by Bonnie Algier-Mitchell
HARRINGTON. At Monday's special council meeting, the council selected John Williams of the Dover law firm of Vaughn & Nicholas, who will serve as City Solicitor for the City of Harrington until the next election in January 1989.

Mr. Williams has practiced law for 13 years. Following his law school graduation, he joined the law firm of Schmittinger & Rodriguez, where he assisted Mr. Rodriguez the city solicitor for Dover, in his representation of the City of Dover. It was mentioned at the council meeting on Monday night that the Dover charter and Harrington's are very similar, as well as the planning and zoning ordinances for both.

The council, on a motion by Councilman Donald Jarrell, requested a written opinion from Mr. Williams immediately on the issue of mobile homes and manufactured homes in the city limits. "What are we legally allowed to permit or exclude and in the opinion include possible options", said Councilman Jarrell.

The council did not elect to lift the moratorium on manufactured homes at this time, but instead would wait for the lawyer's opinion.

Jarrell appointed to fill vacancy on Harrington Council

HARRINGTON. Donald Jarrell of Reese Avenue in Harrington was appointed by council last week to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Councilman N. Watson Brown.

Mr. Brown was elected in 1987 to a three year term to serve the people in Ward 6. He had served one year when he resigned due to health reasons.

Mr. Jarrell had previously served on the council for four years, serving a three year term from 1984 through 1986, and one year in 1988. He chose not to run in 1987 due to health reasons. Mr. Brown being the only candidate for the seat was elected.

Mr. Jarrell will serve until the next general election in 1989. There will be a general election at that time for the remaining one year left on the original term of Mr. Brown. In 1990 another election will be held for the three year term.

Food Distribution dates and locations set for March

The next quarterly distribution of USDA donated foods will take place on Wednesday, March 16 in Sussex County and Thursday, March 17 in Kent County. The State Division of Purchasing, which administers the program, will again be assisted by fire companies, their ladies auxiliaries, Jaycees, State Granges and other volunteers.

Available commodities will include butter, process cheese, instant milk, rice and honey.

Delaware residents who receive food stamps, general assistance, or AFDC will be mailed food vouchers from the Division of Purchasing which entitles them to USDA donated food commodities. The March vouchers will be mailed several days prior to the date of distribution. The person to whom the voucher is addressed or a representative authorized by that person must take the voucher to the location nearest them in exchange for the food. Persons on the above listed public assistance programs may no longer receive surplus food at these distributions by presenting their assistance cards. They must have a voucher.

Also eligible are those with total household incomes not exceeding 185% of the poverty level, as shown below. Only one person per household may apply. Persons applying under the income eligibility guidelines will not receive vouchers, but must present their driver's license or Social Security card as identification.

Recipients should bring a bag or box for their food.

Homebound recipients in this category can also have someone pick up their food by completing a form that their representatives must present at the distribution center. The forms are available now at all State Service Centers. Forms can also be obtained at distribution sites during the hours of distribution. In addition, twenty-three agencies who provide services to the homebound will make forms available to individuals they are now serving.

It is extremely important that recipients NOT tie up emergency phones when inquiring about surplus food. PLEASE DO NOT CALL LOCAL FIRE COMPANIES, JAYCEE CHAPTERS OR STATE GRANGES. DIRECT ALL INQUIRES TO CONNIE BIDDLE AT 834-4512.

Home trashed when teen party gets out of control

by Bonnie Algier-Mitchell
MILFORD—George and Sandra Frunzi of 20 Victoria Drive, The Heaths subdivision, one mile West of Milford, were away overnight attending a conference leaving their 16-year-old daughter, Brandy Markland, at home. They returned to find their $200,000 home "trashed", the aftermath of a teenage drinking party.

Mr. Frunzi is the assistant superintendent of the Sussex County Vocational Technical High School and his wife, the director of the Kent-Sussex Chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Despite being forbidden to have friends over while her parents were out of town, Ms. Markland disregarded the rules. She invited several people over and the party just "mushroomed." Arrests were made at about 10:30 p.m.

Friday after troopers responded to an anonymous call and found about 150 juveniles at the residence, many of whom were intoxicated.

Troopers broke up the party. Parents were notified and intoxicated teens were turned over to them.

Some 30 juveniles had been arrested Sunday evening for possession and/or consumption of alcoholic beverages. Damages, including burned carpets, solid oak floors ruined, furniture damaged, etc. has been estimated at approximately $4,000. Jewelry and leather jackets were also reported stolen. The Frunzi's intend to press charges and hope to prosecute.

According to Sgt. Gerald R. Pepper, Jr. Tuesday, four more arrests were made Monday evening and more arrests are expected to be made. Damages are being handled civilly.

Wilson G. Bradley, former councilman dead at 69

by Harry G. Farrow, Jr.
HARRINGTON. Long time resident of Harrington, Wilson G. Bradley died as a result of suffering a heart attack on Tuesday, February 23rd 1988.

Mr. Bradley will best be remembered for his long term of service on the Harrington City Council as one who was known for his fiery dialogues around the council table. To many he was a maverick at the council table, but to many more he wanted to be remembered as one who represented the people in this community.

He was first elected to the council in 1962 and served his district until his defeat in 1971. He said at the time he was tired and wanted off the council. During his tenure on the council, he served as the vice-mayor for a short term.

Mr. Bradley was a self-employed electrician, retiring from that career in the mid-60's. Mr. Bradley worked for Bennett's Security and was stationed at the West gate of the Delaware State Fairgrounds for many years.

He made his home on Clark Street in Harrington, but in recent months had sold the property and moved.

He was a life-time member of the Harrington Volunteer Fire Co. and a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge in Felton.

There were no immediate survivors. Services were 2:00 p.m. on Friday at McKnatt Funeral Home, 50 Commerce St., Harrington, where friends called one hour before services.

Burial was in Hollywood Cemetery, Harrington.

Tax Reform Act Changes Tax Status Of Farmers' Preproductive Expenses

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 imposes some new accounting requirements on farmers who raise plants or animals that take more than two years to become productive, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Generally, the new rules mean that farmers and other persons in a trade or business must include a portion of certain indirect costs, as well as direct costs, in the cost of their inventories. However, these rules do not apply to certain farmers who raise plants or animals that take two years or less to become productive.

The new rules also do not apply to trees raised, harvested, or grown by the taxpayer unless the trees are fruit, nut or ornamental trees. Ornamental trees do not include evergreens that are more than six years old at the time of cutting.

To illustrate the impact of these new rules, consider the case of a dairy farmer who raises a calf into a dairy cow. Under prior law, the farmer would have deducted all expenses of raising the calf, such as breeding fees, veterinary care, feed, etc. By the time the cow entered dairy production, all of the expenses would have been deducted in the years when they were paid.

By contrast, the new rules require the farmer to accumulate the costs of raising the animal and to depreciate the accumulated total cost over a period of years beginning when the cow becomes productive. The costs which must be accumulated include not only the direct costs of raising the calf, such as feed, but also the indirect costs, such as a share of farm utility bills and farm property taxes.

For farmers faced with the prospect of new paperwork, the IRS offers some simplified methods of keeping track of these costs. Whichever method is chosen for 1987 also must be used on future tax returns, the IRS says.

One simplified method is called the "farm-price method," and another is called the "unit-livestock-price method."

Under the farm-price method, each item in the inventory is valued at the market price minus the costs of getting it to market and selling it.

