

School Board meeting scene of stormy session

by Harry G. Farrow, Jr.
LAKE FOREST HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM — At Monday's regular monthly meeting of the Lake Forest School Board, district residents turned out in large numbers to hear the Rev. Joseph H. Brame of St. Paul's AME Church in Harrington appeal to the Board to establish an at-large member to the Board and that member should be him.

He cited the failure of the school board to hire William Daisey, an assistant principal at the W.T. Chipman School, to the position of business manager for the school district. The position is the second highest in the district, and is positioned salary-wise just under the superintendent.

Rev. Brame has cited numerous oversights by the school district in failing to place blacks in either management positions or stepped-up positions in management within the district.

"It is becoming too obvious that blacks are being kept off (the Board) and we need a black on the Board to protect our interest," he said. "The game playing has got to stop...now," he added.

Mr. Daisey has filed a suit with the civil rights commission, and Rev. Brame said "we are meeting with our attorney, John Williams of the law firm of Schmittinger and Rodriguez, Wednesday morning."

Mr. H. Earl Roberts, president of the Lake Forest School Board said the State Board of Education is the only body that can create another seat on the School Board.

Rev. Brame indicated that he "would go full force on this matter...and I will go directly to Dr. Keene (State Superintendent) to resolve this matter. Bill Daisey is a father of six kids. He has paid his dues. He has the credits...and if he doesn't have all of them then he should be hired and allowed to get whatever credits he needs like they did for Dick Moretti (the former business manager)," stated Rev. Brame.

Mrs. Marie Cunningham questioned Dr. VanSiver at length about the failure of hiring William Daisey.

Fleet Hughlett, president of the Kent-Sussex Taxpayers Association supports Rev. Brame and William Daisey in their cause.

Rev. Brame said that the blacks had been tricked into believing that "...Jim VanSiver would live up to his promises and put people like Bill Daisey where they belong to be...and I said to Jim you come on up here and stand with me...if you really truly intend to keep your promise about blacks in this district," said Rev. Brame.

"But he did not do it...so we are going to go with our fight for Bill Daisey," added Rev. Brame.

Rev. Brame has opened up a legal fund for Mr. Daisey. "If you wish to contribute to this fund, send checks to Bill Daisey Legal Fund, 1 West Liberty Street, Harrington, Del. 19952...to help this man get what he so richly deserves," said Rev. Brame.

"I think there is at least one person now serving on this Board (Mrs. O'Neal) who was here when Mr. Moretti was hired. It might have been a different Board...but still there is at least one member who still serves and she knows that they hired Mr. Moretti when he was not qualified and allowed him to take courses to become qualified. So don't let them try to say anything differently...because we are just not going to accept it," added Rev. Brame.

The extending of the superintendent's contract for another year was tabled, "until the board can review his record."

The Board went into executive session, and then adjourned.

Rotarians tour Nanticoke Homes

by Harry G. Farrow, Jr.
GREENWOOD — Harrington Rotarians were guided through the massive modular manufacturer's plant near Greenwood last Thursday evening.

The tour was conducted by Vice President of Sales, Carlton Goodhand, who makes his home in Harrington.

The giant home-builder was founded in 1971 with three people who built about six homes the first year. Today, Nanticoke Homes employs 700 people and has 12 homes under construction at all times. The average size of the homes is 1400 square feet, selling for an average of $60,000.

According to Mr. Goodhand, the most popular style home still remains the rancher, although there are a growing number of orders for two-story homes. The seven basic styles of ranchers mirrored became a total of 14 styles.

The assembly plant which the Rotarians toured, completes at least ten houses a week and employs 110 men. "The work day begins at 7:00 a.m. and ends at 3:30," said Mr. Goodhand.

According to Mr. Goodhand, most of the lumber comes from British Columbia and is made up of spruce, oak and pine. "These homes are well-built and certainly are put together to stand up against the weather," Mr. Goodhand added. Mr. Goodhand was alluding to the recent tornado which set down in Smyrna two weeks ago.

"We had a Cape Cod on a basement foundation, which was turned around and knocked off its foundation. The house remained unharmed. We went up there last Saturday and re-set it for the people. There was no real damage to the house," added Mr. Goodhand.

Where most contractors are using press board for sheathing, Nanticoke Homes continues to use plywood for sheathing. "And the floors are double-floored for that extra support," said Mr. Goodhand.

The homes are 98% maintenance-free and include over 1500 options to choose from with items like fireplaces, bowed windows. Some wallpapering and Andersen thermopane windows are standard. "Our homes are insulated with 9 inches of insulation in the ceiling, 6 inches in the floor and 3 1/2 inches in the walls. This gives us the R-factor of 12, which is needed," he added.

Last year sales at Nanticoke Homes grossed over $60 million, producing 901 homes. "We will exceed that this year. There were 810 homes sold right here on Delmarva last year. The other 91 homes were sold on the western shore, Pennsylvania and New Jersey," added Mr. Goodhand.

At the end of every 8-hour shift, the houses move. They move on a pair of rails which rest on rollers. "When the house reaches the far end of the

Former POWs honored by Senator Roth

by Harry G. Farrow, Jr.
DOVER — In November 1985, U.S. Senator William V. Roth, Jr. (R-Del.) played witness to legislation becoming law when the Senate made a bill he sponsored honoring former POWs.

An estimated 82 Delawareans were recognized in the ceremony hosted by the top brass at Dover Air Force Base. The medal awarded on Saturday was a first for Delawareans. The medal is available to former POWs still alive today who served in the armed services or who received an honorable discharge. It can also be awarded posthumously to the POWs legal heir. To qualify, the former POW must have been taken prisoner during an armed conflict such as World War I, World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

All Delawarean former POWs were not honored. There is an estimated 100 who did not apply but who qualify. Application forms for the medal are available through the Military Services, veterans organizations or by calling Sen. Roth's offices in Delaware. In addition, a toll free number (1-800-873-3768) has been established by the Defense Department to take the requests.

Before Roth's presentation on Saturday, he read aloud, a letter he received from Edward Manley of Fenwick Island regarding POWs.

Ed Manley took some time following the ceremony to recount his experiences at Bastogne in detail to this writer.

Ed Manley had a real tough childhood, which may have prepared him for those days at Normandy, Holland, and his capture at Bastogne...better known as the Battle of the Bulge.

At the age of 7, young Ed Manley was sent to a home for boys...like an orphanage...in Harlem. "My dad had died, and my mom just could not take care of all of us kids. So I grew up in the home in Harlem," said a very happy-go-lucky senior citizen.

"It was tough in that home in Harlem, and I guess some of the things that happened to me there, like having a buck knife pulled on me when I was 7...I think gave me an extra set of nerves," he said.

