ADVENTUROUS AMERICANS

Elmo Scott Watson

Immortalized by a Dam B ONNEVILLE dam in the Columbia river perpetuates the memory of an adventurous explorer who was both a great success and a great failure. In 1832 French-born Capt. Benjamin Bonneville of the United States army obtained a leave of absence to engage in a fur trading expedition on condition that he explore the trans-Missouri West and obtain information concerning the Indians, the topography of the country and its economic possibilities. Two years later he set out at the head of a party of 110 men.

Commercially his venture was a complete failure. He built forts in such poor locations that the fron-tiersmen called them "Fort Nonsense." Some were so high in the mountains that they were cut off from the outside by the first snows of winter. But his expedition was successful in that he explored the route through South Pass for wagon trains and mapped the passage of the Columbia river through the Cascade mountains. Moreover he was an able military leader for he did not lose a single man during all his perilous journey through the Indian-infested wilderness.

After his return to the East he met Washington Irving at the home of John Jacob Astor and the result was the book "The Adventures of Captain Bonneville" by that famous writer. The book was a "best sell-er" of its time but it did not help Bonneville's reputation greatly. He had long overstayed his leave of absence and when President Jackson reinstated him as a captain in 1836 many people protested that Bonneville should have been dismissed from the service instead. Bonneville proved them wrong by his conduct during the Mexican war. which won for him a citation for gallantry in action. In 1852 he became commandant at Fort Vancouver which stood 30 miles down the river from the dam that now bears his name. He was brevetted a brigadier general in 1869 and died in St. Louis in the spring of 1878.

'A Message to Garcia'

OUT in California lives an 82year-old retired army officer whose name was once on every American's lips. He is Col. Andrew Summers Rowan, the man who carried "a message to Garcia."

In 1898 war with Spain was imminent and President McKinley wanted to know if General Garcia, commander of the Cuban insurgents, would co-operate with the American forces if an army was sent there. The man chosen to find

Rowan proved that the confidence of his superiors was not misplaced. Making his way through the steaming, insect-infested jungle, drinking germ-filled water, living on such food as he could find and in constant danger of capture and execution by the Spaniards as a spy, Rowan found Garcia, got the information he sought and safely made an equally perilous return trip.

Rowan was taken to the White House where he received the thanks of the President and promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel of volunteers. But the thing which made him famous was an editorial, written by Elbert Hubbard, for his magazine, the Philistine, the following year. This editorial, published under the title of "A Message to Garcia," was translated into 20 languages, reprinted all over the world and is one of the best known pieces of English prose ever written.

As for the man who inspired it, not until 1922 did he receive public recognition from his country in the form of the Distinguished Service Cross for carrying the "message to Garcia."

Death Valley Samaritan

OU WESTCOTT BECK went into Death Valley to seek wealth but almost perished. He stayed there to devote his life to saving others.

Death Valley of the days before good roads and tourist facilities was well named. Hundreds of American adventurers never returned from it. A barren waste with trails that led nowhere, and alive only with crawling lizards and darting poisonous snakes, Death Valley was a treacherous trap baited to lure adventurers with promises of gold.

Beck became known as the "Good Samaritan of Death Valley," piling up rocks and putting signs on them directing prospectors to water holes. He went out searching for those who were known to be lost and guided them to safety.

For 13 years, aided only by Rufus, his Newfoundland dog, Beck braved the hardships of the Colorado and Mojave deserts, as well as Death Valley, and saved between 300 and 400 lives. In 1917, although warned not to by his dog, Beck drank from an infected spring and never recovered from the resulting illness.

Although comparatively unknown today, Lou Westcott Beck is probably one of the most self-sacrificing of all the great American adventurers. @ Western Newspaper Union.

FARM

NAIL ASSORTMENT HELPFUL ON FARM

Cost Is Negligible, but Uses

Numerous.

By E. R. GROSS The well-equipped farm shop includes an assortment of nails so that the proper size and type may be chosen for each job, whether it be repairing a building, constructing a fence or mending a fragile chair, says the agricultural engineering department at the New Jersey college of agriculture, Rutgers university. The cost of an adequate variety of nails is negligible. From onehalf pound to three pounds, according to size, of each of a dozen varieties makes an excellent kit of nails.