Under the unit-livestock-price method, livestock is grouped according to kind and age and a standard unit price is used for each animal in the group. For example, if a farmer determines that it costs $50 to produce a calf and $100 each year to raise the calf to maturity, the classifications and unit prices would be: Calves, $50; yearlings, $150; 2-year olds, $250; etc.

A third possible choice is to elect to continue deducting these costs just as under the old rules, but there is a drawback to this election. Farmers who make this election must use only straight-line depreciation for all other farm assets acquired and placed in service after 1986. Electing farmers will also face a different tax treatment for the gain they realize upon selling these plants and animals.

Farmers who do not indicate any particular choice on their 1987 returns, and who continue deducting expenses as under the old rules, will be treated by the IRS as if they had opted for this third choice. This means that a farmer who is unaware of these changes or disregards these choices might never be able to use accelerated depreciation on any farm assets acquired after 1986.

For more information, farmers can get free IRS Publication 225, Farmer's Tax Guide, by using the order blank in the IRS tax return package or calling toll-free 1-800-424-3676.

TAX TIPS

First Six Months Of Sick Pay Subject to FICA And RRTA

Regardless of whether or not the payments are made under a qualified plan, sick pay paid to an employee is subject to social security and railroad retirement taxes, the Internal Revenue Service said. However, payments made more than six months after the last calendar month in which the employee worked are not subject to the taxes.

Sick pay may be defined as amounts employees receive from an employer while they are sick or injured. This is so whether the payments were made directly by the employer, or by a welfare fund, a state sickness or disability benefit fund, an association of employers or employees, or an insurance company, if the plan was paid for by the employer.

Payments received under a workmen's compensation law, benefits received under the Railroad Retirement Act, certain payments under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and the portion of any payment attributable to an employee's contribution are not subject to social security and railroad retirement taxes, the IRS said.

Employers making payments of sick pay must withhold and deposit the employee and employer portions of these taxes. Third parties acting under a contract to make payments for an employer must withhold and deposit both the employee and employer portions of the taxes. However, the third party payer will be liable for withholding and depositing only the employee's share of the tax on covered payments if the third party withholds the employee portion, meets the required deposit due date and promptly notifies the employer of the wage amount involved.

A third party typically is an insurance company. A third party could also be a trust providing incidental sick and accident benefits, or an employers' association funded to pay sickness and accident benefits.

Employers wishing more information may find it in IRS Publication 15, Circular E, which is available free of charge at IRS offices, or by using the order blank in the tax return package, or by calling 1-800-424-3676.

Alimony Means Special Tax Rules

Divorced or separated persons who pay or receive alimony under a court agreement should know the tax rules that affect them, the Internal Revenue Service said.

Alimony may be deductible by the person paying it if certain requirements are met. If alimony is deductible by the payer, it is taxable to the recipient.

For payments under divorce or separation agreements made after 1984, or under pre-1985 agreements changed to specify that the new rules will apply, payments are treated as alimony if all the following requirements are met:

1. The payment is in cash.
2. The parties do not designate that the payment is not alimony.
3. If the parties are legally separated under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance, the parties are not members of the same household when the payment is made.
4. There is no liability to make any payment (in cash or property) after the death of the recipient spouse.
5. The payment is not treated as child support.

6. The parties do not file a joint return for the year in which the qualifying payments were made.

The payer can deduct alimony payments from gross income without itemizing deductions, the IRS says. The payer must include on his or her tax return the spouse's or former spouse's last name, and social security number. Failure to report the number may result in a $50 penalty.

If the spouse or former spouse fails to supply the payer with his or her social security number, a penalty of $50 may be imposed on the spouse or former spouse.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 changed the extent to which large alimony payments (i.e., payments over $15,000) made in the first three years can be deducted as alimony.

Free IRS Publication 504, Tax Information for Divorced or Separated Individuals, explains the tax treatment of alimony in more detail. Taxpayers may order the publication by using the order blank in the tax return package or by calling 1-800-424-3676.

Tax Return May Be Required for Taxpayer Who Has Died

A taxpayer's death does not necessarily mean that a federal income tax return is no longer required in his or her name, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

If a taxpayer died before filing a 1987 tax return, his or her spouse or personal representative must sign and file a return for the decedent, if a return is required. A personal representative can be an executor, administrator or anyone with legal responsibility to take care of the decedent's affairs. If a return is not required, but the taxpayer had tax withheld, a return should be filed to get a refund.

If the surviving spouse did not remarry before December 31, 1987, a joint return can be filed. Also, joint returns for 1987 and 1988 can be filed if the taxpayer died in 1988 before filing a 1987 return.

Free IRS Publication 559, Tax Information for Survivors, Executors, and Administrators, can be obtained by using the order blank in the tax return package or by calling 1-800-424-3676.

IRS Advises Employees to Check Tax Withholding

To help employees check their withholding, IRS has developed the free Publication 919, Is My Withholding Correct for 1988? It has worksheets that will help employees estimate both their 1988 tax and their total 1988 withholding and compare the two amounts. The publication is available by using the order blank in the tax return package or by calling 1-800-424-3676.

Federal tax withholding should be checked, according to the IRS, right after each employee receives a pay statement that covers a full pay period in 1988, because the statement shows how much tax their employer is withholding based on the 1988 tax rates.

Employees who find too little tax withheld should file another Form W-4 with their employer to help them avoid owing a significant amount of tax at the end of 1988, plus a penalty.

Generally, the law requires withholding to equal 90 percent of what is owed for 1988.

If too much tax is being withheld, employees may reduce the amount of tax refund by filing another Form W-4 with their employer.

Tax Law for Scholarships and Fellowships Changes

Recipients of scholarships and fellowship grants should review recent changes to income tax law that may affect them, the Internal Revenue Service said.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 changed the rules that determine who may exclude scholarship and fellowship grants from their income. The Act also redefined what kind of income can be excluded. These changes are effective for tax years beginning after 1986 and apply to grants received after August 16, 1986.

In the past, individuals who were not candidates for a degree could exclude from their income up to $300 of the basic scholarship or fellowship grant income per month for a maximum of 36 months. This is no longer allowed and all such income received by a nondegree candidate must be included on the return.

Under the Act, only "qualified scholarships" may be excluded from income. The Act defines a qualified scholarship as any amount received by an individual as a scholarship or fellowship grant to the extent the grant is used for tuition and related expenses. Tuition includes amounts paid for the enrollment or attendance of a student at an educational organization. Related expenses are fees, books, supplies, and equipment.

Any other amounts received by the student must be included in the recipient's income for that year. This would include any payment received for such items as room, board, or incidental expenses.

Some scholarship grants include amounts that represent compensation for past, present, or future services. In the past, some of this could have been excluded from income. The new law states that all payments for services are included in income even if the performance of the service is a condition of all students receiving the grant and all candidates for that degree.

Recipients of scholarship or fellowship grants may wish to get a copy of the free IRS Publication 520, Scholarships and Fellowships, by using the order blank in the tax return package or by calling 1-800-424-3676.

Molly goes to kindergarten

by Lola M. O'Day

Molly is an orphaned lamb of two weeks. One day she went to kindergarten at Lake Forest North to visit the afternoon class.

Her master, Ron Stumpf drove her to the school and was permitted to carry Molly to the children in the classroom. It was a very appropriate time for Molly to allow the children to see a baby lamb so close to Easter. Molly wore a big red bow around her neck and was petted by all the children in the class.

In addition to visiting the kindergarten class, Molly was invited into two other classrooms and was welcomed by the teachers and children before leaving the school.

Molly is a bottle-fed lamb and she is doing nicely on the lamb milk replacer. The brand for Molly is Lama, and is medicated for prevention of many common lamb ailments.