Ed Manley said the letter he wrote to Senator Roth was on pure enthusiasm. "I was really moved when the Senator wrote to me. He (Sen. Roth) really is a great guy...a regular guy all of us will remember," he said.

"I really think that guy up there has been looking out for me all these years," said Ed Manley, a retired New York State Trooper. It would seem that way, too, because Ed Manley lived a charmed life...particularly when you review the incidents involving his three jumps in Europe.

Ed Manley has been a lot of things and done a lot of things. "I was a carpenter's helper before the war. I fixed a lot of stoops and porches before I went in. After the war, I did that, plus I had a little sailboat. I would take her out in the Sound (N.Y.) — I guess you would call it therapy," added Mr. Manley.

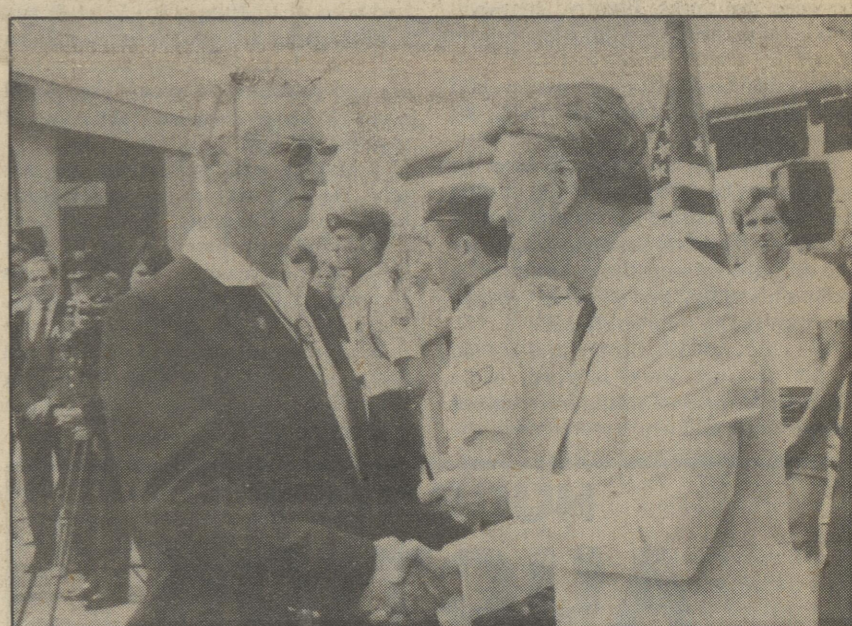

"I kept seeing in my mind, my buddy from Indiana. While we were in boot camp at Ft. Campbell (Ky.) he would take me home with him — met his parents, sister and girlfriend. He got it at Bastogne. Handsome kid. They were machine gunning us. Machine guns everywhere. I went over to see what I could do for him — and his face was blown off. It all passed in front of my eyes. I thought about those furloughs back in Indiana...but it was all over now," he recanted.

Ed Manley made three important jumps as a paratrooper. "D-5 (5 hours before D-Day) we were dropped behind Normandy. I remember the night like it was last night. The moon lit up the sky. I could see everything. We jumped from 850 feet...not much time to react before you hit the ground," he said.

"I drifted. Just kept going and going — way off the jump zone. Others landed in trees...and the Krauts got them. All of them," he said.

"I landed and bunched up with seven other guys. I didn't know it at the time — found out the next morning that six of them were high ranking officers," he added. The other guy and Manley were privates.

His company's objective was to knock out four gun (artillery) emplacements. "The big guns from the ships had already knocked them out. So...there was nothing for us to do, but stay alert," he said.

After things got settled at Normandy, his outfit went back to Edinburgh (Scotland) for rest and relaxation (R & R) before his next jump into Holland on September 17th.

"Again, I got lucky in Holland. The other guys drifted away from me and they missed the jump zone. But what happened to me was I got caught in a hot air draft. It held my chute straight up, and I also landed in dust. Sank up to my knees. A real soft landing. I got out of my parachute harness — and the chute remained straight up from the draft," he said.

After the Holland jump, it was back to Edinburgh for R & R. Three months later, "F" Company of 501st made the fatal jump at Champs and Long Champs — Bastogne.

"Of 240 men from both "D" and "F" Companies, there were only 20 left when our company commander surrendered," he said.

"What happened was...the German infantry and SS troopers...who were mostly 15 and 16 year old boys...pushed the tanks (Mark IV) through the lines the night before. One guy said the next morning, 'Did you see that rock move?' And the other G said 'what rock?' They kept staring in the same direction and instead of it being a moving rock...it was a turret on a tank. They ran back to alert "D" and "F" Companies. And then the banging started and that was the start of the Battle of the Bulge," recollected Ed Manley.

"D" Company was near the top of the hill, trying to hold the line. "I was a member of "F" Company. We came up to give support to "D" Company — or what was left...and we got it," he said.

"The mortar team had been knocked out so my buddy Frank Tedieman (from N.J.) went over to re-set the mortar station. Sgt. Matthews was out front giving us signals to make adjustments on the firing of the mortar rounds. Firing for effect — next thing I knew our position was overrun," he said.

"We were in a small ravine like...and they came in there and machine gunned us. Tedieman got it in the back and across his nose. There was blood in his eyes...and I thought he had lost his eyes. I got hit with four rounds — two rounds in each leg (near the pelvis) and all four rounds went through," he said.

"I was in terrific pain...and I couldn't feel anything from the waist down. All I could think about was they have shot my legs off. I turned to Frank and I said tell me Frank, do I still have my legs. I was lying face down. He said, yeah you got your legs...but you are bleeding like a @!@," he said.

"They kept staring down at us — these kids, and usually if you couldn't get up and walk, they shot you right there. Frank stood me up and I locked my knees and started walking. They left me alone. Next thing I knew, they grabbed me and threw me up on the back of the truck carrying ammo. I landed on the wooden boxes...did that hurt, because my whole tail had been shot," he said.

The reason why Manley could not feel anything was because his sciatic nerve had been nicked.

"We carried two morphine tablets in our helmet. They took those immediately and our cigarettes. They moved me and a guy named Rabilis (sic) from Pennsylvania to a field hospital.

It's Happening at the Fair!

McDowell to host Coors/True-Value Country Showdown

HARRINGTON — The Coors Beer/True Value Country Showdown is billed as the largest country music contest in the world and rightfully so. Over $50,000.00 dollars in cash, prizes and a one year recording contract are up for grabs.

The 1988 Delaware State Fair will once again host the state finals for Delaware, New Jersey and Maryland. Bands from the three state area will compete on Thursday, July 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the Fair. Only one band will advance to the regional finals. That winner will travel to Nashville for the national finals.

