ADVENTUROUS AMERICANS

Elmo Scott Watson

Great Lakes Raider

URING the Civil war David H. Ross, an 18-year-old cadet in the Georgia guards, was captured and sent to a Union prison camp on Lake Erie. He escaped and made his way to Canada, reporting to Capt. John Yeates Beall, a Confederate agent.

Ross joined Beall in a plan to take possession of the Philo Parsons, a lake steamer, and with it capture the Michigan, a Union warship, use that to attack Ft. Johnson at Sandusky and release 1,000 Confederates there.

On the morning of September 19, 1864, the Philo Parsons stopped at Sandwich, Ont., to take on a party of 20 men. At Malden, a few miles farther, 20 more came aboard. After several more stops, the crew and the other passengers found themselves looking into the muzzles of

The captain relinquished command and Beall took over with Ross as first mate. And then the S. S. Island Queen with 170 Federal soldiers aboard, pulled alongside. No one knows why the soldiers permitted it, but after firing a few shots, Beall and Ross leaped aboard with a handful of men and captured the crew which was too astonished to

They sailed on with their 170 Union soldiers in tow, but the S. S. Michigan commander was ready for them. Seeing the ship coming toward them, the Philo Parsons turned about and fled, docking in the Detroit river where the raiders fled to safety. Ross, the 18-year-old cadet, who had been first mate on the wild voyage, managed to get to Wilmington, N. C., where he was made a captain in the secret service. General Grant, during his second presidential administration, issued a pardon relieving Ross of the charges of pi-

Rebel Against Rebellion

AT THE outbreak of the Civil war a band of about 100 citizens of Jones county, Mississippi, refused to identify themselves with the Confederacy. Under the leadership of one Newt Knight, they took refuge in Leaf River swamp where they defied all efforts to make them fight under the Stars and Bars.

By 1864 they had complete control of the county and out of that fact grew the story that this "rebellion within a rebellion" resulted in forming a "Republic of Jones" with Knight as its head. Mississippians declare, however, that there is no official record of any such "republic" ever having been launched and they refer to these "seceders from n" as the "Newt Knight band of deserters."

When the war was over and Confederate army veterans returned, they induced the legislature to change the name of the county from "Jones" to "Davis," because they said the conduct of Knight had made its name "a badge of ignominy and a term of reproach.

Knight always denied that he was a deserter but tried to get a pension from the federal government. He was unsuccessful because the records at Washington failed to show his name enrolled in the Union army. However, there was some compensation for him in the fact that until his death in 1923, he was widely known as the "founder of the Republic of Jones."

20 Thrill-Packed Years

WHEN Lewis Littlepage of Fredericksburg, Va., went to Spain as an attache to the American embassy, he was only 18 but already famous as a poet. Next he served in the Spanish and French armies and became a friend of Lafayette.

Made a chevalier of France, he returned to America to fight in the Revolution but was thwarted in that ambition. In 1786 he accompanied the young Polish patriot, Kosciusko, to Warsaw where King Stanislaus made him a baron at the age of 24! He was sent to make a treaty with Empress Catherine of Russia, who became very fond of him.

When the war between Russia and Turkey started, she commissioned him a major-general in her army and he later served under the admiral of her fleet, John Paul Jones. He remained at the Russian court until 1791, then returned to Warsaw where he was made a major-general in the Polish army.

When the Polish rebellion against Russia failed, Kosciusko and Littlepage went to Paris to try to rescue their friend, Lafayette, imprisoned during the Reign of Terror. They failed and Kosciusko returned to Warsaw to try again to win freedom for Poland. Littlepage joined him and was wounded in the battle in which Kosciusko fell.

