Robert Hammond Caught in Marsh Near Milford After Wounding Police Officer

HAD STOLEN CAR HERE SATURDAY

Robert P. Hammond, 27, charged with the theft of Arlie Saulsbury's Buick sedan here last Saturday night, was captured by a posse of 30 officers and deputized citizens of Milford Monday night in a marsh along the Mispillion River. He was also charged with shooting a Milford policeman in the arm early Monday night while resisting arrest.

The posse had surrounded a half-mile area along the north side of the river after Hammond was chased into the reeds by Officer Andrew Kosco, 40, of Milford, who says the man shot him in the left arm earlier in the day during a fight in the Milford jail. Kosci formerly lived in Harrington where he is remembered as an amateur wrestler.

The arrest was made at 9 P. M., after a three-hour search, just as the search was about to be given up because of darkness, when Officer James Holleger, of Milford, heard the man cough and found Hammond in the water with his head hidden under overhanging bushes. He was placed in Milford jail.

Early Saturday night Hammond drove off in Saulsbury's car from in front of Bullock's Garage here despite shouts of attendants nearby. The car was found abandoned with a burst tire at 11:30 o'clock the same night on the Rehoboth road ten miles south of Milford.

According to Milford police, Hammond purchased several articles at the general apparel shop of Jack Berlin, 10 West Front Street, Milford, Monday, giving a check in payment. Later Berlin became suspicious and called Officer Kosci to investigate.

The officer came upon Hammond in a billiard hall and, placing a handcuff on one of his wrists, took him to jail. As he was putting him in a cell, Hammond pulled a .32 caliber revolver from his pocket and demanded his release.

"Hammond pushed the gun against my stomach and demanded I also give him my gun," Kosci said. "My handcuff was still on his wrist and I gave the man a jerk and at the same time tried to push him into the cell."

Then Kosci continued, Hammond fired four times, one of the bullets striking him in the arm. Hammond broke loose and ran down the street, with the officer in pursuit.

After Hammond disappeared into the marsh, Kosci notified other Milford officers and State Highway police from the Georgetown and Dover stations.

LIQUOR PROFIT FOR STATE SHOWS GAINS

The Delaware Liquor Commission has turned over $689,750.74 to the state treasurer for the fiscal year ending June 30.

This is about $9,000 more than the $680,362.24 turned over to the treasurer in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938.

Fees collected for spirit licenses during the year ending June 30, amounted to $127,713.44 compared with $129,051.11 for the year ending June 30, last year.

Fees for beer licenses during the fiscal year just past amounted to $19,081.57 compared with $18,117.70 for the fiscal year 1937-38.

Taxes collected by the commission during the fiscal year 1938-39 amounted to $427,753.86 compared with $418,083.52 for the fiscal year 1937-38; wine taxes for 1938-39 were 19,641.66 compared with $16,490.86 during 1937-38 and beer taxes, $106,694.62 for 1938-39 compared with $107,477.94 for 1937-38.

In Washington, federal authorities reported total net revenue of state and local governments from alcoholic beverages in Delaware totalled $554,519 for the calendar year of 1938. This is the state's share of $317,786,828 collected in revenue throughout the country.

Delaware license fees last year brought in $133,556, state spirits, wine and beer taxes $510,160 for the calendar year, making Delaware's total gross receipts for 1938 $554,519.

Highway Act Not Valid Lynch Claims

If the validity of the new state highway department act, which returns the department to Republican control is upheld, "an impossible and absurd situation" will follow, Stewart Lynch, Democrat attorney warned in a brief filed in Superior Court Monday.

The brief of 134 pages is in connection with the proceedings seeking to determine the validity of the act passed by the present General Assembly.

Mr. Lynch held that the title of the act is defective, failed to receive the required vote and that the Legislature cannot exercise the power of appointment belonging to the Governor.

"If the Legislature has the power to appoint all officers of the state, save only those which the Constitution makes elective, then it is clear that each and every subordinate officer of the executive department with the exception of the elective officers, can be appointed by the Legislature," Mr. Lynch said.

"If this be so, it would lead to an impossible and absurd situation. The Governor would be so effectively stripped of his 'supreme executive power' vested in him by Section 1 of Article III of the Delaware Constitution, and would be effectively deprived of power to follow the express mandate of Section 17 of Article III of the Delaware Constitution, that he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, yet could be impeached for the apparent neglect or this constitutional responsibility of seeing to the execution of the laws.

"It is respectfully submitted that the attempt by the Legislature to appoint three members of the State Highway Board constitutes an unconstitutional interference with and encroachment upon the proper prerogatives of the Governor, and is violative of the Constitution of the State of Delaware."

He pointed out the bulk of the gubernatorial duties must be entrusted to competent subordinate officers. He argued that the Governor, in order that he may be able to see to it that the laws be faithfully executed, must have the power to choose the subordinate officers to whom he will entrust direct supervision of the execution of the laws.

"If the Governor does not have this power, but the Legislature has the power to put in subordinate officers of the executive department, then the Governor is effectively stripped of a power which is essential to him to see to the faithful execution of the laws of the State," Mr. Lynch argued.

He further argued that "the attempted legislative appointment of three members of the State Highway Board" constitutes an unconstitutional attempt by the Legislature to encroach upon the executive functions and duties of the Governor of the State of Delaware which, as we have shown, was not intended by the 1897 Convention delegates.

Discussing the title of the bill, Mr. Lynch pointed out it provides for the reorganization of the State Highway Department "by increasing the membership thereof."

Mr. Lynch contended the body of the act is not confined to a simple increase of membership, but also embodies the following changes: Elimination of the Governor as a member; varies the terms of offices of the members; appoints three new members of the department; requires concurrence of four members of the department to hire a chief engineer and secretary; requires concurrence of five members to purchase materials and employ labor without competitive bids, in the case of emergency; and provides the secretary shall hold office at the pleasure of the department.

"None of these matters," he added, "were in any way indicated in the title of the act; in fact, the title of the act negated the thought that the act contained any such provisions, for it expressly stated that the amendment only contemplated an increase in the membership of the State Highway Department," Mr. Lynch said.

He termed the title "misleading and deceptive."

He argued that if the title of the act violates the constitution, the entire measure is null and void.

Mr. Lynch said the act required passage by a vote of three-fourths of all members elected to each house of the Legislature.

$900,000 In Road Contract Awards

Contracts involving expenditures of $900,000 for highway work, were approved by the Democratic State Highway Commission Wednesday at a meeting held in Bethany Beach.

The board also authorized payment for a number of completed projects. Funds for the new work will be taken from the $1,200,000 bond issue authorized by the commission.

Gov. Richard C. McMullen, accompanied by other members of the commission and department officials, opened and inspected the ocean highway between Bethany Beach and Fenwick Island, an extension of the Rehoboth, Bethany Beach road, which will later be met by a road from Ocean City, Md.

The value of the new ocean highway as a means of making more accessible a Delaware ocean-side recreation area was praised by Governor McMullen.

The commission approved a franchise to the Delaware Rural Electrification Association for installing 169 miles of line in Sussex County and 125 miles in Kent County.

Contracts approved by the commission include: Improvement to secondary roads from Harrington to Hughes Crossroads, to M. J. McDermott, Georgetown, $48,746; widening of concrete road between Harmon School to Midway near Oak Orchard, to W. Roach and Sons, Georgetown, $62,210.20; construction of dual highway between Limestone Road and Prices Corner, to A. Petrillo Company, Wilmington, $181,520.20.

Widening of concrete road from Pearson to Dover, to George and Lynch, of Dover, $56,715.60; widening of concrete road from Harrington to Phillips Brothers, Salisbury, Md., $54,770.81; construction of stone and concrete bridge at Centreville, to Oliver Paving and Construction Co., Wilmington, $5,508.30.

CROP INSURANCE BETTERED FOR WHEAT FARMERS

The crop insurance program for 1940 has been simplified and improved to make it easier for wheat growers to get insurance and more economical to operate the plan, according to R. O. Stelzer, State Executive Officer of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration for Maryland and Delaware. The new crop insurance program has just been announced by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

A recent amendment to the AAA act, though which growers may obtain advances for premiums against future payments to be earned in the AAA program, will make it easier for growers to insure their crops. Spring wheat producers were able to take advantage of this provision before the closing date for taking out insurance this year, but all growers will be able to pay premiums with advances on AAA payments next year.

Another improvement in the crop insurance program is the extension of the period on which yield and loss data are based. Data from the crop years 1936, 1937 and 1938 will be used now making the base period from 1930 through 1938. This period, blended with a 13-year base for the county in which the farm is located, will tend to smooth out the effects of unusual losses.

The procedure for handling insurance has been simplified so that the insurance will be written in one operation at the time the application is filed. More of such work as establishing yields and premium rates will be done in the counties.

The new program also provides that when a producer has recently adopted improved farming methods, such as summer fallow or irrigation, which will materially increase his average yields and reduce risks involved, a special practice procedure may be applied to give due weight to the use of improved methods in premium rates and insurable yields.

Except for these improvements, Stelzer says, the 1940 program is essentially the same as the 1939 crop insurance plan.

PATRON'S RALLY TO BE HELD HERE ON JULY 18

The annual Southern States Patrons' meeting for this community will be held in the community room of the First National Bank Tuesday evening, July 18. Members of the advisory board for this section are Frank P. Jester, R. L. Nelson, Raymond Paskey, Elmer Brown, Gove Donovan and Elmer Tull.

Highlights of the meeting will be a motion picture, "Southern States Newsreel in Technicolor," and a discussion by Arthur Taylor on "What Farmers Expect of Their Co-operative and Its Value to Them." Two members will be elected to serve on the advisory board for the next fiscal year. Contests with prizes and refreshments will follow.