MMH offers scholarship program for area students

For the second year in a row, Milford Memorial Hospital will award college scholarships to area high school seniors and college students planning careers in hospital-based health care.

Seniors from the Milford, Lake Forest, Sussex Central and Woodbridge school systems may apply for the scholarships. Students currently enrolled in area college programs preparing them for a health career may also apply.

Last year, more than $21,000 in scholarship awards were presented to 13 high school seniors and college students entering studies for nursing and medical technology.

Recipients may again this year use their scholarships at any of the accredited two or four year colleges on the Delmarva Peninsula. These include Delaware Technical and Community College (Terry & Georgetown campuses), Delaware State College, Wesley College, Salisbury State College, Goldie Beacom College, Wilmington College and the University of Delaware.

Scholarship selections will be based on several criteria including academic record, extra-curricular and community service, financial need and an essay each applicant must write on why he or she is interested in a hospital-based health care career.

Final selections will be made by a five-member committee made up of hospital staff and board members.

After receiving their college degree, scholarship recipients must work at Milford Memorial Hospital for a length of time equal to the length of the scholarship award.

L. Glenn Davis, Hospital Administrator, says Milford Memorial is pleased with the program's success and the high caliber of students it assists.

"Our community does an outstanding job of assisting its young people with their education," Mr. Davis says. "As the area's leading health care institution, I think Milford Memorial has a unique obligation to provide educational opportunities to students who want to become health care professionals."

Applications must be submitted by March 18. The scholarship awards will be announced no later than April 15.

For more information about the scholarship program, students should contact their guidance counselor or the Department of Human Resources at Milford Memorial Hospital, 422-3311 or 856-9444.

Kent General nurses certified

Two Kent General Hospital nurses, Janet Cole, R.N., of Harrington, and Katie Fortier, R.N., of Dover, recently became the first nurses in Delaware to be certified in Post-Anesthesia Nursing. Both nurses work in the hospital's Post-Anesthesia Care Unit, formerly known as the Recovery Room.

Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Fortier had to exhibit mastery of their nursing specialty to the American Society of Post-Anesthesia Care Nurses to obtain this certification. The Society's requirements include working in a post-anesthesia care unit for at least 1800 hours over a three-year period, and passing a written certification exam.

Mrs. Cole explained that through certification "the public can be assured that the professional who is caring for them or their family has met the highest criteria for competence as set by his or her peers."

A big late-winter sale of used cars starts today at Harrington Motor Company on Clark Street. An advertisement concerning this sale is found on the back page of this newspaper.

In asking Gayle Smith, the proprietor, about this sale, we found he had a great deal to say. The firm has an unusual volume of sales of new Chevrolets and, consequently, has a large number of used cars on hand. Since this is a volume sale, the firm can afford to pass on large savings to the customer.

The employees of Ace Manufacturing Company, Inc., dress manufacturers of Harrington, went on strike Wednesday at 10 a.m. The employees are members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

Some 100 Ace employees were included among the approximately 16000 dress industry workers in Delaware and nearby New Jersey striking in an area covering eight eastern states.

Garment factories, not making dresses, will not be affected by the strike.

The strike call was issued by a general strike committee set up by representatives from shops in eight states. The union said it was striking for a 15¢ wage increase.

Harrington Public Library reading series

by Melvin Brobst

A series of adult reading discussion programs are being presented by the Harrington Public Library and are partly funded by the Delaware Humanities Forum, a state program of the National Endowment for the Humanities being sponsored and coordinated by an Ad Hoc Committee for Reading Discussion Program in Delaware Libraries.

All meetings are being held at the Harrington City Hall on Center Street since the accommodations at the library are too small. At last Wednesday night's session when Dr. Cruce Stark of the University of Delaware discussed William Faulkner's short story "The Barn Burning", over thirty area residents attended a lively discussion of this American author's account of a young southern boy's experience and recognition of adulthood before his own initiation into manhood, sometimes invoking the suggestion that what we don't know might be good for us.

These sessions are being very well attended, and compare favorably with those being held in larger communities. Two former meetings included review of Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter", and Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn", with the next meeting scheduled for Wednesday evening, March 9, at 7 p.m., when Dr. K.B. Brannon of Brandywine College will bring to life the characters from Tennessee Williams intricate play, "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" made famous through motion pictures and television adaptations.

These adventures into good reading of American classics are extremely fascinating. While seating at City Hall is limited, there is still room for more to join in these discussions. Copies of the reading materials are available at the Harrington Public Library on Commerce St., but due to the large turnout, extra copies have had to be borrowed from other libraries since a reading of the items on the list is necessary for a complete understanding of the works involved.

While registration is not required beforehand, it helps in anticipating the number of persons planning to attend that a count be known. Members are encouraged to register at the library for these series which are all free to the public, as are the books being discussed at each session. Mrs. Betty Van Vessen, local librarian, is in charge of registrations.

The final meeting scheduled for later in the month will be a presentation of Edith Wharton's famous short novel, "Ethan Frome" to be discussed by Cary Halladay of the University of Maryland.

The blues. The blahs. The dumps. It doesn't matter what you call it. Being depressed is certain to be part of your life from time to time. We don't know how to prevent it, but we have learned that it's not nearly as bad when we have each other—and God—to help us through. We're United Methodists.

"Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid." John 19:41. Some skeptics seek to deny Jesus' resurrection by claiming that He did not die on the cross, only fainted and later revived. But Roman soldiers were experts in death.

Not only did they pronounce Jesus dead; one soldier even pierced His side, and there came out blood mingled with water. Many years ago a medical doctor wrote a book on the physical cause of Jesus' death. On this basis he concluded that He died of a broken heart—a heart broken for us.

Prospect United Methodist Church

February 28, 1988 - 2nd Sunday in Lent. Rev. Holliday's sermon "Tempted By The Devil" was taken from Luke 4:1-13 when Satan three times tried to tempt Christ. Our concern today should not be how to get the devil out, but how to keep him out.

Rev. Holliday said to keep the devil out we must have possession of the Holy Spirit, keep spiritually strong and strengthen our convictions in eternal truths such as the virgin birth and physical resurrection. One reason the devil makes such headway in our lives is because we've become indifferent. He enters our lives at our weakest point, so we must remain spiritually strong.

Rev. Holliday also gave the children's sermon speaking to them about Peter. Peter thought God had favorites as God caused a deep sleep to come over Peter.

In a vision Peter understood that God loved everyone the same - He has no favorites.

Acolyte: Willie Freeman; Ushers: John and Shirley Calvert; Scripture: Anthony Gallo.

The choir gave a beautiful rendition of 'He Washed My Eyes With Tears' with a solo by Russell Legates.

Our prayer list: Sonny Shultz, Lyman Wroten, Dorothy Holden, Ena VonGoeres, Family of Henry Semans.

Confirmation classes continue every Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. at Prospect Church. Sunday School 8:45. Worship Service at 9:45.

Make sure the face you see in the mirror this morning is a happy one; you may not see it anymore today, but others will.

Spartan girls lose in close contest in Conference Championship plays

by Harry G. Farrow, Jr.

SEAFORD—The playoff game at Seaford High School between arch rivals Cape Henlopen High School and Lake Forest High School for the Henlopen Conference Championship resulted in the loss by the Spartans which marred an otherwise super season for Coach Pat Dyal Borowski.

The seventeenth game winning season with one loss came to a halt Saturday afternoon as the Cape Henlopen hoopsters downed the fighting Spartans 62-57.