Tin cans are handy containers. The sturdiness of the nailed joint depends upon the friction between nail and wood, hence it is determined by the choice of size and kind of nail, the number used and the proper assembly of the wood parts. Good nailing is important, not only to get lasting results, but also to avoid accidents due to improper nail-

Using the proper length of nail requires that two-thirds of the nail should penetrate the piece of wood receiving the point. Thus the length should be at least three times the thickness of the outer piece. When thin materials prevent proper penetration, use additional nails to provide an equivalent area of surface contact in the wood receiving the Farm practice allows "clinching" nails which penetrate through the wood. Bending the point of the clinched nail across rather than with the grain of the wood greatly increases the strength of the joint. A firm blow in clinching should form a hook imbedding the nail point in the wood. Use plenty of nails as the strength of the joint increases directly with the number of nails. When the wood tends to split, use boxing nails which are thinner than common nails. Whenever the use permits, drive nails perpendicular to the surface. The slanting drive to "draw the wood" has little advantage. "Shiners" or nails coming out of the side of the piece, weaken the joints and are likely to cause injury, hence should be removed at once. Nails in green wood, wet wood, or those driven into the end of the grain are not effective. Use dry, seasoned wood. Properly constructed joints usually permit driving the nails into the side of the grain and

In Planning Egg Program In urging poultrymen to study their year's management program, F. P. One is that there's no use o' are generally more profitable dur-

"According to the United States egg production occurs during the four spring months of March, April, May and June. Management factors such as use of artificial illumination in the laying house and date of hatch bear some relationship to the seasonal distribution of the egg

"During the last eight years, there has been a tendency for a rapid decline in the egg market during December and January because of greater receipts during these months. At New York, in the period of 1924-30, 5.6 per cent of the annual receipts of eggs arrived during January, while in the period of 1931-37, 7.4 per cent arrived during the same month."

Vitamins for Better Eggs That the quality as well as quantity of vitamins in hen rations affects the quality of eggs produced is the conclusion of Dr. R. M. Bethke and associates after careful investigation at the Ohio experiment station. Among the results obtained were: 1. A ration low in vitamin D caused a low egg production, poorer shells, and low hatchability. 2. Good cod liver oil was superior to ergosterol as a source of vitamin D. 3. Hens getting the most vitamin D produced eggs richest in this substance. It was also concluded that the vitamin D secreted in the egg by the hen is the same biological form as that which she ate.-Country Home magazine.

Proposed Memorial on Historic Field of Yorktown Would Be Symbolic of Friendship of Two Groups of 'First-Class Fightin' Men,' British and American

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON Western Newspaper Union.

N THE historic field of Yorktown in Virginia there may soon be erected a unique memorial. It will be a monument to the friendship of two groups of "first-class fightin' men" who are bound together by more than one tie of common interest, the greatest of which is that they have stood shoulder to shoulder against a common enemy. These two groups are the British army's Royal Welch Fusiliers and the United States Marines.

The first time these fighting men served together was 39 years ago this June-during the famous Boxer Rebellion in North China. As the result of steady aggressions against China by European nations, an organization of Chinese patriots, who called themselves Boxers and who sought to preserve China for the Chinese, raised the rallying cry of "Kill the foreign devils!" and fell upon the white communities in and near Peking. Many of the foreigners were killed and the remainder were besieged in the legation quarter of the Chinese capital.

When the news of this outbreak was flashed to the world all the governments whose nationals were involved immediately sent expeditionary forces to China. The first objective was Tientsin where the foreign population with some 900 sailors and soldiers were desperately trying to hold out against the onslaughts of hordes of Chinese fanatics. The first attempt to relieve them failed when a column of American Marines and Russian troops were driven back to their base by overwhelming numbers of the enemy. There the Marines were reinforced by other Marines and they were also joined by the Second battalion of the Royal Welch Fusiliers despatched from Hong Kong under the command of Ma-

Tientsin Captured.

Then this combined British and American force advanced toward Tientsin. When Major Morris fell wounded, the command was assumed by the next in rank, Maj. of the Marine corps, and the Fusiliers and Marines fought side by side in the series of actions which resulted in the capture of the Chinese city and the rescue of the beleaguered foreigners. Among them, incidentally, was a young mining engineer, then comparatively unknown but destined for future fame as the President of the United States-Herbert Clark Hoover.

During the fighting which followed, as the allied armies moved on Peking, the close association of the Fusiliers and the Cup presented by officers of the Royal Welch Fusiliers to officers of the United States Marine Corps in memory of their service together during the Boxer Rebellion.

