Judge Merrill C. Trader swore the new officials into office, beginning with Harrington Mayor Harry G. Farrow, Jr. Mr. Farrow, the challenger in the mayoral election, defeated the incumbent Alfred G.B. Mann.

In the fifth ward, James Temple took the oath of office. Mr. Temple defeated his challenger Gene Currey 56 to 25.

N. Watson Brown ran unopposed in the sixth district. He also took the oath. Donald Jarrell stepped down as Councilman to Mr. Brown, wishing Ronald L. Darling, deputy director of elections for Kent County, accepted the election results because the results would have remained unchanged because of Mr. Farrow's margin of victory.

In the reorganization of Harrington's government, the Harrington City Council voted to appoint Councilwoman Sue Ellen Dennis vice mayor of the City of Harrington.

The roll call vote of the Council indicated three votes in favor of the appointment, three opposed. Favoring the appointment were Mr. Temple, Ms. Dennis and Mr. Brown. In opposition were James Boyd, Jack Wyatt and Reverend Daniel R. Coleman.

Because of the tie, Mr. Farrow cast the deciding vote in Ms. Dennis' favor.

The Council was in full agreement in the approval of Councilman William Walls as City Solicitor and in the approval of Mr. Brown as City Treasurer.

A motion to nominate City Manager George Volenik to the position of acting alderman was tabled until the Council's workshop meeting January 26. The duties of alderman will be discussed at that time.

Lake Forest and Frederica agree on well installation

by Colleen Lilly

The Town of Frederica and the Lake Forest School Board made an agreement at Monday's Lake Forest School Board meeting to allow Frederica to install a town well on the property of Lake Forest East Elementary School.

Although the final agreement between Lake Forest and Frederica has not been signed, the town will be placing a well 100 feet off the roadway on the eastern boundary of the school.

The new well will supplement Frederica's existing system.

Dr. James H. VanSciver, superintendent of the Lake Forest District, said that by allowing the well to be installed at the school, the school board is keeping within its philosophy of 'trying to help the school community."

The Lake Forest School Board also approved the partial funding of a program, which would allow nine of Lake Forest High School's students to attend a week long seminar in $100 per student. The total cost per Washington, D.C.

The Close Up program gives students a chance to interact with politicians and members of the media in D.C. while also living in the capital for the week.

Through open forums and meetings with senators and students from other schools, the students will bring back information which they will pass along to the junior and senior English classes at Lake Forest.

The group will be focusing on how government interacts with the media.

Students from Lake Forest agricinating in the Close Up program include Lisa Luckenback, Patricia Mason, Laura Burrows, Audra Potts, Chinda Skaggs, Tammy Roth, Kitty Jones, Theresa Flanagan and Rachel Gusset. They will be leaving the first week in February. The school board approved funding of student is $635 for the week in Washington. The rest of the money, according to Dr. VanSciver, will be sought through fundraisers and from the students themselves.

The board will have further discussion of future funding and the possible criteria which students may need in order to be considered for this program at its February 2 workshop meeting.

Guidelines for the district concerning which teachers will keep their jobs in declining enrollment circumstances were adopted by the school board. The new policy known as Reduction in Force (RIF) takes into account the various types of seniority a teacher may have in his department and his school. In other school board action, Lake Forest will have a Comprehensive Operational Plan for Music Education all grades, beginning next year

Earl Butz sees a brighter future in farming

by Colleen Lilly

Is the American farmer in bad financial shape? The controversary surrounding the agricultural industry topped the agenda of former Secretary of State Earl Butz, who spoke at Lake Forest High School Tuesday, January Butz said the industry is 'portrayed as one that's sick," but is just the opposite.

'I see a brighter future for the farmer,' Mr. Butz said.

Mr. Butz told area farmers and members of Lake Forest's Future Marion Brown of Simpson Street Farmers of America (FFA) a challenge remains ahead in the farming industry, a challenge in learning how to feed the

He said the number one problem farmers face right now is the new Congress because "there's a lot of rhetoric in this new Congress.