Hosting this year's contest will be country music recording star Ronnie McDowell. Many successful entertainers can point to a song that helped launch their careers. For McDowell, that song was "The King is Gone", a tribute to the late Elvis Presley, released shortly after his death in 1977. The record sold over one million copies and catapulted McDowell from relative anonymity to instant recognition. The adverse side of the fast fame was the typecasting that record led to. "People don't realize how heavily that Elvis stigma has hung over me. It's something I've worked hard to get rid of," said McDowell.

In the years since that release, McDowell has made his reputation with a string of peppy and upbeat musical tributes to women, beginning with his first hit, "Older Woman", and continuing with "Watchin' Girls Go By", "Wanderin' Eyes", "You're Gonna Ruin My Bad Reputation" and "In A New York Minute".

McDowell's 10th career album, "All Tied Up In Love", included eight tunes written or co-written by McDowell. Since McDowell began his musical career as a songwriter, "All Tied Up In Love" represents a major accomplishment in one of his first creative loves.

McDowell began performing during his time aboard the USS Hancock as a Vietnam-era serviceman. After his discharge, McDowell worked in commercial signpainting and earned extra money doing oils of Tennessee landscapes and landmarks. At the same time, he began pitching his songs and performing talents in Nashville. With the release of "The King Is Gone", he was on his way.

McDowell sang the soundtrack for the very successful television movie "Elvis" with Kurt Russell (1979), under the condition that he receive no publicity for it. His new album, "All Tied Up In Love", presents a matured Ronnie McDowell who leaves his own unique musical signature.

He had been hit in the knee with shrapnel just before they overran our position," he said.

That afternoon, they moved me from that field hospital to another one because I got dysentery. That night, when the Black Widows (British bombers) came over, someone parted the curtain in that first hospital tent and they (British pilots) saw the light and blew it up. Killed everyone in the tent including my friend Rabilus. They leveled it," he added.

Again, Lady Luck passed her wings over Manley so he could live to tell the story.

When the allies were advancing around Bastogne, the Germans decided to load up the prisoners on a railcar and take them further into Germany. "That's what we thought they were doing, but instead they put us up on a hill...an embankment. There was an armored car, an officers car and one for us. We were being used as a decoy. They locked us in the cars," he said.

"Sure enough, next morning about daybreak, here come our planes. They hit all three cars. Cut us up pretty bad, but blew enough of the cars away that we were able to get out...and we ran out in the fields. We made letters with tissue paper spelling out POW. The first pass our planes made again they saw the letters, tipped their wings, and went on," he said.

The German captors regrouped and rounded up the prisoners again and started marching in the direction away from the fighting. "They asked for volunteers to carry the Red Cross food and supplies. Some of my buddies and I volunteered — there were six of us," he said.

"They broke us down in small groups marching at 1000 yards apart. We wanted to escape...because everything was confusing...so it looked good. We kept drifting back, walking slower and slower until there was good distance between the ranks. Finally, there was this bend in the road. They went around it and out of sight. So we just made it off the road and jumped over a wall — laid on the other side until nightfall," he said.

"We were lost but we could hear the small arms fire. So we took off in that direction. We came up on this shelled house — and this German ran out to us. We thought we were done, but he got a call on his radio...and went back inside. We kept going," he continued.

"We came to this bridge and started across it...and were stopped by a German because we would have walked on the mines. They were mining the bridge. So...we walked down the center of the bridge to safety. Our officer said later the reason he felt that they let us through was because we looked dirty...really filthy, which is what the slave laborers looked like. Guess they thought we were slave laborers," he concluded.

Manley and his five buddies made it back to their lines. "We traveled down ditches and ravines. We came up on this machine gun nest ahead of us in this ravine. We laid on the embankment out of their sight — and covered our bodies with leaves," he said.

"Just as we had finished, a small squad of Germans came down the ravine retreating...right by us," he said.

"We could see the GIs advancing toward us and the machine gun nest 100 yards ahead of us was still there. Joe Frank (one of the six) jumped from under the leaves and ran toward our GIs, warning them about the German machine gun nest — and the Germans shot him. Our group knocked out the machine gun — and we were taken back to their camp. Who do you think were the first guys we saw — the rest of our Company we had been marching with and the ones we left. They had been freed two days earlier. Then they took us back to the same prison camp (Stalag XII-A) to de-lice us. That was something," he said.

The Battle of the Bulge was an allied victory but it took many lives on both sides. The Germans were trying to push through at that period — and the American Army stopped them — and turned back the German Army, who planned to march to the sea and divide the allied armies.

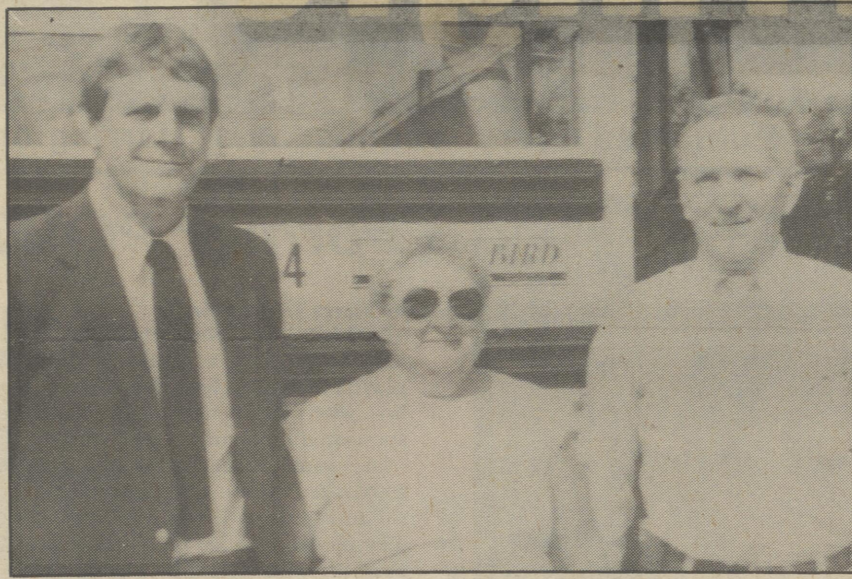

"We never got our New Year's Day dinner. The attack started on January the 3rd, as we were sitting down to eat it," he said.

Ed Manley spent 90 days captive of the Germans. He went from 187 to 134 pounds during that time. A harrowing experience for a 22-year-old kid who had been a carpenter, a truck driver and a deck hand on the Travers City...a tanker on Lake Michigan hauling fuel oil and gasoline. "I was lucky...but I guess I knew how to take care of myself," he said.