Littlepage then returned to America and retired to his home in Fredericksburg where he was later visited by his old friend, Lafayette. He was only 38 when he died in 1801 but into that short span of years he had packed a whole lifetime of danger

WAYS OF MAKING A FIREPLACE FIT

By BETTY WELLS took their eye when they first saw the house. A massive cobblestone fireplace it was, the type that would make a pair of young wanderers pause to think of the quieter pleasures of home and hearth. In fact Tom and Ethel J. were so taken with it and the idea of settling down that they had bought and moved antly and seemed to have been just built for them. The joker turned out to be, ironically, that fireplace. After all a big interesting collection of pewter acnatural cobblestone fireplace can be pretty overpowering, and this one seemed to make the whole room thought the matter over. Luckily for them, the house unfolded pleas-very gloomy When Ethel really took the room in hand, decoratively speaking, she spent a lot of time just sitting and measure for curtains or slip covers, It was really the fireplace that she was beset by those cobblestones which took the center of the stage.

But she finally solved the problem very cleverly we thought. She had the entire room, fireplace and all, painted white, which with one brave gesture put the cobblestones in their place, making them recede nicely into the background. Then Ethel could go ahead with the room. She made bright yellow curtains of theatrical gauze, got a soft blue textural rug and honey colored maple furniture. Furniture coverings in homespun yellow cottons and striped blues were bright and gay with an cessories.

To Clear Room If the living room is heavy with smoke after the party and yet you cannot retire leaving a downstairs window open, put a basin of water looking at that fireplace and trying in the room and leave it over to figure out how to handle it. Secret Club Formed by Six Fun-Loving Young Tennesseeans Became One of Most Powerful Organizations of 'Regulators' in U. S. History

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON Released by Western Newspaper Union.) NE December evening in 1865 six young men were sitting around the fireplace in the law office of Judge Thomas M. Jones in the little town of Pulaski, Tenn., idly gossiping about the affairs of the day. Eventually the talk turned to how dull life seemed in this little town after the thrills and excitement they had known as soldiers in the Confederate

What could they do to amuse themselves and help pass away the time while adjusting themselves to the new order of things? Some one—it may have been Judge Jones' son, J. Calvin Jones, or it may have been any one of the other five, Capt. John C. Lester, Capt. John B. Kennedy, Capt. James R. Crowe, Frank O. McCord or Richard R. Reed—suggested that they might organize a new club or society. In the absence of any better suggestion, they decided to go ahead with that idea.

The next evening they met again in Judge Jones' office and formed a temporary organization. They elected a chairman and a secretary, committees were appointed to select a name for the new organization and to draw up rules and a ritual for the initiation of new members. Then they adjourned, to meet a week later to perfect their or-

Thus was formed the famous Ku Klux Klan of the Reconstruction era, a secret organization that was at the same time lawless and law-preserving, that successfully defied the might of the federal government of the United States and that wrote into our history one of its most thrilling

The 'Invisible Empire.'

A complete history of the Ku Klux Klan would fill volumes (it took 13 of them to hold all the testimony given before the joint congressional investigation of the Klan that began in 1870) but a present-day historian has compressed into one volume most of the essential facts about it. He is Stanley F. Horn of Nashville, Tenn., editor of the Southern Lumberman, whose "Invisible Empire—The Story of the Ku Klux Klan, 1866-1871," based upon years of research, was published recently by the Houghton Mifflin company. It is easy to understand how difficult was his task of piecing together the fragments of the story into an authentic and interesting narrative. For the Klan had no written records and the surviving Klansmeneven years later when there was little, if any, reason to fear reprisal—refused to talk.

"The objects of the new society being purely amusement and relaxation all of the original plans and arrangements were decidedly on the burlesque and gro-tesque side," says Mr. Horn in his chapter on the origin of the Klan. "The names of the officers, as specified in the report of the rules committee, were unusual and unique, the prime consideration being to get as far as possible away from familiar military or political titles." Having decided to call their meeting place a "Den," they gave their chief officer a name appropriate to that-the "Grand Cyclops." The next important official was called a "Grand Magi" and there was a "Grand Turk" to greet all candidates for admission. The secretary was called the "Grand Scribe" and there were two messengers called "Night Hawks" and two guards called "Lictors." Ordinary members were referred to as "Ghouls.