One example of what he calls 'rhetoric" is the Harkin bill before the Congress, According to Mr. Butz, the bill, commonly known as the family farm bill, would cut back on the amount sold per acre in the domestic market.

He said some members of Congress are "crying to save the family farmer," but he says the family farmer is no longer the one with just a few acres. The family farmer is now the new commercial farmer in America, the one who owns American farmer get back into the world markets as a competitor.

He said Governor Pete duPont, who is running for U.S. President in the 1988 race, advocates a policy shift in agriculture.

Mr. Butz commended Governor duPont's desire to move away from government farm subsidies and on to a policy of "market orientation."

Mr. Butz said he would like to see the farming industry to continue to grow. The advantages of chemical sprayings of crops outweigh the disadvantages, according to Mr. Butz.

'It would be impossible to feed 240 million Americans like we do today using organic agriculture," he said. America could go back to organic farming if it wanted, but Mr. Butz said the cost to progress wouldn't be advantageous to farmers.

Another development working toward the advancement of farming he said is the use of biotechnology. He said while advances in science, such as growth hormones for cows, are viewed by a

A question concerning the length of last year's term for Mr. Boyd came up. Mr. Boyd was appointed last year to serve until March 1987. Mr. Farrow asked for his resignation from that position, so that the whole committee will serve the same term, which will run from February 1987 to February 1988.

Norma Short will continue in her position as Clerk to the Court until February, when the Council will vote to reappoint her. The position of Clerk to the Court has no specifications concerning its term.

picked, she said. As a child she also spent time wading and fishing in Killens and McCauley

By taking the children she teaches on similar experiences, such as walking in the woods or near a stream, she said she is able to pass on "a lot of skills that are basic to learning.

'We try to get all the senses in," said Ms. Bankert.

The curiousity of the kids helps them better communicate because from a trip in Thompson's Bridge Park or a walk by Rocky Run creek, they want to talk about it or know more.

"You can get them to do almost everything if it's something they're excited about," she said.

For example, her class is currently working on making marionettes after they finish their work each day. She said they've been finishing their work early so they can work on their puppets.

Ms. Bankert is able to channel her students' enthusiasm into other learning skills, such as writing and dictionary use.

She said students want to write and learn more if they're excited about a

Because of how the Pilot School is structured, Ms. Bankert may spend more than four years with her students. Staying that long together, they don't just breeze over topics. Each year they've studied something specific with more depth. In fall Ms. Bankert's science classes studied insects by catching them in nets and keeping them in the classroom for observation. Doing this helped them learn about predator-prey relationships and the structure of an ant

To learn the metric system, she brought an amaryllis plant into the classroom and had the kids measure and graph the plant's growth.

Phonetics is taught with the use of associations, "they remember it. It's our

"It's a way of getting to things they don't like, using fun," she continued. 'We do do a lot of science, as a means of getting to the meat.

These kids have never been able to appreciate the simple things," she said Ms. Bankert brings the simple things to them, and sometimes not only gets the kids excited but also gets the parents excited. A night of star gazing from the Mount Cubo Observatory brought even the parents an appreciation, especially since their children knew so much about the stars. Since the school's purpose is to get students working up to their potential, Ms. Bankert said it's often hard to see them move on.

"You get very close to them," she said. Ms. Bankert first realized she wanted to teach when she was in elementary school. She remembers her fourth grade teacher letting her help another student with his work and how she enjoyed seeing him learn.

When I look back, I had a good background. Harrington's stifling at times, but it has its advantages. People care," she said.

The same demands the teachers in Harrington placed on her to achieve she places on her students.

'I expect out of them what they can do," she said. In addition to teaching, Harrington High's 1959 valedictorian also has a family with two children. Ms. Bankert taught in Seaford before moving to New Jersey for two years with her husband, Ralph.

Currently, her 18 year old daughter Diane is studying in France. Her 13 year old son is attending school in Wilmington.