ISABELLA DONOVAN ACQUITTED BY JURY YESTERDAY AT DOVER

"NOT GUILTY" VERDICT BROUGHT IN BY KENT COUNTY JURY AT 2:11 P. M.; JURY OUT ONE HOUR AND FORTY MINUTES

A jury Thursday afternoon acquitted Isabella Donovan in the "lover's lane" killing of Vaughn Webb, her 19-year-old CCC sweetheart. Today she is looking forward hopefully to getting back her job in a Milford hosiery mill.

"But I don't want any boy friends," she said. "I loved Vaughn too much—and now I have his memory."

The 18-year-old girl smiled faintly as the all-male jury announced its verdict after an hour and 40 minutes' deliberation. But outside the courtroom she burst into tears when the dead man's mother, Mrs. Anna Webb, suddenly cried:

"You did it, Isabelle. You cannot lie to me."

She was taken into an anteroom by her mother and sisters and quickly regained her calm.

Within five minutes she was walking from the courthouse, followed by friends and townspeople. It resembled a parade.

"I'm very happy," said Isabella, as her mother interjected: "Wasn't it wonderful? Wasn't Mr. Tunnell great?"

"We knew she was innocent all along," said Mrs. Betty Dillman, a sister, "but it is a great relief to have everything over. If the state had just dropped the case there always might have been some persons who would think Isabella did it. But now everybody knows she is innocent. Twelve men said so."

While the Donovans were being surrounded by sympathizers, the weary parents of the slain boy left alone for their truck farm.

All Mrs. Webb would say after her one outburst in the courtroom was, "I guess everything is all right." She spoke angrily. "Isabella had her day in court and there is nothing I can say."

Despite the fact that Chief Justice Daniel J. Layton had cautioned against any demonstration, and had threatened to jail for contempt anybody caught applauding, there was a sporadic outbreak of handclapping when the verdict was announced.

Stairways leading to the second floor courtroom were jammed with well-wishers, as were the front steps to the courthouse itself, and the side walks outside. In a small park across the street another crowd had gathered and everybody joined in Isabella's triumphant two-block march to the hotel.

Hundreds of spectators who jammed the courtroom—even standing against the walls—during the four-trial seemed as jubilant as Isabella's many relatives.

"Atta girl," shouted a matronly woman as the girl came down the steps. Asked if she were a relative, the woman replied: "No, I've just been attending the trial, everybody here has come to love this little girl."

Before she was arrested Isabella worked as an apprentice at a hosiery mill in Milford. She asserted she liked the job and hoped to get it back. She said she also is anxious to "break the news to Opie."

"Opie" is a mongrel that she and Vaughn Webb owned jointly, a creature about whom Isabella frequently wrote verse. While in the Georgetown jail she composed poem in memory of Vaughn, sent it to her mother, and told her to "pin a rose on it and

Plans Are Complete For Fair Opening

For the past seven months the Management of the Kent and Sussex Fair Association has been striving to make the 1939 Fair the most outstanding of any of the twenty fairs held since they organized in 1919. From the time the gates open on Monday night, July 24, until they close Saturday night, July 29, there will be thousands amazed at the great display of exhibits which by far will exceed any shown in the past twenty years.

In order to make this an educational, agricultural and commercial event, there are many clever exhibits being prepared at this time to be presented by the various State Departments; namely, State Board of Health, State Board of Agriculture, State Board of Education, State Game and Fish Commission, State Forestry, State Beekeepers Association, 4-H Club, The F. F. A. and many other branches of our State Departments.

Another big feature exhibit will be the Machinery show which is being sponsored by ten of the largest machine manufacturers in the East. The Livestock show should be much larger this year than ever before, due to the fact that Beef Cattle Classes, which are sponsored by Governor Richard C. McMullen, have been added.

Never before has the Kent and Sussex Fair Association contracted for so much entertainment for the patrons. Jimmie Lynch and his Death Dodgers, now playing at the World's Fair in New York, will open our Fair on Monday night with one of the greatest thrill shows ever seen in this section of the country. Another great attraction will be Zacchini, "The Human Cannonball," who will be shot over two gigantic Ferris Wheels 200 feet at a height of 100 feet.

The management at this time is planning to have Delaware's first Girl Drum and Bugle Corps with them on Tuesday which is Children's Day. The race card for Tuesday features the 2:1 Pace, Three Year-Old Trot and 2:24 Pace, besides pony and mule races. On Wednesday, they will attempt to stage a novel race that has never before been attempted on any Fair Ground. We have arranged with approximately twenty fox hound owners to bring 200 dogs to run a mile heat on the track. This day always has been known as Race Day and there will be four harness races, the 2:10 Trot, Three-Year-Old Pace, Two Year-Old Trot and Two-Year-Old Pace. Thursday will be Governor's Day and he and his staff will be present. The Livestock Parade will be one of the features this day, in addition to three harness races, the 2:08 Pace, 2:24 Trot and the 2:18 Pace. On Friday, Jimmie Lynch and his Death Dodgers will make their second appearance. Races for this day will be the 2:18 Trot, 2:20 Pace and the 2:28 Trot or Pace. Saturday will be Automobile Race Day.

For the past three years the management has tried to secure a contract with the Lottie Mayer's Disappearing Water Show, but the demand for this show in Metropolitan centers, both in America and foreign countries was so great that we were unable to contract them. This show consists of about twenty diving girls and is full of surprises from start to finish. We are happy to announce that we have their contract this year for two appearances daily.

The night show requires 3700 sq. feet of stage space to accommodate the Fantasies of 1939 which is without a doubt one of the most beautiful attractions ever presented on our Fair Grounds. The management is confident that when our many visitors leave the Fair this year they will go home and tell their friends that the Kent and Sussex Fair at Harrington has truly lived up to its reputation as being "Bigger and Better" than ever.

DELAWARE APPLE CROP STARTS FOR MARKET

Shipments of early Delaware apples to out-of-state markets have started with heavy carriage both by truck and railroads.

J. L. Soper, director of the State Bureau of Markets, reported that at the end of June 555 bushels of No. 1 Transparent were shipped from Sussex County by rail, for domestic consumption and 553 bushels from Kent County by truck.

By truck 719 bushels were shipped from Kent County and 6,621 bushels from Sussex County.

Prevailing prices to the grower ranged from 90 cents to $1.10.

HARRINGTON MAN ASSIGNED TO ARMY "FLYING FORTRESS"

Selection of a Delawarean, Corp. Daniel H. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel D. Smith, of near Harrington, as assistant radio operator in one of the army's three "flying fortresses," assigned to take Gen. Goes Monterio and his staff to Brazil, was announced this week. The flight will start July 15 from the Newark, N. J., airport. Corp. Smith has served in the army air corps for the past 10 years.

DR. JOST RESIGNS AS SECRETARY OF BOARD OF HEALTH

Mrs. Trent, Director Of Division Of Nursing, And Dr. Ellegood Also Resign

HELD POSITION FOR 10 YEARS

The disclosure of the resignation of Dr. Arthur C. Jost as executive secretary of the State Board of Health, and of Dr. R. E. Ellegood as a member of the board, was followed Wednesday evening by the additional disclosure of the recent resignation of Mrs. Kathryn Trent of Dover, as director of the division of public health nursing of the board.

In her resignation presented to the board June 15, to become effective July 15, Mrs. Trent is reported to have said she was not getting proper cooperation from officials of the department.

Dr. Jost in his letter of resignation stated merely that as the work of the fiscal year has been completed, he was submitting his resignation, dated July 10, and to be effective August 10, and that pursuant to the terms of his contract he would take a month's leave of absence. He is now on a motor trip to Canada.

While members of the board did not ask for Dr. Jost's resignation at its last meeting, June 27, it did discuss his recent work and the lack of an explanation by him for the resignation of Mrs. Trent, a member said.

In a vote five members expressed dissatisfaction, two voiced approval, and one was non-committal.

In view of the resignation of Dr. Woodbridge E. Morris as director of the division on maternal and child health recently and of that of Mrs. Trent the board members decided to take no action for three months, and as one member said Wednesday night "even then the matter might have been adjusted without any resignation.

Dr. Ellegood said that his resignation, presented June 29, two days after the meeting, had no connection with the resignation of Dr. Jost.

"I've served on the board for 23 years and I've been thinking of resigning for some time," he said. His term would not have expired until July 1, 1942.

Asked if he knew of any dissatisfaction with Dr. Jost's work expressed at the last meeting, Dr. Ellegood said that he did and that he felt sure Dr. Jost had resigned "because he had heard of this dissatisfaction.

"He was a sensitive gentleman and a very efficient one," Dr. Ellegood continued. "I don't think he cared to serve on any board that was not unanimously satisfied with his work."

Disregard of suggestions and orders given by the board, the handling of the child welfare and maternal division since the resignation of Dr. Morris and other minor matters are said to have formed the principal basis for the dissatisfaction of the board.

Transfer of Mrs. Trent's assistant and failure to replace the assistant is said to have led her to resign.

Dr. Stanley Worden, president of the board, declined to discuss the matter other than to confirm the resignations.

"Dr. Jost's resignation will be discussed at a special meeting of the board which will be held in Dover some time in the near future," he said.

Mrs. Ethel B. Warner declared that Dr. Jost was efficient, effective, and always a gentleman. She said that he had been board in his interests in the work of the department, but said that the child welfare and maternal division was "probably the least attractive to him."

Meanwhile, pending action of the board, there is no indication who Dr. Jost's successor will be, if the resignation is accepted, but it was indicated that if he does leave, a younger man, perhaps from Delaware, will be appointed.

