by Colleen Lilly
Increased costs to Simmons Cable of Midshore caused the company to replace ESPN with alternative sports programming, Home Teams Sports, in early January.

"In October, we were advised by ESPN that they were raising their rates," said Chris Fenger, manger of Harrington's Simmons Cable division.

ESPN would have changed the way it charged Simmons. Before the January cancellation of ESPN, Simmons was charged by the number of customers having ESPN on the tier service. Under ESPN's proposed change, all of Simmons customers would be charged.

The increase would have forced all Simmons customers to pay an additional $1 or $2 per month for their service, regardless of whether they have the tier service.

Mr. Fenger said Simmons did not foresee ESPN's rate hike, which would have gone into effect January 1, with an additional 30 percent hike in July. The July hike would have meant another hike for cable subscribers.

The net increase for ESPN for just the January rate hike would have been an increase in costs for Simmons of 600 percent.

"The impact to us is much greater to us here in the rural area," Mr. Fenger said.

Mr. Fenger said Simmons tried to work out an alternative with ESPN, so that customers who wanted the service would be able to have it.

Simmons wanted to offer ESPN as a premium service for those who wanted it, similar to Showtime or HBO, but Mr. Fenger said CapCity, the company which recently purchased ESPN was not willing to accept the deal.

"We do our best to make as many people happy as we can," said Mr. Fenger.

Simmons customers in the midshore area who have the basic service total 6,400. Of those 6,400, 4,500 have the tier service which had included ESPN, but now includes the Home Sports Network.

Simmons Cable received 20 letters concerning ESPN. Mr. Fenger said the negative comments Simmons has gotten are "much less than we've expected."

"We would like to continue with ESPN," Mr. Fenger said.

Simmons has no plans to reinstall the sports network, but urges customers dissatisfied with ESPN's loss to write ESPN.

"We're asking people to write to ESPN and to let them know how unfair the rate increase is to the cable company," said Mr. Fenger.

Mr. Fenger said much of the car racing popular on ESPN will be found on other channels, such as WTBS and The Nashville Network.

Harrington resident Carolyn Porter plans to circulate a petition asking Simmons for the return of ESPN. She also intends to send a copy to ESPN.

The recent snowy weather has kept Ms. Porter from going door to door with the petition. She intends to begin circulating it once the weather improves.

Ms. Porter said WTBS carries three NASCAR races and Nashville Network carries one; but nine major NASCAR races are carried by ESPN.

She said the NASCAR season is "one of the main reasons for people getting ESPN."

Among the races ESPN carries are the February 22 Miller High Life 400 from Richmond, Virginia and the Talladega 500.

Another change Simmons made effective the beginning of January, was the installation of the Home Shoppers Network on Channel 11.

The Home Shoppers Network replaced the CBS affiliate WBAL out of Baltimore. WBAL was chosen by Simmons customers as the least watched of the three CBS channels Simmons offers.

"We were getting a number of calls because of our over duplication," said

Mr. Fenger.

WBOG from Salisbury was named as the customer's choice as the most enjoyed CBS station. Monthly customers were surveyed in September about their viewing preferences.

Simmons sent out 5,350 surveys and received 1,059 responses concerning what the local television viewers liked and disliked.

Simmons had considered additional programming on the weather channel, but, according to Mr. Fenger, viewer response to the channel was too great. Interest in home shopping was generated by national publicity, according to Mr. Fenger.

He said Simmons received "up to 80 calls a day" for the shopping network.

Simmons received a number of complaints about the home shopping network. "The complaints really surprised us," Mr. Fenger said.

Cable subscribers were not polled about ESPN because of limited time between the notice of the rate hike and the actual hike.

No other changes are planned for Simmons, but Mr. Fenger said the change with ESPN was not expected.

Viewers can write ESPN at the ESPN Plaza, Bristol, Connecticut 06010.

Simmons increased its rates for basic

LF approves benefits for permanent substitutes

by Colleen Lilly
Permanent substitutes in the Lake Forest school district will now be receiving the same benefits as permanent teachers in the district.

The Lake Forest School Board unanimously approved a proposal to allow substitutes who work sixty or more consecutive days a portion of the professional benefit package offered to Lake Forest teachers.

"They perform all the duties of a regular teacher," said Dr. James H. VanSciver, superintendent of Lake Forest schools.

The proposal is retroactive to July 1, 1986.

December 15, 1986. Currently, the school system has two substitutes who will be able to benefit from the package offered.

The school board, which met Monday night in a workshop meeting, tied up the loose ends concerning the Frederica well agreement, Leonard Benson, treasurer of the Frederica Town Council and Karen Wilshire, secretary to the Council, signed the formal agreement between the Lake Forest and Frederica.

Lake Forest had made an agreement with Frederica to install a town well on the property of Lake Forest East Elementary.

The well will supplement Frederica's existing system, and will be placed 100 feet off the roadway on the eastern boundary of the school.

Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Ron Jaworski was supposed to speak to the school board Monday night about an athletic program, Beyond Athletics, which combines training with the

Make up schedule set for LF schools

Officials at Lake Forest School District report that staff and students will attend school on Monday, February 16 in order to make up time lost due to recent bad weather.

Two additional days will not be made up as a result of a decision by the State Board of Education.

Any additional days lost because of bad weather or other forced closings will be made up at the end of the school year.

Railroad crossing 316 slated for April repairs

Repair work on Railroad Crossing #316 is slated to begin in April, according to Delaware State Representative G. Robert Quillen.

Representative Quillen secured funding for the project, which will even out the railroad tracks and the roadway.

Work on the crossing, just south of Harrington on Fairground Road, shouldn't take more than a month, Mr. Quillen said.

Included in the repairs will be the replacement of the present wood and metal crossing with a modern soft rubber crossing, which will last longer and will be easier on the suspension systems of cars.

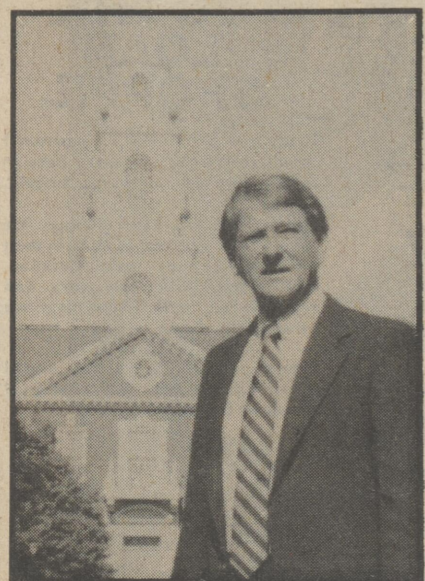

"The cost of the project is estimated at "more than $100,000," Mr. Quillen said.

Funding for the project was secured through a bond bill passed last session by the legislature.

Mr. Quillen said the road has been in "deplorable condition for the past two years."

The Department of Transportation and Conrail have been working with Mr. Quillen, and he hopes for an early start on the needed work. Weather is a factor which could hinder the April start of the repairs.

"It is particularly unsafe during bad weather, and I did not want to see the repairs to this old crossing drag on into the 1988 construction cycle, let alone until the Delaware State Fair begins and the grain hauling cycle begins in September.

G. Robert (Bobby) Quillen

"I requested that repairs to the crossing and the roadbed begin this April so all the necessary work could be completed in the 1987 construction season," Mr. Quillen added.

The road may look long and cold, and the end not near; but spring will soon be here. The groundhog says six more weeks, but once the temperatures soar in summer, thoughts will once again be on the snow. Photo by David Dill

AARP gives seniors tax aid

With April 15 right around the corner, now is the time to start thinking about filling out income tax forms. The American Association of Retired Persons will be providing income tax aid to area older persons.

Every Friday, beginning February 6, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., volunteers trained by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) will be at the Harrington Senior Center to assist residents with their taxes.

The volunteers have been trained by the IRS and also have had instruction with state tax forms. Anyone wishing help with his taxes should bring all IRS forms, 1099 forms and W2 forms.

According to Antony Bulik, who coordinates the Harrington and Milford volunteer service, approximately 500 people in the Milford and Harrington areas were helped by the

Harrington moves toward emergency warning system

by Colleen Lilly
The City of Harrington will be moving forward on providing an emergency warning system for the City and on providing the City with an engineer to oversee incoming building projects.

The Harrington City Council decided at its Thursday workshop meeting that City Manager George Volenik should check into the cost of providing Harrington with a system to warn the City of a serious drop in the water pressure or a loss of electricity at the city well field.

Mr. Volenik will be getting concrete figures of the cost of installing a beeper system to be used by the people monitoring the well field.

Currently, Harrington does not have 24 hour coverage for the City water system. A beeper system or alternative warning system would provide more coverage of the system in case of an emergency, such as a loss of water, which would create problems for the Harrington Volunteer Fire Company.

According to Mr. Volenik, twice in the past 18 months Harrington has needed such a system to alert operators of the public works department and the waste water treatment plant of a potentially dangerous situation.

In one instance the electricity was lost in the water pumps, causing the city's water supply to deplete to a dangerous level. In another situation, water tank pressure was lost.

Exact figures concerning the installation and monthly upkeep of an electronic beeper system will be brought before the Council for consideration.

Current figures from two companies providing beepers put before the Council at the workshop meeting differed significantly in installation costs. One approximation for such a system cost $649, while another was $1,300.

Having a warning system would save the City money because it would not have to pay someone for monitoring phones 24 hours a day.

Under a proposed beeper system, Mr. Volenik said, "The people would carry the beeper at no extra expense, unless they're called out."

Written costs and company references for the system will be part of the agenda of the next meeting on February 9.

Mr. Volenik recommended selecting an engineer or engineering firm, possibly several, to review building projects submitted to the Council.