From August, 1937, until February of last year the same Second battalion of the Royal Welch and the Fourth regiment of the Marines were stationed along Soochow creek, bordering the foreign settlements of Shanghai to guard British and American citizens and property when the Japanese attacked that city.

Revolutionary Service.

The close association of these two military units in 1900 and again in 1937-38 is in striking contrast to the first contact of the Fusiliers with American men-atarms. That took place more than 150 years ago and they were then enemies instead of friends. For the Royal Welch were among the troops sent to America in 1775 to help subdue the rebellious English colonies on this continent and they served in almost every major engagement of the Revolution, beginning with the Battle of Lexington and ending with the surrender of Cornwallis at York-

Among the defenses erected by that ill-fated British leader, when he was penned up in the Virginia seaport, was a star-shaped fortification on the right of the British line. It is pointed out today to visitors to the Colonial National Historical park as the "Fusiliers Redoubt" because it was held by a remnant of the Royal Welch Fusiliers (who had been decimated during the seven years of warfare in America) assisted by a few British marines. They held this redoubt against three attacks Washington's French allies under Count Rochambeau and that proposal was made, international politics with the problems of statesmanship-a field at all times not the responsibility of the active soldier-presented not the clear outlines that are today apparent to the vision of our people. This condition then led the followers and associates of General Waller to turn elsewhere lest that memory be lost. We appealed to the talent of the late John Philip Sousa. At the spring dinner of the Gridiron club in Washington, in 1930, there came from the gifted baton of that great composer . . . the last of many, many military marches, the very last: March of the Royal Welch Fusiliers," dedicated to the Marine corps. As the strains of that martial music faded away, from the lips of the President of the United States came his story of the siege of Tientsin, the burden of care and anxiety lifted from the shoulders of that young mining engineer and his associates, how from across 10,000 miles of sea, the might of two great nations had reached afar to say their people

"That recent reunion at Shanghai of last year-history repeating itself with its revival of the recollections of the like service in North China of 1900—has recalled to the veteran officers of that campaign the almost forgotten and unfulfilled wish of the late Maj. Gen. Littleton Waller Tazewell Waller of Virginia. These veterans wish that under your auspices-under the aegis of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution of his native state, the proposal of one of Virginia's distinguished soldiers, be submitted the reaction of America's

"It is not sufficient that that memory of a common service be preserved only in martial music and solely to the ear of the soldier. It deserves now to be perpetuated in the wider fieldto the eye of the public in the chosen way of that departed leader of ours. American public opinion, it is confidently believed, will support the project. More, in its larger sense—in its wider import, measured by the trend and aspect of these times—our people will applaud our effort."

was the admiration of the Royal Welch for the American major that one of their officers is quoted as having declared "Just give us Waller-we will go anywhere with him." At the end of the campaign in China Major Waller and the officers of the First battalion of the Marines received from the officers of the Fusiliers a silver loving cup, engraved with all their names, and presented in memory of their service together. Moreover, since that time it has become a custom for the officers of the Fusiliers and the Marines to exchange messages of greeting on St. David's day (March 1), an anniversary observed by all loyal Welshman.

The years passed. Once more the Fusiliers and the Marines were "brothers-in-arms" and this time it was again on Asiatic soil.

after the siege the French generals gave their unstinted praise to the stubbornness of the resistance which they had encountered there. They could scarcely believe that so few men in this fortification had been able to hold in check their superior numbers. Lord Cornwallis, also, in his official report of the capitulation, paid a glowing tribute to the courage and bulldog tenacity of the Fusiliers.

If the proposed memorial mentioned at the beginning of this article is erected it will be placed here. The first suggestion for such a memorial came from the major of the American Marines who won the admiration and respect of the Fusiliers during the Boxer rebellion—Littleton Waller Tazewell Waller. Major Waller, who was a Virginian, rose to the

The Royal Welch Fusiliers has one of the most interesting histories of any regiment in the British army. It dates back 250 years -to 1689 when, after the bloodless revolution of 1688 forced James II to flee to France, leaders in the English parliament asked William of Orange, president of the Dutch republic, whose wife, Mary, was the eldest daughter of the deposed King James, to ascend the throne of England. One condition was imposed upon the new ruler. The throne was to be assumed in the name of Mary but William was to administer the affairs of the country. So the reign of William and Mary began. One of the first acts of the new monarchs was to grant to the people of England, the Bill of Rights.