Dr. Jost, a native of Canada, was appointed executive secretary of the state board in December, 1928, succeeding Dr. Arthur T. Davis. He took over the office Jan. 1, 1928. He came to Delaware with more than 20 years experience along public health lines. He is a graduate in arts from Acadia University and in medicine from McGill University at Montreal.

For a number of years he was county health officer in the province of Nova Scotia, and for 10 years was in the Provincial Health Department of the Province of Nova Scotia.

During the World War Dr. Jost served three years with the Canadian forces in medical administrative work, being discharged with the rank of lieutenant colonel in the medical corps.

ADVENTUROUS AMERICANS

By Elmo Scott Watson

Morgan the Raider

GEN. JOHN H. MORGAN had the distinction of leading Confederate troops to the farthest point north during the Civil war.

On June 11, 1863, his division of about 1,500 men crossed the Cumberland and started north. After several skirmishes with Union troops, he reached the Ohio river on July 7, captured two steamboats, drove off 300 Federal militia and two Federal gunboats, and crossed into Indiana.

This brought him into the heart of enemy territory and his comparatively small force was now pursued by thousands of Federals from the Kentucky camps. Being cut off from all sources of supply, all possibility of aid and even of communication or information, his further successes are the more remarkable.

Descending on Corydon, he dispersed 4,000 militia drawn up to bar his way. Then he moved on to Salem, where he tapped telegraph lines and listened to the frantic orders to Federal troops to capture him.

From Salem he went on up the Ohio, destroying and burning, in an attempt to cripple Union transportation and deprive them of supplies. After threatening Cincinnati, he went around it and reached Camp Shady where he destroyed many Federal army wagons. He finished his dash through Ohio with 25,000 Federal troops in close pursuit.

A 3,000-Mile Ride

MEN have done strange things to hold their jobs. Marcus Whitman rode a horse from Oregon to Boston, a distance of 3,000 miles to hold his.

Whitman was a doctor who started doing missionary work among the Indians of the Oregon region in 1835. After seven years, he received word that his mission was to be abandoned, presumably because his superiors at Boston had a false idea that the territory could not be successfully colonized.

Since he wanted the situation explained personally to members of the mission board at Boston, he mounted his horse on October 3, 1842, and, together with Asa Lovejoy, started a ride that did not end until spring of the following year. They had to go south by a round-about route to avoid hostile Indians along the usual way which was through South pass. By way of Fort Uintah in Utah, then away down into New Mexico to Taos and Santa Fe, they then followed the Santa Fe trail to Bent's Fort on the Arkansas.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Ghost at the Door"

HELLO EVERYBODY: You know, boys and girls, Old Lady Adventure is the most democratic female in the world. She doesn't confine her attentions to any particular class of people, but visits her favors on all alike. Why, kings and queens have had adventures, and so have doctors, lawyers, cab drivers and preachers.

Today I've got a yarn from a dentist—Dr. Robert Lentz of Danville, Ill.

This adventure happened to Doc along about the summer of 1912, and in those days he was living in Williamson county, near Wolf Creek, Ill. That's down near the Ozark ridges and in 1912 there was some pretty lonely country in that neighborhood.

Doc knew, because he used to ride through some of it pretty regularly. He was courting a girl who lived about five miles from his home and he used to ride out there on horseback, along a winding road that was almost impassable in places because of the thick growth on either side.

That road led down into a place known as Big Grassy Creek bottom, and that bottom was midway between his home and his girl's house. There was a ford across the creek, and near the ford, an old tumble-down church that hadn't been used for upwards of 50 years.

Woman Burned to Death in Bygone Days.

Near the church was an old chimney—all that was left of a house that people told strange stories about. According to one tale a woman had been burned to death when that house took fire.

There was something eerie about the old church and the old chimney. Doc used to feel shivery when he passed them riding home at two o'clock in the morning. But one night he made the mistake of going into that church, and then—

It was one dark night when Doc was coming back from a date. It had started to rain just after he left—a thin drizzle at first.

But, as he rode along, he heard the rumble of thunder and the rain began coming down harder. He had reached the bottom then, and the

It was a human form of some sort, standing there with arms outstretched. church would afford shelter of a sort. Doc tied his horse to a sapling, and plunged through the underbrush to the door.

The church was all but fallen down. It leaned over crazily to one side as if it had been pushed over by some giant hand into a great parallelogram. The windows were out and the floor was partly gone, but guided by intermittent flashes of lightning, Doc worked his way forward to a point near the rostrum, where the roof was good and the rain didn't come through. The rain didn't show any signs of letting up, so Doc lay down on a front bench to go to sleep.

Hunch Makes Him Stay Awake.

"I lay there about 15 minutes," he said, "when something caused me to open my eyes and look at the doorway at the other end of the church. Lightning flashed just then—flashed just enough to enable me to see dimly through the door. Something told me to stay awake and, with sleepy eyes I gazed at that door inspecting it each time the lightning would permit me.

"I heard a twig break outside, and could tell that my horse was uneasy. I felt the hair rise on the back of my neck, and my heart began to beat faster. It seemed that it would be hours before the lightning flashed again to tell me what might be there, and in the meantime I straightened up just as quietly as I could."

And along about then there entered Doc's mind the thought that this old church might be haunted. There was that old chimney—charred remnant of the house in which a woman had burned to death. And as if that wasn't enough, Doc began thinking of the countless people who must have been buried from that old church—whose bodies must have lain in their pine coffins before that same rostrum near which he was lying now. Those thoughts were running through Doc's mind then, suddenly, lightning flashed again.

And this time Doc saw something in the doorway. It was a human form of some sort, standing there with arms outstretched, touching both sides of the door. "Now," says Doc, "I wanted to make my exit. I began to get ready to do so, but how was I going to go about it? The only door was blocked, and the windows were too high up. I waited anxiously for the next flash of lightning.

"It came, and my ghostly visitor was disclosed standing in the doorway looking at me. It was plainly silhouetted and it seemed to be an old woman with matted, twisted hair hanging down to her shoulders, no hat, no shoes, and wearing some sort of a sack apron.

Lightning Reveals the Thing Coming at Him.

"She moved with a little noise as the spirit itself. Could it possibly be a spirit? I couldn't move. How was I going to get out? Was the Thing coming closer? To my disordered imagination, it seemed as if it was. What would it do when it discovered me? Would it block my entrance? Would it take out after me? All those things I anticipated before the next flash of lightning. When it came, the Thing was about two feet closer, coming onward with outstretched arms!"

Still there was no sound. The apparition had advanced noiselessly. In the darkness before the next flash Doc could imagine cold, clammy fingers on his face.

"Now," he says, "I decided it was time to move. I slipped up slowly, hoping to get past the Thing before the next lightning disclosed me. I reached the position that I thought was by her side, and then came another flash. I jumped, and yelled out loud. She followed suit with a yell equally as intense and made a grab at me. But too late!

"Just one jump and I was outside the door, running to my horse and off like a streak. I believe if Tom Mix could have seen me ride he'd have envied me."

And what was the Thing that Doc saw in the doorway? Well, the next day Doc heard a report that an aged insane woman had escaped from the Anna asylum not far away. And that was Doc's ghost.

Cowbird Unfriendly

The cowbird is not only a wild bird but is totally lacking in a social conscience. Cowbirds do not even build nests. They deposit their eggs in others' nests and leave the upbringing of the young to other birds. "Like the European cuckoo it leaves all family care to others," writes an ornithologist in "Birds of America." He continues: "It might well serve as the emblem of love."

What France Taught Us

The custom of erecting signs at the entrance to towns and villages saying "go slow," and at the city line, "Thank you," is said to be copied from France and was brought to America by tourists several years ago.

Many Kinds of Fish

A family could eat a different kind of fish once a week for three years without sampling all the varieties produced commercially in the United States.

Golden Egg Goose

Jacob Putman, Bellevue, Iowa, believes he has the goose that laid the golden eggs, and here's why: Since last spring the goose has laid more than 200 eggs and for 10 days in October averaged two a day. In addition, the goose laid 21 eggs while she was sitting on a nest in the hatching period. She started with a nest of 16 eggs; ended with a brood of 37.

Garage in Venice!

Paradoxically, Venice whose high-ways are canals, has the largest auto garage in Europe, having a capacity for 2,500 cars. They are the cars of all the folks who come to the resort in them, but who cannot use them until they are ready to leave again.

Silver Production High

Silver production in the United States and possessions last year totaled 60,796,673 ounces worth $39,302,900.

July Is Sponge Fishing Season; Big Tropical Industry Revived

IN MID-JULY begins the annual sponge take between coasts of Miami, Fla., and Nassau, of the Bahama islands group, from which comes most of the sponges used in U. S. homes, bath rooms and gasoline stations. The above pictures view shows the sponge fleet at anchor off the British colonial quay at Nassau. Sponges are taken from dinghys which put out from the sloops when a bed is sighted. Fishermen carry glass-bottomed buckets and spears. Others (right) pick by hand.

Picture Parade

Sponges grow at almost any depth of water. Above photo shows natives picking them from a shallow pool. Left: A fisherman depositing part of the day's catch in a rooked-in coral pool on a small island where the sponges will remain soaking until the fleet returns to Nassau. The British colonial government is experimenting in planting of sponge beds. There are three varieties: Silk sponge, wool and common type, most generally used in North America. When the fleet sets out from Nassau it usually remains away for two weeks to a month. Each boat carries small dinghys.

When fishermen have secured a catch they return to Nassau where sponges are dried out and placed on sale at an auction similar to a southern tobacco auction in the United States. Actual drying process is shown above. Sponges are buried under weeds and straw to dry out in the sun.

Since the unique sponge can be classed neither with the "metazoa" or the "protozoa" many zoologists place it in a special subkingdom known as porifera. Sponges may range in size from a pin's head to masses several feet high, and vary in weight from a grain to more than 100 pounds.