She will receive her award for teacher of the year January 27 in Dover.

Manfred Hanover

From the horse's mouth

What Manfred Hanover would say

Manfred Hanover is a seven year-old trotter whose winning form has won him a warm spot in the hearts of Meadowlands racetrack customers.

If Manfred Hanover could talk, he would tell Giant coach Bill Parcells and his middle linebacker, Harry Carson, they are crazy for their Gatorade act.

For the uninitiated, Carson has made a habit of dousing Parcells with a giant pail of Gatorade in the closing moments of a game when the Giants are assured of a victory. The scene has been seen by a full house of fans at Giants Stadium and millions more on the T.V.

"Gatorade is better to drink than waste," Manfred might tell Carson and Parcells. Manfred should know. The old campaingner thrives on gallons of Gatorade as a supplement to his regular

Manfred Hanover arrived for the current Meadowlands campaign right after New Year's Day to prepare for the Su Mac Lad trotting series which begins February 2. Manfred made a clean sweep of the event in 1986, winning the four-race series on the way to a 17-race Manfred has earned the title of the 'best lover in the Meadowlands backstretch" because he spends his offtrack moments in the bredding shed. He bred 68 mares last year.

Besides his winning streak last year, the son of Super Bowl shattered Greyhound's mark for two minute miles. He posted 25 career miles in two minutes or under. Greyhound's record had stood for half a century.

Manfred started his 1987 campaign by winning an invitational event that veterinarian, is in charge of the groom's carried a $35,000 purse January 5th at duties when the trotter is racing. It was the Big M. He ran into a problem breaking at the start in his second Big M try January 12 and had to settle for an out-of-the-money finish.

Walter and John are sure their charge will bounce back. "He did after his losses last year," they said, "so there's no reason he won't be back strong

Manfred is going to be around a long time. "I'll keep racing him until he's 14," said Walter, "if, of course, he stays sound." The gallant trotter recovered from a leg injury last June to make a successful return to action. If he races that long, Manfred Hanover may finish up racing against tortters he has sired.

Spartans still winless

The Lake Forest boys' basketball team did not expect to challenge for the Southern Division title this year, but the Spartans did expect to finish in the top three of the division. One of the teams the Spartans had to defeat to finish in the top three is Indian River.

The Spartans had their first shot at the Indians last week and could not put a total game together and lost to the Indians 62-47.

The Indians were led by Tony Brinkley, who pumped in 30 points, and Jeff Dennis with 16 points. The 2-6 Indians held the Spartans to nine points

James Hicks continued his consistent scoring pace by leading the Spartans with 11 points. James Tiggs added eight, Tony Bray added 11, and Chuck Bell chipped in seven points.

Earlier in the week the Spartans lost to undefeated Caesar Rodney 70-60. The Riders were ahead 37-25 at the half and survived a late Spartan run for the win. Chuck Bell led the Spartans with 15 points and James Hicks added 14 for the Spartans, who fell to 0-4 in conference and 0-8 overall for the season.

Additional Funding sought for Gypsy Moth Problem

Insufficient funding may keep the Delaware Department of Agriculture from spraying all of the areas infested with gypsy moths this spring.

'The Harrington area is one of our top priorities," Linda Tower Bradley, plant supervisor for the Department of Agriculture told area residents at a public hearing held at the Harrington Fire Hall January 15.

The Department of Agriculture will be asking the Delaware General Assembly for additional funding to treat the plans for 50,000 acres to be treated in 1987. providing it has the funding.

'We don't have the money to treat 50,000 acres. We're hoping for a commitment from the legislature very quickly," Ms. Bradley said.

A reduction in the amount of money the Department of Agriculture receives from the federal government will more than likely occur in 1987.

insecticides, bacillus thuringinesis (BT) and dimilin.

Within the treated area, 1,500 acres of trees were defoliated by gypsy moths. An additional 1,500 acres was defoliated outside of the treated areas.