To protect the liberties granted to his people, William III raised immediately an army of 25 regiments of foot (infantry). One of these, the Twenty-third, was enlisted along the border counties of Wales among the descendants of the ancient Britons who were followers of the Welsh chieftains. Llewellen and his brother, David. It was first known as Herbert's Twenty-third Foot, after Lord Herbert of Chirbury, who raised the regiment, and his cousin, Col. Charles Herbert, who first commanded it. Baptism of Fire.

When King William took the field with his new army against the forces of James II and his ally, Louis XIV of France, which had been raised to restore the deposed English king, Herbert's Twenty-third Foot had its baptism of fire under the eyes of King William at the Battle of the Boyne on July 1, 1690. Its record of gallantry on that historic field has continued unbroken for 250 years. In recognition of its services in Marlborough's campaigns against the French in the early Eighteenth century, the prince of Wales, later King George I, conferred upon the regiment the title of "The Prince of Wales Own Royal Regiment of Welch Fusiliers," a title which has been shortened to the better known Royal Welch Fusiliers.

Like other British regiments, the Royal Welch have what they call their "battle honours"names of the most conspicuous battles in which they served emblazoned upon their regimental standards. Among them are Corunna, where the fallen Sir John Moore was "buried darkly at dead of night"; Lucknow, with its memory of the Highlanders, the MacGregors and the Campbells and the thrilling rescue; Blenheim, Inkerman, Ramilles, Waterloo, Oudenarde and nearly a score of others—all bright pages in England's military history. Although the Royal Welch served throughout the American Revolution there are no names of battles on the soil of the United States emblazoned on the regiment's banner. Ask a Fusilier today why and his reply will reflect the sentiment which makes appropriate the proposed meecessors of those days did not wish the memory of our American battles recalled—that is all we know.'

Although the United States Marines are a much younger military unit than the Royal Welch Fusiliers, they, too, have a long and honored tradition back of them. The Marine corps is the oldest active armed force in the United States, antedating both the army and the navy. It was organized by the Continental congress on November 10, 1775, nine months before the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Marine Traditions.

The Marines, like the Fusiliers, preserve their traditions by certain symbols or customs. One of these symbols is the sword which their officers wear. It is described in the regulations as "one with a Mameluke hilt, curved or scimitar blade and bright metal scabbard." It came about in this way: In 1805 a young Virginian named Presley Neville O'Bannon, first lieutenant in the Marine corps, with Midshipman Peck, a sergeant and six privates from the Marines, formed a part of the motley army of Greeks, Turks and Mameluke Arabs which William Eaton, President Thomas Jefferson's naval agent in the Mediterranean, led against the stronghold of Derna, held by Yusuf. bashaw of Tripoli. Yusuf, who had deposed his brother, Ahmet, had been preying upon American commerce and enslaving American sailors. Eaton's plan was to help restore to the Tripolitan throne the former bashaw, Ahmet, who would thereafter respect American rights in the Mediterranean.

Young O'Bannon took part in that epic march of 600 miles across African deserts and in the storming of the fortress of Derna where for the first time in history the Stars and Stripes were hoisted over an Old world fortress. In appreciation of his services, Ahmet presented O'Bannon with a sword with a Mameluke hilt and this sword became the model for the weapon which has been the symbol of authority for Marine officers from that time on. O'Bannon's exploit also is memorialized in the first line of the famous "Hymn of the Ma-

WHEN you see "Wuthering Heights" you'll probably want to know something about Geraldine Fitzgerald. She plays the part of "Edgar's" sister, who marries "Heathcliffe," and she makes a definite contribution to every scene in which she appears.

She was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1914, was educated in a convent school, studied painting for a while, and then joined the Gate Players. The Gate Players did repertoire, so Miss Geraldine got experience in all sorts of roles. Then she was asked to make pictures in England, and did; she appeared in "The Turn of the Tide" and "The Mill on the Floss," and went right back to the

All of which won't seem remarkable to you unless you know what a complicated business this matter of recording sounds can be.

Mr. Crosby has been known to astound fellow-singers even more by eating a heavy luncheon before he had to sing, without its affecting the result at all.

Erno Rapee, Jane Froman and Jan Peerce will be co-starred in a gala musical revue which has been signed to replace the Screen Guild show on the Columbia network for the summer months, beginning June 11. There will also be a 16-voice mixed chorus.