The Council accepted the Fensterer attorneys argue Swift's time of death

by William T. Ficka
Defense attorneys in the Fensterer second-degree murder trial last week focused on the time Stephanie Ann Swift was murdered.

The trial began January 19 and is now in its third week.

Both the prosecution and defense agree that Swift was murdered sometime on Sept. 28, 1981. The defense contends that she was murdered in the afternoon while Fensterer was at work. Two of Fensterer's co-workers testified that he left work at 5 p.m. The prosecution maintains Fensterer strangled her with a cat leash between 7:15 and 7:30 p.m. after finding love letters written to her by a former boyfriend.

The 27-year-old Fensterer, a former Milford accountant, was found guilty on the second-degree murder charge February 8, 1984.

On May 8, 1986, the Delaware Supreme Court overturned the conviction, ruling that the defense was deprived of the right of effective cross examination when an FBI agent couldn't remember how he came to the conclusion that a blue cat leash was the murder weapon.

Swift, 17, an Indian River High School senior, was Fensterer's fiancée and shared an apartment with him in the Parson Thorne Apartments in Milford. She was found dead September 29, 1981 in the back seat of Fensterer's blue Camaro which was parked in the Milford Plaza parking lot.

Defense attorney Harold S. Schmittinger cross-examined Assistant State Medical Examiner Dr. Judith G. Tobin with sharp, searching questions. The Tobin cross-examination began Wednesday afternoon and resumed Thursday morning.

Schmittinger asked Tobin why she signed two death certificates carrying different times of death.

Tobin replied that she "inadvertently" marked indicated Swift had died at work. While correcting that mistake she also revised the time of death because of additional information she had learned.

Hattie Thomas retires after 39 years

After working 39 years for the Delaware State Fair, Hattie Thomas retired Friday, January 30.

"It's been a nice 39 years. Everybody's been so nice to me," said Ms. Thomas. Ms. Thomas started working as the assistant secretary/assistant treasurer of the fair just after World War II. Her current position from which she's retiring is assistant treasurer.

"People connected with the fair have the fair at heart," she said.

Ms. Thomas has also worked as the concessions manager for the fair since the 1960 death of Britton Holloway, the fair's general manager.

In the time she's been with the fair, she's seen three grandstands come and go and three general managers run the fair. The fair is now run by a board of directors.

Her relationship with the directors "couldn't have been any better. They're a wonderful bunch of people to work under," she said.

"The fair's a big part of my heart and my life," Ms. Thomas said.

Among the favorite state fair acts Ms. Thomas remembers were Minnie Pearl and the Rockettes.

Ms. Thomas didn't want to tell The Harrington Journal much about her retirement, only that she'll keep busy.

Upon her request, Ms. Thomas' picture does not appear in the newspaper.

Felton refuses trash bids, sets new deadline

by Lola M. O'Day
Attorney Fisher plans to contact the Kent County office in regard to drawing a map with overlays of Felton's water lines and sewer lines and the estimated cost for the map.

The police portable radio, after service check, is in good working order.

All potholes in town have been repaired. A crusher run stone applied to Lovers Lane was completed and is holding up well with the weather conditions.

The trash bids were received and were refused. Re-advertising begins with a deadline of February 9. The bid will be awarded Feb. 11 at a special meeting.

Attorney Fisher presented to members of the town board draft copies of trash and water ordinances for the council to look over. A meeting to be held on Feb. 12 will review the ordinance.

A motion was made to send Clarence Hurd for a 10 week schooling was defeated.

There is to be an executive meeting on February 16 at 7:00 p.m. in the town hall.

Notices for the elections will be posted in five places in Felton for the two vacancies: Clarence Hurd and George Egler. The deadline for filing is midnight February 20. These vacancies are for a two year term.

Dairy goat show set for May

Dairy goats from around Delaware and the surrounding states will be coming together for the annual Spring Show sponsored by the Delaware Dairy Goat Association May 2 at the Delaware State Fairgrounds in Harrington.

cheese held for 60 days can be sold. The nearest goat milk dairy is in La Plata, Maryland.

To prepare for a showing, Ms. Russell said the goats must be fed "quality grain and quality feed."

The show, which will begin at 9 a.m., will feature a Senior and a Junior Doe Show for five breeds of dairy goats. The five breeds to be judged will be Toggenburg, Alpine, Nubian, Saanen and LaMancha.

In addition to the daily routine of good feeding, dairy goat owners must keep their goats from plants that could be hazardous to their goats and plants in which an aftertaste could be picked up in the goat's milk.

"They're judged basically on the size of the udder, the ability to be able to milk," said Jean Russell of the Delaware Dairy Goat Association.

Wild Cherry trees, laurel bushes and azalea bushes are among the plants that are poisonous to dairy goats. Bulbs, such as garlic, can leave an off taste in the goats milk and should be avoided, said Ms. Russell.

The goats will also be judged on the arch of their rear legs, which allows the udder to have enough room, according to Ms. Russell.

Dairy goats from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, New Jersey and New York are expected at the May 2 showing. The Delaware Dairy Goat Association also shows goats at the Delaware State Fair in July.

While dairy goats produce at least a gallon of milk a day, Ms. Russell said the Spring Show won't include a milk judging.

Judging the show will be David Funk of Norwich, N.Y. Both Senior and Junior Doe Shows are sanctioned by the American Dairy Goat Association.

The Delaware Dairy Goat Association meets the first Thursday of every month at the state agriculture building on Route 13 in Felton. Their next meeting will be February 5.

Junior does are goats up to two years old that are not milking. Senior does are older than two years and are milking.

Although raw goat milk can not be sold in Delaware, Ms. Russell said recommendation and intends to form a proposal allowing an engineer to enter into to process which builders go through to obtain a Harrington building permit.

The cost of having an engineer look over potential building plans as an agent of the city would be passed on to the developer of the project. The City would not put the engineer on the City payroll.

"We want to make sure all the costs go back to the developer," said Councilman James Temple.

The process of having an engineer review the criteria of a project is standard to large corporations.

The plans for any project would be referred to the engineer, who would check for technical problems, before the Council reviews the plans and decides whether to send them on to the Planning and Zoning Committee.

Councilwoman Sue Ellen Dennis pointed out that having an engineer review prospective projects would make the City more professional.

Mayor Harry Farrow wants to make sure the cost charged by the engineer would not be prohibitive to the developer.

The cost would probably be built into the application fee for building permits, said Mr. Volenik.

Once a proposal is formulated and approved by the Council, bids for engineers and engineering firms will be accepted.

John Seymour, president of Diamond Court Apartments, the new development apartment complex off of Peck Avenue, clarified the type of development he has built.

Diamond Court is a moderate income rental development, said Mr. Seymour.

Mr. Seymour said middle income levels begin in the $13,000 range and end in the $22,000 range, depending on the family size.

Snow removal and students walking to school concerned School Board Member S. Michael Thompson.

"I'm concerned about kids walking on Route 12. Every municipality has an ordinance that says you have six hours to get the snow off the sidewalk," said Mr. Thompson.

Dr. VanSciver will be sending out letters to each municipality in the Lake Forest area asking each to remind residents to clear their walkways so school children don't have to walk in the street.

In Felton, Dr. VanSciver said, an agreement was worked out so a path to the elementary school would always be cut from the back road to the school. Dr. VanSciver said he received several complaints from parents about their children having to walk in the street to get to school.

One suggestion School Board President H. Earl Roberts made was for school children to help dig out in large snow storms.

"Kids could make a little money, helping shovel out the municipalities," he said, especially in areas where many elderly people live.

On the agenda for the next school board meeting will be action on the proposal to relocate the sixth grade students from North Elementary to East Elementary next school year.

The Lake Forest School District applied to the state for three more portable classrooms to help alleviate an influx of students coming in the elementaries in the next several years.

The school board is currently discussing an option to move two relocatable classrooms from North to East Elementary.

Sixth graders at East would then be allowed to continue there instead of being transferred to North to complete the sixth grade.

By transferring the classrooms to East, classroom space for incoming kindergarten or first grade students would be freed. Students at East would then only go through two school transfers, instead of three, heading into junior high.

In other school board discussion, Mr. Roberts presented a letter from the Philippine Consulate General Francisco E. Rodrigo Jr. asking what the area teacher shortage was like and offering to bring qualified Filipino teachers into the district if help was needed.

The issue of a teacher shortage is of serious concern, prompting the school board to start thinking about the future, said Mr. Roberts.

Dr. VanSciver plans to correspond by letter with the consulate general, but said the recruitment of foreign teachers could raise a number of problems.

"You get into all kinds of questions of credibility. Sometimes you have a cultural barrier," he said.

A language barrier might also exist. Dr. VanSciver said such a recruitment would have "some pluses and some minuses."

Other areas around the country, such as the Midwest, could be potential recruiting grounds for teachers if Lake Forest falls into such a need.

Rents for the one and two bedroom apartments are adjusted on the family's income. "Some people will pay more as they're able to," said Mr. Seymour.

Mr. Seymour has a government loan with reduced interest rates to subsidize the costs of building the project, but he does not have Section 8 financing to allow for low income housing.

The Diamond Court development is one of Mr. Seymour's eight or 10 identical communities on the Eastern Shore. After its first year, the complex will be looking for a local handyman for on-site repairs.

The Council also discussed proposals to design Peck Avenue as a road. Mr. Volenik said he spoke with two groups concerning the development of Peck Avenue. Development would run in the neighborhood of $100,000, he said.

The fee for the engineer of consultant designing the project would be based upon the estimated cost of the project, not the actual cost. Discussion on the Peck Avenue situation is leading the Council toward possibly getting an engineer to review all potential developments.