"The titles had no meaning or significance, being selected arbitrarily and solely for their weird and supposedly impressive sound," writes Mr. Horn. "It was just another local secret society of fun-loving young men looking for an outlet for their unemployed energies such as has been formed hundreds of times in the past without any particular purpose. In all probability it would endure but a short time until the attention of the members was directed along other channels. Aside from the condition of affairs and other factors involved, the thing that caused the new organization to attract attention and later to spread beyond any dream of its organizers was unquestionably the impression created and the curiosity aroused by its mysterious, sonorous name. It was the kind of name people liked to repeat, just to hear the sound of its sinister syllables. Even the initials, in their alliterative attractiveness, were an asset.'

Curiously enough, this name, which was to help the society become historic, was chosen quite by chance. In those days Greekletter fraternities were becoming popular in the colleges and universities of the country so it was only natural, perhaps, that the founders of the Klan should turn to the Greek vocabulary for a suggested name. It was Richard Reed who first suggested the name "Kuklos," from a Greek word from which our "circle" and "cycle" are derived. His companions liked that name but Kennedy, who had an ear for alliteration, suggested that another "K" sound be introduced into the name by adding the word "clan." So, at first, it was spelled "Ku-kos Clan," then "Kuklux Klan" and finally it emerged as "Ku Klux Klan." Although there are various other versions of the origin of the name, this is the story "as told by surviving charter members and its authenticity seems beyond question," declares

Just as the name of the organization was chosen by chance, so was its official costume. Concerning it the author of "Invisible Empire" says: "Bubbling over with the excitement of their newfound plaything, the young members of the new Ku Klux Klan decided to make a public manifestation of themselves; so, borrowing the familiar idea of the easy Hallowe'en disguise, they wrapped themselves in sheets, mounted their horses and galloped through the streets of the little town, greatly enjoying the sensation they created-particularly the alarm and dismay of the Negroes, to whose superstitious minds the sight of whitesheeted figures suggested nothing but spirits risen from the grave, and who accordingly fled to their homes in panic-stricken terror." In a short time this terror that was created among the Negroes began to create considerable talk around Pulaski. "It was noticed that prowling freemen who encountered the ghostly horsemen at night were afterwards more inclined to stay at home after dark; and this gave birth to the idea that perhaps the Klan might be used as a means of subduing the undue bumptiousness and the nocturnal prowlings of some of those who seemed incapable of using their new-found freedom discreetly."

It must be remembered that these were uneasy times in the South. Its traditional social structure had been overturned by the liberation of the slaves and these freedmen, suddenly unrestrained, were inclined to make the most of their new irresponsibility, especially since they were encouraged by Northern Carpetbaggers, who had swarmed into the South to take advantage of its demoralized condition, and by Southern Scalawags. It must be remembered, too, that for years the dread of a slave insurrection had been the secret fear of nearly every Southerner. Now with disorders increasing the minor transgressions of the newly liberated blacks seemed to be only a prelude to something infinitely worse. So anything which could hold them in check and avert that possible disaster was not to be lightly dismissed without a trial, at least.

The Klan's First Stage.

"But all this innocent frolic and horseplay on the part of a few small-town youths constituted merely the first stage in the existence of the Ku Klux Klan," writes Mr. Horn. "Throughout the winter of 1866-67 the Ku Klux Klan outgrew the confines of Pulaski and Giles county. Also it began to take on a more serious purpose wherever it had been established. It had grown out of its swaddling clothes and, almost before its organizers realized what was happening, they found it on the eve of branching out as a force of regulation which was to affect the destiny of the whole South. Pulaski, however, remained the nerve-center of the Ku Klux movement. Here was dropped into the pool the pebble whose ripples spread so far.' Just as Pulaski remained the nerve-center, so did the state of Tennessee become the "brain" of the movement. This was due largely to the genius of one man —Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, known as the "wizard of the saddle," when he was leading Confederate cavalry during the late war. He became the "Grand Wizard" of the Ku Klux Klan and under his direction the Klan was used as the only weapon which the prostrate South had left to prevent itself from being ground into the dust by the hatred of the Northern Radicals. Then when the control of the Klan began to slip away from the original leaders and thieves and other desperadoes began to use its masks and robes to cloak their own evil designs, it was disbanded.