The Spartans fell behind early in the first quarter as Cape at one point opened up an early lead 9-2 and 13-8 at the end of the 1st quarter.

The Spartans enjoyed one of their very few hot streaks when they scored 12 straight points in the second quarter to go up 20-17. Cape came right back and took the lead into the second half 30-26.

It appeared the Spartans were still in the game as they battled Cape. Both teams have become arch rivals over the past few years because of their post-season play.

In the third quarter the Spartans closed to within two points but again Cape pulled away, and were leading our Spartans by 11 at the end of that quarter.

Again Lake Forest edged closer to the fierce Cape team who refused to relinquish the lead by switching to a man to man defense and closed again at 58-53 with slightly more than two minutes left in the game.

From there on out each team scored four points and the game ended at 62-57.

"It seemed that all we could do was just get close to this team (Cape...which Lake Forest defeated in regular season play by two points), and we could never get the lead", said Head Coach Pat Borowski.

"We out rebounded them, but we were sort of cold shooting from the floor. We could not put the rebound back in the hoop", added Coach Borowski.

Cape played a running game, claiming that this was their game, but the Spartans during the season were runners too. "It was just one of those games. I think they caught us a little off...and the game was close...so that spelled the difference", added the coach.

Arlene May and Melanie Pelton teamed to score 20 apiece, and Melanie "...really helped out in the rebounding. I think she grabbed 12", said Coach Borowski.

For Cape it was a three girl team as their big gun, Zeldia Sheppard, scored a game high 25 points, Clifton got 12 and White scored 12. "It was Clifton's shooting from the point which helped them too", said Coach Borowski.

Lake Forest was 9 for 16 at the charity stripe and Cape was shooting less at 9 for 19.

Lake Forest places three in state wrestling tournament

by Harry G. Farrow, Jr.

DOVER—The Lake Forest wrestling team under the coaching of Tom Shaffer place three members of its 1987-88 team in the State Wrestling Tournament this past weekend.

Leading the trio was senior heavyweight Henlopen Conference champion and defending State champion in that weight class...Marvin Hicks.

According to Coach Shaffer, "...Marvin, I believe is the most successful over all wrestler I have ever coached and possibly the most successful in the history of the school".

"We have had supreme performers in the likes of Charles Jones and Kenny Outten and Scotty Fleming in recent years, and they did things well", said Coach Shaffer.

"Jones for instance was an excellent dual meet wrestler. Just a great competitor as was Kenny. And of course Scotty (Fleming) until this year held records in just about every category."

"But overall Marvin accomplished some of these things like two time conference champion, runner-up one year, won the Seaford tournament two times won the Milford tournament once, State champion and runner-up state champ," said Coach Shaffer.

Marvin Hicks had 64 wins to his credit "...which for us is a modern day record", said Coach Shaffer. This year he set a new record for most points scored in one season, with 71. "he broke Scotty's (Fleming) record (62). He is second in pins with 18 to Scotty's 19 and third overall in total points for his career with 169 behind Charles Jones (175) and Scotty Fleming with 171."

From there to here is not a long way

by Anne Evans Clendaniel

Writing this column began innocently enough, as most things do. A press release to all Delaware newspapers about an upcoming meeting of Delaware Press Women carried references to the recently published Legacy From Delaware Women. One of them mentioned that I was born in Harrington and went to school there.

That brought a request from Anne Paladino for some biographical information from me. Right then I was near suffocation under deadlines, so I shipped her some pages, saying, "I am sorry to dump all this on you, but right now I can't do anything else! If you would like, I will tie all this into my school days in Harrington, provided you will give me some time to get it together!" That was a moment of weakness on my part, but, after all, just plain unrelated facts aren't always very interesting.

January has moved into February, and, by the time you read this, it will be March! Time moves so rapidly when we are busy with other things, and so excruciatingly slowly when we are concentrating on pain or grief. It ceases to exist when we get flashbacks into the past. There have been many times in my life when something I was doing triggered a memory of a teacher, a classmate and an incident in those first classrooms back in the 1930s. They remain an integral part of my life because, of course, they were my shaping, along with my parents' teaching. They began my discovery of life and the world, and I often realize how lucky I was to experience, at the right time, the right kinds of discovery both in myself and in what was happening around me.

It all began in first grade in the original old school building, with Miss Abercrombie, whom none of you will know by that name. However, a few years ago, when I was still Director of the Delaware Chapter Arthritis Foundation, I took an exhibit to the Harrington Fair where I was introduced to Mrs. Frank Tharp-Miss Abercrombie of 1924!

Books and reading were the big events of that year. When I was asked later to read to my class on Valentine's Day, I was to wear a large red heart. With only a day's notice, my mother cut up a white serge suit she had outgrown, and fashioned me a white wool dress to wear under that heart. No one else then would have thought of such an impracticality as a child wearing white in the winter! I still recall the joy of reading intensified by the joy of wearing something so new and so appropriate. My parents' supportive help in those formative years made them wonderful role models for me, although they were no longer here when I became a parent...and a grandparent!

In like manner, guiding teachers in those early years provided days of fun-filled learning which I have never forgotten. In grades five and six our reading books were collections of stories about classic heroes and heroines written at our vocabulary level, but always with a few new words to look up. There was none of the "See Dick and Jane and Spot" that made up the readers from which my children had to learn to read!

A sixth grade Ancient History course taught by Miriam Kinard is vivid today. Homework and passing grades on tests simply gave us a "C" for the semester. There was additional work for a "B" and an "A". That was the year some of us built a castle, complete with moat, carved Greek temples out of bars of Ivory soap, and I finally earned an "A" by writing my first play which we produced for the class. I have never worked harder, but, oh, the exhilaration and the satisfaction of accomplishment!

Today, hanging in a far corner of my bedroom, is a handsome wall plaque of walnut with a bronze relief of "The Thinker" which is inscribed - CREATIVE WRITING AWARD - presented to Harrington High School 1935 - 1936 in honor of Anne Lucille Evans, whose essay won first place in a nationwide competition conducted by International Business Machines Corporation.

In remembering the elation I felt in receiving that writing award for my school, I also recall my bitter disappointment in the prizes awarded. The school received one of IBM's first electric typewriters. I was using an inexpensive portable that moved about on the table, dodging me a though it felt pain every time I struck the keys! (I realize now that I was fortunate to have any kind of typewriter in 1935). As a reward for all my hard work, I received a gold wrist watch engraved with my name, the date and the occasion. A wrist watch was the last thing in the world I wanted as I watched Nexie Brown, secretary to J. C. Messner, then the superintendent, as she excitedly explored the mysteries of an electric typewriter that none of us had ever seen before!

Actually, I recall comparing the incidental feelings with those I experienced in 1982 when I received national recognition for highest percentage in fundraising at the Arthritis Foundation Staff Annual Fall Education Week. At that time I was given the light blue "Excutive" jacket bearing the arthritis logo on the breast pocket. The President pointed out that I was the third woman in the country to have the distinction of wearing that jacket, to which I replied, "Having recently been color-analyzed, I know that light blue is not my most becoming color, but I shall wear it with pride anyway since I know in this business that money comes before beauty."

As President of a national health agency, he was, of course, partial to good fundraisers and he quipped, "To me you will always be beautiful in it!"

My ever-since-I-can-remember interest in writing was partly that I liked more than anything else, to write essays, stories and poems and so that was how my spare time was spent. Sometimes I could use those efforts in school assignments. Great encouragement came from Sally Winfrey who taught 7th and 8th grade English. Her eagerness to help was expressed in her appreciation and continued supply of new reading lists that introduced me to books from Chaucer and Shakespeare to very modern literature.