Parking on Harrington's snow covered roads and snow removal became a concern of the Council during their workshop meeting. Better enforcement of the City's no parking one hour after snowfall signs was needed and more signs indicating which side of the street on which to park are needed, according to Councilwoman Dennis.

Councilman Reverend Daniel R. Coleman suggested the best way to enforce not parking on the street during snowfalls is to have a tow away system where cars are impounded. First, he'd like to see warning slips given out to offenders. Each street in Harrington poses a different snow removal problem, depending on its location, proximity to the downtown area and width.

The Council will address the issue of snow removal and parking during snowfalls at its next workshop meeting, February 23.

An issue raised at the last Council meeting by a citizen concerned with the intersection of Fleming and Weiner Avenues at Liberty Street was addressed. Mr. Volenik recommended the corner in question, which has three stop signs and one dip sign instead of a fourth stop, remain the same since no major accidents have occurred there.

In other developments, Mr. Volenik will be finding out the number of appointments the Council can make to the Board of Managers directing the Brown's Branch conservation ditches.

The conservation ditches serve the City and the surrounding areas. Harrington already has one vacant seat on the Board, and possibly a second unfilled seat, according to Mr. Volenik. The Council would like to fill the Board with a Council member or with the mayor or city manager.

A special meeting of the Harrington City Council was held prior to the workshop meeting. The Council appointed one permanent member and two temporary members to the Harrington Board of Adjustments, which is scheduled to meet Monday, February 2.

Tom Englehardt was appointed as the permanent member for an indeterminate term with only one dissenting vote. Edward Dill and Dr. Vincent Lobo were appointed as the temporary members of the Board of Adjustment.

Fensterer attorneys argue time of death

Tobin says the time of death was between 2 and 10 p.m. She had originally said it was between 2 p.m. and midnight. The defense bases its theory that Swift died in the afternoon on the fact that undigested food and a trace of alcohol were found in her stomach.

Tobin said that psychological and emotional factors can delay digestion and that the absorption of alcohol depends on the quantity of food consumed. She also said, "putrefaction could produce a trace of alcohol," and that she was more concerned with the condition of the body than with the time of the victim's last meal.

Schmittinger concluded his questioning of Tobin when he asked if she was certified by the Anatomical Clinical and Forensic Pathology Boards.

"No, I didn't finish my residency," Tobin answered.

Although she is not board-certified, Tobin holds graduate degrees from Dartmouth and Columbia Universities and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, an honorary society having its membership based on conditions of high academic standings. She has performed 2,889 autopsies since she began working for the state in 1960.

During the cross-examination, one alternate juror reflected boredom with the wearisome technical details by falling off to sleep. Superior Court Judge Henry duPont Ridgely promptly dismissed the napping juror who was replaced by another alternate.

An FBI Agent testified on Wednesday that two of Swift's hairs were found on the cat leash.

Russell McNatt Jr., supervisor of the Delaware State Police fingerprint division, testified that Fensterer's fingerprints were the only identifiable prints on the steering wheel of the blue Camaro.

Carl M. Bogden, a former Milford detective who is now an FBI agent, testified on Thursday. Bogden headed the investigation into Swift's death.

Bogden testified that Richard Huff, a co-worker of Fensterer, told him that he was present when Fensterer "pulled the leash through his hands as though he were wiping it off."

Huff went on to say, according to Bogden, that Fensterer put his head in his hands and said, "I'm sorry, I'm sorry, I'm sorry, Stephanie."

The trial was scheduled to resume Tuesday at 10 a.m.

Doctors urge caution in giving children medicine

Parents are always encouraged to be careful with the medications they give their children. But according to Dr. Frank A. Briglia, assistant professor, clinical pediatrics, and medical director, pediatric critical care program, Hahnemann University, Philadelphia, parents should pay extra careful attention to the medications they give their children when they have a viral illness such as the flu or chicken pox.

That's because the combination of a viral illness with aspirin can be a deadly mix that may result in Reye's syndrome, a rare but potentially fatal disease.

Dr. Briglia issued his warning on the heels of his recent treatment of a 14-year-old boy with Reye's syndrome in Hahnemann's Pediatric Intensive Care Unit. The boy had the flu for several days and began taking aspirin to relieve its symptoms. Within days he started vomiting and became very sleepy, eventually slipping into coma.

"The actual cause of Reye's syndrome to date is unknown," Dr. Briglia said. "But aspirin, when taken for relief of flu-like symptoms, is strongly associated with the development of the syndrome in susceptible individuals," he said.

Reye's syndrome most often afflicts children ages 5 to 15 but infants and young adults can also acquire the disease. Currently, only about 80 cases of Reye's syndrome are reported annually throughout the nation. The case handled by Dr. Briglia was the first such case reported to the Philadelphia Health Department since 1981.

The symptoms of the disease can range from non-stop vomiting, irritability and drowsiness to various stages of coma leading to death. These symptoms are often the result of severe abnormalities in liver and brain function. Death often can be avoided through early diagnosis and treatment, which is what saved the life of Dr. Briglia's patient, who had apparent full recovery.

Dr. Briglia advises parents of teenagers — who might be inclined to take aspirin on their own, as his patient did, to educate them about Reye's syndrome.

Sunday Worship service at Houston United Methodist Church 9:30 a.m. Sunday School for all ages immediately following the service 10:30 a.m. Rev. Willima Dore, minister.

Last Sunday the Minister's message was, "Walking Through The Crowd." The Senior Choir sang "He Paid A Debt He Did Not Owe". The Youth Choir sang two numbers, "Happy Road and He Came To Give Love". Jayne Arthurs, a member of the Confirmation class read the Scripture, Luke, 4:22-30. Crystal Shockley, with her puppet, Tilley, gave a talk, saying that every Sunday should be "Super Sunday" instead of once a year.

John Lemmon and Josiah Parvis celebrated their birthday during the week.

Due to the weather, Rev. and Mrs. Dore were unable to attend the Bishop's Retreat at Lancaster, Pa. this week. The Kent County Ladies Auxiliary meeting, which was scheduled to be held Tuesday evening, January 27, was postponed until February 24, at Little Creek.

I was much saddened to read in the paper on Monday of the death of Mrs. Pat Hatfield of Greenwood. She was a regular writer of the column, Gab Fest. Her down to earth humor and description of every day happenings was much enjoyed by many. My sincere sympathy goes out to all of her family. She will be missed by her many readers.

Where There Is Love

Where there is Love, the heart is light, Where there is Love, the day is bright,

Where there is Love, there is a song To help when things are going wrong,

Where there is Love, there is a smile To make all things seem more worthwhile,

Oh, blest are they who walk in Love, They also walk with God Above.

Harrington Historical Society Museum nears completion

The Harrington Historical Society is moving towards the completion of their Fleming Street Museum. The painters are done, the floor has one more coat of finish, the heat and air conditioning is about 1/2 done, and the access ramp is in. As is the case of so many projects of this nature, it seems to take forever, and then, all of a sudden it all falls in place.

The open house date has not been announced yet. The Rose window has 6 of the 9 panels completed and will soon be ready to go back into the building. The display cabinets will be reconditioned before returning them to the building.

All of this has happened because most of the residents of Harrington have helped in some way or other. There have also been several former residents who now reside in other towns, who have helped make this possible. You can all be proud of the finished work when it is finally unveiled, for we, The Harrington Historical Society, could not have done it without you.

Donald Derrickson ('D.D.') and Arthur B. (Buck) Cahall are on the committee to furnish the office. They are searching for a small rectangular drop leaf table to place in there for extra work space. If any one has such a table they would wish to donate, please contact either of these men.

We are in the home stretch and getting our second wind, for there are still a few things to be done, but we see the light at the end of the tunnel at this point.

Greenwood Producer named 1987

Delaware pork All-American

A young Greenwood farmer who began raising pigs as a teenager on his father's farm 11 years ago and has since built up his own successful farrow-to-finish swine operation has been named as this year's Delaware All-American pork producer.

Roger R. Swartzentruber was honored at the annual dinner meeting of the Delaware Pork Producers Association, January 15 at the Bridgeville Fire Hall. He will receive a special plaque from the National Pork Producers Council when the American Pork Congress meets later this winter.

"I started in 1975 with six feeder pig gilts on my dad's small grain farm and grew to where I am today," Swartzentruber said.

He bought the farm in 1979. One of the challenges he faced and overcame was "starting my operation from nothing in an adverse economic climate," he said. One way he kept costs down was by remodeling an old chicken house into an acceptable confinement, farrowing and nursery facility.

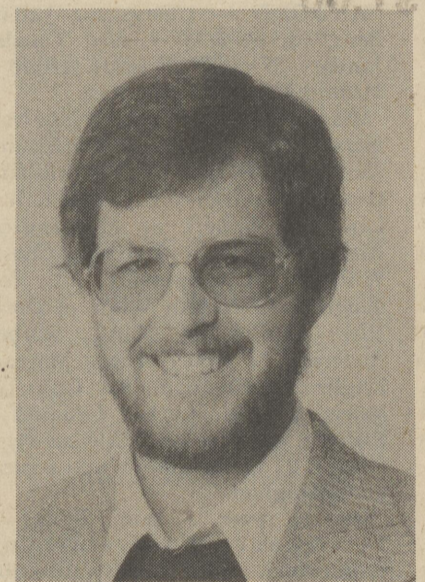

Swartzentruber markets 1,100 hogs a year, averaging 18 hogs per sow per year. He farrows an average of 10.6 pigs per litter and weans 9.2.

Sows farrow in crates with plastic-coated flooring and brooders. Weaned pigs are started on wire decks in the nursery and finished in an A-frame open ridge, curtain-sided building.

Finishing hogs are fed high-moisture corn; sows and pigs receive a ground dry ration.