"Most of it was in the Harrington area." Ms. Bradley said. Eleven hundred acres of these defoliated trees, outside of the treated The national forest service meets state areas, were in two wooded lots near the Harrington Fairgrounds.

Defoliation occurs when the gypsy moths hatch into caterpillars, and the caterpillars feed on the leaves of hardwood trees.

Once the caterpillars strip a tree of its leaves, the tree must refoliate, a process trees are not designed to do.

The Department of Agriculture's average count. Suppression Project is not designed to eradicate the gypsy moth, but instead to bring it to an acceptable level.

"We're going to try to keep them at a level we can live with," said Ms.

The goals for the 1987 gypsy moth spray project are to prevent defoliation and to reduce the gypsy moth egg mass counts to below 250 egg masses per acre. 'Our ultimate goal is egg mass reduction," Ms. Bradley said. The minimum criteria for treatment of gypsy moths is 250 egg masses per acre of land.

Lynn Harrison, an entomologist for the Department of Agriculture said, "Two hundred fifty is the bottom of the threshold where defoliation will occur.

In 1987, the use of BT will be dramatically cut back and the use of dimilin will be increased because of its effectiveness

The results of the 1986 egg mass survey show the number of egg masses decreasing from those in 1985. According to Ms. Harrison, the average count in areas where BT was used in 1986 was 1,000 egg masses per acre, down 600 masses from 1985.

To determine how many egg mass counts are in an acre, the Department of Agriculture used a method known as the five minute walk method.

The Department of Agriculture has gypsy moth infestation with two can eventually drain the trees of their walked for 10 minutes through and it dies. randomly chosen, infested lots. They counted the total number of egg masses divided it by two to determine an

> This method, developed by Syracuse University, has proved fairly reliable and takes less time to complete, according to Ms. Harrison. Another method, which takes two to three times longer and produces the same results, is to count the exact number of egg masses in a 1/40 acre lot and then to multiply the total by 40.

The Department of Agriculture chose the shorter method when conducting its surveys from September through December 1986.

Dimilin was used for the first time in 1986 in highly infested areas near Hartly. Acres having 3,000 egg masses per acre in 1985 had only 135 per acre after spraying in 1986.

Areas near Harrington are on the priority list because egg mass counts as high as 8,000 have been reported. Harrington, Farmington and Houston have counts reported above 4,501. Felton has an average count of 751 to

Most of these areas will be treated with dimilin, which works as a growth regulator. When young caterpillars eat the dimilin, it works to weaken the chitin holding their skin together.

At the caterpillar's next molt, its new skin is not strong enough to hold it together.

BT is a purely biological product, according to Ms. Bradley. When the Representatives from the department caterpillar eats it, its stomach ruptures

Services

Timing is a crucial element in the use of BT because it is most effective with in that 10 minute period and then young caterpillars because they only need to eat a small quantity of it to die.

In the test area where dimilin was used last year, less than one percent of the 17,000 acres sprayed defoliated.

Because of dimilin's effectiveness, the Department of Agriculture may start its spraying earlier in April this year. No definite time for the spraying has been set because no plans can be finalized until all funding is received and a contractor is found.

Areas that will not be sprayed include residential areas where four or five houses might be grouped and areas that have been heavily stripped.

"If the logging in the area exceeds 50 percent, more than likely they won't be considered for spraying," said Ms.

Trees close to homes will not be sprayed if the pilot has to spray the house

For people with oak trees close to their homes, Ms. Bradley suggests getting a private contractor to spray the trees. Ms. Bradley said there are two schools of thought concerning gypsy moths. Letting nature take its course is how some states in the northeast have dealt with the problem, mainly because of insufficient funding. The other thought is "we don't want to lose all of these good trees," said Ms. Bradley

'The question," she said, "is do you want to take those losses in the short

Nine other states have opted not to take the risks of losing their hardwood threes, and efforts to suppress the gypsy moth in these area is paying off.