It was her habit to have us produce a story or essay every Friday containing proper usage of all our spelling words for the week. One or two of those pieces would be read aloud during the Friday class. With that threat hanging over us, we all tried to do well. My classmates began to ask that she ask me to read mine, and I still don't know whether they enjoyed the readings or whether they simply didn't want to read theirs! I do thank those early experiences for the fact that I have always felt at home with groups of people.

Later, in high school, I typed and circulated a newsletter, describing school events and what people were doing. I think its gossip column really was responsible for the interest! The eagerness, though, with which these early efforts were received by students and teachers, prompted me in later years to develop others in other schools and eventually in my place of work.

When in the 1960s and early 70s, I was on Bishop J. Brooke Mosley's staff, and subsequently that of Bishop William H. Meade, as Communications Officer, I prepared a series of news sheets for both Christian Education and Christian Social Relations Chairmen in all the Episcopal parishes. This developed finally into the printed monthly news tabloid COMMUNION, which still exists.

That sort of activity continued with the publication of "The Arthritis Report" during the years from 1973-1983 when I was Executive Director of the Delaware Chapter Arthritis Foundation. After my retirement, I moved immediately into the activities of the University of Delaware's Academy of Lifelong Learning, which is open only to people 55 or older.

There was, as that time, a group of some 50 retirees who organized under the University's umbrella of the Division of Continuing Education, calling themselves Delaware Senior Consultants. They offered a tremendous variety of services to corporations, small business, government and community groups and organizations, for special contracts on a short-term commitment. Special management problems, engineering or chemical problems, retirement seminars, courses on how to make a mid-life career change (I was in on that one!) were part of the picture. Business was good. I had developed a newsletter called FOCUS for prospective clients, describing what we were doing, designed to pique their interest in us. However, we had an insurance liability risk (the word insurance brings to mind Ernest Raughley whose Harrington agency in the 30s was the first one I knew). DSC regrouped under the title "University of Delaware Technical & Management Services," UD/TMS, of which I am presently coordinator of communications and still editing and writing for FOCUS, developing advertising and client brochures as I did for the Arthritis Foundation, and the Episcopal Diocese.

There is another aspect of my work of the last 15-20 years, the speaking and teaching commitments I have enjoyed, that I relate to Sally Winfrey's work with us in 7th and 8th grades. She urged her A students to participate in both extemporaneous speaking and what were called declamation contests, teaching us to think and speak on our feet as well as to train our memories and speak plainly and forcefully. How I wish now I had kept the gold pieces I won—but that time was a part of the Great Depression. I did keep the experience though which enabled me to speak to groups all over the state later in my work. If Miss Winfrey were living and teaching today, she would be Teacher of the Year every year!

I was in my junior year of high school that as a project for art class, I painted a fairly large likeness of the new school built adjacent to the old building and completed in time for my class' entry into Junior High School. For some years the picture hung in the vestibule of the school -- the beginning of my serious interest in art, when I first learned of the Louvre Museum in Paris with so many treasures that I longed to see.

I finally got to see them last spring. My French class at the Academy consists of people who love France, its history and its culture. Many of them go back every year or so, and it really was fun to plan a fifteen-day tour that would end in four days in Paris where each of us was on our own to go where we wished. I gave over a whole day to the Museum where I first saw the majestic Winged Victory commanding the landing of the wide golden balustraded stairway just inside the main entrance to the palace. I satisfied myself first with the sections that contained the Mona Lisa and the Venus deMilo, spending time with the Greek and Roman sculpture which I had learned to love in those early school years.

We spent three days along the Cote d'Azur going up along the Maritime Alps. Again, I was thrilled to ride the precipitous road built by Julius Caesar to move his army from Rome through the Alps to Gaul. We read about its construction in our Latin classes taught by James H.M. Darbie as we studied Caesar's Gallic Wars. That caring, affable teacher believed we would all learn if the classes were interesting enough to intrigue us into our own discovery of new cultures. It was he, too, who introduced us to France and the French language in our junior and senior years at Harrington in 1935 and 1936. He was also our home room teacher during those years and was available and willing to tutor a student interested in learning the Greek alphabet.

So, of course, I remembered those classes as I looked at Roman sculpture, architecture, roads and high bridges that were viaducts in Central France. Those Romans still continue to astonish! And the lessons of fifty years ago were alive and fresh with all their sparkling newness of discovery. I suddenly understood their importance: the present and the future are so rich and so promising because of having had the past! What more can one ask of education or of teachers?

A very rich part of those Harrington school days, from grades 1 through 12, was an unusual relationship that has lasted over the years, though we see each other infrequently now. It was friendly, (at a best friend level really), but at the same time highly competitive. Each of the three of us was always vying to excel. Margie Black (now Mrs. Leonard Warren of Baltimore) and Virginia Hammond (Mrs. Hugh McCormick of Front Royal, Virginia) were certainly my best friends who, at the same time, forced me to make certain that I made every effort to produce my best possible work until graduation, when our cumulative averages were tenths of a point apart.

I laughed at myself a few years ago when my biographical sketch first appeared in Who's Who of American Women. I looked for the names of some of my contemporaries with whom I had been involved in the community. I found some of them and was about to close the book when the old urge struck me, and I immediately investigated the W's! There she was: Margie Black Warren! The Class of 1936 High School!

So many memories came crowding out of those twelve years. I could go on and on about friends, incidents, places. One memory always leads to another. I was reminded of this two years ago when, as a member of Goldey Beacom College's Distinguished Alumnae Gallery, I was present at the annual spring induction of other alumnae into the Gallery, and found myself greeting Eddie Taylor from Harrington. His portrait had been added to the collection about which we are all reminiscing. We talked, of course, about the days when I visited Taylor Hardware often with my father.

Such moments are nostalgic and enjoyable, producing warm feelings in the heart. They also bring a retrospective realization that life in a small town is rich in its mixture of all types of people, and a fertile place in which a child is given room to grow. Growth is painful sometimes. Its very nature predicts a breaking of the old so the new can emerge. Any child growing up on a farm knows that. There is also joy in experiencing the new discovery even as the old self continues on -- the new bloom on a long established plant, the emergence of a butterfly -- there is coziness in the cocoon, but oh how binding it is!

This joy stays with me. One of my greatest satisfactions is a class I teach at the Academy. It is called simply "Great Books" and was initiated by the University of Chicago many years ago. I first became involved with it at the Wilmington Library in 1947-1951 when my children were small. I found it so stimulating that I became one of the group leaders, and preparation for a two-hour session of animated discussion added the mental stimulation I was needing. This was my cure for "cabin fever," giving me wonderful subjects to think about when I was spending my days and nights ministering to my young family. An added richness was association with groups of people similarly inclined toward continued learning and objective deliberation.

This holds true at the Academy. We are nearing the 1,000 mark in registrations of people who seek enrichment in their lives -- so many talents, so much humor and understanding as a result of having already experienced full and happy years.

There is no doubt in my mind that my preference was first encouraged by the long lists of books I was given to read during summer vacation, and by teachers who so willingly responded to a child's imaginative questioning. It therefore seems to me that our expectations are never just our own. How impoverished that would make us!

Where we ourselves have been adds bulk and stamina to our roots, enforcing us where we are, nurturing us as we face the future.