The three stars are radio veterans, but this is the first time that they have appeared together. Rapee is one of the best known musical directors in America, Jane Froman has made a name for herself in both movies and radio, and Jan Peerce has long been a protege of Rapee's as well as one of the screen's popular singers.

Make Use of Sunlight

As we approach the season when the greatest amount of sunshine available, homemakers should see to it that not only the children, but every member of the family spend as much time as possible in the sunlight. This will help to promote the proper utilization of phosphorus and calcium. And both teeth and bones will benefit, as well as the general health.

Where to Find Phosphorus Every homemaker should acquaint herself with the foods that supply phosphorus most abundantly, so that she will be prepared to include this mineral in the diet every day. Egg yolk and dried beans are both valuable sources meet the requirements for growth. of phosphorus. So are whole grain cereals and lean meats. In fact. cereals and meats have this in common-both are rich in phosphorus and deficient in calcium. Whole grain breads are likewise important for their phosphorus content. And on a percentage basis, cheese ranks very high as a carrier of this mineral.

Cocoa also contains a large percentage, though it must be reis found in dried fruits such as raisins, figs and prunes, and in much smaller quantities in vegetables, such as spinach, cauliflower, string beans, carrots and brussels sprouts.

Milk supplies phosphorus, though not in such generous amounts as calcium. However, if you follow the rule of a quart of milk daily for every child and a pint for each adult, you will contribute materially to the phosphorus and calcium content of the diet. ©-WNU-C, Houston Goudiss-1939-64

RUTH WYETH SPEARS

DEAR MRS. SPEARS: The curtains I made from your Book 1-SEWING, for the Home Decorator, are so smart and modern looking that they have given our living room an entirely new appearance. Right now I need an idea that will pep up my kitchen windows. Everything is up to date but the curtains. They look old fashioned. The color scheme is red and white, but please don't tell me to use red and white checked gingham because I have done that before.-J. B."

Alright, no checked gingham! How about some nice crisp dotted swiss with the widest red rick rack you can find for the edge? Then make a border around the top and sides of the window by pasting scalloped red oilcloth on the window frame, using wall paper paste. Cut the oilcloth in strips first, then mortise the corners by cutting them on the bias. Start marking the scallops at the corners, as shown here, making the center top scallop wider than the

MEMORIAL DAY REFLECTIONS

Peace was the intended free gift of God to man. But man for ages has bought it insanely with blood. On Memorial Day we bow our heads over the graves of many of our most beloved sons, whose bodies were a part of War's red ransom exacted for the return of Peace.

Today Peace abides freely in America. Should we, then, commit the ancient folly of buying Peace needlessly with the best blood of our generation?

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—An ecstatic young newspaper woman, reporting on Dr. Herbert Feis of the state department, averred that his dream-

His Eyes Reflect lit eyes "re-flected the soul Poetry; Mind on of a young Shel-Rubber and Tin ley." He may look that way, but the chances are that he is thinking of rubber and tin.

John Masefield had some such ment. thoughts in mind when he wrote "Cargoes." This poet, however, scans only trade balances, and his dreams are precise and statistical. Dr. Feis is economic adviser to the state department, and it was he who schemed the barter deal by which we would acquire needed rubber and tin and get rid of the necklace of millstones hung around Uncle Sam's neck in the form of that government-owned surplus of 11,-000,000 bales of cotton.

The news from London is that the barter deal is under way, Prime Minister Chamberlain having informed parliament that negotiations have been opened. Wheat also will be included in the bargaining, as England needs both wheat and cotton as much as we need rubber and tin. Here may be a working commodity axis, which Machiavelli so vehemently declared was always more important in the long run than any political axis. And, incidentally, Dr. Feis has read Machiavelli.

U. S. Medical Group Hits Claim That 40,000,000 Require Care; Call Health Program Needless

(EDITOR'S NOTE-When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union

MEDICINE: 40,000,000?

Basis for the Wagner bill now before congress is the claim that 40,-000,000 U. S. citizens are without medical care. If passed, the meas-ure would provide federal subsidies for care of the indigent sick, amounting to $100,000,000 the first year. Such socialization is strenuously opposed by the American Medical association, which surveyed local physicians of 747 counties in 37 states to disprove the govern-

Forty million people constitute roughly one-fourth the population. Of 20,000 physicians surveyed, 17,000 (or one-fourth the physicians in territories canvassed) reported free medical service to 2,611,451 persons each year, plus 1,909,713 hours of free hospital service each year. If all physicians furnish free service on this basis, A. M. A. figured that 10,000,000 of the 43,000,000 people covered in its survey are getting free service. On a nation-wide basis, multiplied by four, this would mean U.S. physicians are already taking care of the 40,000,000 needy citizens Uncle Sam would help.