The story of all this turbulent period is told in "Invisible Empire" whose author concludes his

"So lived and so died the Ku Klux Klan. It made its name a symbol of terror and desperation. There are today many thousands of Americans who think of it as an indefensible gang of out-laws and murderers. But ask any person who lived in the South during that wild nightmare called the Reconstruction and who saw the Klansmen as they went about their self-appointed, task, ask such a one and from the light in his eyes it will be easy to see that the Klan in his memory is clad in shining armor, sans peud et sans reproche."

nacular of the nation,"

"The theory that the Ku Klux were Confederate ghosts was readily accepted by the Negroes generally as being entirely reasonable and credible, and when the Klansmen started to making moonlight visits of a regulatory nature they took their cue from this," says Mr. Horn. For instance, the leader of the Klansmen, after calling the Negro out of his cabin, would complain that he was thirsty and ask the black man to bring him a bucket of water. Usually he would bring the bucket and a gourd dipper, thereupon the ghostly figure would throw the gourd aside and, raising the bucket to his lips, drain it to the last drop. (The Negro didn't know, of course, that the Klansman had a funnel inside his mask and from its end a rubber tube ran down to an oilcloth bag under his flowing robe.)

Having drunk, the white-robed figure would smack his lips appreciatively and exclaim, "My, but that's good. That's the first drink I've had since I was killed at the Battle of Shiloh; and you get mighty thirsty down there in

A Standard Joke.

"This became the favorite and standard joke of the Ku Klux everywhere during those early days; it was almost the hallmark of a Ku Klux raid-none genuine without it," declares Mr.

But it was not the only stunt which the Klansmen tried to frighten the superstitious Negroes. Sometimes the leader would put a false head, made of a gourd with a mask attached, on top of his head and wear his robe up over this false head. During the interview, he would thrust the masked gourd at the Negro saying "Here, hold my head a moment." The terror which this request inspired is easily imagined. Sometimes he would ask the Negro to shake hands with him and when the black man reached out he would be met with a hand made of wood and painted white so that it looked exactly like that of a skeleton.

During one such visit in Mississippi the Negro was asked, "Have you got a mattock?" Upon replying that he had, he was told by the ghostly visitor, "Well, come along with me to the graveyard. My headstone is so close to my head I can't rest good in my grave. I want you to help me move it."

"It is particularly interesting to observe the frequency with which the unsung and anonymous but prolific poets of the Reconstruction era were moved to lyrical composition in connection with the rise and fall of the Ku Klux," observes Mr. Horn. He then cites the case of a Carpetbag preacher, named Reverend A. W. Cummings, who became tax assessor and collector in Spartanburg, S. C. When President Grant sent Federal troops to Spartanburg in 1871 to suppress the Klan, the local newspaper, named the Spartan, printed the following "impious gibe" at Reverend Cummings, which it called "A Reverend Gentleman's Evening Prayer":

Now I lay me down to sleep;
I pray thee, Grant, my body keep.
Just let the soldiers round me stand
And drive away the Ku Klux band,
That I may have one night of rest
With consciousness of safety blessed.
And though my conscience sting no more,
I think I may make out to snore.
A grateful song I then will raise,
Thy soldiers and thy grace to praise.
Amen.

When Gen. George Meade, the victor of Gettysburg, was placed in command of one of the military districts in the South, he issued a general order calling for the suppression of the Ku Klux Klan and forbidding the newspapers to print anything "furthering the Ku Klux cause.' Thereupon some unknown poet printed in the Augusta (Ga.) Reg-

How 'Waving the Bloody Shirt' Originated Out of the Ku Klux era came an expression that was once a familiar one in American political history. A certain Carpetbagger from Ohio, named A. P. Huggins, went to Mississippi where he became both tax collector and superintendent of schools. He soon made himself very unpopular and the Ku Klux called upon him one night and ordered him to leave the state. When Huggins refused the Klansmen flogged him. A Lieutenant Pickett of the United States army, who was stationed in Mississippi at the time, obtained the nightshirt from Huggins and took it to Washington where he gave it to Senator Ben Butler of Massachusetts. Butler was delighted to have any chance to denounce the South. So he made a sensational speech in the senate and waved the gory garment above his head as emblematic of the reign of terror that the Klansmen had instituted. For years afterwards, whenever a Republican tried to stir up prejudice against a Democratic opponent, he was said to be "waving the bloody shirt." Says Horn: "Thus the humble nightdress of that forgotten Carpetbagger has become immortalized in the ver-