Elmer to return to his ancestral burial grounds

For the past twenty years, the Iron Hill Museum of Natural History has been the resting place for a very famous native American. Nick-named Elmer, our six foot plus Indian is soon to return to his ancestral burial grounds at the Island Field Mortuary near South Bowers, Delaware, to be re-interred with honor and dignity that all people deserve. The museum has always known that Elmer's visit was temporary, during the time he has been here though, he has amazed and educated hundreds of thousands. He has also suffered some tragedy. In January 1986 the museum suffered a burglary, the thieves were interested in Indian relics only, stealing precious museum collections, they also disgraced Elmer by removing and making off with his skull. The thieves were never caught and sadly, Elmer will be returning incomplete.

For the past twenty years, the Iron Hill Museum of Natural History has been the resting place for a very famous native American. Nick-named Elmer, our six foot plus Indian is soon to return to his ancestral burial grounds at the Island Field Mortuary near South Bowers, Delaware, to be re-interred with honor and dignity that all people deserve. The museum has always known that Elmer's visit was temporary, during the time he has been here though, he has amazed and educated hundreds of thousands. He has also suffered some tragedy. In January 1986 the museum suffered a burglary, the thieves were interested in Indian relics only, stealing precious museum collections, they also disgraced Elmer by removing and making off with his skull. The thieves were never caught and sadly, Elmer will be returning incomplete.

still being researched, but now, with the passing of legislation pushed by native Delawareans, Elmer must return to his rightful place of interment: We wish Elmer peace, we were proud to be a temporary resting place for him, and we give thanks to the service his remains have provided to all people. Elmer - although gone in life and now in presence, your memory at the Iron Hill Museum shall never perish!

Senatorial Report

by Sen. Ruth Ann Minner
18th Senatorial District

Governor Castle's recommended capital spending plan for the coming fiscal year has raised concerns of legislators in both Kent and Sussex Counties because of some questionable omissions.

The bulky and complicated document, for instance, does not include funding for the proposed therapeutic pool at the Howard T. Ennis School for Mentally Retarded, even though it has been specifically requested by all Sussex County legislators for the last two years. Again this year, we're going to try to get the funds into the bond bill.

I'm also concerned that beach erosion control funding has been increased only 10 percent, although our Delaware Bay and Beach communities are having increasing difficulty stemming the water's inland march.

Adding 10 percent to an already inadequate funding level appears to me to be like adding a few grains of sand to solve a mountainous problem.

There's also concern that the Governor's proposed study of a long-range plan for beach erosion control will concentrate on the ocean side rather than the bay side. Erosion of beach properties is as much a problem on the bay, although the properties aren't as expensive as they are at the ocean side beaches.

On the plus side, the Governor's plan contains $200,000 to help Milford reduce its loan from the Farmers Home Administration enough to allow water rates to be reduced.

ConAgra and Sea Watch International have warned they may transfer operations to other locations unless water rates required to pay off the $7,065,000 FHA loan the city took out to repair and replace Milford's water wells, treatment, distribution, transmission, and storage system are reduced.

By reducing the loan by $200,000, the city will be able to cut water rates to about $1.35 per 1,000 gallons from $1.47 saving some 500 jobs.

I'm also happy to report that the operating budget contains sufficient funds to operate a new Milford prenatal clinic if and when Milford Memorial and area doctors work out an agreement for staffing the clinic and serving the clinic's clients.

"Let the Games Begin"

by Gov. Michael N. Castle

The Winter Olympics in Calgary are coming to a close, but instead of waiting for the Summer games to begin, all of us "armchair athletes" can prepare for our own "Olympics".

Plans are underway for the inaugural "First State Games" -- an annual sports festival for Delaware amateur athletes of all ages and abilities, those competitors who simply aspire to be the best they can be.

We all enjoy the Olympics, but those game are for only a handful of world-class competitors. Speaking as an amateur athlete--although admittedly one whose knees no longer enjoy the thrill of victory, only the agony of defeat--there's a certain amount of frustration in simply watching the games. Many of us have dreamed of Olympic competition either while sitting in a chair in front of the television or, more actively, while pushing ourselves in the heat of competition during a 10K run. Through the First State Games we are giving all Delawareans an opportunity to realize that dream.

In order to accommodate as many Delawareans as possible, we will offer competition in fifteen official sports and seven demonstration sports, among them track and field, swimming, field hockey and yachting, which are all

Olympic sports, and will include a few local favorites such as bowling, softball, roller skating and lacrosse.

We've attempted to focus the diverse interests of Delaware's sports enthusiasts on three weekends in July and have scheduled competition to include all geographic areas from the playing fields of the University of Delaware, to the beaches and inland bays of Sussex County. The final weekend, July 29-31, there will be a parade of athletes, opening ceremonies and a torch run.

Through the First State Games we hope to provide a source of well-deserved recognition for our amateur athletes as well as develop a grass roots amateur sports network for athletes, coaches, officials, and volunteers throughout the state that will be a boost to the Olympic effort. Thirty five states now participate in the State Games effort and we look forward to building a program in Delaware that is as successful and exciting as those games have proven to be.

For more information, please contact Eric Conrad, executive director of the Games at 299-3200.

I look forward to your interest and participation on that July weekend when we hear the familiar "Let the Games begin."

"Lake Forest Aquatic Program"

by Dennis Davis
Lake Forest Aquatics Coordinator

The Lake Forest Swimming Program has matured quite a bit since it was first developed in 1982. Enhancing the total community recreational and scholastic programs, our educational aquatic program is unlike any other in the State of Delaware. We offer a complete curriculum of aquatic instruction. Our Aquatic Program not only serves the guidelines of the educational criteria, but as importantly, serves the community in all its aquatic needs. From its recreational activities to a growing competitive program, the Lake Forest Aquatic Program is gaining statewide exposure.

The educational curriculum developed for the fourth and sixth grade students is basically a two-week program where aquatic safety techniques are introduced and developed in their daily program. The ninth grade students participate in a four-week session of swimming that counts as one-half of their high school physical education requirement. This program further develops the student for our advanced aquatic programs and offers more of an aggressive approach to make all participating students water safe. Our advanced aquatic programs are available as elective courses for any upper grade students. We begin with aquatic fitness where we refine the stroke and develop the student's endurance and competence in the water. Our second phase is the Red Cross Life Saving Program and the Lifeguarding course. Both are required by the State of Delaware for further employment as a lifeguard or pool manager.

As a follow-up, for the future of our dedicated students in the Life Saving Programs, we have been working very closely with the State of Delaware recreational sites and private pool owners to supply many of our talented guards an opportunity to use their learned experiences at Lake Forest as a financial gain.

In addition to our highly regarded educational program, the Lake Forest Aquatic Center also offers a strongly developed aquatic program, "Learn To Swim," to the public. This program, during the summer months, is one of the largest programs in the State. More than 500 swimmers during the summer of 1987 were trained in swimming. In addition, we offer "Learn To Swim" lessons during the months of February, March, April, and May. These lessons are all Red Cross Certified, and taught by our highly experienced and professional instructors, Kathy Monroe and Joan Oakley. Both ladies have repeatedly been recognized for their many years of aquatic service for the State of Delaware.

Last, but not least, is our Lake Forest Swim Club. This program has developed into the fastest growing activity for children in the area. The competitive programs continue from summer to winter, where the team is a league leader. We have hosted the Summer Conference, where approximately 350 swimmers converged on the facilities to compete for Summer League Honors. This competitive program has been very successful with a total cooperation of parents of swimmers and school officials.