Possible, though unsubstantiated, A. M. A. fallacies: (1) "Free" services may include those to solvent patients guilty of the good old American custom of not paying doctor bills; (2) not asking free services (nor would they ask help under a U. S. program) are thousands of medicine's "forgotten men," lowcan neither get relief nor pay doctor and hospital bills.

CONGRESS:

Most U. S. business men have an with idle capital. Their explanation: Too much federal spending and excessive business taxes discourage new enterprise. By coincidence, Sen. Joseph C. > RACES: Settlement?

During the World war anxious Great Britain enlisted Arab aid with a hasty, ill-reasoned promise of in-dependence in Palestine. Britain also enlisted Jewish funds by promising to make Palestine a homeland for Jews. Twenty years after Versailles the bloody "holy war" which has kept British troops busy in Palestine shows no sign of abating. Last winter an Arab-Jewish conference in London failed because delegates refused to sit at the same table. Confronted with more pressing crises in Europe, Britain finally decided to dictate a settlement.

Released in London was a white to enter Palestine. Then, with population standing at 40 per cent Jewish and 60 per cent Arab, Britain would try to get delegates together to frame a constitution for the new independent state.

Observers thought Britain's haste to reach a settlement had precipitated chaos. Since 20 years' experience have demonstrated that Jews and Arabs will not live under the same flag, it was quite obvious Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain peace by following the original plan: Creation of independent Jewish and Arab states separated by a British neutral strip.

Looking Ahead Last year's agriculture act requires quota elections on the quantity of wheat each grower may sell when the supply reaches 1,021,000,000 bushels. At the same time, excess surpluses would justify lowering of acreage allotments. Only a few weeks ago the bureau of agricultures. few weeks ago the bureau of agricultural economics predicted wheat supplies would reach 1,018,900,000 bushels by July 1, only 2,100,000 bushels short of the level at which marketing quotas could be enforced

G. mark, giving the administration an embarrassing job of clamping down on wheat farmers during election year. But unexpected dry weather in the spring wheat belt helped Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace justify radical changes in the department's original estimates:

Original July 1 carryover figure was 275,000,000 bushels; Mr. Wallace dropped it to 270,000,000. Spring wheat was first placed at 200,000,000 bushels; Mr. Wallace made it 160,-000,000. Total current year's crop was first placed at 743,900,000; Mr. Wallace made it 704,000,000. Instead of 1,018,900,000 bushels, Mr. Wallace therefore got a July 1 total of 974,-000,000, well under the mandatory quota figure. To further placate rebellious farmers during election year, he decided to let them plant 62,000,000 acres next year, 7,000,000 more than in 1939. Justification: The 974,000,000-bushel estimate for this July 1 is 47,000,000 bushels under last year.

"All right; I will. I mean, I won't. I mean, I will ask him but I won't tell you unless you come for it." She did. She got Kelsey aside. "What's the big idea, young fella-"About what?"

"Marne. Letting her pretty near drown. Why not the gallant rescue act?"

The subject of the inquiry settled his perfectly fitting white coat across his shoulders, smoothed out an imaginary wrinkle or two, and "Don't get sore, baby," grinned If Marne refrained from any open exhibition of soreness, when the time came for the test, she was at pivoted slowly before the intent eyes least painfully dignified upon meetof his questioner. ing her hero at the landing. "I'd like to be there when you spring it."

"Right. We'll try to give you notice.'

"A. Leon's due back tomorrow," she informed him, with a sidelong glance.

"How delightful for one and all!" "Hmpph! Chatty like a clam, aren't you! Well, don't take any risks with your precious life before I see you again.'

As far as A. Leon Snydacker himself was concerned, his return was less delightful than he had anticipated. His darr-ling proved unaccountably elusive. Every project that he devised for getting her apart from the rest was baffled with such tact and amiability that he could not figure out just how it was accomplished. He decided to delay the playing of his trump card until after his four-day air-trip to Holly-

"That's the talk, Bwana." "You try her out on the week-end proposition. If she still balks it'll be time to play the diamond."