More than 210,000 acres in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Minnesota, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Washington and Virginia have been treated for infestation, according to Bert W. Hawkins of the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Thirty sites in these nine states have used BT to treat the problem.

Record Daytona 500 Purse at $1.5 million

DAYTONA BEACH, FL--A record of the Daytona 500 NASCAR Winston stock car race on February 15 has been announced by officials at Daytona International Speedway.

The purse is by far the largest dollar amount offered on the multi-million dallar Winston Cup Series. Daytona is the only stock car facility that offers a million dollar purse.

Therefore, when the green flag waves for the start of this Speed Weeks tradition, most of the field of up to 42 Winston Cup drivers will be chasing the richest purse awards in their careers.

"The Daytona 500 is, without purse of $1,501,025 for the 29th running question, the premier event worldwide in stock car racing," said Speedway General Manager John D. Riddle. "This purse reflects the professionalism, dedication and ability these fine athletes and their teams bring to this

> The 1987 purse reflects an increase of more than $32,000 over last year, when posted awards totaled $1,468,715.

After he won his first superspeedway Winston Cup race in last year's Daytona 500 Geoff Bodine won a record $192,715, a mark which quite possibly will be surpassed this February.

Among this year's favorites will be horse favorites. 1986 race winner Bodine; defending Winston Cup champ Dale Earnhardt, who nearly won the '86 500; Darrell Waltrip, who will run his first race with a new team and who has never won a Winston Cup event at Daytona; Bill Elliott, the '85 race winner who appears to have his act very much together this year; and Terry Labonte, who assumed the seat in Junior Johnson's car that was vacated by Waltrip.

Bodine and Nelson look ahead to Goodwrench 500

ROCKINGHAM, N.C.--While several where we can work on a lot things such prominent Winston Cup Series racing teams are lined up and taking turns at Daytona International Speedway in search of additional speed for the Daytona 500 on February 15, 1987, the Hendrick Motorsports team of Geoff Bodine and Gary Nelson is looking ahead to the Goodwrench 500 on March with endurance tests at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Nelson pointed out during tests the first part of the week that endurance is the main factor they are concerned with for the 1987 season. "We won enough poles (8) last year to establish the fact that we have speed," said Nelson. "What we're looking for is ways to maintain that speed over the long haul.

'We couldn't do that with all the traffic they have at Daytona, so we picked Rockingham because it is a track as reactions of the car to the new weight (200 pounds lighter at 3,500), tire wear,

'Once the season gets started we won't have time to do much testing so we need to get a line on what to expect now, said Nelson. "One thing we have found out in just a few laps is that the speeds will likely be faster. We're running around 144 mph. We could probably block off the front end, go to a qualifying setup and break the track record (146.948 by Tim Richmond) right now.'

What is most probable is that Bodine and Nelson are doing all the homework they can in order to be ready for the challenges offered by nominal teammates Tim Richmond and Harry Hyde and Darrell Waltrip and Waddell Wilson--all flying the Rick Hendrick Motorsports banner.

Other trainers with a mare of such ability in their barns may enlist the services of a leading driver to handle the lines. But Manzi will handle the task himself, approaching the job with the same confidence he shows during training hours.

"Driving is the easier part of horseracing," said Manzi. "There are snap decisions you must make, and you are either born with the ability, or vou're not.

"I respect all of the drivers, but I am not in awe of any of them. You can develop the needed confidence with experience.'

The most challenging part of training standardbreds is dealing with the owners, according to Manzi.

"You are dealing with people who often times know nothing about the animals they are investing in. I am always perfectly honest with them. I don't pamper them. If I lose sleep over a horse's problems, then so do they," he

"Our Beef Business Couldn't Be Better Since We Started Growing Chickens"

A former banker talks about Perdue as an investment.

"We raise 800 head of Simmental cattle for breeding and to sell locally as freezer beef. Our new Perdue broiler operation has fit in beautifully and has actually helped to make our cattle business more efficient and cost effective.