Workers Must Obtain Cards

Graduates of schools, colleges and other institutions who will enter employment for thefirst time this summer are urged to obtain a social security account number card if they do not have one. Roger R. Minker, manager of the Delaware field office of the board, at Dover, said it is "absolutely necessary for such cards to be secured so the board may keep records which make certain each worker will receive retirement benefits to which he is entitled under the old age insurance provisions of the Social Security Act.

GIRL VANISHES AFTER LEWES SCHOOL EVENT

Police intensified a search in a several-state wide area today for 15year old Charlotte Hall, missing since she reportedly climbed into an automobile with a man Wednesday night during high school commencement exercises.

Constable Clarence K. Futcher said he had been told the girl, a junior, had driven off with the man about 8:15 o'clock that night, shortly after hte exercises began.

Her father, Weyland Hall, is an engineer on the lighthouse buoy boat in Delaware River.

Meanwhile aid of State police was enlisted in the disappearance of Robert Sockriter, 43-year-old building con-

"The Gorgeous Hussy" "The Perfect Specimen" "It Happened One Night" AND NOW-

"MAIDEN EFFORT"

SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS, the man who wrote this hit parade of popular fiction, scores again with "Maiden Effort," a story with all the appeal of its tremendously successful predecessors.

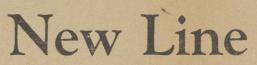

If you haven't read the earlier books by Samuel Hopkins

Samuel Hopkins Adams Adams, you almost certainly saw the motion picture version of "It Happened One Night." The most popular photoplay of recent years,

It introduced to millions of Americans the inimitable numor of its author. "Maiden Effort" has the same originality of plot and sparkles with the sprightly dialog that delighted you in "It Happened One Night." Not to read it would be to miss one of the year's best treats in the field of light fiction. READ "MAIDEN EFFORT" IN THIS PAPER -- IN EVERY ISSUE.

Two years ago, the whippy little Irishman, with the rumpled hair and the rumpled suit, wrote a piece in which he indicated that the disquieting noises of the capitalist system were just body squeaks and that the engine was still all right. His idea is to go on from here, instead of backing up, and it is to be assumed that will be his take-off for the revived magazine. After 60 years of battling for civic righteousness he concludes that the United States Constitution is a changeless and unchangeable document, which will in time set everything right if we just stay within its ground rules.

Still crackling with aphorisms and Greek quotations in his ninth decade, he might be reminiscent-talking about Oliver Wendell Holmes, Theodore Roosevelt, William Dean Howells, Gilbert Parker, Robert Louis Stevenson, Rudyard Kipling, Arthur Conan Doyle, James M. Barrie, et al. But he is chock-full of today, and yesterday is just so much ink through the printing press. All the above and many others like them were his business and social intimates. He has probably led more famous writers in leash than any other man.

In 1866, when he was nine years old, his parents, of a family of farmers and carpenters, brought him to a prairie farm in Indiana. He sold $1 microscopes on the street corners of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, and Chicago; worked his way through Knox college; got a $7a-week job editing The Wheelman for the Pope Manufactur-ing company, started his syndicate, and, in 1893, McClure's Magazine, in that other doleful day when his friends all said: "The funeral's tomorrow." He says he is just getting wound up.

TAXATION: Relief?

In retrenching 1939, many states have cut their budgets and many a congressman has preached econ-But John Public has yet to see his taxes cut; indeed, the millrun U. S. investor holding tax exempt securities will be lucky if such exemptions are not outlawed next year. Reasons for neglecting John Public are: (1) his taxes cannot be cut without adding to Big Business' burden; (2) Big Business, far from accepting such a burden, has good reason to protest its present tax status. The only apparent solution, federal economy, will go by the boards this year as U. S. expenditures for 1939-40 top the 1938budget by approximately $1,000,000,000.