"All right, Bwana. My middle name's diplomacy." Behind the magnate's retiring back he made a improving on the text, lemme know, wry face. Acting as go-between for A. word for it. Templeton Sayles, you're a louse."

"Hi!" It was Moby Dickstein's voice, lifted in pained protest from the contiguous shore. "Is this a picture or a conference?"

"It isn't a picture," shouted back the infuriated Marne. "Not any more. I'm through. Take me in or I'll walk in," she finished savagely, addressing her shipmate.

Followed by the irate cameraman and paced by Moby Dickstein, tearing his hair, Kelsey paddled back to the little dock. His only contribution to the amenities of the occasion was when he politely undertook to help her out. (Offer rejected.) Undismayed he waved her a gallant adieu. "Your apology," he informed her, "is accepted in the spirit in which it was offered." Marne fled to her room and did something that she had not done since childhood. She wept with rage.

CHAPTER VIII

"Whut-whut - whut - whut!" rapid-fired A. Leon Snydacker into the concerned face of his First Assistant. The genius of Purity Pictures, Inc. had returned from another highly unsuccessful attempt to impress Hollywood, with a heartful of amorous hopes only to have them dashed by Moby's report of no prog-

"I just don't get you," he lamented. "You're turnin' down the trip? "Won't go? Won't go? What-d'you mean, she won't go? Whadda you know about women?" "Now, Bwana-"

"Don't you Bwana me. You're a

"I tried her ouf about the weekend trip."

"Well? Wha'd she say?" "I hate to tell you, Bwana, but she didn't seem interested."

"We're goin' to shoot that sequence. You and Sayles, paddling double." "Not interested, huh? Not interested. In a chance like that. What's the matter of her? Who's she think "You'd better tie a life-preserver around him," snapped Marne. "He might fall overboard and catch his death of cold." she is? Who's she think I am? Who d'you think you are?" To his burst of indignant rhetoric

Moby responded only with a feeble, "Steady on, Bwana." "Yeah! Steady on. I'm paying you three hundred a week to tell me to steady on. I'll show her." A. Leon waved wild arms in the air, rushed across to the mantel, snatched an antique vase from it and dashed it to fragments against the wall. "There!" said he with an Convoyed by a camera-bearing boat, they set out. Marne was bowpaddle. This enabled her to pre-

He en-Moby Dickstein gazed longingly at the angle of his employer's jaw, and til they came opposite the fateful doubled a wishful fist behind him. But three hundred a week is three hundred a week, and he had long been promised a raise. So he said merely "All right, Bwana." "All right is right." A. Leon became calm, portentously calm. "I ought to have known better than to let a bum like you handle this. I'll attend to it myself."

"Certainly, Bwana." Moby was no longer fired. This also had happened before, more than once. ("And I hope she chews a hole in your neck," he breathed to himself.) He set about gathering up the fragments of porcelain. This, too, was not without precedent. The Great Man now became superior and patronizing.

"If you want a thing done right, "It wasn't funny the first time you said it, either," she remarked.
"But if you must stand up, this "But if you must stand up, this watch your step every minute. What did she say, exactly?"

"She sort of let on she wasn't that "Stick your paddle straight kind of gal. Mebbe she ain't," added the factotum with a cynical air. "And mebbe she is. That's where "To learn something to your adknowing how to make your play "I'm sure it wouldn't interest

"Well, I guess you can find out if me," stated the haughty Marne. But anybody can, Bwana," purred Moby. (And that ought to be worth a most disconcerting suspicion was something toward the expected raise, he figured.) He drove his paddle downward. It hit bottom with a jar. Two feet of handle were still protruding from the water. "How tall are you?" "And that's where the solitaire comes in. What did she say about the solitaire?" "I didn't get that far," confessed the other. "Besides, I said to my-

"That's up to you as director," returned his chief impatiently. "We got to keep him on for the advertising value. That'll be all for now. Tell Miss Van Stratten that I will see her in my private office in half an hour." Only by a movement of swift adroitness did he save the craft

Trim, calm and slim, the girl answered the summons, some twentyfive minutes late, to the ill-controlled irritation of Mr. Snydacker. But, in spite of himself, he was impressed. There was about his star an unconscious assumption of privilege which set him at a disadvantage. This he accepted as the mark of Class. He addressed her with an air of benignity.

"Well, darr-ling! This life certainly agrees with you."