"This year I bought a litter scale to weigh my pigs at birth and again at 3 weeks." "Now it's much easier to identify my best sows. We're also planning to put in a second stage lagoon very soon for less odor and more manure storage capacity," he said.

He said building the finishing house was a big help to the operation.

Roger R. Swartzentruber

Besides hogs, the Greenwood farmer raises 90 acres each of corn and soybeans, 30 acres of barley, 25 acres of wheat and 5 acres of hay. He also raises 10 head of beef cattle a year.

Swartzentruber serves on the board of directors of the Delaware Pork Producers Association and is vice-chairman of the board of the Greenwood Mennonite School. He and his wife Wava have four children—two boys Regan and Ryan, 2, and daughters Crystal, 6, and Gloria, 9.

Pork All-American winners are selected by fellow producers on the basis of production efficiency, leadership in their local swine industry, participation in civic activities and general overall farming excellence.

Nominees must be under 40 and must have made an outstanding contribution to the pork industry in their state. Approximately 40 states participate in the program.

DE Farm Credit Service announces merger proposal

Directors of the Delaware Farm Credit Service endorsed a proposal that could lead to the consolidation of their agricultural lending institution with 25 other farm credit associations operating across a five state mid-atlantic area and in Puerto Rico.

Under the proposed merger plan, the 26 local Federal Land Banks (FLBA) and Production Credit Associations (PCA) would be merged into one districtwide FLBA and one PCA. The merger proposal will be submitted for approval to association borrowers in early March, subject to concurrence by the Farm Credit Association (FCA).

The proposal would consolidate 26 associations currently serving the Baltimore Farm Credit district into 15 divisions with centralized management and an initial 52 member Board of Directors.

The Board of Directors of the districtwide association would continue to be elected by stockholding borrowers and would have similar policy making authorities as those currently vested in each of the association boards.

Under the proposed restructuring plan, financial services will continue to be offered through networks of local branch offices. Local loan approval authorities will be equal to or greater than current levels.

If approved by a majority of the voting borrowers, implementation of the proposal will begin on March 31, 1987.

The Real Delinquents

We read in the papers, We hear on the air Of killing and stealing and crime everywhere, We sigh, and we say, as we notice the trend, "This younger generation! Where will it all end?"

But can we be sure That it's their fault alone? That maybe most of it Isn't really our own?

Too much money to spend;
Too much idle time;
Too many movies of passion and crime;
Too many books Not fit to be read;
Too much of evil In what they hear said;
Too many children Encouraged to roam By too many parents Who won't stay at home, Kids don't make the movies They don't write the books That paint a gay picture of gangsters and crooks.
They don't make the liquor, They don't run the bars, They don't pass the laws, Nor make the high-speed cars.
They don't make the drugs That addle the brain; It's all done by older folks Greedy for gain.
Thus in so many cases, It must be confessed, The label "Delinquent" Fits older folks best.

Pierce driving to success at Meadowlands

Being compared to a five-year-old maiden trying to beat free-for-allers would stop some aspiring drivers in their tracks, but to Ron Pierce, it was constructive criticism from an old friend.

"Ernie Spruce, who is a trainer I really respect, told me I was going about making a career out of driving horses all wrong," said 30-year-old Pierce. "I was at the Meadowlands when I shouldn't have been, I just wasn't ready for it yet."

"That was five years ago, and since then, I've been leading driver at Los Alamitos in California three times, at Pomona once, and I was leading driver at Canterbury last year. I think I'm ready to try the Meadowlands again."

"Not limiting his learning experiences to the United States, Pierce spent six months in Macau, near Hong Kong, driving and training harness horses amid political unrest."

"Dick Williams, the starting judge at Los Alamitos sold a starting gate car to the track in Hong Kong, and asked me if I wanted to go there for awhile," said Pierce. "The track officials set me up with some owners, so I could train and drive."

The combination of a driving injury and the violence outside the stable gates convinced Pierce to return to the United States.

"I drove a horse in a race for the first time, and no one told me that he had a habit of throwing himself down to the ground leaving the gate. I broke my right shoulder," said Pierce.

"But what was even more unsettling was jogging a horse in the morning and looking over the fence toward the river and seeing a gun boat bomb a houseboat that had refugees living on it."

"Many people belonged to no country, and lived on boats trying to make it to shore. The government wanted no part of these homeless, and it was not usual to hear of acquaintances at the track finding dead bodies," said Pierce.

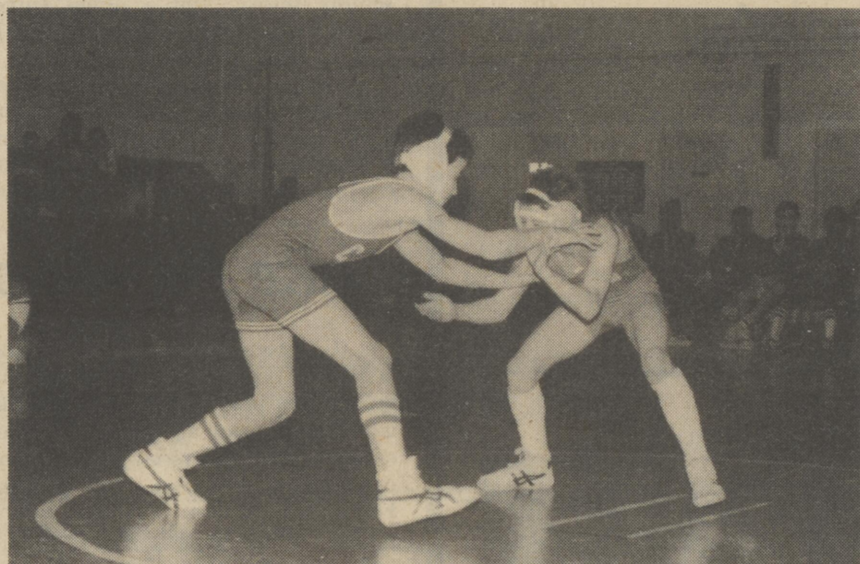

Pierce returned to the States with the Meadowlands as his goal. His ambitious plan coincided with the desire to make more money. Without any horses of his own, Pierce has to make his mark driving for other trainers.

"I arrive at the track early every morning and make the rounds, getting to know trainers, taking a few horses to the track," said Pierce. "It's a lot of handshaking and smiling, but it's real important for me to be out there and to be seen."

"I don't want to stay at small tracks all my life and end up dying in somebody's tackroom. Things are looking up, I've gotten more drives than during the beginning of the meet. All I have to do now is win a few."

For the 4-1 Spartans: Dill at 126, Wendell Watson at 185, and Hicks at heavyweight recorded pins.

Spartan cagers get first win

The Lake Forest boys' basketball team put together their first complete game of the season to post a 59-52 win over Laurel last week. The Spartans were led by the frontline of senior forwards James Hicks and Chuck Bell, and center James Tiggs.

"The boss" speaks out on harness racing

COLUMBUS, OH--George Steinbrenner is among the most quoted figures in all of sports -- and what he has to say about harness racing raises some eyebrows both inside and outside the sport.

The Yankee magnate appeared on the cover of the December, 1986 edition of Hoof Beats, official publication of the United States Trotting Association, and talked of his love of standardbred racing in an interview with editor Den Hoffman.

As expected, his comments were strong -- and positive.

Steinbrenner's association with harness racing goes back to the time his father and uncle took him to county fairs, and while studying at Ohio State, he continued those visits.

In later years, he became a partner of Walter J. Michael in Northfield Park, near his native Cleveland, but was forced to give up that association when he purchased the Yankees.

In the article, he addresses the integrity of racing, owning standardbreds, and his desire to breed and race champions.

In 1986, Steinbrenner took an active role in promoting the sport, driving in a trio of celebrity races -- and winning one, too!

When Steinbrenner speaks, people listen. There is a lot worth listening to when he speaks about harness racing.

Famous Dixie dies at 34

Famous Dixie, a standardbred pacer owned by Dorothy Price, of Harrington, died sometime during the snowstorm which hit Delaware the week of January 26th. She would have been 34 years old this year.

Famous Dixie was by the all time pacing great of the early '50's, Quick Reward, who was reined to many victories by Olin Davis of Harrington. Her dam was known to all standardbred enthusiasts of this region...Symbol Dixie.

One of the best offspring which she produced was Slick Tarport who boasted a mark of 1:57.1, which is also owned by Mrs. Price.

19 year old beagle dies

How do you write an obituary for a DOG? Do you say she was named Candy and she was born January 10, 1968? Do you also state she is survived by her brother, Joe, and her master and hunting buddy, Carroll Welch, Jr.?

Candy departed this life on February 1, 1987. She was 19 years old.

As dogs go, Candy was not such a beauty, just a beautiful Beagle. It takes a dedicated hunter to understand that statement. Her master was a hunter from the time he was old enough to walk. He was taught two things by his father: never hunt and kill needlessly, and only point a gun at something you intend to kill. He also learned the value of a good dog. His dogs always loved and trusted him, and Candy was no exception. No other hunter could kidnap them, for they would not go to them.

Candy was a Tri-color bench-leg about 13 inches tall. She was born and died in the same kennel. She also hunted 90% of her hunting life on the marshland at Little Creek Wildlife Refuge. All hunters know the conditions there are very adverse. But her masters recounting of the hunt when he returned home always gave Candy glowing reports. Few dogs will be missed as much as Candy. After 19 years, she became a part of the family.

Lake Forest Community Swim Team to host Swim-A-Thon

by David Hartzel
The Lake Forest Community Swim Team will hold its 1987 Swim-A-Thon on February 27th & 28th at the Lake Forest High School Pool in Felton.