Four probable points of the current session's tax revision program (1) re-enactment of sance" levies expiring June 30; (2) repeal of the undistributed profits tax and substitution of a flat 18 per cent levy on corporations with incomes above $25,000 a year; (3) deduction of net business losses from WASHINGTON.—As the days go son or with Roosevelt. The fighting by, it appears more and more that Pat Harrison is going to obtain some President Roosevelt's speech before | tax legislation if it is possible, and the American Retail federation here, May 22, amounts to a declara- tunity to veto the bill if he likes. tion of greatest political importance. It may be, indeed, that the Chief Executive's pronouncements before the retail merchants that night will eventuate as the cornerstone of his political philosophy for the campaign of 1940.

In Mr. Roosevelt's speech before the retail businessmen, it will be recalled upon examination that he restated virtually all of the New Deal | business can not re-employ workers theories and convictions. That was as long as taxes are unevenly disimportant. But more important tributed. That is to say, the Miswas the emphasis with which he offered, in new language, the general assertion that there will be no backtracking. More important to the country, as a whole, was his determined adherence to the principle of virtually unlimited government spending, because his renewed insistence in that direction came at a time when there is considerable fear that the country faces further inflation of its currency.

There seems to be quite a general agreement that the retail er a new method for spending it speech should be examined in the was proposed. The individual repight of 1940. As far as I can learn, that is the view taken by New Dealers, by old line Democrats, who are antagonistic to spending policies of the last five years, and by cautious Republican observers who are anxiously looking for signs indicating whether Mr. Roosevelt, himself, will seek a third term in the office of President. While the views of the three segments converge, their reasons differ. The New Dealers who want Mr. Roosevelt to run for a third term desire to consider the speech as a preliminary statement, a charting of the future course; the old line Democrats who desire to get the party back in Democratic hands, rather than in the hands of the radical wing, entertain fears which force consideration of 1940, and the Republicans secretly are hoping that Mr. Roosevelt will try to break the third term precedent.

Speech Sought to Court Favor With Retailers

There is another reason, apparent to some observers, why the speech that sought to court favor with the retail dealers should be thought of in terms of a year hence. It will be remembered that the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was held here only two weeks in advance of istration to alter the principles and the speech which is the subject of the objectives for which we have so much discussion. I suppose if one's sense of humor could be sufficiently detached from the gravity of the situation, they could describe the circumstance as similar to two small boys who were sticking out their tongues at each other as proof of their anger.

A third factor might be brought into the picture. You will recall that it was only a week or so prior to Mr. Roosevelt's speech that he spent an afternoon in conference with some of the legislative leaders. Among them was Senator Pat Harrison, the old-line Mississippi Democrat, who occupies the post of chairman of the powerful senate committee on finance. That is the committee which handles tax legislation in the senate. Included in the conference also was Chairman Doughton, of the house committee on ways and means, also a tax com-

CHAPTER VIII—Continued "Who is she?" croaked the wretched and disillusioned magnate. "Search me. Some bright little extra, maybe."

A. Leon Snydacker exploded. "That's the girl that turned me down. Me-me-me-me! Setting herself up for a day-bun-tay. Phony. She's fired. From date. With-Moby Dickstein perceived with pain and apprehension that he had committed a major error. If the star went, the job went. And Moby was well suited with the job. He did some quick thinking.

"Oh, no; she ain't. Calm down. Bwana. Calm down."

"Why ain't she?" "Think of the build-up. Think of the investment. The All-Class, All-White Purity Supercreational Picture. That's our story and we're stuck with it and stuck good. What

"And I was ker-razy about that girl," faltered A. Leon. "Why, Moby, I pretty near married her." He brightened up at a solacing thought. "Anyway, I got my diamond and emeralds back." Wistfully he added: "But I'd rather have the girl. Lemme talk with her."

"Nothin' doin', Bwana. Anyway, she ain't here," lied Moby. "You just climb into your car and go back to New York and think up some fresh supercreational no-

"But the picture?" asked the practical Gloria. He waved a graceful hand. "Like an insubstantial pageant faded," he intoned. "Until further notice," he qualified. "Has everybody left?" asked Marne.