"Didn't I tell you you would, darrling? Er-uh-Moby Dickstein tells "rests between you and your con- me you're dated up this week-end." "That's just Moby's tactful way of putting it.' (TO BE CONTINUED)

Windsors Mark 2nd Anniversary

Two years ago, on June 3, 1937, a king married a commoner at Monts, France. Still exiled from his native England, apparently resigned to a life of inconsequence, the duke of Windsor lives contentedly in France with his American born wife, the former Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson. Some day he hopes to return to England with "the woman I love." Meanwhile the Windsors make the most of an uncomfortable situation, that of being notoriously unimportant.

Absent Treatment

By GORDON EMSLIE Associated Newspapers.
 WNU Service.

THE doctor had just gone and Peter Kane lay looking up at his nurse with an expression of intense exasperation, the immediate reason for his disgust being the decree that he could not hope to leave his bed for at least another week. Peter felt suspicious of that "at least." It smacked too much of the "on the point of death but must not be told" treatment. Not that he was possessed of any terrors, but he wanted tremendously to be up and about. "Head ache?" asked his nurse kindly.

"No!" lied Peter crossly.

Something wet and deliciously cold descended on his hot forehead. "There, that'll make your head feel better," murmured a soft voice. "I'll lower the shade so the light won't be too-" "The light's all right," grumbled Peter, reaching for a book that was just beyond his grasp. Almost at once the book was miraculously in his hand, his pillows were plumped up, a glass of fresh icewater was by his side and the nurse was unobtrusively seated by the far-thest window. Still Peter felt dis-gruntled. His illness had reached that not-very-bad, rather-headachy, want-to-be-let-alone stage, when everything within sight and sound becomes at times intolerably irksome and nerve-wracking.

"Miss Rogers," said Peter finally, "you must be tired. Why don't you go and take your walk?" "It will be time for your medi-cine shortly," was the reply.

"But, my dear girl," said Peter testily, "I still have the use of my hands, you know, even if that fusty doctor won't let me use my feet." "You might forget to shake the

Peter raised himself a little in order to get a better view of her face. Her voice made him suspect that she was laughing at him. If such were the case he knew that a certain elusive dimple would make her well worth looking at. "I'll promise to shake it."

"And then put the bottle back without opening," remarked Miss Constance Rogers sagely.

Peter considered the point. "If I promise to shake the bottle and take a dose of that da-that extremely unpleasant stuff, will you go and take your daily constitutional immediately?"

"It's time for your medicine now," said Constance.

After the medicine there seemed to be all sorts of little things that needed attention; the window had to be raised, the shade lowered, the counterpane straightened. He fretted and fumed inwardly. How he hated to be fussed over as if he were an infant!

"I believe," proposed Peter hopefully, "that the best thing for me will be to be left alone in order that I may sleep."

Constance made no move to go. Obviously that had been an injudicious statement, decided Peter. Perhaps she thought it a subterfuge meant to cover a plan to disobey the doctor's orders and get up and "I think, after all, I'll read awhile," said Peter, sitting up and thumping his pillows truculently. "Just hand me that Cellini autobiography, please—the one on the table over there."

Constance brought him the book, plumped his pillows, raised the shade and started for her seat by the window. "Now that you have done everything you can possibly think of, you may as well start, don't you think?" suggested Peter.

"I believe I shall," was the unexpected reply. Five minutes after his nurse's departure Benvenuto Cellini's autobiography slipped to the floor, the cloth on his head felt so unbearably hot that Peter hurled it viciously over the footboard, the tassel on the shade tapped maddeningly against the window pane, the ice in his glass of water had melted; in short, he felt thoroughly miserable. By the time the clock had ticked away 30 minutes he felt abused; here he was lying helpless, neglected, in pain, for his head was pounding harder than ever. Nobody came in response to his bell-where on earth was June? Sisters never could be depended upon anyway. She'd probably run in next door for a minutea minute that as usual meant a solid hour. It was Thursday, his mother's club day, he remembered; yes. and the maid's day off, too. No wonder his bell remained unanswered. A fine sister he had to desert him at a time like this! When 55 minutes had passed he was gloomily reflecting upon his fast approach-

Promptly on the hour Constance returned. When she laid a cool bunch of violets against his hot face she found her hands seized and held

"Connie," said Peter earnestly, "promise that you'll never leave me again as long as we live." "Never?" asked Constance a little breathlessly, the dimple beginning to appear. "Never!" said Peter emphatically.