This Swim-A-Thon will provide funds which will enable the club to maintain its strong swimming program. The Lake Forest team has members from all over Kent and Sussex Counties and is the only U.S. Swimming sanctioned team below Wilmington. Coach Dennis Davis has assembled a highly talented team that comprises swimmers between the ages of 5 to 18. The recently held Delaware State Team Championships awarded 41 individual medals to Lake Forest swimmers.

Swim-A-Thons are conducted across the country by many of the 3,000 member clubs of U.S. Swimming. A portion of the funds raised goes to the national and international programs of U.S. Swimming, thus helping to build strong USA teams for the Olympics and other international competitions.

Swimmers from the Lake Forest team are currently soliciting sponsors for the Swim-A-Thon. The sponsors pledge a specified amount of money per length that the swimmer completes.

Persons interested in sponsoring a swimmer should contact Dan Griffith at 335-4286.

Save a Sweet Heart fights teen smoking

For students at Lake Forest High School, Valentine's Day may mean more than candy and lace hearts this year.

The American Heart Association of Delaware will help teenagers learn how smoking can affect their heart through an anti-smoking program built around Valentine's Day. The highlight of the program, called Save A Sweet Heart (SASH) Day, is a day of no smoking on February 12. The program began in Delaware Schools January 19.

Although smoking among teenagers declined from its mid-1970's peak, the rate of decline has leveled off. An estimated 20 percent of high school seniors smoke; and a recent survey shows that smoking among girls 17-18 is at an all-time high of 26 percent.

"Smoking has a well-documented relationship to increased disability and death due to heart disease, yet many teenagers start smoking in school and continue the habit for the rest of their lives," Michael E. Stillabower, M.D., president of the AHA of Delaware, said. According to Mr. Stillabower, the program butts heads with two major obstacles in the fight against teenage smoking — advertising and peer pressure.

SASH uses posters that mimic popular cigarette advertisements to get teenagers involved in the program. The posters show happy, attractive non-smokers enjoying life while smokers watch. The image is identical to the carefree and successful image of smokers portrayed in cigarette ads.

The program is conducted by students who hang the posters, make public address announcements to promote the program, and collect no-smoking pledges from other students. Teachers are encouraged to use smoking topics in their classes. Smokers are included in all activities.

Student involvement can create peer pressure to stop smoking among the students, according to Mr. Stillabower. "Peer pressure is one of the major reasons teenagers begin to smoke," he said. "The SASH program can make that peer pressure a positive force."

SASH began six weeks before Valentine's Day, when the anti-smoking posters were hung throughout the school. Public address announcements and no-smoking pledging begin 10 days before SASH Day. Smokers pledge not to smoke on SASH Day and non-smokers pledge not to begin smoking within the year. The anti-smoking posters are left up five weeks after SASH Day to remind the students of their no-smoking pledges.

After the program ends, the American Heart Association of Delaware will conduct a survey to determine the number of students in Delaware that participated in the Save a Sweet Heart program.

Lake Forest secretaries adopt families

As if answering the phone, greeting visitors, typing forms, handling budgets and the various other tasks to which secretaries are assigned is not enough, the secretarial staff at the central administration office of Lake Forest School District looked to the community for more responsibility.

The responsibility they shouldered helped make life a little easier for several families who live in the district.

"We heard that some families were having some troubles," said Marlene Hurd, who spearheaded the efforts, "so we decided to adopt them."

This adoption took place before the holidays and resulted in a much brighter Christmas for some of the district's children.

"It really made us feel good," Hurd explained, "to make some lives a little better. We really enjoyed it."

"I think that some of us may stay with this until these people get back on their feet. That is something we didn't think about before. But, we do now." Just another day in the life of a school secretary at Lake Forest School District.

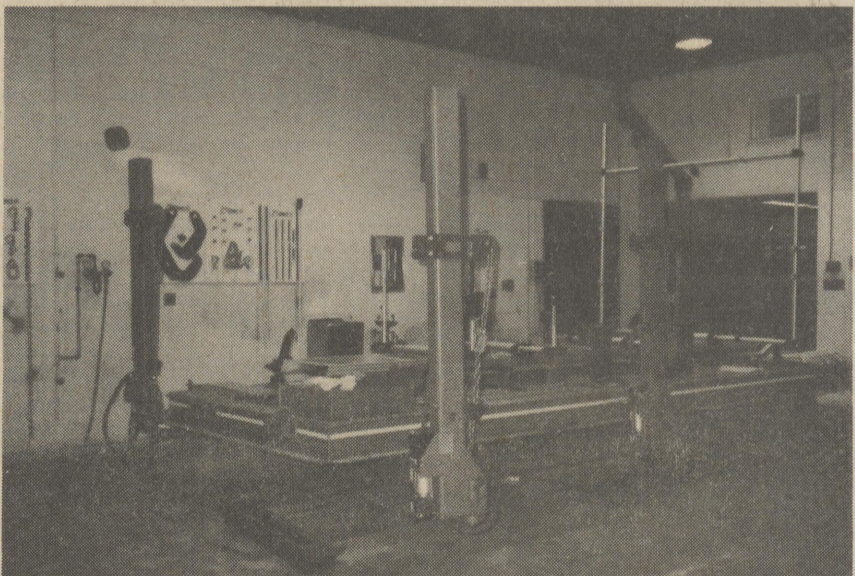

Kent Vo-tech updates auto body equip.

Kent County Vocational Technical School District recently installed a new Guy Chart Frame Straightening Unit in the Auto Body shop at the North Campus. Kent Vo-Tech is the only vocational school in Delaware to be equipped with this unit.

The unit, manufactured in Ontario, Canada, and sold locally by Wharton and Barnard was purchased in an effort to upgrade training facilities with state of the art equipment. Public support, and action on the part of the local Auto Body Advisory Board made purchase of the unit valued at $38,000, a reality.

The Guy Chart unit is the latest in Auto Body repair technology. Students will be instructed in frame straightening techniques for unibody cars as well as conventional frame cars using the DMA measuring system. Upon course completion students will be able to successfully complete minor and major frame straightening.

Training will also be available for adult students enrolled in Vo-Tech evening classes and periodic training schools for local auto body repair shops.

Kent County Vo-Tech recently updated the training equipment in their Auto Body Department at the Northern campus.

26 year old men draft ineligible

The Selective Service System has announced that men who will reach their 26th birthday in 1987 are reaching an important milestone.

Beginning on Jan. 1, 1987, men who were required to register with Selective Service in 1981 will be turning 26. Selective Service does not have the authority to accept registrations after age 26. By failing to register before turning 26, a young man will have permanently forfeited his right to certain benefits including federal student aid, job training and federal employment. In addition to these federal benefits, some states require registration for state student aid, entrance to a state supported college or university, state employment and permission to practice law.

Many of the 25-year-olds who have still not registered may be unaware of the requirement or do not understand the importance of the obligation to register. Some may even have served in the military but failed to register either before entering the Armed Forces or after leaving active duty. Others may have been institutionalized or incarcerated at the time of their 18th birthday and not realized that they were required to register if released prior to age 26.

For those men born in 1961 who have registered, 1987 also marks the year that ends their eligibility for selection for induction under present law should there be a return to the draft. Over 17 million men, age 18 through 25 have registered with Selective Service since registration was reinstated in 1980. These men comprise over 97 percent of those required to register.

Men age 18 to 25 who have not yet registered still have a chance to avoid risk of prosecution and loss of benefits by registering promptly at any local post office. Failure to register is a felony punishable by a fine of up to $250,000, up to 5 years in jail, or both.

Delaware Motor Club gives drivers winter quiz

As ice and snow recently blanketed the First State, many Delaware motorists came face to face with the hazards of winter weather driving. While driving on icy or snowy roads will probably never be completely safe, there are some practical measures to keep in mind which can lessen those dangers and frustrations, according to the Delaware Motor Club, AAA.

The following quiz offers some tips for coping with cold weather hassles. Answers appear at the end of the quiz.

1. True or false? Reducing air pressure in tires increases traction while driving on snow.
2. To free a frozen car door lock: a. pour hot water over the lock. b. repeatedly heat the key tip and insert into lock until free. c. use a commercial de-icing spray. d. all of the above.
3. True or false? Shifting to a lower gear while driving down a snow-covered hill will cause a sudden drag that could lead to skidding.
4. Name at least five items motorists should store in their cars to cope with winter's special problems.
5. True or false? If the rear of a car begins to "fish-tail," the driver should turn the steering wheel in the opposite direction of the skid to bring the vehicle back into a straight line.
6. A fully charged battery has _____ percent of its original starting power when the temperature drops to freezing.
7. True or false? Cold weather can stiffen engine oils not designed for winter motoring.

8. Which of the following offers the greatest traction and stopping ability on glare ice?: a. snow tires b. steel-belted radial snows c. studded snow tires d. tires equipped with reinforced chains.

9. True or false? Studded snow tires should be replaced on the same wheels each year.

Answers
1. False. Reduced tire pressure only contributes to poor steering, wastes gas and causes uneven tread wear.

2. b. and or c. Hot water will only contribute to the problem as the water cools and freezes. A piece of masking tape placed over the lock can prevent this annoying problem.

3. True. When driving downhill, keep the car in gear and gently, but repeatedly, squeeze the brake pedal.

4. Although there are lots of gadgets that come in handy during the winter, here are our suggestions for essential items: tire chains, sand or traction mats, snow shovel, ice scraper and snow brush, jumper cables, flares, flashlight and blanket.

5. False. Always turn the steering wheel in the direction of the skid. If the rear of the car is skidding to the left, gently -- don't jerk the wheel -- steer to the left, pumping the brake slowly. If the car counterskids, repeat the procedure until the vehicle is brought back into a straight line.