Ed Manley will be 65 years old this year. He goes back to the scenes of his battles every five years. "I just got back from being over there. I go to the exact spots where I jumped...just like it was yesterday. I am going over again in five years. I will be 70...and this time I will make a jump into the areas where I had jumped before," he said. Ed Manley, a little older — but still the tough kid out of Harlem.

The Greenwood Kiwanis Club recently made a donation of $5,000 to the Greenwood Volunteer Fire Company. A donation of $5,000 was also given to the Greenwood Ambulance Fund. Thoughts from Washington

Preserving our coastal treasures

by U.S. Senator Bill Roth

The Delaware Bay and River and our inland bays -- the Indian River, Rehoboth and Little Assawoman Bays -- are important to all of us as Delawareans for a number of reasons. Not only are they scenically beautiful and the site of recreational activities, but they are also ecologically and economically important.

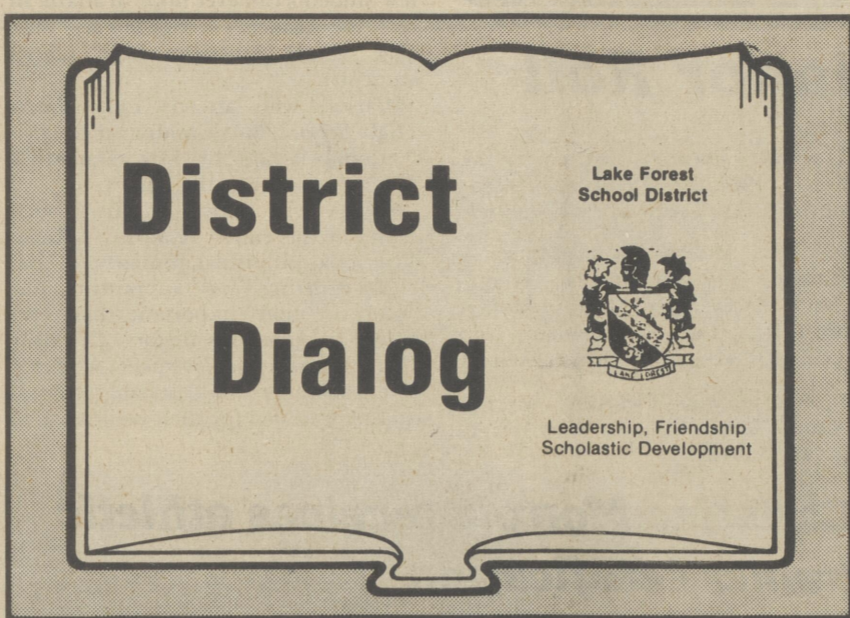

As we enjoy their beauty and resources, we must also remember that the bays are fragile environments. As stewards of our natural resources, we have an obligation to protect, preserve and enhance the bays so that our children and grandchildren will be able to enjoy them as well. I am proud that there are so many Delawareans who are not only concerned and interested in the environment but also willing to take an active role in protecting and preserving it.

As a Delawarean, I share this concern. Last year, I worked to have the Delaware Bay and River as well as the Delaware Inland bays listed for priority consideration for the National Estuarine Program in the 1987 Water Quality Act. You may recall that last summer, Delaware's Estuarine Conservation and Management Plan for the inland bays was accepted by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Such success was accomplished through a cooperative statewide effort involving many Delawareans including Governor Castle, the Inland Bays Task Force and the Inland Bays Monitoring Committee.

Just recently, Governor Castle, along with the governors from New Jersey and Pennsylvania, submitted the proposal nominating the Delaware Bay and River for inclusion in the National Estuarine Program. Joined by senators from New Jersey and Pennsylvania, I have written to the EPA to express support for this cooperative effort and urge a timely decision on the nomination so a management conference can convene.

Safeguarding and improving the Delaware Bay and River, while encouraging its economical potential is the challenge we face. Inclusion in the National Estuarine Program would certainly aid that cause through the federal funding available. I hope that the EPA sees fit to address our request and act quickly on this nomination.

"Decisions"

by Dr. James H. VanSciver
Superintendent

In any major business, there is a myriad of decisions that must be made each day.

So, it is with education.

Decisions must be made regarding buildings and grounds, about staffing, about programs. Sometimes these decisions deal mostly with monies, at times they deal with conflict-resolution.

What is best for our students? What do our students want best? There is a difference.

The same could be true for staff.

In terms of dress codes, school policy, discipline regulations and all the other guidelines with which we deal everyday, the question, "What is best?" must be asked, not the question, "What is liked best?"

There is a difference between making a good decision and making a popular one.

Sometimes they are the same; sometimes they are not.

Major factors impacting making decisions "for the best" include a commitment to doing the best. Also important is having access to information critical to the decision. Timing impacts the effectiveness of a decision.

Popular decisions are made under much different conditions. People may change a popular decision into an unpopular one. Information may do the same, as might time.

The best decision, made with the most noble intentions, given the appropriate information, will not change.

The point is, some decisions are better than they are popular.

Politicians cry wolf with calls for tax increase

By Richard H. Fink

If a smooth-talking used-car dealer sold you a lemon, you would be disappointed. If you went back to the same dealer and he sold another clunker, you would probably get angry. If the same thing happened yet again, you would probably complain to the state's office of consumer protection. You would certainly have a right to be upset, but you would also have to ask yourself whether it was a mistake to fall for the same slick sales pitch a second and third time.

Of course it would be foolish to patronize a business that cheated you, and most people do not make the same mistake twice. Politicians, however, think they can pull the wool over taxpayers' eyes over and over again. Politicians have increased the tax burden on the American people four times since 1982, and each time they promised they would use the money to reduce the deficit.

They may as well have told us that the check is in the mail. Rather than use the money to reduce the deficit, Congress simply boosted federal spending to record levels. From $591 billion in 1980 to $1.055 trillion this year, federal spending has increased nearly 80 percent. Even though the tax burden is heavier than it has ever been in American history, reckless increases in spending have kept the deficit at dangerous levels.

Politicians have often said that it is unrealistic to reduce the deficit without at least some taxes. Is this not a reasonable position? Hardly. It is instructive to note what happened one of the few years in recent history that Congress did not raise taxes. When Congress put together the 1987 budget two years ago, efforts to raise taxes were defeated. Instead, the growth of spending was held to $15 billion. While that is still a large increase in spending, it was a big improvement considering that spending has risen by an average of $59 billion yearly during the 1980s.

Restraining the growth of spending and rejecting tax increases worked extremely well. From 1986 to 1987, the deficit fell by a record $71 billion, from $221 billion to $150 billion. Indeed, if the growth of spending had been limited to $15 billion this year, the expected deficit for 1988 would be $120 billion instead of $155 billion. Congress chose, however, to raise taxes last year. The result was simply higher spending this year with no effect on the deficit.