Valuable Pennies

If the burglars who stole 2,500 cents from a liquor store at Wheatland, Wyo., looked through them carefully they found one or two worth a lot more than their face value. Henry Sommer, the store owner, said some of the pennies were of issues valuable to collectors.

Cars 40 Years Old in Parade Cars nearly 40 years old clanked along in an automobile parade in Dublin, Ireland, recently.

Lucky Referees

The Italian government has published a decree granting referees "police powers." It appoints them "public officers." They may arrest any spectator for (1) using improper language; (2) making vulgar gestures; (3) throwing things.

U. S. Shoes Sold

Puerto Rico buys more American-made shoes than all foreign countries combined, purchasing about 3,000,000 pairs a year.

SLEEPING SICKNESS PRECAUTION URGED

Two Doses Immunize Horses For 8 Months.

Horses treated with two doses of chick embryo vaccine to prevent sleeping sickness are immune to the disease for a period of at least eight months, it is indicated by immunity tests being conducted by the division of animal pathology and hygiene, college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

Further tests on immunity will be conducted at the agricultural college to keep veterinarians and live stock owners informed with reference to the period of immunity established by the vaccine.

In the meantime, it is suggested that all good horses be immunized immediately with two doses of chick embryo vaccine to avoid losses which were reported in 85 different counties last year.

Horses that had the disease and recovered last year and horses that were vaccinated should be revaccinated, it is recommended by staff members of the division of animal pathology and hygiene.

It is hoped that tests under way at the college of agriculture will determine if horses are immune longer than eight months.

Suspicious clinical cases of sleeping sickness in horses have been reported from different sections of the state. However, tests of materials submitted to the laboratory of animal pathology and hygiene have as yet failed to yield the virus of the disease.

Mulching Commendable For Soil Conservation

In order to preserve its strength, soil must be protected with some kind of covering to prevent rains from washing away the finer particles. In the opinion of Russell E. Underwood, extension soil conservationist at the New Jersey college of agriculture, Rutgers university, the use of mulch is valuable in this respect, especially where specialized crops prohibit the use of soil-conserving rotations.

"When specialized crops are grown on sloping land and clean cultivation is practiced to control weeds and check evaporation of soil moisture, the soil is exposed and very vulnerable to dashing rains," Mr. Underwood explains.

"Mulch should be applied in strips across the slope so as to cover from one-half to two-thirds of the land area. This applies to mulch grown on available adjacent land. Frequently, however, the mulch crop could be grown and not harvested but allowed to remain on the land for protection against erosion. Oats, barley and sudan grass planted in late summer will make fairly good growth before being killed by winter frosts. Such material offers good protection against winter erosion and has the advantage of being anchored to the soil so that it is not washed or blown away."

Nature Toes the Mark In Control Laboratory

Night or day, sunlight or darkness, temperature control within a fraction of a degree, and plant-life that can be "put to work or put to bed at will," all are under the control of scientists in a specially-designed chamber at the New York state college of agriculture.

The exactness of control is probably the greatest yet achieved in any laboratory, and the aim is to unravel the mystery of plant "vigor," the quality that makes any one stock superior to others, either in yield, disease-resistance, or in other ways.

In plant breeding, it is known that when two inbred or purebred strains are crossed, the result (a hybrid) may be astonishingly better than the parent stock. This is referred to as "hybrid vigor." Why and how this happens are subjects of study by plant physiologists.

Farm Topics

One of the best ways to cut the cost of growing heifers is to provide improved pastures.

Records kept by dairy herd improvement associations increase the sales value of good grade and purebred animals.

Horses of good draft type, fine quality and energetic, kindly dispositions do the most work, endure heat well, and sell for highest prices.

Shifts to high analysis fertilizers are creating a need for more exact labeling, including the content of the secondary elements in the mixtures, say U. S. department of agriculture chemists.

The practice of fertilizing land with phosphorus bearing material is older than written records. The first acid phosphate fertilizer was made in 1842 by John Lawes, an Englishman who treated bones with sulfuric acid to make the phosphorus more readily available to plants.

The use of such meat substitutes as egg and fish dishes, as well as beans, etc., will cut down the expense of meat in the diet, according to Miss May E. Foley, nutrition specialist at Massachusetts State college.

The city worker depends on agriculture as a market. From him, the farmer buys machinery, fertilizer, fuel, building supplies, petroleum products, household equipment, clothing, and a hundred other articles which are factory products.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Make a pattern for chintz-covered lamp shades.

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I have a pair of lamps for my dressing table, and I would like to use some of my curtain material to cover plain shades. Can you tell me how this is done? C. H."

Here is a method that is shown for a living room lamp in Book 1. It may be used for a shade of any size. You will need the top and bottom rings from an old lamp shade. A cardboard foundation is cut to fit these, and the chintz or other fabric is pasted to the edge of this.

The AB line in the pattern diagram is as long as the diameter of the bottom ring. The dotted vertical line is approximately as long as the depth of the shade. The CD line is as long as the diameter of the top ring. Draw the diagonal lines to touch the ends of the AB and CD lines. Place a tack where they meet at E. Place a pencil through a loop in a string, as shown, and draw the bottom line of the shade making it as long as the measurement around the bottom ring plus a half inch. Shorten the string and draw the top to fit the top ring allowing for a half inch lay.

NOTE: Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, and No. 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries, are now 15 cents each, or both books for 25 cents. Readers who have not secured their copies of these two books should send in their orders at once, as no more copies will be available, when the present stock is sold. Your choice of the QUILT LEAFLET showing 36 authentic patchwork stitches; or the RAGRUG LEAFLET, will be included with orders for both books for the present, but the offer may be withdrawn at any time. Leaflets are 6 cents each when ordered without the books.

Everyone should have copies of these two books containing 96 How to Sew articles by Mrs. Spears. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Removing Finger Marks.—Sweet oil will remove finger marks from varnished furniture.

Handy Duster.—The duster with a long handle is a convenience for the housewife who has a bad back.

Pink Mayonnaise.—Mayonnaise can be given a decorative pink by the addition of tomato catsup or cooked tomatoes.

Stippling Linoleum.—If your linoleum is showing signs of growing old, try painting and stippling it. First remove wax and grease. Then use a good floor enamel or paint, put on two coats, and stipple. A plain color shows footprints too easily.

WHY BE SATISFIED WITH ORDINARY CORN FLAKES FLAVORED THE ORDINARY WAY

Let's go to town - at home!

NO TELLING what tomorrow's weather may be. It fools the best fore-caster. But we do want chintz for the windows. We do need a carpet sweeper, a new percolator, and a new end-table in the living-room. And we don't want to slosh around rainy streets to hunt them. Problem: How to thwart the weather man. Simple enough! Let's sit down by the fireplace and read the advertisements. Here it's comfortable and snug. We'll take the newspaper page by page, compare prices, qualities, brand-names. Tomorrow, rain or shine, we'll head for the store that has what we want, and be home again in a jiffy.

1939 Ford V-8 Coupe, with 60-horsepower engine delivered at $584, taxes extra.

V-8 ENGINES—Your choice. 85 hp. for extra performance. 60 hp. for extra economy.

HYDRAULIC BRAKES—Smooth, fast, easy-acting. Built to strict Ford standards of safety.

TRIPLE-CUSHIONED COMFORT—Softer seats, flexible springs, four big hydraulic shock absorbers.

SCIENTIFIC SOUNDPROOFING—Noise reduced, vibration reduced by careful research.

THERE are good reasons why so many folks are talking about the 1939 Ford V-8!

One obvious reason is the fact that it provides so much car for so little money. Actually, it costs less than a Ford car of the same size and power sold for last year! And its low price includes many items of desirable equipment.

The Ford V-8 has all the room and all the basic features of the De Luxe Ford. Some of them are listed at the left!

But riding is better than reading. Out on the road, you'll soon understand America's enthusiasm for the car that is big in everything but price!

The old age horizon has been made falsely bright of late by sparkling "pension plans" which make the future glow like an Aurora Borealis display.

But how many of these plans will ever get down to earth to benefit you? One thing seems certain: Hard-working citizens would never approve any scheme that would force them to carry on their necks all persons who reach a specified birthday. There would be too many undeserving in with the deservings.

With so much theory in the air, a growing bank account during productive years still seems to offer the best "pension plan" for the average man or woman.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

G. O. P. Centers on Vandenberg Despite Tom Dewey's Showing In Popular Opinion Samplings

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

POLITICS: G. O. P. Shift

As recently as one year ago politicians feared such highly successful public opinion samplings as the Gallup poll might make party nomination conventions needless. Example: New York's racket-busting District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey is No. 1 popular candidate for the Republican presidential nomination next year.

But popular opinion is one thing and common sense another. Astute Republicans know Tom Dewey has no administrative record, know also that he might be elected and still prove a failure, thus destroying the party's chances in 1944.

H. STYLES BRIDGES No 'H' in campaign literature.

but another Michigan product, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg. Reasoning: Most conservative politicians favor him and most G. O. P. editorial support falls in his direction.

What such seems have not considered is that 1936 found Gallup polls, Fortune polls and several other samplings much less fallible than U. S. editorial opinion, which the public rejected to elect a Democratic President.

But since 1936 the public has followed a newspaper-inspired trend toward conservatism, which probably makes today's editorial opinion less erratic.

Biggest Vandenberg asset in winning both G. O. P. and Democratic votes is his middle-of-the-road record and a reputation for working harmoniously with both friends and enemies. In May he led a victorious fight against the Florida canal project in which he was supported by 22 Republican and 23 Democratic senators.