6. A fully charged battery has 65 percent of its original starting power -- calculated at 80 degrees -- when the temperature drops to freezing. That's why it is so important for car owners to check the battery charge as part of routine auto winterizing. A weak battery simply won't be able to do its job in cold weather.

7. True. Motorists should make sure their car's oil will maintain its lubricating ability during cold weather. A multi-grade oil -- such as 10w-40 -- works well in almost all engines and has a flowing consistency that will adjust itself to varying temperatures. Single weight oils -- such as 10- or 30-weight -- need to be changed as the climate changes. A 30-weight oil is good for warm, mild climates, while a 10-weight oil is designed to lubricate during cold weather.

8. d. On glare ice, tires equipped with reinforced chains offer the greatest stopping and traction ability.

9. True. Car owners electing to use studded tires should mark them for left and right. If tires are placed on opposite wheels the next season, studs will rotate differently and can lose much of their effect or, worse, dislodge completely from the tire.

Bair wants drug abuse education

Senate Minority Leader Myrna L. Bair (R-Foult Woods) has introduced legislation to establish drug abuse education and prevention programs in Delaware schools.

The bipartisan bill has Joint Sponsorship by Senator Herman M. Holloway, Sr., Chairman of the Senate Committee on Health & Social Services; Representative Gerald A. Buckworth, Chairman of the new House Committee on Substance Abuse; Representative Tina Fallon, House Education Committee Chair; and Representative Katharine Jester, member of the House Education Committee.

Other sponsors include Senator James P. Neal (R-Newark) and Senator Robert T. Still (R-Mitchell Estates), and Representative Ada Leigh Soles (D-Newark).

Facts about the Substance Abuse Education Act:

*the bill is written to gain funding under the "Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act" of 1986, signed by President Reagan in October.

*Delaware would receive $556,854 in the first year of the three-year federal funding program according to preliminary estimates.

*at least 90% of those funds would be distributed to local school districts to support drug and alcohol abuse education and prevention programs.

Senator Bair said, "Under the Drug-Free Schools and Communities Act, resources will go to school districts to directly fight the scourge of substance abuse at the local level."

"Substance abuse is a widespread problem throughout our society, but the human costs are felt close to home. The greatest tragedy is when a young person's talents, vitality and potential are impaired or destroyed by drug abuse," she added.

"Teaching young people at an early age what drugs do to their minds and bodies is the place to start. Education is at the core of our strategy to reduce the demand for, and the use of, drugs in our society and bring us closer to the goal of a drug-free generation. Drug abuse education will be integrated into a comprehensive Health-Education program for grades kindergarten-12 in each school district," Senator Bair continued.

"Success in the overall health education effort depends on cooperative efforts by schools, families and communities. This bill will help in the schools' role. The family role is obviously of vital importance. For the community component, we can depend on many concerned and active organizations already at work in our State," she said.

"The Company" provides Bill Elliott with support

Bill Elliott may be headed for a come back this season. The seasoned stock car driver topped 214 mph on the track at Talladega last Tuesday.

Elliott turned the lap at 214.660, the fastest ever recorded at the Alabama International Speedway. It wasn't official since Elliott wasn't in competition.

While last season wasn't tops for Elliott, he has expanded his stock car racing complex to include at least 20 full time employees.

"The Company," as they are known are prepping Elliott's cars for the start of the NASCAR season February 15 at the Daytona 500.

What started out as three brothers tinkering around the garage in Dawsonville, Georgia, has now turned into a support team of mechanics, technicians and pit crew members.

Bill, Ernie and Dan expanded the Elliott racing team after last season. Bill spends a lot of time on the road making public appearances to provide the $2 million annual budget for "The Company."

He had done all his own chassis work in his Thunderbirds, but recently handed the reigns over to Ivan Baldwin, who has expanded the staff to six in the chassis and body room.

John "Rabbit" Bartels, the veteran Australian driver from the Formula One Grand Prix Circuit, has taken charge of the body work for the T-Birds. Ernie Elliott and Dave Kriska direct the team's computer data systems in the engine room. No one else is allowed in the engine room.

The Elliott's expansion would have included technicians and mechanics from the North Carolina areas but the danger of trade secrets leaking out was too great.

During Bill Elliott's best season, the team that worked on his cars only included the three brothers and nine other employees, mostly family friends.

In 1985, he won 11 Winston Cup races and $2.4 million. This year marks the first he'll race with the manpower of other teams such as Junior Johnson and Associates, Petty Enterprises and Richard Childress Racing.

While the Elliott team in Dawsonville includes at least 20 employees, extra support comes from Michigan, where team owner Harry Melling is located.

CHARLOTTE, N.C.-Jan. Bill Elliott presents the Coors/Melling Thunderbird that won the Winston Million in Darlington, S.C. in 1985 to Harold Pearson left, National Motorsports Press Association for display in the Joe Weatherly/NMPA Hall of Fame at Darlington. Alderman to contest IMSA GTU title with Nissan

NEW CASTLE, DEL.--George Alderman begins his 31st year of auto racing March 1 at the Grand Prix of Miami. Alderman will compete in 14 of 16 events on the International Motor Sports Association's (IMSA) 1987 Camel GTU schedule.

"We want to win the series championship," said Alderman, 54, of Hockessin, Del. "We've been running a limited number of races the last two seasons, but the team and the Nissan 300ZX Turbo are ready to accept the challenge of a full season. We have some tough competition. Winning the title won't be easy."

The Nissan showed its capabilities late in the 1986 season; finishing third at Columbus and then winning the GTU pole position at the Daytona Finale.

During the off season a new chassis was made for the Nissan. In addition, new turbos and intercoolers have been fitted by Turbo Engineering of Dearborn, Mich., the team's new associate sponsor.

"The car proved itself at Columbus and Daytona," said Alderman. "It's even better with the changes."

In addition to Turbo Engineering, the Nissan 300ZX Turbo is sponsored by CAM2 and Alderman Nissan.

Antique car race on TNN

More than 100 immaculately prepared antique motor cars from around the world began The Great American Race at Disneyland last summer with hopes of traversing 15 states to cross a finish line at New York City's Harbor Festival during the Statue of Liberty Centennial Celebration on July 5.

A 60-minute special, The Great American Race 1986 will be telecast by TNN on Saturday, February 14 at 9:30 a.m. (8:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m., all times eastern).

Holbert team takes lead in 24-Hours race

Al Holbert, IMSA Camel GT champion, and his Porsche 962 Prototype helped his weary team to win in last Sunday's Daytona 24-Hours sports car endurance race.

Holbert teamed with Englishman Derek Bell, Al Unser Jr. and Chip Robinson won $50,000 in the closest 24-hour race run at Daytona, since its beginning in 1966.

Completing 753 laps, the Holbert team outraced Indianapolis winners A.J. Foyt, Al Unser and Danny Sullivan. The race was the closest ever until the Foyt car quit 55 minutes from the end.

Unser and son ran neck and neck, battling through the night for control of the lead. The younger Unser took the lead for good on lap 569 in the 19th hour of the race.

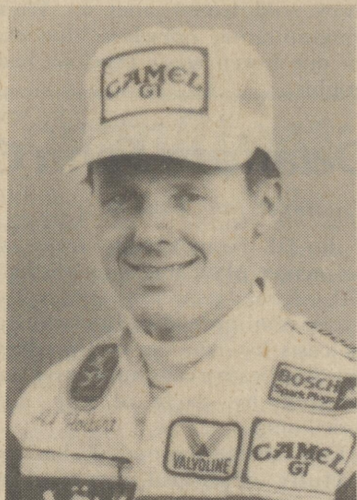

The two Porsches had raced in the same lap most of the night in an unusually tight race.

The winners covered 2,680.68 miles with an average speed of 111.599 mph. That broke last year's marks for the Holbert-Bell-Unser team, which stood at 712 laps, 2,534.72 miles and an average speed of 105.484 mph.

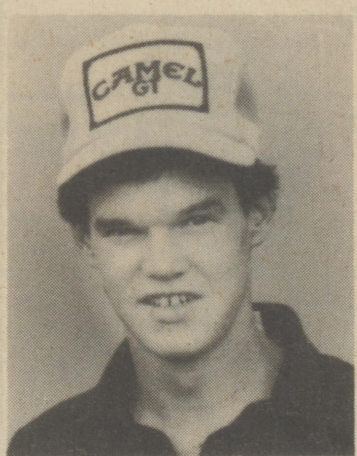

The overall record of 2,758.44 was set in 1970, while top speed was set on the old Daytona circuit in 1982 at 114.794.

Foyt, who has not finished lower than second since 1983, came in fourth. The four time Indy winner took first in the 24-hour race in '83 and '85.

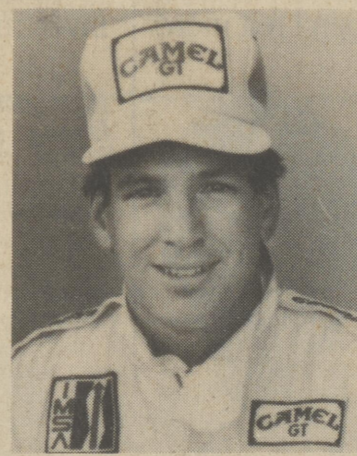

Holbert, the car owner, had not been out of the pits in the first 22 hours, but

Al Holbert

Al Unser Jr.

Chip Robinson

jumped in for the first time when Unser Jr. became overcome with heat and humidity in the 22nd hour.

While he had no intention of driving, Holbert was building the lead when Foyt's car stopped. Holbert's two hour stint gave the team a boost and led them to the first repeat win since Peter Gregg won in '75 and '76.