Fortunately, this is an election year and the politicians are too crafty to attempt a tax increase right before people have a chance to vote. By no means, however, should working Americans feel safe. Pressure is building for a huge tax increase next year.

In a move that would make snake-oil salesmen look like amateurs, some politicians are already calling for your taxes to be raised again. Ironically, the same politicians whose votes for wasteful, pork-barrel spending created the deficit are using Congress for the deficit as a ruse to dip into taxpayers' wallets again.

Like the boy who cried wolf, politicians will say they really mean it this time. However, it is more unlikely than ever that tax increases will be used to reduce the deficit. Gramm-Rudman already sets the deficit; raising taxes would simply allow Congress to meet that deficit target at a higher level of spending.

In effect, Gramm-Rudman works like a balanced budget amendment, with the exception that it allows a specific deficit each year. As a result, Congress cannot increase spending beyond a certain level unless they have more of your tax money. This is the real reason why so many politicians want to raise taxes. Gramm-Rudman has limited their ability to engage in uncontrolled spending increases.

Special interest groups, however, continue to pressure Congress for more spending. Since the Gramm-Rudman deficit target for the budget that Congress must enact next year will fall to $100 billion, the special interests will desperately lobby for a tax increase since that is the only way they can continue to feed at the public trough. On the other hand, if taxpayers can unite together and block tax increases, we can force Congress to stop funding things like cranberry research, the International Coffee Organization and other pork-barrel goodies legislators try to bring home to their districts.

The last thing the economy needs is even more government spending, and since that will be the only result of tax increases, the time has come for the American people to decisively reject efforts to funnel more of their hard-earned money to Washington. The family budget has been assaulted too many times. It's time to tighten the belt on the federal budget.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Summer is the time when Delaware residents begin to enjoy the sun and surf. The Humane Society of the United States asks you to remember SOME DON'T LIKE IT HOT, -- your dogs and cats.

Pet owners can protect their animals by taking a few basic precautions:

NEVER leave a pet in a parked car during the summer, even with the windows partially open. The inside of the car can reach temperatures in excess of 120 degrees in just minutes, and pets can suffer heatstroke, brain damage and death.

ALWAYS be sure that dogs have constant access to shade and shelter when out of the house. Cats should be kept inside year-round. All pets should have clean water available at all times.

NEVER subject a dog to rigorous exercise during the hottest times of the day. Restrict walks or runs to early morning or evening.

If your pet does become overheated, it is vital to act immediately. Signs of trouble are excessive panting, labored breathing, rapid pulse, glazed eyes, tremors, vomiting or a deep red or purple tongue. If your pet is unconscious, you have very little time to lose.

The first thing to do is to try to lower the animal's body temperature by getting him into a cool shady place and applying cool water, especially around the head and tail areas. Don't allow the animal to drink too much water, no more than a cup every thirty minutes. You can also give him ice cubes to lick. Then get him to your veterinarian as soon as possible.

The Humane Society of the United States has free posters and fliers warning pet owners of the hazards of leaving pets in cars. These are distributed free to veterinarians, humane societies, merchants and individuals as part of a nationwide campaign, and can be obtained by writing "Hot Car." The Humane Society of the United States, Mid-Atlantic Regional Office, 270 Route 206, Flanders, New Jersey 07836.

Let's make it a safe summer for people and pets.

Sincerely,
Nina Austenberg

Senatorial Report

by Senator Ruth Ann Minner
18th Senatorial District

As the summer vacation season is upon us, it is a relief to know that the dredge at the mouth of the Mispillion River has been raised and moved out of the way of the navigation channel and that other objects responsible for boating accidents have been removed from the channel.

Unfortunately, further dredging of the channel is presently on hold while the insurance companies involved try to pinpoint responsibility for the series of disasters which have befallen the dredging project since it got under way last winter.

Meanwhile, we are waiting to hear from the Army Corps of Engineers on how the work scheduled to be completed last February can proceed. We have gotten the attention of the Corps during on-the-spot visits to the dredging site, and I'm confident the delay won't be much longer.

Boat safety was also the subject of a lengthy debate in the Senate last week as members argued about legislation (SB 441) to transfer the marine police responsibility from the Department of Natural Resources to the Department of Public Safety.

The Delaware Boating Council has been critical of the marine police ever since Secretary of Natural Resources John E. Wilson III merged the marine police with the game wardens last year. Legislators also have heard numerous complaints from volunteer fire companies, which complain that they have to answer distress calls on the water because the marine police don't. The idea behind the bill is that the State Police need a more viable presence on the state's waterways because of drug traffic and other illegal activities on the Delaware River and Bay and the Atlantic Ocean.

On the other hand, the State Police already have fixed-wing and rotor aircraft, which the marine police don't, and across to more sophisticated police identification and investigative techniques which could and would improve boat safety.

The bill ran into all kinds of technical problems and I understand from its sponsor, Sen. Jake Zimmerman of Dover, that he has no plans to try to get the bill through this session.

Meantime, the marine police will continue-for this summer at least-to be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Natural Resources.

Making every drop count: Improving the environment through water trading

by Don Leal

Last winter's mild weather, which left behind little snow in the Western mountains, means that we can expect water shortages in the West this summer. Such shortages would disappear quickly if owners of water rights were allowed to trade water freely. Instead, outmoded legal restrictions cause water to be wasted where it is needed the most.

Water trading for traditional uses such as mining and agriculture has been around for some time. During the 19th century, the early California gold miners initiated a system of water ownership that allowed buying and selling. The system, known as the "prior appropriation" doctrine, allowed miners to own specific quantities of water based on who diverted it first.

For most of the 20th century, however, courts and state legislatures have been chipping away at the foundations of the prior appropriation doctrine. Early water rights were replaced by state permits to use state-owned water, with decisions on water use ultimately in the hands of state water officials. At the same time, private ownership was limited to diverted water, not water left in the stream.

On top of this, the Bureau of Reclamation began to build massive delivery and storage systems, supplying water to farmers at a fraction of its total cost. Today, much of the water used in agriculture is effectively owned by the federal government. Irrigators may derive benefits from water, but they are not at liberty to transfer their water to other than agricultural uses. Water is forced to stay where it is, and others who want water -- such as fast growing towns and cities -- have to come up with expensive alternatives, such as building new dams and reservoirs.

Consider the potential gains to many groups from water trading. If a city is willing to pay more for drinking water than the water is worth for irrigating crops, farmers gain by selling or leasing it to the city. The city obtains a new water source without large capital outlays. Taxpayers gain by not having to finance water projects, and citizens generally gain by not having dams and canals which harm the environment. But such trades are constrained by federal and state rules and regulations.