Other G. O. P. boomlets: Bridges. In 1936 New Hampshire's ex-governor and present senator, H. Styles Bridges, missed the vice presidential nomination with Alfred M. Landon simply because strategists thought a Landon-Bridges combination sounded too much like "London Bridge is falling down." This month thousands of booklets captioned: "For President in 1940—Styles Bridges" are being distributed in his behalf by a New Hampshire organization. Noticeably absent from campaign literature is the first initial H., a concession to diplomacy.

Martin. House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. was judged most popular congressman last winter by newspaper correspondents and has now become vice presidential possibility. Since he would rather be speaker of the house next session than vice president (provided the election goes Republican), Joe Martin is busily fighting off boosters like Illinois' Rep. Leo E. Allen, who predicts that the man who managed Alf Landon's nomination fight at the 1936 convention will find a lot of friends awaiting him at next year's gathering.

AGRICULTURE: Good or Bad?

Until Judgment day men will probably use the year 1929 as a basis for comparing economic conditions. This year, 10 summers after the stock market reached its peak, a decade's experience led Standard Statistics company to probe the U. S. farmer's status. General conclusion is that it almost parallels 1929's, though conditions themselves differ as night from day. Today's "prosperity" has a different basis.

Retail sales, always a good index, seem to be up. But biggest increases are shown not by independent local merchants but by mail order houses, which may indicate no return of prosperity but simply a swing to mail order buying. Less important, but significant in the mail order increase, is decentralization of industry.

Offsetting a possibly dull picture is a drastic shift in farm expenditures. Though cash income for 1939's first four months was only 73 per cent of 1929, the farmer's essential purchases cost substantially less. In the past 10 years mortgage charges dropped 26 per cent; interest charges, 35 per cent; hired hands and expenditure for labor has dropped; taxes in 1937 were 33 per cent less than 1929. Result: Overhead and operating costs are down and a larger portion of farm income is available for buying industry's products. But if this increased portion goes exclusively to mail-order houses and not to local merchants, observers wondered how permanent prosperity could reach the rural U. S.

WHITE HOUSE: Initials

Hint to uninformed newspaper readers: Added this month to Washington's alphabetical agencies are FWA, FLA and FSA—Federal Works, Federal Loan and Federal Security agencies. Another change: Though WPA retains its battle-scarred initials, it must now be called Works Projects administration, not Works Progress administration.

BELGIUM: Isolation

In 1914 German troops marched to France via Belgium, meeting little resistance en route. In 1939 a Reich war machine would be stopped on Belgium's frontier, thanks to a fortification system far out of proportion to the little kingdom's size. But Belgium has not cast her lot with France and Britain, has instead followed King Leopold's pronouncement of 1936 when Belgium declared herself free from all former obligations with these nations. Significantly, no French or British general can today examine King Leopold's defenses.

Last month France's General Chauvineau protested, declaring a French-Belgian defensive formation was the best for all concerned. A few weeks later France got her answer in Brussels' newspaper, Derniere Heures. The Belgian stand:

If Germany respects Belgium's independence in a general war, all will be well, although France's line of defense would be shortened by 155 miles. But if Germany again penetrates Belgium, France would possibly evade a German attack on its northern frontier and might not aid Belgium as immediately as it did in 1914. If past experience is any indication, France might even squeeze out of a war via the time-tested appeasement route.

KING LEOPOLD He prefers to be friendly, foeless.

Meanwhile the Belgians have good reason to rush their fortifications. Knowing a German drive would hold France as its ultimate goal, shrewd King Leopold also knows the Reich might avoid a conflict with him if there is a good chance it would delay the attack on France.

UP—Increased world consumption of U. S. cotton is expected by the agriculture department on basis of current sales. For the year ending August 1, consumption is estimated at 11,250,000 bales compared with 10,900,000 bales last year.

RETURN—Lord Beaverbrook's London Evening Standard predicts a return to England this fall of the duke and duchess of Windsor.

OIL—T. G. Delbridge of Philadelphia, president of the American society for testing materials, estimates the U. S. has ample petroleum supplies for 150 years.

These windbreak plantings, some of which are now between 30 and 35 feet high, also are enabling plains farmers to grow such fruit as strawberries, which with moisture thrive in the lee of the trees, but do not do so well in unprotected soil.

INTERNATIONAL: Armaments

What constitutes absolute "neutrality" in wartime has never made itself quite clear. Superficial neutrality under the U. S. law bans sale of arms and munitions—"lethal weapons"—yet under the amendment of Ohio's Rep. John M. Voyrs such indispensable war-making equipment as trucks and commercial airplanes may be sent abroad.

But U. S. participation in dictator rearmament is only part of the picture. Though France has just banned shipment of scrap iron to Germany, though Britain's new ministry of supply will have the right to ban such shipments, profit-consious democracies and dictatorships have no moral compunctions about such things; scrap iron or any other material of Mars is sold abroad to the highest bidder until domestic rearmament demands that it be kept at home. Samples: Last month Britain's liberal Lord Davies told how scrap iron and steel exports from the United Kingdom to the Reich rose from 4,500 tons in July, 1938, to 17,000 tons in August, 21,000 tons in September (month of the Munich crisis) and 23,000 tons in December.

France gave Germany 350 tons of pig iron last August when the Czech crisis was just rising, gave her 19,000 tons in September when the crisis was at its peak, and 75,000 tons in November.

Still more revealing are Germany's 1938 foreign trade statistics, showing that 1,059,800 tons of Germany's total 1,146,027 tons of 1938 scrap iron came from Belgium, Luxembourg, France, Great Britain, Holland and the U. S., all potential enemies. In March, 1939, the same countries contributed 161,344 tons, which would make 1,936,128 tons if the same import level were maintained throughout the year. From the U. S. in 1938 came 462,782 tons; in March, 1939, came 20,175 tons.

Other import figures for Germany:

Table with columns for Iron Ore (tons), Copper (tons), Manganese Ore (tons), Nickel Ore (tons) and various countries with their respective amounts.

CONGRESS: Going Up

In 1878 an economy-bent Forty-fourth congress appropriated $291,220,000. In 1909 the government's expenditures first topped the billion-dollar mark; 1918's war crisis brought it to 18 billion; 1919 made it 27 billion. Never since then have U. S. expenditures dropped much below the four-billion mark and last year came to a peacetime record of 11 billion. By mid-July, with most appropriations (but little else) out of the road, the Seventy-sixth congress had managed to set a new record of about $13,110,000,000.

Beyond its control were such costs as mounting old age pension reserve and the railroad retirement plan. Cropping up from the past, too, was an item of $3,624,812,065 for interest on the $40,000,000,000 national debt. Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini were held responsible for almost two billion of it, but not even President Roosevelt would acknowledge the $338,000,000 which an election-conscious senate tacked to the agriculture department's appropriation bill for parity payments and disposal of surplus commodities.

Table titled 'Independent agencies' listing various departments and their budgets, such as Agriculture, Interior, Treasury, War, Navy, etc.

Air Record 469 M. P. H. The world's absolute air speed record was broken twice recently in quick succession. Up to last March the record stood at 441 miles per hour and was held by the Italian Gelo.

Ancient Loom A loom demonstrated at the Saint John, N. B., exhibition this year and owned by Mrs. C. H. Clarke, Ottawa, was shown at Sussex in 1861 at the first exhibition to be held in New Brunswick.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK.—As Andre Maurais becomes an "immortal," it would seem that there ought to be honorable mention, or at least a simple garland of some kind, for M. Maurais. Here a few weeks ago, he explained how his wife, also a person of distinction, learned typing and stenography to keep his script flowing smoothly and legibly to the publishers. He writes only in long-hand, said to be quite as cramped and illegible as that of Horace Greeley, and she alone of all mortals can translate it. Sent No. 35 in the French academy might still be vacant but for M. Maurais.

He was born Emile Herzog, in Rouer. His literary divagation was the first short-cut to immortality in a line of ancestral woolen drapers reaching back to the year 909 A. D. He was a bachelor of arts at 15 and a doctor of philosophy at 18. He began work in his father's factory, but got right on the job as a philosopher and litterateur, so when he was assigned to the British as an interpreter in the World War, he could fill them in on Byron, Shelley and Keats, and did so. Later he explained Disraeli to the English, and, around the clubs, they bit their pipe-stems and admitted that this French chap knew a lot of things they hadn't even suspected. "Ariel, the Life of Shelley" put him in the big literary tournament in 1923, where he has been ever since.

He is slight in stature, dapper and fastidious, with his thinning gray hair deployed carefully left and right, gesturing only cautiously with the sensitive hands of an artist. He has an acute, skeptical mind, interested in politics only in its historic sweep. He weighs words like an apothecary and it is as a craftsman and finished workman that he qualifies for the academy. With keen insight, he has expiencd America on his numerous visits here, clocking us through the valley of despond. His latest appraisal found us moving out of national adolescence into fully rational, adult stateshood. He hopes for the best, but is not a fuzzy optimist. The "decline of the humane ideal," he thinks, is the most disquieting trend of the modern world.

Trade Brings About Some Strange Combinations While Mr. Roosevelt's argument was as full of holes as a sieve, it strikes me that it probably was less to be condemned than the action of some of the members of the senate in the same series of controversies.

The strangest of combinations among the politicians evolved from a trade between the Republicans and the portion of the majority in the senate that I have referred, Senators from silver-producing states, some Democrats, some New Dealers, and the Republicans made a deal—a very polite description of the transaction. It worked out so that the silverite senators gave their votes to the Republicans who were seeking to take away Mr. Roosevelt's "emergency" power to change the value of the dollar. The Republicans also wanted to put an end to the administration's purchase of silver produced outside of the United States.

In return for the silverite votes on these issues, the Republicans gave the silverites their votes to increase the price paid for silver mined in this country. The Republicans gave the silver producers an additional subsidy of about 13 cents an ounce, or agreed to stand for that much.