"The cash flow generated by our first two flocks of Perdue broilers has far exceeded my projections. It has enabled us to handle our overhead expenses including mortgage, taxes, and insurance, plus the new debt we incurred by building our three chicken houses. We still have enough cash flow left to assist our beef operation.

"Another benefit of our broil er operation is that after 1986 I will never again have to write out a check for commercial fertilizer. We use the chicken manure from the houses on the pastureland and hay for the cattle. It's a tremendous cost saver.

"Our broiler operation is also helping us realize another dream —that of being independent and on the farm. I was a banker for more than 18 years and a regional lending officer. I was aware of the investment potential of Perdue. Before investing I did cash flow projections and discovered that building three broiler houses would do what I wanted. Reality has proven my original cash flow projections to be quite conservative. Our first two flocks have exceeded my projections by a great deal and if we were to continue at this pace, we would be better off financially raising chickens and beef than we were when I was a banker.

Senator Minner's column

by Sen. Ruth Ann Minner

Since the Governor delivered the annual State-of-the-State address before a joint session of the General Assembly last week, I intended to dedicate this entire column to my reaction to the contents of that speech.

Aside from a good bit of "Bicentennial hoopla", however, there is really very little to react to.

The Governor's thematic overview of past accomplishments, current priorities and basic goals for the future, left, in my opinion, very little in specifics to form any type of reaction. Maybe the Budget Address, which is scheduled for the final week of this month, will include more specifics and stake out more ground concerning the Administration's priorities and

We enacted laws during the past few years which clearly intended to prevent such individuals from participating in these programs but, somehow, it is now coming to light that these laws are being procedurally "sidestepped" in the bureaucratic process.

Hopefully, upon completion of this investigation, some worthwhile proposals and ideas will be generated to repair many of the failures in our system which are now being identified.

"Written Communicaton"

Education more often is finding its way to the editorial pages of our nation's newspapers. Whether it's sex education, a debate over textbook selection and use or eligibility standards for athletes, issues in our schools get regular attention in that section of the tabloid which deals with opinion.

The topic addressed in the December 12, 1986 edition of Salisbury's Daily Times dealt with the "back to basics" movements in our schools, an emphasis in which teachers are to focus on instruction "on core courses" in order that students will demonstrate mastery, at a level higher than functional, in math, reading, democratic principles and writing.

It was ironic that this particular piece chose to deal specifically with writing. Here was a principle vehicle for the dissemination of written communication revealing its dissatisfaction with the general populace's inability to communicate adequately in a written form

The editor chose not to place blame but rather to investigate the history and subsequent potential solution to this situation. It was a gallant effort and linked the reluctance of inability to read with the shortcomings in writing. There are many academicians who subscribe to this philosophy.

In truth, many people may misidentify copying, taking notes and the like for writing. Certainly it is not.

To write is to take pen in hand with purpose, to connect the writer's mind with the written word. Attention must be paid to the selection of an audience, conventions and a higher order of thinking which takes the writer through a process including identification, categorizing, organizing and interpretation. To be sure, clearly there is a difference between writing a letter to a friend about an incident which took place on a summer vacation and writing a report to a policeman with regard to an accident one witnessed.

The astute writer will do with a pen what no painter can do with a brush. Breathing life into characters, the writer can entice readers into participating in a roller coaster ride of ups and downs on the track of emotion. The written word has the ability to come alive!

Our Daily Times editor suggests quite correctly that practice will result in better writing and continues again without error, to tie clear thinking with clearer writing. It takes, he points out, dedication.

A quote from "the gifted wordsmith," James J. Kilpatrick, was interjected to solidify the already sturdy stand on this topic. "There is nothing arcane or mysterious about the crafting of a respectable sentence. Writing is carpentry; it is the craft of putting words together. The construction of a good, solid sentence is no more a matter of instinct than the putting together of a dovetailed drawer.