The Lake Forest Aquatic Program, in addition to developing educational and community programs, has hosted several aquatic clinics and national aquatic programs which has been a source of pride to all. Outstanding speakers attend, giving not only verbal, but physical instruction and guidance to our swimming family.

As you can see, we offer a wide range of programs for all ages and interests for YOU, the community member to utilize. With the cooperation of our administration, we are able to utilize the facility in a seven-day-a-week, year 'round scheduling program.

Remember, swimming is the only sport that can save a life. That thought alone keeps us striving to offer more programs to all community members - a life is priceless.

Coast Guard towing policy under review

by Congressman Tom Carper

The new Coast Guard policy for rescuing recreational boaters in need of assistance has ruffled some feathers on the Delmarva Peninsula. Since last spring, the Coast Guard's policy for rescuing boats needing assistance, but not in immediate danger or distress, has been to let qualified private towing firms to do the job whenever possible.

The Coast Guard Auxiliary - a volunteer, non-military organization under the direction and administration of the Coast Guard - had traditionally carried out many of the rescue missions now being handled by private firms. Under this new policy, in most cases, the Auxiliary is no longer allowed to provide those services.

The Coast Guard policy seeks to reduce the financial burden imposed on taxpayers by careless boaters who run out of gas, break down because they don't properly maintain their boats, or run aground. While no one denies that some boaters have abused the Coast Guard's free rescue service in the past, critics of the new policy feel it goes too far.

Some boaters feel that the new policy does not address the safety concerns of the boating public. The Coast Guard evaluates each call for help they receive to determine if it's an emergency. If it isn't, they turn it over to a commercial tow. But what the Coast Guard thinks is an emergency may differ sharply from what the distressed boater thinks.

Auxiliarists are concerned that they have been squeezed out of a job - a job they have trained for and enjoy providing as a public service. Boaters and auxiliarists worry about the availability, quality, and cost of the towing services being provided to stranded boaters who are in no position to shop around for a better deal.

In light of these concerns, the Coast Guard is currently reviewing its towing policy. A public hearing will be held near Annapolis, MD, on March 10 at the Magothy River Middle School on Peninsula River Road. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m.

The Coast Guard is interested in comments on the impact of their towing policy on boating safety. They also need input on whether to reinstitute the Auxiliary's role in rescue missions by giving them priority over the commercial towers, or whether some other method should be devised to allocate the opportunity to assist between the two. Finally, the Coast Guard needs to determine how well our region is being served by commercial towers, and how the quality of their service compares with that of the Auxiliary.

For those who want to comment, but can't make it to the public hearing, the Coast Guard welcomes written comments to be submitted by March 31. Written comments should be addressed to the Marine Safety Council (G-CMC), Room 2110, U.S. Coast Guard Headquarters, 2100 Second St., SW, Washington, D.C. 20593. Please identify the Coast Guard notice (CGD 87-083).

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

As one reads the reports on the February 25th town meeting to discuss the Lake Forest School District they begin to wonder where people learned their math.

We are told that pool expenses last year were $23,748 and energy costs were $29,675. Revenues generated last year were $20,513. Any way you add this it totals up to $53,423 of expenses against $20,513 of revenue for a net cost to the district of $32,910, not $12,200.

With the local salary supplement for a teacher with a Masters degree and fifteen years of experience being $5618 per year, this $32,910 would fund another 5 1/2 teachers per year. Multiply these figures over the years that the pool has been in operation and the figure is staggering. Consider if these monies had been used to fund local staff salaries and maintain our buildings.

And while we repeatedly hear statistics on low teacher salaries why has the news media not done a report on administrative salaries? There certainly doesn't appear to be a great turnover in that department.

If you, the general public are truly interested in our school systems then why did you not attend the town meeting and ask questions?

Doris W. Draper
Houston, Delaware

Roth: Diesel tax provision running on empty

by Senator Bill Roth

It is never very polite to say I told you so, but there are times when it is hard to resist. Those of us who opposed a change in tax collection on diesel fuel are now biting our tongues. This change, which was part of the budget package passed last December, provided that many who are exempt from the diesel tax will now have to pay it and then seek a refund or tax credit. The new law could be a real headache for farmers who may find themselves caught in a web of bureaucratic paperwork.

At the time this measure was being considered in the Senate Finance Committee, I pointed out that it was an unwise action that would create problems for our farmers. I also made it clear that I would not, could not support it. I voted against this measure while in committee and eventually voted against the whole package.

Now, a few months later with a little over a month before changes go into effect, people are anticipating the sting. Having heard from a number of Delawareans on this, I agree with their concerns and plan to push for a reversal of this measure. In fact, I have recently cosponsored legislation which would correct this "mistake", allowing tax exempt purchases of certain fuels including purchases by farmers.

Specifically, the change in the diesel fuel tax collection will require payment of the tax at the wholesale level rather than the retail level. For farmers who are now exempt from the tax for off-highway use of diesel fuel, this will hurt. They will be eligible for a refund or tax credit but paying the tax up front could definitely create cash flow problems. For example, according to the American Farm Bureau, Delaware farmers will have to pay approximately $700,000 in taxes for diesel fuel. This could also mean that farmers will have to increase their loans for operating costs to cover the tax and in turn see higher interest costs.

The cost to the government for this unnecessary exercise -- taxing farmers then refunding their money -- could far outweigh any of the benefits of having these funds on loan, interest free from the farmers. At a time when we are looking for ways to reduce the deficit, it seems a little ridiculous to create government busy work.

The bottom line is that this measure in the budget package makes no sense and could lead to further hardship for farmers already struggling to survive financially. I hope my colleagues see fit to act quickly in retracting this provision.

Soviet military strength based on economic weakness

by Dwight R. Lee

Why was Mikhail Gorbachev willing to sign the INF treaty which calls for the elimination of all U.S. and Soviet intermediate range nuclear weapons in Europe? One obvious answer is that the Soviet Union has an advantage over the West in conventional forces. But this raises another troubling question. Why, in the face of a weak Soviet economy, is Gorbachev willing to shift toward conventional forces, when nuclear weapons are relatively cheaper? Haven't we heard repeatedly that the Soviets are sincere in their stated desire for arms control because they cannot afford an expensive arms race?

There is no doubt that the Soviet economy is weak, especially the civilian sector. Economic decisions in the Soviet Union are controlled predominantly by central planners, and will remain so into the foreseeable future. Gorbachev's policy of perestroika notwithstanding, central planners are incapable of either acquiring or acting upon the information needed to keep production decisions responsive to the changing preferences of millions of consumers. This explains why the Soviet civilian economy is characterized by unimaginative managers, poorly motivated workers, inferior products, and chronic shortages.

Contrary to the prevailing understanding, however, poor economic performance encourages military spending in the Soviet Union. It does so in two important ways. Economic inefficiency in the Soviet civilian sector 1) increases the importance Soviet leaders attach to military strength and 2) reduced the costs of producing that strength.

In contrast with the United States, the Soviet Union is a superpower for one reason only: its military strength. Without its military power, the Soviet Union would be a large but poor country, and its leaders would have little standing or influence in the world community. Within the Soviet power structure, the impotence of the economy accentuates the importance of the military.

Poor economic performance also reduces the real cost of Soviet military spending. The cost of producing anything, whether bombs or band-aids, is the value of output that must be forgone. The Soviet Union may be less efficient absolutely at producing military hardware than the U.S., but the production of military equipment costs less in the Soviet Union because, with its inefficient civilian economy, this production crowds out less civilian output than it does in the United States. The Soviet Union has what economists refer to as a comparative advantage in producing military power.

