunch.