It was a rotten combination, a trade that smells. I have long argued that silver purchase at prices above the market was typical of a great deal of the theory that dominates current administration policies, but that senate combination on the basis which we know cannot justify, nor be justified by, the desire to correct unsound policies.

There was an old demagogue in the senate some years ago who said, in a flight of oratory, that "it is sometimes necessary to rise above principle for the party's sake." His soul ought to rest in peace, forever, because his goal was more than achieved by what the political trade among the senators and by the type of argument Mr. Roosevelt made in demanding retention of his "emergency" powers over money.

No Attack Made by Anyone Upon Stabilization Fund

While Mr. Roosevelt was only temporarily defeated in his program for control of the money of the country, it might be well to review the shallow argument he put up as the reasons why the "emergency" powers should be continued. He said, for example, that taking away his control of the dollar and the right to subsidize silver was like laying up half of the navy's ships in the navy yards. I do not follow that analogy, so I will forget about that one. The other argument was that withdrawal of the power to devalue the currency again in the hands of the Wall Street gamblers. Mr. Roosevelt said they would speculate in currencies and that there would be trade wars again. It was the same old story: When you have no other goat, jump on Wall Street.

But it is well just here to point out one phase of the situation that resulted largely from the stubbornness of the President. Throughout the battle with the senate over the so-called monetary bill, there never was an attack by anybody upon the

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—It has been often said that politics makes strange bedfellows. It does that many times. Seldom, if ever, however, has there been more unfamiliar faces extending beyond the same bed linen as occurred recently in congress. The political bed served as a temporary resting place for most of the Republicans; a flock of anti-administration Democrats and sizable collection of "yes" men from the New Deal camp. It was such a ludicrous combination that my memory harkened back to the legend of the Kansas wheat fields where it has been said that owls, prairie dogs and rattle snakes nest together below ground.

Two great national policies, breast fed and clothed by the New Deal, were the issues that brought about the strange alignment of politicians. One question was whether President Roosevelt should be allowed to keep his "emergency" power to tinker with the currency and to buy silver, both domestic and foreign, at prices that provided a subsidy for silver producers. The other question involved this nation's position in its relations with other powers—commonly referred to as "neutrality" legislation.

It ought to be noted, in passing, that the queer and somewhat humorous combination of conservative and radical political warriors delivered a series of upercuts to the point of Mr. Roosevelt's political chin. They did it several times. Mr. Roosevelt did not like it. He squawked about the obstructionist tactics, which was what they were. But his shrill cry about the tactics was predicated upon argument quite as silly as the political alignment which brought about the temporary defeat.

Trade Brings About Some Strange Combinations

While Mr. Roosevelt's argument was as full of holes as a sieve, it strikes me that it probably was less to be condemned than the action of some of the members of the senate in the same series of controversies.

The strangest of combinations among the politicians evolved from a trade between the Republicans and the portion of the majority in the senate that I have referred, Senators from silver-producing states, some Democrats, some New Dealers, and the Republicans made a deal—a very polite description of the transaction. It worked out so that the silverite senators gave their votes to the Republicans who were seeking to take away Mr. Roosevelt's "emergency" power to change the value of the dollar. The Republicans also wanted to put an end to the administration's purchase of silver produced outside of the United States.

In return for the silverite votes on these issues, the Republicans gave the silverites their votes to increase the price paid for silver mined in this country. The Republicans gave the silver producers an additional subsidy of about 13 cents an ounce, or agreed to stand for that much.

It was a rotten combination, a trade that smells. I have long argued that silver purchase at prices above the market was typical of a great deal of the theory that dominates current administration policies, but that senate combination on the basis which we know cannot justify, nor be justified by, the desire to correct unsound policies.

There was an old demagogue in the senate some years ago who said, in a flight of oratory, that "it is sometimes necessary to rise above principle for the party's sake." His soul ought to rest in peace, forever, because his goal was more than achieved by what the political trade among the senators and by the type of argument Mr. Roosevelt made in demanding retention of his "emergency" powers over money.

No Attack Made by Anyone Upon Stabilization Fund

While Mr. Roosevelt was only temporarily defeated in his program for control of the money of the country, it might be well to review the shallow argument he put up as the reasons why the "emergency" powers should be continued. He said, for example, that taking away his control of the dollar and the right to subsidize silver was like laying up half of the navy's ships in the navy yards. I do not follow that analogy, so I will forget about that one. The other argument was that withdrawal of the power to devalue the currency again in the hands of the Wall Street gamblers. Mr. Roosevelt said they would speculate in currencies and that there would be trade wars again. It was the same old story: When you have no other goat, jump on Wall Street.

But it is well just here to point out one phase of the situation that resulted largely from the stubbornness of the President. Throughout the battle with the senate over the so-called monetary bill, there never was an attack by anybody upon the stabilization fund, also an emergency proposition. There is $2,000,000,000 in that fund and it is managed by the treasury which seeks, by purchase or sale of foreign currencies, to maintain some even relationship between American and foreign money. It has worked well. It will be continued, without a doubt, and it constructive millions of dollars of unneeded and useless silver that has been purchased by subsidy payments. The stabilization fund is the thing that prevents Wall Street speculation in currencies, not the President's power to devalue the dollar. But because Mr. Roosevelt insisted on all of the powers being continued beyond June 30, of this year, the whole thing went smash. Thus was the strange new legislation to get even the god parts of the program.

Roosevelt Takes Command Of Situation; Program Flips

Mention ought to be made of how the whole program crashed, and was tossed out. When the Republicans and the Democrats and New Dealers from silver states made their deal, it appeared that Mr. Roosevelt would be satisfied to continue to buy silver from American producers and to operate the stabilization fund. But he wasn't. He rushed to Washington from his Hyde Park, N. Y., estate and took command. The bill which the senate had subjected to emasculation under the strange-bed-fellow combination originated in the house. It has to be sent back to the house, therefore, to have the amendments considered. That meant a conference between special delegations from the house and the senate, and here was the end. Mr. Roosevelt got busy. He directed the house delegation to refuse the senate amendments, and the senate conference delegation, being headed up by Majority Leader Barkley, another equally fervent New Dealer, Senator Wagner of New York, and a sometimes New Dealer, Byrnes of South Carolina, yielded to the demands of the administration.

That circumstance is not unusual in legislative affairs. But it was thought the senate coalition of Republicans and silverite senators would be able to force some sort of a compromise. That did not happen. All of the senators who had sold their votes for a higher price for silver turned tail and ran. They left the Republicans holding the bag. Which would have been very bad for the Republicans, except that all of this happened during the day of June 30, and the powers involved were to expire at midnight, that night, by limitation in the law itself.

The Republicans were pretty sore about the situation. They had the element of time on their side, however, and so they engaged in "legitimate discussion" of the amendments, of the perfidy of the silverite senators, of Mr. Roosevelt's reasons and other things, until after the witching hour of midnight. The whole thing ended on a sour note.

Voting Usually Reflects Sentiment of the People

So the circumstances as we have seen fall to do credit either to the president, or the senate Republicans or the senate New Dealers. It was a pretty low grade of politics, but it disclosed one thing: there is rather large representation in the house and the senate which has lagging confidence in Mr. Roosevelt. Now, pursuing that further, I have noted the usual voting of house and senate rather reflects the sentiment throughout the country.

I think this lack of confidence in Mr. Roosevelt is further shown by the long drawn-out battle over what powers the President should have in dealing with international problems. Mr. Roosevelt has asked for rights that would let him designate "war zones," and would permit him to order Americans away from them. He has sought to obtain legislative authority to sell arms and munitions if they are sold for cash and carried away from our shores by boats of the purchasing nation.

Some of the things he has sought seem to me to be reasonable, but the house has not thought so, and I expect the senate will have many words to say about them also. There is so much stalling and maneuvering and efforts to save political faces that certain conclusions are inescapable. I referred to the lack of confidence in Mr. Roosevelt displayed in several ways. It is perhaps more manifest with respect to the neutrality question than in any other way. Indeed, it has been gossiped around Capitol hallways for a couple of months that congress will not adjourn as long as international crises are popping around like firecrackers. That, of course, is an exaggeration; but it is not exaggeration to say that a considerable number of senators and representatives do not want to leave Mr. Roosevelt an entirely free hand in international dealing.

Jams, Jellies—Byproducts Of Plains Tree Plantings The 11,000 miles of farm tree plantings in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas put in by the Forest Service since 1935, are yielding jams and jellies for the housewife. Among the shrubs in the outer rows of many of the plantings—to keep the wind beyond the seedling stage—are the wild plum, the chokeberry, and the mulberry. These bushes often grow fruit suitable for human food. Plains housewives this year report, according to foresters in the region, that there will be a record preserving of plum jam and choke-cherry jelly. These windbreak plantings, some of which are now between 30 and 35 feet high, also are enabling plains farmers to grow such fruit as strawberries, which with moisture thrive in the lee of the trees, but do not do so well in unprotected soil.

Air Record 469 M. P. H. The world's absolute air speed record was broken twice recently in quick succession. Up to last March the record stood at 441 miles per hour and was held by the Italian Gelo. In March last this record was broken by Captain Dietrich of the German air force who flew a Heinkel pursuit plane at the speed of 464.3 miles per hour. Later this record in turn was broken by Fritz Wendel who went 469 miles per hour.