Soviet leaders have responded predictably to this comparative advantage. They know that if the Soviet Union distributed its resources among the military and civilian sectors in the same proportion as does the U.S., then it would cease to be a superpower. But a large sacrifice in military strength would produce little improvement in what would remain a weak civilian economy. Thus, Soviet leaders have lavished resources on the military sector, and created the military machine we confront today.

The INF treaty raises the costs of the military competition between the U.S. and the Soviet Union because it increases the emphasis on conventional weapons. Despite the overwhelming economic advantage the U.S. and its NATO allies have over the Soviet Union and its Eastern European allies, any arms agreement that increases the costs of military competition plays to Soviet strength. The Western democracies can compete dollar for dollar with the Soviet bloc militarily, but there is little evidence that they will.

In economically efficient democracies, strong political pressures exist to subordinate military spending to civilian consumption. The convenient belief is that the same pressures exist within the Soviet Union, and are intensified by the weakness of the Soviet economy. This is a delusion. The ever-present danger in a democracy is that delusions will control our decisions. This danger is at no time more threatening than when it leads to attempts to increase our security by trusting in arms control agreements such as the INF.

A laff a day...

by William T. Ficka

A man, unable to take his wife's constant nagging, finally took to drink. The wife asked her friend for advice.

"Scare him," said the friend. "I understand if a drunk is scared by seeing snakes or pink elephants, he'll swear off drinking for life. Think of a way to scare him."

The wife rented a red fluorescent devil costume and hid in a dark alley near the tavern. When her husband staggered into the alley, she let out a piercing scream.

"Who are you?" asked the husband.

"I'm the devil," she shrieked.

"Shake hands," he said. "I married your sister."

All it takes for a modern bride to be a good cook is the proper attitude, patience, concentration, confidence -- and a good can opener.

A day with the vet

by Rebecca Moore

We all have our particular interests. Some of us like to read and do needlework. Others prefer jumping out of airplanes and exploring caves. A vast number of people spend much of their time glued to their television set whenever a sporting event of any kind is broadcast. Some like to bake fattening goodies, and others enjoy working off the end result. Some of us just enjoy eating the goodies and adjusting to the end result. But, at any rate, each of us is unique, and what we enjoy is equally unique.

There is a room in every hospital, buried deep within its sterile corridors, which hold a particular fascination for this writer. Having been on the receiving end as a patient, and on the observing end as a student nurse, this room remains a fascinating place for me. Indeed, if I had had my way during nursing school, I would have been in the operating room every day for the entire year of training. "Oh, yuck!" you're thinking, "the operating room! That's horrible!" Well, to each his own. But when you consider the amazing creation this human body is, and the incredible balance in which it works, you can begin to understand my fascination with the operating room. Even as a patient, my interest and curiosity were overwhelming. All those lights and nasty-looking instruments, added to doctors and nurses who had no features other than eyes—what a fascinating, mysterious place!

Add to my interests in hospitals and anatomy a love for animals, and you've got aspirations of becoming a veterinarian. That, however, takes years of college, and a much better head than I've got on my shoulders. So I've settled for second best—I've read everything that James Herriot has ever written and have just recently discovered a new veterinarian-author who is equally as fascinating, named Rory Foster. Oh, the hours of pleasure I have derived from vicariously living out a dream which for a brief time occupied my mind.

Somewhere along the line, my family has managed to accumulate an outrageous menagerie of pets, who, like us humans, need a doctor's attention from time to time. Seems like we've been to the vet for just about everything from the routine things like infections, to the slightly outrageous things like when Jerusha had her tail amputated after climbing up in the engine of our van. It's just too bad we can't claim the animals as dependents. Anyway, it's because of our animals that we've been able to meet some pretty nice people. Take Dr. Mersky, for instance. He was a vet in Dover for over thirty years, and he maintained many of our little beasts for several years until he retired just last year. Following in his footsteps, in the little office in Dover, is Dr. Sheryl Meyers. Now she takes care of our menagerie, and they couldn't be in more capable hands.

Now, if I ever got the urge to visit a vet for the day and observe her activities, I probably wouldn't get off first base.

But, thanks to The Harrington Journal I can get into places where normally I'd be turned away. Ah, the freedom of the press! Bless you, Dr. Meyers, for allowing me to enter your domain for a few hours!

Last Monday, I was greeted at Governor's Avenue Animal Hospital by Sharon Wyatt, the receptionist/groomer/anything else you can think of. She's a gorgeous lady with curly, brown hair, and a beautiful little girl. Sharon's background is primarily with horses, so her work at the animal hospital is somewhat different, but she really enjoys her job. Charles Pepper is the veterinary assistant who has worked in that same office for thirty years. He, too, has a daughter, but she's a bit older than Sharon's. In fact, she'll be graduating from the University of Delaware in the spring with a degree in accounting. Mr. Pepper is a real pro. He knows just how to handle every animal, and they don't seem to fear him at all. He always takes the time to give a pat on the head or a scratch behind the ears.

The animal hospital is small. A front room serves as a reception area. The second room is Dr. Meyer's examining and operating room. Other areas serve as her office, and hold x-ray equipment and out back is a kennel. It is small, but more than large enough for the continuous stream of patients and owners who make their way through the front door.

The exam/operating room is spotless. A stainless steel table sits in the center of the room. There are no huge lights over it as in a people operating room. Instead, one wall is almost entirely window which lets in an incredible amount of light, and Dr. Meyers also has a high-intensity lamp which really does the job. Medications and equipment are housed in cabinets and shelves in an organized fashion, so Dr. Meyers can grab whatever she needs without fumbling for it. A complex machine sits in one corner—it's used during a surgical procedure to anesthetize the patients. Nothing in this office is make-shift—it's all state-of-the-art, and totally modern.

Now, how would I describe Dr. Meyers? Well, she's very tall and slim. She has curly, brown hair, and she wears Reebok sneakers, and she smiles all the time. Unlike some of us who have perpetual-motion mouths, Dr. Meyers, is quiet and soft spoken. Growing up in Alexandria, Virginia, Dr. Meyers has spent the past ten years in a number of places. Her undergraduate work was completed at Virginia Tech, then she headed for Iowa Veterinary School. In spite of the fact that she didn't actually grow up on a farm, she still loved farms and the animals that live on them. This first put an interest in veterinary medicine in her. After spending several years out west, Dr. Meyers responded to an advertisement she read. She was one of several who applied for the position to fill up the gap left behind by Dr. Mersky. Arriving in Dover last year she lives in a townhouse with her favorite four-legged creature—her cat.

Of course, not all of her patients are of the domestic variety. She was once given a squirrel which had been hit by a car. Now, when you think of a squirrel and how tiny it is, it's hard to imagine it surviving the onslaughts of several tons of metal. But it made it as far as Dr. Meyer's office, and under her expert care, returned to its happy home within a matter of days.

My morning at Governor's Avenue Animal Hospital was one I'll not soon forget. By noon, my feet were killing me and I was dying to sit down. Dr. Meyers and Mr. Pepper, on the other hand, were completely comfortable—must have been the Reeboks. But my feet were a small price to pay for the time I spent with three delightful people, seeing and doing things I never thought I'd see and do. And I met three professionals with a definite love for animals, and caring spirits that show up in everything they do. I got a small sampling of veterinary medicine and the people who practice it, and I was thoroughly impressed. It's good to know that all of my furry little creatures are in such good hands!

One last note. If your dog has not been tested for heartworm within the last year, please have it done. Prevention of the condition is much easier than the cure for it. So, do your faithful friend a favor and have him checked!