The final point, that writing should not be left only to the teachers of English, is also legitimate. Certainly one must be able to communicate in written form in all the fields of science, in all matters of mathematics. Should one question our success in the area of communication in social studies?

It is a matter of something more than major importance. The days of the handshake verbal agreement are long gone. Written contracts, our propensity to involve ourselves in litigation and the billions of dollars lost annually to our economy simply due to our inability to communicate on paper all serve to verify the need for immediate and lasting improvement in this basic skill.

Our economy, our form of government, our ability to survive in an increasingly sophisticated world...it's all a matter of written communication.

Janet Rzenwnicki Inaugural speech

Governor Castle, former Governor Boggs, Chief Justice Christie, Rev. Batten, Mayor Carroll, and all my friends who have taken time from their busy schedules to be here. Thank you for coming to Dover tonight to begin with me my second term of office.

Before I give my remarks I would like to introduce a few family members and friends who are in the audience. The Patriot who was holding the Bible for me is my father Robert Myers. He is from Georgia so we are very pleased to have him here. Of course, everyone knows my husband, Victor. Another Patriot who is in the audience tonight is my good friend and Mayor of this Town, Crawford Carroll.

Well, if anyone should ask the question is re-election as good as being elected, I now have the answer, Yes. Re-election is a GREAT feeling. The Office of State Treasurer is a traditional office, extending back, as former Governor Boggs pointed out, to 1778. We were a new State then, the United States was an experiment. Money was hard to find and public financial support was grudging. But we made it. We are still being tested, 200 years later as a state and as a nation. When the Treasury of the State of Delaware was administered back in 1787, there were only thousands of dollars that were watched over. Today as State Treasurer it is one of my duties to scrutinize more than one billion dollars in annual financial transactions. I have worked under both the DuPont and Castle administrations and I can say that I am very proud of the financial direction of the State of

During my first four years as State Treasurer I have begun changes in policies designed to improve the efficiency of the office. As a professional Accountant I have seen policies that needed changes. I HAVE MADE THEM. During these next four years I will continue to be alert so that our financial management will be the best

Tonight, I want to thank all the citizens of our First State who have supported me during my first four years State Treasurer. You have been wonderful. When I needed to call on one of our fine citizens for assistance no one has ever refused. We are like a community in this friendly state and that is one of the advantages we enjoy. Let me thank you all again for your attendance tonight and let me pledge to you and to all of the citizens of Delaware that I shall continue as a public servant to represent you in all of the decisions that make up each day's work in the Office of State Treasurer of Delaware. I look forward to serving you for another

The pay raise brouhaha

by Congressman Tom Carper

The hottest political issue in Washington this month is not the Irancontra scam. The real hot potato is a plan included in President Reagan's budget proposal to raise by 15% the pay of top federal officials in government including the Vice-President, federal judges, cabinet members, congressmen

There is no denying that the salaries of these officials have not kept up with inflation over the past 20 years. Still, it is hard for me to imagine a worse example for Members of Congress to set at this time than to raise their own salaries by $12,000.

As we strive to balance the federal budget without raising taxes, a number of Americans will be asked to tighten their belts. If there was ever a time that called for leadership by example, this is

Last December, the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries recommended pay increases of over 50% for 3,000 top federal officials to restore the buying power they enjoyed 20 years ago. In his budget proposal, however, the President scaled down their recommendations.

Under existing law, the President's recommendations will become effective in February unless both the House and Senate pass a joint resolution of disapproval which the President must also sign to derail the raises. If the President vetoes the resolution; the pay hikes could only be halted by a twothirds override vote in both the House and Senate.