"And having you girls make a son and dance of it," Kelsey broke in. "More her stuff. No, thanks! I've had enough of that."
"I get you, pal," said the beauty-girl.
"I get him, too," asserted Marne. "He did it just to put me—to put us in wrong."
"I did not."
"Can't you see him being consciously noble in his secret soul—"
"I was not," wrathfully denied the accused.
"And when everything was set he was going to spring it on us and take the camera. Show-boy!" concluded Marne with lively scorn.
"Ah, have a heart, kid!" Gloria adured her.
"And over what?" pursued the girl. Deep within herself she was feeling mean and small and unfair, and as this was all Kelsey Hare's fault, she was coldly furious at him.
"Nothing but common, everyday honesty."
"That's the first sensible thing you've said," snapped Kelsey. "When do I break into this brawl?" inquired Martin. "After all, I've got an interest in it. See here, Kelse; why didn't you let me know?"

"After the way you jumped down his throat, right at the start?" said Gloria. "I wouldn't have, either."
"I was pretty sick of the whole thing," confessed Kelsey. "I didn't want to talk about it. And I don't want to talk about it now, if he appended with rising annoyance. 'This conference wasn't my idea. Who got me down here, anyway?' he finished with a poisoned look at Marne."

"Well, that's that," observed Martin uncomfortably. "I've been wrong before, but never quite one hundred per cent wrong, so far as I recall. What am I supposed to do now?"

"Kiss him and say you're sorry," suggested Gloria. "If you don't, I will."

"How'd it be if I kissed you and let Marne—"

"Nothing doing," interposed that haughty young person.

"—say she was sorry?"

"Do your own apologizing. It's mostly his own fault, anyway."

"See here, Kelse. I don't see how I can take that money."

"Oh, my gosh!" burst out the infuriated Marne. "Both of you, now! Going noble on each other at one and the same time. Good-by!" She ran out, her hands pressed over her ears, and the concussion of the closing door testified to the outrage upon her feelings.

"Sweet cheese'n crackers! Is that a sore baby!" remarked Gloria, gazing after her departed friend.

"I hope the poor little thing has a good cry," minced Kelsey. "It's all right, Mart. Don't worry about the money. I've made a nice profit on the deal. There's the rent; I've pocketed that. And you may have noticed that I'm not depositing the salary drawn by Templeton Sayles, Esq. to anybody's account but my own. Besides—" He threw out his arms and expanded his chest, "it's worth a million to be able to chuck that alias."

Gloria bestowed upon him a look of commiseration. "Tough luck, boy," she murmured.

"What's tough luck?"

"Are you a sport or aren't you, Tempy, old lad?"

"I'm not. Not any longer. I've been all the sport I can stand. And don't call me Tempy. That's out."

"So are we if you quit on us, Marne. Moby. Me. Hail, Caesar; they who still need the money salute you!"

"I can't help it," he cried desperately. "If I have to keep on being Templeton Sayles and letting myself be gazed by that little spit of a Van Stratten girl, I'll crack. Everything is squared, and I'm for the open road."

"Just give us one chance," pleaded Gloria. "Wait till we hear from A. Leon Snyderacker again." Sensing his continued resistance she retired within herself for thought, and emerged with her final argument.

"Look here, boys; I'm going to tell you something. You think you're having a rough time. Let me tell you, you're a bluebird on a telegraph wire compared to Marne. She's the one that's on a spot."

"So she ought to be," grunted Kelsey. Involuntarily he asked: "Why? What's her trouble?"

"Stalling off A. Leon Snyderacker, President of Purity Pictures, Inc., and the human pay envelope for one and all."

"Stalling off, eh?" He laughed. "That's your idea of it, is it?"

Gloria shot a sharp glance at him. "What's the matter with you, Big Boy? You haven't got Marne wrong, have you?"

"I have not."

"I wouldn't be so sure you haven't, at that. What you don't maybe get is that she's playing it through for her job and ours."

"Too bad she has to work so hard for the money, isn't it?"

"Sa-a-ay! Go and get your temper massaged. What are you holding back on me, anyway?"

"Nothing," he replied airily.

"Oh, all right! Carry your own load. All I'm asking of you is to stick it out a little longer and back up Marne. You know, she really is kinda sweet on this job. It's got under her skin. And she isn't too bad, at that. If the picture flops, it won't be her fault."

"I know what you mean," growled Kelsey. "I never pretended to be an actor, did I? My specialty is being a goat."

The beauty-girl walked over and hooked an arm into his. "You're up in that part all right. And don't think for a minute, that we don't know how swell you've been about all this."

"Marne, too," answered the other with her shrewd smile. "But, gee! how she'd hate to show it! However, there are some things you've got to work out for yourself. I can't stoke for you with Marne." She threw open the door and shouted up the stair-well, "Hey, kid! Are you going to soldier on this job, or what?"

Marne appeared, sniffing suspiciously. "There's still a slight taint of nobility in the air," she said. "Do you think you can put a muffer on Sidney Carver if I come in?"

"Now, you behave yourself," returned her friend severely. "Or, first thing you know, I'll smack you one. And I want you to lay off Temp—Kelsey. He's one swell guy."

"And does he know it?" said the incorrigible Marne.

"They resumed their packing. The process was interrupted by the advent of Glunk who came to Marne, battered, scarified, and smeared with mud and shale offering sundry abrasions to be bandaged."

"What have you been up to, Glunk?" queried his master. "You look as if you'd been trying to climb the cliff, eh? What for?"

Glunk said something ending in what sounded like an expletive. "He wanted to inspect the Becker's Creek dam," interpreted Martin.

"Urgek," assented Glunk. "No good. Bad."

"The bridge seemed to be worrying him, too," Martin added.

"It's worth a million to be able to chuck that alias."

"Well, I'll give the water about one more yard to rise, and then it'll be time to be thinking of leaving. So I think I'll just take a run to town and see if I can persuade a truck to come for our things in the morning."

"Also we're short on provisions," stated Gloria. "I'll go along."

Left alone in the house with Kelsey, Marne completed her packing. Then what to do? She was wearied and nervous from the devilish insistence of the rain. And for once in her poised and self-confident life she felt awkward. Her resentment against the quondam Templeton Sayles, partly a hold-over, had become an instinctive defense against a subtly invading sense of having been stupidly in the wrong.

She went down to the study. Kelsey rose, drew up a chair for her, asked if he could do anything further, and resumed his reading. Silence. It reached the point of annoyance for Marne. Well, direct methods were best. She made her attack.

"Sore?"

"No."

She waited. That was all. After an appropriate interval she tried again. "You're not over-conversational."

"I've lost the habit through lack of practice," he grinned.

Marne gloomed out of the window. "They're taking a long time."

"The roads are awful."

"Well, we can't sit here forever like a couple of lumps," she fretted. "Do you know how to play rummy?"

"I am probably," he asserted, "the best rummy player at present to be found within the limits of Cuyoga County."

"Says you! Still in the character of Templeton Sayles. You'll have to prove it to me."

The pair, thus left to their own devices, resumed their game. Marne lost a dollar more.

"No wonder you broke the bank at Monte Carlo. Isn't it awfully stuffy in here?"

He opened a window. "The rain's let up."

"And the wind's gone down. It's weirder than ever. Why don't they come?"

Rush was silence except for the rise of many waters. The building vibrated softly, deeply to the thrill of the current. Kelsey wandered over to the fireplace. Marne sat, lax and dispirited. He was about to suggest a continuance of their game when her head went up.

"We can't sit here forever, just disliking each other."

"Disliking?" he repeated with a smile which she considered one of the most disagreeable that ever disfigured an otherwise presentable countenance.

"Well, whatever you want to call it, I'm sick of it."

"Any complaints?" he inquired with false mildness.

"Yes. You're always trying to put people in the wrong."

"I don't know that I tried very hard."

"Meaning that we were in the wrong already. Why couldn't you have been decently frank in the first place?"

"Frankness isn't exactly your own specialty, is it?"

"My life," Miss Van Stratten interposed with a fine affectation of primness and candor, "is an open book."

"Almost too open."

"I suppose that means something unpleasant."

"Not at all. I'm only agreeing with you."

Suddenly angry, he said: "Come on, Marne; this virtue stuff is all right for home consumption or before the camera—"

"But it doesn't go with you," she finished, in a peculiar tone.

"Not for a minute. Do you think I'm as dumb as all that?"

Catching fire from his anger, she demanded: "What business of yours is my virtue?"

"None at all, of course. Only—"

"Well, only?" she prompted.

"Only I was fool enough to let myself think I was in love with you."

"I am doing nicely! Leading Man Falls for Star. And then your

There seems to be a new cycle starting in the movies, one involving young actresses who hail from Ireland. If they have red hair and green eyes so have the better.

Let me refer you to Greer Garson as a starter. She was launched in this country in "Goodbye Mr. Chips," you know, and is a red haired, green eyed beauty. Geraldine Fitzgerald is another product of the Irish theaters. Maureen O'Hara, who arrived in this country with her mother recently, also with Charles Laughton, is the latest example. He felt that she should play "Esmeralda" when he does "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" for RKO.

She was born and brought up in Dublin, studied at the Abbey there's school, and did a few bits in British pictures before she appeared in his "Jamaica Inn."

As she was just 18 everyone was prepared to give her all the encouragement they could, since she'd be in the company of experienced players. But after the first few days they discovered that she didn't need it. In fact, they had to be on their toes to keep her from walking off with the picture.

Perhaps ambitious youngsters who want to land in pictures would do well to rush to Ireland, achieve red hair, and start in with the Abbey Players, if this cycle is to continue. The only difficulty would seem to be acquiring green eyes, and exceptional ability to act.

If you read that delightful novel, "Rebecca," which until recently led so many best-seller lists, you'll be interested to know that Laurence Olivier has been signed to play the role of the hero.

Although he is young, Olivier has had years of experience on the stage and in the movies, but until this year he never reached the heights. Now it seems as if everyone wants him for a new production. He is appearing on the New York stage in "No Time for Comedy," with Katherine Cornell, and you can see him giving an even better performance in "Withering Heights," opposite Marie Oberon, than he gives in the play. He'll be perfect for the part of "Max de Winter" in "Rebecca."