In addition, the job of assuring adequate water in streams and rivers belongs to state agencies. Yet these agencies are not necessarily the best judges of appropriate water usage. Take for example the situation of Montana's Ruby River in May 1987. Minimal snowpack, little spring rain and a heavy demand for irrigation had reduced the flow in the Ruby to a trickle. Hundreds of trout became stranded in overheated pools and eventually died. Sadly, the additional water needed to keep the river flowing was being wasted. As fish were dying in the Ruby, six inches of water were standing in nearby fields.

The problem could easily have been corrected through water trading. If an organization such as Trout Unlimited could have purchased or rented some of the water to keep the river flowing, the farmers probably would have been glad to supply it.

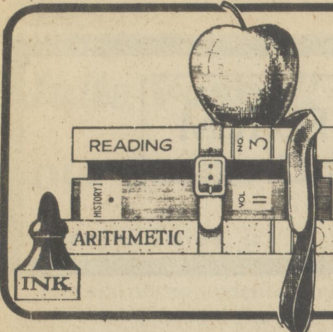

Unfortunately, legal obstacles to such water trades abound. To obtain a right to water, the owner must put it to what the courts or administrative boards consider a "beneficial use." And in most states, courts have looked upon claims as non-beneficial if there is no diversion. For example, in California Trout, Inc. v. State Water Resources Control Board, a 1979 case, a private non-profit corporation was denied an appropriation of water to protect fish habitat. The argument was that there was no evidence that California Trout, Inc. was diverting or physically controlling the water it wanted.

Some states, however, are beginning to take positive steps to encourage voluntary water transfers. State legislators in New York, Colorado, Utah, and California have recently made it legal to transfer surface water rights temporarily from one person or agency to another without giving up future rights. The California legislature has also taken steps to encourage voluntary water conservation by allowing those who conserve to sell the water they save.

And political coalitions favoring water marketing are changing the political climate in favor of more water trades. As demand for better wildlife habitat and environmental protection burgeons, environmental activists are gaining ever greater power in the political realm, and some are supporting water trading. The Environmental Defense Fund has taken a stand in favor of water marketing. The Western Governors' Association has expressed support for water trading, too. One of these days, voluntary exchanges in all water uses will become a reality.

Melissa Hetteroth receives National honor

The United States Achievement Academy announced recently that Melissa Hetteroth has been named a United States National Award Winner in Foreign Language.

This award is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. In fact, the Academy recognizes less than 10% of all American high school students.

Melissa, who attends Lake Forest High School, was nominated for this National Award by Mrs. Harvey, a Spanish teacher at the school.

Melissa will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, published annually.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in America's history. Certainly United States Achievement Academy award winners should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Executive Director of the United States Achievement Academy.

The Academy selects USAA winners upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors or other school sponsors and upon the Standards of Selection set forth by the Academy. The criteria for selection are a student's academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation to learn and improve, citizenship, attitude and cooperative spirit, dependability, and recommendation from a teacher or director.

Melissa is the daughter of SMSgt Paul and Toni Hetteroth of Felton. The grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Tech Hetteroth of Bridgeton, New Jersey and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rossi of Logton, Alabama.

God still sits in His heavenly holy temple. Therefore, we should sit in silent awe before Him. We are not to question His ways, but trust Him to act on behalf of those who trust in Him. If God can wait, so should we.

Childrens Children Are The Crown of Old Men: And The Glory of Children Are Their Fathers. Proverbs 17:6.

Jean Miller, in her children's sermon, talked about the creation of fathers. As God was creating, a female angel standing nearby by criticizing. Since God started with a tall frame, the angel said he wouldn't be able to shoot marbles, tuck a child in bed or kiss the child without a lot of stooping. But God smiled and said, "yes, but if I make fathers child size, whom would the child look up to?"

The angel told God large hands can't manage diaper pins, rubber bands on pony tails, or remove splinters. "Yes," God said. "But they will hold everything a small boy empties from his pocket." Next, God molded long, slim legs and broad shoulders. The angel said, "You just made a father without a lap." God said, "Mothers need laps, but fathers need strong shoulders to pull a sled, balance a boy on a bike or hold a sleepy head on the way home from the circus." The angel again criticized God's creation when He made the feet. But God smiled and worked on. He gave the father few words but a firm authoritative voice, and eyes that saw everything. Almost as an afterthought he added tears. Then God turned to the angel and said, "Now, are you satisfied that he can love as much as a mother?"

The angel said no more.

The children sang Happy Father's Day to the fathers and gave each one a roll of life savers. The women sang Faith of Our Fathers. At the close of the service, each father was given a bookmark.

Rev. Holiday told us the father in the home is the voice of God. In Proverbs, it tells us the man may know wisdom and my son, hear the instruction of thy father. When the father speaks - God speaks - quite a position to be filled and quite a responsibility. The majority are not fulfilling this task.

Today, not many pictures of father are associated with the church. The image we see today is pipe, slippers, and golf clubs. Many fathers never read the Bible to themselves or their children. They should repent from their carelessness.

The Bible says - the religious head of the house is the father. He is the head, heart and soul of his family. Are you that kind of father?

Vivian Dill led the psalter. Jane Everline read scripture. Ushers were Thelma Rae Melvin and Anna Webb. Greeter was Jeanette Legates.

Our prayer list: Jerry Hayman and family, Marshall Anthony, Gene Hobbs, Karen Melvin, Sonny Shultie. PRAISE be to God for Sonny Shultie and his family worshipping with us last Sunday. Congratulations to Sonny and Ellen's grandson, Jaime, who will be playing in the Blue-Gold Game.

Bible School Graduation: Sunday, June 26, 9:45 a.m.; Administrative Board Meeting, June 27, 7:30 p.m.; Regular services: Sunday School for all ages 8:45 a.m.; Worship Service at 9:45 a.m. All are welcome!

I'm glad that God made fathers Of men who once were boys; Who remember boys have troubles, And need dads to share their joys.

"And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Eph. 6:4.

Brandywine plans fun-filled racing week

WILMINGTON — Brandywine driver Bob Shahan has recorded a career milestone. The 33-year-old Harrington, Del. resident won his 1,000th race on Sunday when Astonishing Grit scored a 1:58 victory in the 5th race at the Wilmington track.

Shahan now joins three other members at Brandywine of the exclusive 1,000 win club. Only 410 harness drivers have accomplished the feat. Ken McNutt, Presley Moore, Jr. and Dick Macomber each entered the thousand win club last year.

Shahan has become the leading driver at Delaware harness tracks, winning most of the driving titles the last three years at Harrington Raceway and Dover Downs. Last season, Shahan annexed his first driving championship at Brandywine winning 110 races.