"We can't stay here with those two men.' "Huh? Oh, I get you. You want a chaperon. What's the matter with rupted by Moby's poetical example. "Here have I lived and here I die." "Mightn't A. Templeton Sayles have something to say about that?"

But I was Templethe familiar and monotonous drive of the rain against her windows and felt the southeast blast sweep her bed. Too sleepy to close the room or gather more bedding, she cowered into a ball and drew the insufficient single blanket over her head.

Her next half-waking impression was that the rain had increased its fury, if that were possible. The splashing localized itself as being within the house. A leak? Must she get up into a cold, dank world? Miserably she turned over, and then perceived that someone was taking a bath in her shower. She huddled closer and fell asleep again.

An indefinite time afterward, she became aware of an alien presence. Without emerging from shelter she contrived an orifice for her eye. Through this she made out a man seated in the arm-chair. His long, gaunt, haggard, not unattractive face was freshly shaven, and his whole person gave forth an effect of cleanliness and vigor. No casual us up here." hobo, certainly. ★ Do Swell Job in England ★ Girls—Bob Preston!

- By Virginia Vale -RECENTLY returned from Sweden, a man who has been connected with the motion picture business for some twenty-five years made a firsthand report to this column on the subject of Greta Garbo in her homeland.

Her countrymen, he said, aren't tremendously impressed by her success. They like her pictures, go in droves to see them, but they feel that of course she ought to be a successjust a case of home-town girl making good.

They are inclined to resent her aloofness—they feel that she ought to realize that they wouldn't dream of intruding on her privacy, and that she doesn't have to treat them as she does the movie fans of other countries.

He had several photographs of her, taken in the days when she was a hat model. They were sweet, rather simpery, giving no hint of what she was to become.

Apparently the best way to make really good motion pictures is to send an American picture-making unit to England to do the work. 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips' is the latest example of what can be accomplished in that way, and it's one of the best pictures that has been released in a long time. Metro sent its unit over, Robert Donat and Greer Garson turned in beautiful performances, Sam Wood did a swell job of directing, and there you Incidentally, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" presents us with a new glamour girl. Greer Garson has flaming red hair and green eyes. Men think she's gorgeous, women aren't sure whether she is really beautiful or not.

This is her first picture. She came to Hollywood from England, where she had appeared on the stage and done some work in television, expecting to go to work at once. She spent a year in waiting to go to work. She was seriously ill, with spinal trouble. She was sent back to England, to do her first picture, and will probably be sent back again to do her second, "The Doctor's Dilemma."

Paramount thinks it has star material in a young man named Bob Preston—and the movies sadly need young men who are stellar material right now, what with three heartsmashers getting married practi-cally in a bunch! The trio, Gable, Power and Taylor, will still be tremendously popular, of course, but many a girl who has liked their pictures is going to look about for an unmarried star to fill the niche in her affections left vacant by the marriage of one of them. So Paramount may offer such girls Bob Preston. He's made four pictures so far (notably "Union Pacific") but he's had stage experience, in the stock company launched by Tyrone Power's mother in Los Angeles.

If you're a Kate Smith fan you'll have to save a different hour for her broadcasts, beginning in October. When she returns from her summer vacation she'll move into the nine o'clock (Eastern Standard Time) spot on Friday nights which has been filled this year by Orson Welles and his Mercury Theater. For four years she has been on at eight on Thursdays, and as she rates fifth among all shows in national popularity surveys she doesn't have to fear the other A-1 shows that take the air on Thursday nights.

Fondas vacationed in New York they didn't do night clubs, didn't let the publicity department tie Henry up for endless interviews with the press; they just went to the theater, night after night Note to young singers—remember that the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air will be resumed on October first . . . Jim Ameche, Don's brother, is replacing Charles Boyer on the "Hollywood Playhouse" program during Boyer's 13 weeks' vacation . . . Helen Morgan seems to have a future in television; she seems to register perfectly in the new medium . . . If the censors clamp down on "Lady of the Tropics," (Hedy LaMarr-Robert Taylor) Hollywood won't be much surprised.