If a brand new squabble breaks out between two radio stars, don't be surprised, and don't take it seriously. There isn't a really good feud raging on the air now, and radio stars discovered long ago that feuds whip up interest in their programs.

The best one of all took place years ago between Rudy Vallee and Will Osborne, but that one was rather serious. Walter Winchell and Ben Barish started theirs on purpose, and kept it going for years. A certain press agent has been trying to start one of those serialized battles between Sammy Kaye and Kay Kyser, with the question of which one originated the idea of singing song titles as the bone of contention, but he is said to be the everlasting credit of Kyser and Kaye that they're too proud to fight.

Pat Friday, the 17-year-old co-ed from the University of California, who is singing on Bing Crosby's program this summer, will probably be a top-notch in movies and radio in a few years. Crosby heard her sing at an amateur night at a Beverly Hills restaurant, and recently she made her coast-to-coast debut on the air, under his direction. The telephone switchboard at the Hollywood NBC studios was promptly jammed with inquiries about her, and the following morning two movie companies offered her contracts. She turned them down; wants to work only in radio until she finishes her college course, two years from now.

ODDS AND ENDS—"One Man's Family" has again been named the best serial dramatic program on the air in the annual Radio Guide poll. . . . KEEP COOL WITH REFRIGERATOR MEALS
See Recipes Below.

Refrigerator Meals
It's a smart stunt to get meal preparation out of the way in the cool of the morning. Knowing that dinner's ready and practically waiting to be served helps you to look and feel cool, calm and collected, and it leaves you free for "vacationing" during the hot hours of the day.

Here's a menu that can be prepared in the morning, almost down to the last sprig of parsley, so that it will be ready to serve at the appointed dinner hour with only a little additional work.
Pineapple Upside Down Loaf
Tomatoes Stuffed With Macaroni
Buttered Fresh Peas
Minted Pear Salad
Hot Biscuits
Strawberry Fluff
Biscuits.
(Makes 12-14 Biscuits).

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
¾ cup shortening
¾ cup milk
Sift dry ingredients together and mix in shortening. Add liquid slowly. Turn dough onto lightly floured board, pat to ½-inch thickness, and cut in rounds. Place on greased cookie sheet. Brush biscuits with melted butter and store in refrigerator until 20 minutes before dinner. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) for 15-20 minutes.
Pineapple Upside Down Ham Loaf.
Sliced pineapple
Whole cloves
1 ½ pounds ham (ground)
¾ pound veal (ground)
1 green pepper (minced) ½ cup
1 cup rice (cooked)
2 tablespoons onion (minced)
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg (beaten)
¾ cup chili sauce or catsup
¾ cup water
Dot several slices of pineapple with whole cloves. Arrange in the bottom of a loaf pan.
Combine meat, green pepper, rice, onion and seasonings. Add egg, chili sauce (or catsup) and water. Shape into loaf, and bake at 375 degrees for one hour. Turn out onto platter. Serve hot or cold.

before dinner, cook in this same water. For variety, sprinkle finely chopped garden mint over peas before serving.

Minted Pear Salad.
1 package mint-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 cup cold water
¼ teaspoon salt
5 or 6 pear halves (canned)
Lettuce
Salad dressing.
Dissolve gelatin in boiling water, add cold water and salt. Let stand in refrigerator until cool. Dip pear halves in cold gelatin mixture and arrange in ring mold. Place in refrigerator until set, and fill the mold with the cooled gelatin mixture. Chill until firm. Serve on large platter with a small bowl of salad dressing and lettuce for garnish.

Strawberry Fluff.
And for dessert, combine whipped cream, sliced strawberries and marshmallows cut in quarters. Place in sherbets and chill for several hours or overnight.

Little Necessities Make Cheerful Guest Room
Summer guests will appreciate a cheerful guest room—one that has its own style furniture and not just miscellaneous discarded pieces. Essential as the bed itself are a chest of drawers for odds and ends, a smart vanity for the feminine visitor and a bedside lamp and table.
A chaise longue and some good books and magazines will help take care of those in between moments. Most important of all, for comfort's sake, are a good mattress and a good spring.

Logs for the Apartment
There are now fireplace logs suited to the apartment dweller. They are compressed under great pressure out of sawdust and shavings so that each log is bone dry, clean, uniform in size (4 by 12 ½ inches), and has no splinters. There is almost no storage problem, as each log burns for four hours, and a month's supply can easily fit into the closet along with the umbrella and galoshes. These logs give off a colored flame—blue, orange, purple or green—very much like fires made from driftwood.

Dining Bay Excludes Flies
If you want to eat outdoors in warm weather, but the flies make the meal a nuisance, how about adding a bay to your living or dining room? You can sit with windows on practically three sides of you, but by screening them, banish the annoying and unsanitary little insects.

Buttered Fresh Peas.

4-H CLUB MEMBERS SELL K. & S. FAIR TICKETS

Kent County 4-H Club members are busy making preparations for the annual Kent and Sussex Fair. Thirty-nine boys and girls are selling—what was previously called "calf club tickets." These tickets are good for three adult admissions or one adult admission may be used for two children's admission. The club members sell these on a percentage basis which makes the ticket advantageous to sellers—and purchaser as the purchaser gets three admissions for the price of two.

Those selling the tickets are: Charles Anderson, Frederica; Steve Bakota Harrington; Gordon Betts, Frederica; Ola Brittingham, Felton; Edith Bullock, Dover; Sara Carey, Harrington; Mary Collins, Farmington; Marguerite Collins, Farmington; Phyllis Coverdale, Magnolia; Donald Deputy, Milford; Raymond Dill, Felton; Dorothy Dittman, Woodside; Edward Dixon, Dover; Ralph Draper, Farmington; Joe Flannagan, Frederica; Elyvia Glenden, Wyoming; Madeline Hayes, Houston; Edward Hurd, Clayton; Vinal Kirby, Milford; Leonard Legates; Milford; Violet Long, Hartly; Donald Maloney, Milford; Tom Maloney, Milford; William Maloney, Milford; Avis Maul, Felton; Rosanna Messick, Houston; Jennie Morris, Frederica; Elizabeth Neeman, Felton; Carley Parsons, Farmington; Joe Penual, Milford; Lilian Pleasanton, Frederica; Laura Mae Rust, Farmington; Josephine Sapp, Houston; Nelson Steele, Clayton; Beatrice Thompson, Farmington; Virginia Ann Tull, Farmington; Dorothy Watson, Milford; Betty Lou Webb, Frederica; Betty Wooten, Milford.

On Thursday at the Fair at 10:00 the dairy demonstration teams will demonstrate various phases of producing clean milk. Two teams from Kent County are entered: Howard and Robert Deakyne of the Smyrna Wide-Awake Club and Leslie Pryor and Leslie Silpath of the Clayton Clodhoppers. The state winning team in this contest will attend the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass., in September.

Tuesday and Wednesday at the Fair will be busy days. The corn, potato poultry, and dairy judging contests will be held on Tuesday and canning, baking and clothing judging contests will be staged Wednesday.

ONLY SLOW-MOVING THING ABOUT OLDS!

RECORDS SHOW THAT OLDSMOBILE IS ONE OF THE EASIEST CARS ON GAS!

How's your gas mileage? Does the needle on your gauge seem to hurry from "Full" to "Empty"? If it does, you ought to own an Olds. For here's one car that steps right out—gives you pick-up, pep and brilliant action without penalizing your pocketbook. Olds is an economical car to drive, in every way. You pay a low price to begin with—you get good value when you trade it in. It saves you money every mile on gas and oil—saves on tires and maintenance, too. You can check these facts by talking with Oldsmobile owners. Or you can look at the record—Olds took first place in its class in 1939 in the famous Gilmore-Yosemite Economy Run, averaging 21.4 miles per gallon. Olds is a big car, a luxury car—built to quality standards through and through. Come in and see us today. Drive an Olds. You'll be amazed at the value a low price buys in Olds!

YOU'LL GET A BETTER DEAL FROM OLDSMOBILE!

The car you are driving will never be worth a dollar more than it is today. Why not trade it in while you can get top value, and enjoy all the advantages of a brand new Oldsmobile during the summer season? Come in and we will gladly make an appraisal without obligation on your part.

$777 AND UP

Delivered at Lansing, Mich. Prices include safety glass, bumpers, bumper guards, spare tire and tube. State and local taxes, if any, optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices subject to change without notice. General Motors Installment Plan.

Beauty Hints
By Jane Heath

HOT days—week days—play days are here. What's the news on summer make-up? "As little as possible," answer the beauty experts. "The idea is to look healthy and natural. Let your skin warm to the sun. Let your hair blow free. Discard rouge and powder if you like. But, even if you're rusticated back on the farm, you'll still accent two features—eyes and lips."

Eye brows should be kept groomed and free of stray hairs at all times. This is quickly done with the convenient tweezers with scissors handle, sketched above. Keep to the natural hairline and avoid any artificial look which is now definitely "dated."

Luxuriant lashes are another beauty aim which may be achieved, as you tend your garden, with care and cultivation. Kurlene, a fine eyelash dressing made of rich, natural oils, will do the trick. Applied with the tip of the finger or an eye beauty brush, it leaves the lashes silky and pliable.

And now comes the final touch, a wide starry-eyed effect, produced with a clever eyelash curler that trains lashes upward with no heat or cosmetics. In selecting a lip-stick, choose one with clear, warm blood tones, lighter than you've been using.

Accent your eyes and lips this summer, to look healthy and natural. But the wise girl will use just a bit of art to aid Nature.