He is still the one to beat at the Wilmington oval. Currently, Shahan again stands at the top of the driver standings with 42 victories, Smyrna's red hot Joe Dugan, Jr. is right on his heels with 36 in second place. Shahan also has won more purse money, winning almost $88 thousand for his owners.

Under its new format, there is no racing on Monday and Tuesday. This Wednesday is Trifecta Night. All races will feature the popular wager on which a fan must select the first three finishers in exact order to win. Also, the popular group Bluelocks will perform in concert on the Clubhouse top floor patio starting at 8 through 12 a.m.

Thursday is another popular night at Brandywine. This week the dining room menu will feature a Mexican Fiesta of Food. It is also Industry Night. Free admission upon showing your identification.

On Friday, it will be Volunteer Firemen's Night and the simulcast of the 2nd $50,000 leg of The Driscoll Series from the Meadowlands. All volunteer firemen will be admitted free when showing identification.

The top rated 3-year-olds are north of the border this Saturday in the first $1,000,000 race of the season, The North America Cup in Canada. Camtastic and Albert Albert are the highly touted favorites in the simulcast headliner.

The second part of a Saturday simulcast double-header will bring back Mack Lobell and Go Get Lost, who were separated by only a nose in last weeks $100,000 Statue of Liberty Trot at the Meadowlands. Friendly Face, driven by Georgetown teenager Kevin Lare is another potent upsetter in the international class event.

First post, Wednesday through Sunday, is 7:30 p.m. at Brandywine.

Shahan wins 1,000 win milestone Team Hanover takes feature

by Chris McErlan

Harrington native Robert Shahan scored his 1,000th career victory Sunday (June 19th) evening aboard Astonishing Grit at Brandywine Raceway.

The 33-year-old Shahan had been stalled for some time on number 998 before winning Friday evening with Mystic Collins, then sent Astonishing Grit right to the lead and held on for a one length victory in 1:58. With that victory, Shahan puts himself in some very select company, as only 400 drivers in the history of the sport have reached the 1,000 win plateau.

Shahan first got interested in harness racing about a decade ago, and along with his wife Jeannie, a trainer, has made himself the kingpin driver of the Delaware harness racing circuit. Since the early 1980's, Shahan has been the perennial champion at both Harrington and Dover Downs.

Sunday's featured $6,000 Open Pace went to Team Hanover and driver Dave Pinkney, Jr. in 1:58.1. Pinkney went right to the lead, holding off Keystone Fritz through a .291 opening quarter. After that, Team Hanover, who was making his first start of the year, maintained a comfortable length lead over his six opponents stopping the timer in 1:00.2 for the half and 1:29.2 for the three quarters. The field started to bunch nearing the stretch but Team Hanover showed no effects of his extended vacation as Pinkney needed only to hand urge him down the final eighth to register the length victory. Mister Sea (Ross Hayer) circled the field entering the lane and finished second, a nose in front of Heads Up Handsome (Hal Belote).

The fastest mile of the week went to Forty Nine Lmdt (Joe McDonald) as he blazed the mile in 1:56.1 to win $5,000 co-feature on Sunday. Forty Nine Lmdt took command after the quarter and reclaimed it from Mysterion before the half mile. From that point on the engine and drew clear in the lane, three lengths the best over Krenshaw (Donald Dancer) and Tyler Grant (Pinkney, Jr.) Saturday (June 18) Little Lou-Rain continued her dominance over the Fillies and Mares Open ranks as she went wire to wire to capture the $5,200 feature in 1:59.1.

Don O'Dwyer sent the four year old Safe Arrival mare, leased by Marilee Capano of Middletown, to the top as the gate folded and never looked back.

"We Play That They May Learn"
University of Delaware Stadium

Blue/Gold All-Star children announced

The Blue/Gold All-Star Committee is proud to announce the selection of the 1988 Blue/Gold All-Star Children. These special children are participants in the game's Hand-in-Hand Program and will represent their team at a variety of upcoming ceremonial events, culminating in the Blue/Gold All-Star Football Game on Saturday, June 25, 1988.

Jill Robleto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Robleto of Hockessin, has been selected as the Blue All-Star Child. Jill is nine years old and attends Meadowood-Mote School.

The 1988 Gold All-Star Child is Tracy Lee, daughter of Mrs. Joan B. Lee of Dover. Tracy is seventeen years old and attends J.S. Charlton School.

The Hand-in-Hand Program matches each football player, cheerleader and queen candidate with a mentally retarded child. During the months preceding the game, numerous activities are planned to bring these young men and women together with the children, developing bonds of understanding and friendship that benefit one and all.

Jill's buddies, Renee Gallucio and Michael Ryan, both of McKean High School, will accompany her to pre-game events in the Wilmington area. Tracy will attend similar affairs in Kent and Sussex Counties with her buddy, Stacey Outten of Dover High School.

On Game Day, June 25, Jill and Tracy will lead the participants in the emotional finale of the Hand-in-Hand program. Minutes before kick-off, the children will meet the buddies on the football field and share their new friendship with the crowd -- a moment of pride for all and a memory for a lifetime.

The Delaware Blue/Gold All-Star Game is played annually at the University of Delaware Stadium and benefits the Delaware Foundation for Retarded Children.

Crisco's American Pie Celebrations returns to Sate Fair '88

HARRINGTON — In 1986, Proctor & Gamble sponsored contests to select the best home-baked pies from states across America. The celebration, commemorating the 75th anniversary of Crisco Shortening, drew more than 1,600 contestants from every state in the country. Due to the overwhelming success of the contest, Crisco Shortening is again sponsoring the American Pie Celebration at the 1988 Delaware State Fair. State winners will again compete in a national contest to select the best pies in America. Food editors at newspapers across Delmarva selected peach as the category for Delaware's contest. Now, it's up to the bakers of Delmarva to produce a winning pie that will become one of the featured pies. Contest entry forms must be postmarked by July 1, 1988. For entry form and contest rules, contact the State Fair at (302) 398-3269 or write the Fair at P.O. Box 28, Harrington, Delaware 19952.

WYUS to air Blue/Gold Game

For the third consecutive year, WYUS radio station, 930 AM, will air the live broadcast of the annual Delaware High School All-Star Blue-Gold football game. The game is set for Saturday, June 25th at the University of Delaware Stadium in Newark. Coverage begins at 2 p.m. with the broadcast team of Len Holmquist and Jimmy Flynn, the former University of Delaware and Caravel Academy coach.

In making the announcement, Program Director Tim Hopkins stated, "it's a privilege for WYUS to carry the game because so many downstate players and families are involved in this annual event."

building and is completed, we just flip the rails on their sides and push them back to the very beginning," said Mr. Goodhand. The house is moved away on flat bed trucks to its destination.

The home building industry is in trouble again, because "there is presently a lumber strike going on," said Mr. Goodhand. Nanticoke Homes has become diversified in recent years and will become more so in the future.