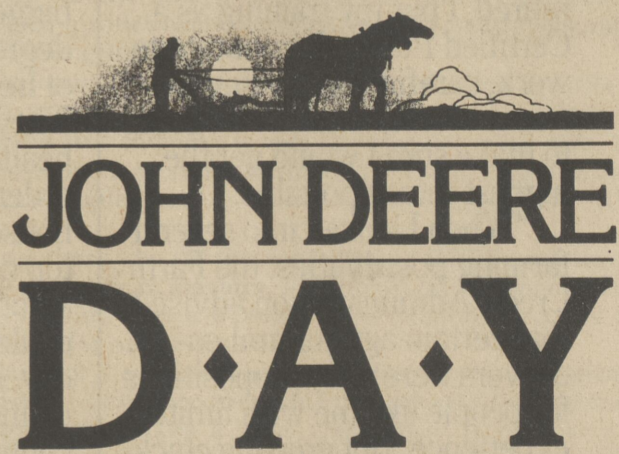

Bell, a leading endurance racer, along with Holbert was one of the first to ever win three consecutive 24-hour events, two Daytonas and last June's LeMans. Bell took over for Holbert in the final 30 minutes of the race.

Race results:

1. Derek Bell, England; Al Unser Jr., Chip Robinson and Al Holbert, Porsche 962 GTP, 753, 2,680.68, $51,500, 111.599 (breaks records of 712 laps, 2,534.72 miles and 105.484 mph for 3.56-mile course, all set by Holbert, Bell and Unser Jr. in 1986).
2. Oscar Larrauri, Massimo Sigala and Gianfranco Brancatelli, all Italy, Porsche 962 GTP, 745.
3. Rob Dyson, Price Cobb and Vern Schuppan, Australia, Porsche 962 GTP, 742.

"After 32 Years In Washington, I Voted For Chickens"

"I spent 32 years working for the Federal Government in Washington, DC. And when I retired, I put my training as a Certified Public Accountant to work, carefully analyzing different investments. I was going to make sure I would get the highest return possible.

"When I looked into several farming possibilities, the Farm Credit Administration advised that certain agricultural endeavors were risky propositions for people like me with limited experience. But growing chickens, they said, proved to be financially sound. Like any CPA, I spent a long time studying all the information I could get my hands on. Finally, I agreed with Farm Credit's findings, and I concluded further that growing chickens for Perdue offered the best return for my money.

"I started out knowing nothing about chickens, so I expected a lot of surprises. But the biggest surprise I got was the degree, amount, and the quality of help I received from Perdue. They monitored the chickens' health, programmed the diets, ordered feed, and made sure the houses and systems were in top condition. Whenever I had a question or problem, I knew I could count on them 24 hours a day. And later, when I felt more confident, they continued to help. They even installed a computer to help with my flock management!

"I'm very pleased with Perdue. They're the reason I'm in the chicken business today, and they're the reason my business is a success. I have two houses now, and I'm in my tenth flock. When you add the income of that together with the tax credits, accelerated depreciation as available, and Perdue's professionalism, you get an excellent and safe investment!"

District Dialog

by Dr. James H. VanSciver
Superintendent

"One For the Road"

Two major issues currently run through the minds of students at Lake Forest High School and the Lake Forest School District Central Administration. They both concern that narrow stretch of blacktop that winds its way past the high school just south of Felton.

After close examination of the issue, it is discovered that there are not two issues but a singular paramount philosophical debate over the attitude with which students approach themselves, their school, their community and their lives.

While the superficial dialog concerns paint, the true meaning of the interaction cuts much deeper than that.

The administration has taken a stand deciding to encourage students to not paint on the road. One may question the initial impression this paint on the surface of the roadway leaves in the mind of visitors to the area. The paint has begun to find its way onto the telephone poles and even some of the roadway signs in the area. With the amount of paint in some areas of the road's surface, it is safe to assume that there may be a safety factor involved in the very area where there is major vehicular traffic involving hundreds of people each day.

It is wrong.

It is against the law.

In interacting with countless students at the school, responses to the question of right and wrong brought interesting responses. "It's not wrong... unless I get caught," said one. This philosophy seemed to echo off the walls of the classrooms in which the debate took place.

Can we blame them?

As parents, do we drift through stop signs and then argue with a police officer who issues us a ticket? Do we publicly espouse the merits of honesty and fair play but fail to return extra change to the checker at the grocery store? Do they hear us haggling with an accountant over how to "cheat Uncle Sam" out of money at tax time?

It is not wrong... only if you get caught. It is simple, plainly and emphatically wrong to paint on the road, on the telephone poles and on the signs on that or any road. One's approach to this matter digs deeply at values.

It may be important to recreate a little history regarding the development of this situation. Years ago, students at the school had an old barn on which to paint. The painting, it is important to point out, is not profane or vulgar but is simply an expression of school spirit. The barn became too old and was removed last one day it would cause some harm to students as they completed their art work on it. The trouble was, no one told the students why it was removed. Further, no option on which they could work their brushes was presented. To the credit of the students, the paint did not find its way to the walls of the school.

Another important point which need be revealed is that the school administration is not interested in getting these students in trouble. If that were the case, it would have been very easy to collar a couple of the young artists (they readily leave their names on their work) and haul them into the police department. Such, however, is not in the interest of the administration.

Rather, the effort is being made to point out the realities of this situation, to explore the values clarification potential in the experience and to transfer the dialog to other examples in the school and in the community.

The painting on the road is only a symbol, a symbol of a greater and more important issue. Numerous examples in the building could have been used for the same purpose.

The issue is that of recognizing right and wrong and doing something about it. If painting on the road is wrong, then what are the students going to do about it? What is the administration going to do about it?

Do the student leaders want to be remembered as the ones who "lost our right of painting on the road?" or do they want to be remembered as the ones who recognized that to paint on the road was wrong and they did something about it?

It is their choice.

The administration has a part in this situation as well. If students are to be asked to not paint on the road, what options do they have? What might be a place where they may express their school spirit in a positive and productive manner? Students need be asked about this. They must have input in this decision.

Entangled in what, on the surface, appears to be a very simple issue, are very complex and important questions. The answers to these questions will make a very important statement concerning the direction this school system chooses to take and about the future of life in our communities.

It is far more than just paint on the road.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Mr. Farrow:

This is going to be the last letter to the editor that I will ever write and I hope, maybe, that it may do some good. Some of the people in the city may see it, and contrary to the two editorials I just read from two of our outstanding citizens of Harrington, Mr. Jack Wyatt and Mr. Jim Boyd, I know good and well that the way it's written that somebody had to help them out to write these letters to the editor, some way or the other.

I can't understand how these people get by with talking to the people of Harrington like this. Here's my complaint:

I've been to a couple of meetings, recently (which I never attended before). But three years ago, I tried to keep the people who were on the Council, at the time, from putting the police department and the City Hall in the "morgue" building, I call it, on the corner of Second Ave. and Center Street. I never got that job done. I walked around on my hands and knees, you might say, because at my age, I can't do much walking anymore, but I did get over 250 signatures from the people in Harrington, the good citizens of Harrington. I visited most all of the outstanding people in Harrington. I talked to them and told them that before this all came up, that they wanted to rent the building down there, but nobody did anything about it, so we got on the bandwagon and before we got the job done, these people opened up and they started rebuilding the place, unbeknown to anybody. I don't think anybody knew anything about it. There might have been some people who knew about it, but most of the citizens of Harrington didn't know what they did. But they went in down there and rented the place, completely overhauled it. I don't know how much money it cost them. But it cost a considerable amount of money because Mr. Paul Callaway installed wall-to-wall carpeting and fixed up the offices and whatever else he did down there; I don't know what he did, and I don't know how much it cost, (but it could be looked into to find out) so they could have a city building, City Hall and Police Department, all combined. So here's my complaint:

I can't understand the people of Harrington sitting still and letting these people (just about 4 or 5 people) that jumped in here on the bandwagon, suddenly, I don't know where they came from or how they got here, but one of the fellows I talked to, wanted a library and I said, "Do you think Harrington needs a library as big as that?" To take up the space that that's going to take up out in the City Hall with everything together.

They don't realize what it will cost to put a parking lot out there. It would cost at least $25,000, I imagine, to put a parking lot with all the curbs and everything that's needed for the City building on this one piece of property that they have, besides all the other work that they are going to do before they even set the first block, or put the "golden shovel", like they already have made, in the ground. They've got the shovel all ready to go. I saw it the last time I was down there. It was sitting back in a corner. It's all painted gold, the handle and all. So that spade is intended to put in the ground to break up this ground, for the people of Harrington to see. And what's it going to cost? A few dollars more and it wasn't going to cost the taxpayers anything! They were going to get that much out of the rest of the people that they were going to get here in town for taxes.

And they weren't going to raise any taxes, and they weren't going to raise assessment of the property in Harrington, which they already did. They've done that twice since I've been here. The assessment went up and of course taxes are 5 times more than they were when I first came here. Also, the garbage collection and sewer and water and stuff like that, that's all tripled, or maybe even more than tripled. I don't know, I don't have any account of it, and I've never heard any account of it.

They've got a City Manager down there that doesn't need to be a City Manager here in Harrington, as small a town that this is. They got him and he's supposed to be getting these people in and he's worked hard.

So when you read all this and see all this and been through all of it, it makes you sick to your stomach when you see about 4 or 5 people get up and decide that they are going to build a city building regardless of what the people say. They're not going to have a referendum because they have their Charter fixed so they don't have to have a referendum. Anything they see that should be spent, is voted on and unanimously, they get it.

So there you are Mr. Farrow. I want this published and if you will publish it, I will certainly appreciate it.

They've got a woman down there drawing a big hefty salary too, and then she has two clerks working along side her, maybe one, I don't know how many they've got. But she's drawing a hefty salary. How much, I don't know either.