After considerable reflection, I have cosponsored legislation which permits the recommended pay raises for the executive and judicial branches, but stops the pay raises for Members of Congress. I believe that the pay of representatives and senators should be adjusted each year by the same percentage as that of most federal employees. For example, when the pay of federal employees was frozen last year, I supported freezing the pay of Members of Congress. Similarly, I supported giving representatives and senators the same three percent raise this year which federal employees

Having said that, I don't support denying the President's proposed pay raises to the senior executive branch officials or to federal judges. In recent years, some of our best and brightest judges have left the bench to return to private practice and the higher pay associated with it. Cabinet secretaries and their deputies, running multibillion dollar agencies like the Pentagon, Veterans Administration and Social Security Administration are paid far less than private sector managers with comparable responsibilities. Not infrequently, these government officials leave, too, in order to maximize their income in the private

On the other hand, we are not witnessing the widespread resignations of senators and representatives because their pay is too low. Some grumble privately about the difficulty of maintaining homes in Washington and in their respective states, but I personally believe that $77,100 per year is a fair wage in the current environment of budgetary restraint.

That opinion is probably shared by most Delawareans. We'll find out in the next few weeks if it is also shared by a majority of my colleagues in the Congress. I suspect it will be.

Entrepreneurship Endangered

by John Sloan

They called it the "little plane that could." Voyager, a weirdlooking airplane designed by an obscure engineer and flown by two previously unknown pilots, proved that you don't need the sanction of government nor the financial muscle of big corporations to be successful.

The media focused on the tired aviators and the bad weather and the possibility of failure but paid little attention to the fact that the Voyager, some six years before, was just a rough sketch drawn by a dreaming aircraft designer on a paper napkin. In the ensuing rush to meet deadlines and proclaim new heroes, many overlooked the painstaking years of trial and error, redesign and failure, personal sacrifice and financial strife suffered by those who refused to give up on an idea in which they believed: While it is important to note the setting of records and the worldwide acclaim of this event, we should pay careful attention to other aspects of the project. Note that Voyager was not government-funded nor reliant on big doses of corporate funds. To the contrary, the brothers Rutan — designer Burt and pilot Dick — chose to keep the adventure as privately controlled as possible — to prove that Americans can succeed on their own.

Today, that independent spirit, which has encouraged and nurtured American inventiveness and entrepreneurship throughout this nation's history, is endangered. For many, whether scientists or business owners, it is becoming too easy to reach for support from government or big corporations. Such intervention is not only unhealthy for the free enterprise fiber of this nation, but inherently dangerous, for it deprives our society of dreamers and risk takers.

"The American people can still do something that corporations and government can't," Dick Rutan said upon landing the strange-looking aircraft after its victorious flight. His message was unmistakeable. If you believe in your idea, then go ahead and pursue it. If you want to succeed, you must believe and transform that belief into reality. Small-business owners all across America face that struggle daily. Some make it, some don't. But you have only to look at those who succeed to find similarities between their efforts and the globe-circling flight of the Voyager. It isn't easy to strike out on your own. It isn't easy to finance your own venture. It isn't easy to get up again after a temporary setback has knocked you down. But that's what makes America the land where ideas like Voyager can take wings from a paper napkin and fly into glory.

Government and large corporations are more than willing to get on the bandwagon when they see a good idea, but it's like the old adage about the camel. Once his nose is under the tent, how can you keep him from coming in.

The Voyager story should serve as a reminder that entrepreneurial performance — economic derring-do — has been the engine responsible for making the American growth machine work. The passage of time, happenstance and wellconceived policies have conspired to make the U.S. entrepreneurial spirit a national asset. It would be a shame if in our third century, Americans became so comfortable with big government and big corporations that we lost our spirit of adventure. The journey of Voyager says that at least some Americans are still exploring our frontiers.

We congratulate the Voyager team for their successful flight. We must never forget its symbolic lesson that the American dream will continue to live and flourish for those who are willing to pay the price of success.

List With Farrow

We work with prospective buyers and "qualify" them as to their affordable price range before they are shown through your home.

We will handle all phone inquiries, make appointments, show your home and follow up with prospects. Your time is your own and your home is not exposed to anyone who has not been pre-qualified.

We will help the prospective buyer make financing arrangements. In todays market the ability to obtain a mortgage in a timely manner is an important aspect of selling your home.