"We have come up with a new product which is special decorative molding. It is a polyurethane product in which we can come up with several designs...both inside and outside the house," added Mr. Goodhand. According to Mr. Goodhand, they found a way to franchise this product.

"We went to a trade show last year in Washington, D.C. We promoted the product there — found a franchiser there who has worked out a national promotion for us. We use it in the homes here, but the prime market is nationally," he added.

This division of Nanticoke Homes works two shifts. They also have a cabinet shop where all cabinets and hardware are assembled in a special building. This year they started a day care center principally to handle the needs of their workers.

Nanticoke Homes is right there filling the gaps. The principal good news for people in this area who are seeking full-time employment is that there is plenty of work at Nanticoke — so much so that they are constantly seeking help to build homes at Nanticoke. "Make no mistake about it though — it is very hard work and it takes a real person to stand up to the test," added Mr. Goodhand. "We have some awfully good people working here — but we need more people," he concluded.

All in all, Harrington Rotarians were impressed with the operation at Nanticoke Homes.

Betty Anne Hayman, of Centerville, Md., the operator of this car was southbound on U.S. 13 at the Felton light. She made a lane change to turn east on Route 12 into the path of a car operated by Carlos Rivera of Dover. Rivera and his passengers received minor injuries. Rivera's car sustained minor fender damage. Mrs. Hayman was not injured. The accident occurred Friday, June 17. Photo by HGF.

Water project awarded

RAM Construction of Frederica, Delaware has been awarded a contract by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to construct a Water Control Structure on Slaughter Canal in the Prime Hook National Wildlife Refuge. The project which will cost in excess of $280,000 will begin in mid-June and is expected to be completed by fall.

The water control structure will provide the Fish and Wildlife Service the capability of managing 1,500 acres of wetlands between Fowler Beach and Prime Hook Beach Road. The structure will be a multi-bay concrete dam similar to the two structures built near Route 16 in 1983. Stoplogs will provide the opportunity for managing water levels within the impoundment.

The main purpose of the project, according to Mr. Daly is to restore and improve wildlife habitat. A controlled water surface would most benefit waterfowl (particularly the black duck) and muskrats; however, all water-oriented wildlife will also benefit. The controlled water level and resultant control of Phragmites will also lessen the danger of fire crossing the marsh and threatening local homes.

MILFORD'S JUST OUTGROWN ITS OLD SET OF PHONE NUMBERS.

As Milford grows, so grows the need for service from Diamond State Telephone. As more and more area homes and businesses have added telephones, our existing three-digit prefixes—the first three numbers in your telephone number, excluding the area code—have completely filled up. So we now have to add a new one—424—to accommodate the community's growth.

None of the numbers you've been calling over the years will change. But many of our new listings will begin with the new 424 prefix. So if you're calling Directory Assistance for the number of a new home or business, don't be surprised if it begins with 424.

It's just a sign that Milford's enjoying the kind of growth we all like to see.

The California Raisins to make a return engagement to Hardee's

ROCKY MOUNT, NC — Last October, Hardee's made fast food history when it introduced The California Raisins™ figurines to their nearly 3,000 restaurants chainwide. In just one month's time, over 15.3 million of the popular figurines were grabbed up by raisin fanatics everywhere; many of whom lined up outside the doors of Hardee's restaurants each week as soon as a different character was offered. Based on the success of the promotion and unavailability of any additional quantities of Hardee's exclusive edition, the figurines began appearing for sale at flea markets across America for $20 each or as much as $125 for a complete set. "We all remember what Clara Peller did for Wendy's or what the "Battle of the Burgers" did for Burger King, in terms of sales and customer visitations," noted Bill Prather, Hardee's President and Chief Operating Officer. "However, both burger giants have mounted some downfall since their original triumphs." Admiring his personal set of raisin figurines, clutched tightly in his hands, the youthful executive added that Hardee's strategic plan does not include a similar scenario. "We're aggressive and consumer-driven," Prather said. "We announce today that Hardee's is introducing an all new crop of the boogieing, toe-tapping California Raisins™ for a new six week limited engagement, beginning July 1 and running through August 13." According to Prather, a different collectable hand-painted raisin character will be offered each week for the six week period, with the purchase of a designated food purchase. He expects the new crop of figurines, as well as Hardee's made-from-scratch biscuits to again, "sell like hotcakes" throughout the promotion. Based on the success of the 1987 campaign and the continued broad appeal of The California Raisins™ as the "hot property of the 80's," Hardee's has increased the quantity of figurines ordered "by the millions" to meet their anticipated customer demand this summer.

Tapper's Girl (Don Kimball) was in close pursuit early but could not seriously challenge the leader at any point as Little Lou-Rain drew clear late in the stretch for a three-quarters of a length victory. Tapper's Girl was second and Inertia (Larry Manges) was third.

The co-featured $4,200 pace also for Fillies and Mares went to Comely Sis (Charles Perry, Jr.) as she gamely fought back to the lead in the final yards to score a neck victory over OK Dream Girl (Phil Klein) in 1:59.3.

The driver's standings is beginning to resemble a stampede as a host of drivers make their move on leader Shahan at the midway point in the meet. Shahan leads Smyrna native Joe Dugan, Jr. by a 42-36 margin as of Sunday (June 19). The 22-year-old Dugan also leads all drivers in winning percentage and in the Universal Driving Ratings. John Marsh is in close pursuit with 28 victories while Presley Moore, Jr. (24), Larry Manges (23) and Jeff Cameron (21) are also within close striking distance.

On the trainer's list, Robert Kinsey leads Joe Holloway and Karen Jerred by a slim 13-12 margin with Don Bowdoin taking dead aim on the leader with 11 tallies thus far.

This Monday, an eight race card of harness racing is set for a 7:00 start to finish at 9:00 p.m. Then the attention of sports fans will focus on the long awaited undisputed World Heavyweight Championship bout between undefeated champion Mike Tyson and challenger Michael Spinks.

Brandywine is the exclusive site for the closed circuit of the pugilistic battle that is billed "Once And For All." Fans at Brandywine Racetrack and Entertainment Centre, will see the event on the most modern super-sized wide screens in vogue.

Dave Wooley Productions, Inc., in association with Brandywine has completed arrangements for six 15 by 20 foot screens, which will be located for maximum visibility on the front glass of the grandstand and clubhouse.

Wooley said, "In keeping with our previous announcement, fans watching the Tyson-Spinks fight will have the biggest and best screens and the finest sound system possible." He added, "Tickets are moving at a steady clip, especially for the dining room and reserved seats." He went on, "We hope that fans continue to purchase their tickets early and take advantage of the pre-fight discount ticket prices."