But I think all of these things, while you're mayor, you get your line on it, because you can't do anything with four built against you. And you have nobody with you. But I do know that Mr. Jimmy Temple will be on your side. I believe he will. I hope he will, anyway. And I hope that the two of you might be able to persuade these other people to have a referendum.

This thing might kill the joy of most of the library users in town, which I know a few of them, 2 or 3 of them that go in there and I've been up there and watched the library several times, and all the times I've sat there, I've never seen a sole go in there. But I do see that the school teachers make it their business to get the children in there to see the plays they put on. That might be nice, too. I don't know, but while they've got these things going on, people can't get in there to get their books and take them back. I know that to be the fact. There's no heresay about that at all because the people come to me and say, "Mr. Price, I went in there the other day with my books and they wouldn't let me in there because they had the school children in there. They had some kind of program going on for them." So do you think that's right when the City spends $22,000 a year, so I hear, just to operate that one little "shack" that they call a Library, because it's big enough for this town. And it's not hurting anybody just sitting there, other than what it's costing the citizens of Harrington.

You really don't understand these things until you look into them and see them. And I see them because I'm the watchdog of Harrington. I don't know whether anybody knows it or not, but I've been here for 44 years, but I was never interested in it before until I see all this "hulabalu" going on about these city buildings.

They had a nice city building up there and they tore it down so they couldn't get back in there. All they would have had to do was spend a few hundred dollars, or maybe a thousand or two to put a new heating unit in there and something to fix the air conditioning, it wasn't working and the "thing" was leaking. I talked to 2 or 3 firemen and they told me that the Fire Co. had rented the building to the City for $50 a month rent. Now they couldn't have gotten any cheaper rent the rest of their life, if they had just taken care of the building like they should have taken care of it. So there you are.

Maybe I'm wrong; maybe I just see things the wrong way. So that's all I have to say. Take care, see you later.

Charles Price

From the Mayor's desk

by Harry G. Farrow, Jr.

In recent days Harrington Councilman Jackie Wyatt has sent editorials to "The Harrington Journal", and The Delaware State News defending the notion that Harrington needs a new city hall, and that the City should pick up the grant money to enable the community to have a new city hall.

If the real Jackie Wyatt would stand up and be recognized, I will tell fallout. The results of the most recent election as a barometer to measure the fall.

The matter of having or not having a new city hall has never been an issue. Probably one hundred percent of the citizens of this community have favored a new city hall. In light of the bicentennial grant monies even though they required matching funds, the proposition was even more emphatic. Although let's not over look the fact that there are certain businessmen in the community who could have and would have put up the necessary "seed money" to start a city hall.

So the matter of having a new city hall was never an issue.

Mr. Wyatt was a member of the former council which decided that a building committee should be appointed to make a study on a new city hall. The catch was that the building committee had to come up with a 4,000 to 5,000 square foot building. The possibility of finding an existing one that size that met other specifications was practically impossible.

Thus the need for a "new" building.

That council, of which Mr. Wyatt was a member, also voted not to be bound by the results of a citizens referendum...should there be one...concerning a city hall.

There are those who would say in a representative form of government, we elect officials to represent us by voting their own "conscience"...or interests.

Not here in Harrington, Delaware. The citizens here wish their representative form of government to be a fair exchange between their representative and themselves. They demand to be heard and they demand to know.

That's the way it is. If you don't believe me just ask them.

There are those who will say the citizens of Harrington don't care about what happens with matters of concern at city hall.

I again invite you to come to Harrington, Delaware and ask these fine citizens. I know what the answer will be. There is a silent majority out there as I discovered when I walked through this community during the recent election campaign.

There are those who will make joke about Harrington as a place to live. This is a fine community. Make no mistake about that fact. Those who criticize, I invite to come here and live for awhile. You will find out just how catching it is.

At issue with this fine community and its fine citizens is the simple word "NEEDS". The question therefore becomes not do we need a city hall but do we need the size of which is proposed to be a forty one hundred square foot building?

Needs!

The proposed new city hall will accommodate the city administrative offices, library and police department. Again what the citizens of the community want to know is whether we need a larger library, or is the present one suitable. Certainly the present one is well located.

The current library is costing in excess of $22,000 per year. The police department is costing in excess of $130,000 per year. The new city hall will be larger than the present facilities for city hall, police department and the library. Common sense tells you that the cost of overhead will go up as well.

There are those who would say take all the grant money available, match it, build it and go for it. Not here in Harrington, Delaware. The citizens of this community do not want to foot the bill for a very expensive civil government. They may have to, because remember they have no say.

Big government is not what brings business to town. Things like low tax assessments and low taxes, a city debt free, a city easily accessible by road, water, or air, close proximity to major markets and a good utility system such as water sewer and electrical systems are some of the things which make a city marketable.

Let's not fail to include our fire department which consistently year after year does one great job in protecting our properties...yet they have been cut consistently in the city budget.

What the citizens wanted to decide was whether the costs of the services and utilities heretofore mentioned are commensurate with what they are getting in return.

I, like so many citizens of this community, favor a new city hall. I would have preferred a location most visible to those who travel through our fine community each day. Just for pride sake. Let me remind you that sometimes the hardest decision might be the most expensive depending on how you look at it...but in the end will be the best.

There are those who say this community will not work together. I offer you new hope in that area. I want to be in communion with you and your families so we can build a better relationship for us, for our children and for our community.

The results of the election proved that we can have a partnership baptised in trust, based on friendship and steeped with determination which will bring about a better community. If we have a better balance between the needs and desires of our people, we will then have a better community designed for the good of all.

I invite all of you to talk to me about your city government or any other problems with which I might be able to help you.

You can call me in the evening up until 10:30 p.m. at 398-3250, or during the day at 398-3206.

Congressional Committees: Where the action is

by Congressman Tom Carper

As the 100th Congress gets underway, one of our first orders of business will be the little known but vitally important process of organizing the 27 committees and 144 subcommittees of the House of Representatives.

Most Delawareans are surprised to learn that getting on the committees that will best serve our state requires yet another election. Only this time the voters are my fellow Democrats in the House who choose from among contenders for each of our vacant committee slots.

When I first went to Congress in 1983, I lobbied successfully to be elected to two committees of particular importance to Delaware: the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, and the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs. I have remained on those committees ever since, and I will serve on them again during the 100th Congress.

Representing a state that places great emphasis on the environment, particularly its ocean, bay and coastal, and port resources, made my Merchant Marine and Fisheries choice an easy one. As a member of the Coast Guard Subcommittee and the Fisheries and Wildlife Subcommittee, I will be well positioned to continue my active participation in the development of federal policies on ocean pollution, maritime safety, wetlands protection and oil spill cleanup. These two subcommittees are also ready to assess the impact of the President's budget on fishery and wildlife programs, and on the activities of the Coast Guard.

Earlier this month, I joined my colleague, Congressman Bill Hughes of New Jersey, in introducing legislation to halt the dumping of harmful sewage sludges off our coast, and to impose user fees to ensure that dumpers, not U.S. taxpayers, are burdened with the cost of monitoring those activities. And in the near future, the Fisheries and Wildlife Subcommittee will be holding hearings on yet another threat to our ocean environment: plastic pollution which threatens marine mammals, birds, and other wildlife.

My subcommittee assignments on the Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee also give me the opportunity to address a wide variety of issues of concern to Delawareans. With more financial institutions failing every year, the Financial Institutions Subcommittee on which I serve will allow me to shape federal policies affecting the safety and soundness of our nation's banks, thrifts and credit unions towards better protecting customer deposits. And next week, I anticipate that the Subcommittee will consider my legislation to set limits on the amount of time financial institutions have to clear checks so that customers have more immediate access to money in their accounts.

The Subcommittee on Housing and Community Development will enable me to play a role in the future of federal housing policies including VA and FHA mortgage programs, low-income and elderly housing, and providing shelter for the homeless. I will also continue to pursue two of my initiatives from the last Congress: the removal of poisonous lead paint from federally subsidized housing, and income verification legislation to ensure that low-income housing subsidies are going to truly needy people.

Finally, my interest in our nation's international trade imbalance has led me to join the International Finance, Trade, and Monetary Policy Subcommittee. From this vantage, I will be able to better assess options for improving the competitiveness of American business and industry on world markets.

The two committees and five subcommittees on which I serve will wrestle with some of the most difficult challenges facing our state and nation today. I look forward to working with my colleagues on these committees to meet those challenges in the 100th Congress.

We invite you to submit your Letter to the Editor

Road crews deserve credit

by Governor Michael N. Castle

National Guard helicopters aren't built for comfort. They're built to move people from one place to another efficiently.

Last week, after the second East Coast snow storm in less than a week, Guard helicopters did their job when I invited reporters and film crews to join me on a helicopter tour of Delaware to see the impact of the storm and learn how well we had handled the snow.

After seeing hundreds of miles of roads -- from major highways to little-traveled back roads -- I'm impressed with the job road crews did in clearing the snow. Everyone suffered some inconvenience, but very few people were stranded, thanks to the non-stop clean-up effort.

For the record, the state highway crews did an exceptional job.

They worked round-the-clock to clear roads. Their job was complicated by extreme cold, which meant that none of the snow melted, even after salt crews had done their work.

They cleared Delaware's thousands of miles of roads methodically, starting with major highways and working their way toward the least traveled roads.

Because I declared a limited state of emergency, we could count on the National Guard to help clear I-95 and other important roads. But, since that emergency status forces some employers to close down, I lifted it as quickly as possible.

My hat is off to the crews who handled the snow last week. They worked hard, they did a good job and they made sure Delawareans could travel as soon as possible after the snow ended.
