In 1935, he visited Herr Hitler and returned with warm reassurance to his countrymen. He reported great achievements by the Nazis and indicated high esteem for their fuehrer-as virtually all his political associates had done. He shared the shock and bewilderment of his confreres in the aftermath of Munich. He urged that no further concessions be made to Germany and that the Hitler onslaught should be met with an impregnable alliance against him. It was after Munich that he warned America against the ills with which it would be beset if Britain should succumb to a "Fascist attack." Though ambitious profiteers thought the President had left a loophole in neutrality by exempting Canada (which has not gone to war). Secretary of State Cordell Hull soon bashed this hope in the head. The U. S. might sell arms to Canada for transhipment to the allies, except for one sentence in the neutrality act: "It shall be unlawful to export . . . arms, ammunition or implements of war . . . to any neu-tral state for transhipment to, or for the use of, any . . . belligerent nation." Next question: How can this ruling be enforced?

THE WAR:

Speculation

As the War of 1939 got well underway, censorship's lid clamped itself over everything save the vague official communiques from London, Paris, Berlin and Warsaw. Conversely, the propaganda mills ground faster than ever. By adding to communiques and subtracting from propaganda, observers could ascertain a few things. The gist: France, Britain and Poland were in a tough spot.

The key to this problem lay somewhere in Poland. Defending troops rushed back to the Vistula and Bug to join whichever side he thinks will rivers (See Map) where they hoped win.

Aside from Poland's retreat, aside from German apathy on the western front, the War of 1939 followed tradition. On the propaganda front, Berlin issued a "white book" replying to Britain's "white paper," recounting pre-war Anglo-German relations and placing responsibility on England. Faced with continued merchant marine warfare, both France and Britain established import control systems to conserve foreign exchange and provide shipping space for war necessities.

Most vital, however, was the timetested plan whereby the United Kingdom hopes to starve Germany into submission. Thrown around western exits of the Baltic sea was the impregnable naval blockade which only Britain could muster. THE STORY THUS FAR

Young, pretty Jane Barnes, who lived with her brother, Baldwin, in Sherwood Park, near Washington, was not particularly impressed when she read that rich, attractive Edith Towne had been left at the altar by Delafield Simms, wealthy New Yorker. However, she still mused over it when she met Evans Follette, a young neighbor, whom the war had left completely discouraged and despondent. Evans had always loved Jane. That morning Baldwin Barnes, on his way to work in Washington, offered assistance to a tall, lovely girl in distress. Later he found a bag she had left in the car, containing a diamond ring on which was inscribed "Del to Edith—Forever." He knew then that his passenger had been Edith Towne. Already he was half in love with her. That night he discussed the matter with Jane, and they called her uncle, worldly, sophisticated Frederick Towne. He vis-story. CHAPTER IV—Continued

Mrs. Follette had, too, an admir-able courage. Her ambitions had been wrapped up in her son. What her father might have been, Evans was to be. They had scrimped and saved that he might go to college and study law. Then, at that first dreadful cry from across the seas, he had gone. There had been long months of fighting. He had left her in the flower of his youth, a wonder-lad, with none to match him among his friends. He had come back crushed and broken. He, whose career lay so close to his heart-could do now no sustained work. Mentally and physically he must rest. He might be years in getting back. He would never get back to gay and gallant boyhood. That was gone forever. Yet if Mrs. Follette's heart had failed her at times, she had never shown it. She was making the farm pay for itself. She supplied the peo-ple of Sherwood Park and surrounding estates with milk. But she never was in any sense-a milkwoman. It was, rather, as if in selling her milk she distributed favors. It was on this income that she subsisted, she and her son.

Later he and Jane walked together in the clear cold. She was in a gay mood. She was wrapped in her old orange cape, and the sun, breaking the bank of sullen clouds in the west, seemed to turn her lithe young body into flame.

"Don't you love a day like this, Evans?" She pressed forward up the hill with all her strength. Evans followed, panting. At the top they sat down for a moment on an old log-which faced the long aisles of snow between thin black trees. The vista was clear-cut and almost artificial in its restraint of color and Evans, with his mother in the pew, looked straight ahead of him. He seemed worn and weary-a dark shadow set against the brightness of those comrades on the glowing glass.

After church, he waited in the aisle for Jane. "I'll walk down with you. Mother is going to ride with Dr. Hallam."

They walked a little way in silence, then he said, "Rusty is comfortable this morning."

TATTOO MARKINGS IDENTIFY CATTLE

Breeding and Registration Records Protected.

By DR. GEORGE E. TAYLOR

It is important that dairy animals be properly marked for identification purposes, otherwise there is certain to be confusion on breeding as well as registration records. Ear tattoos properly put in are most sat-isfactory identification marks, for they remain legible during the entire lifetime of the animal. These facts have been determined in studies at the New Jersey college of agriculture.

The American Jersey cattle club has required tattoo numbers for registration for a number of years, and beginning January 1, 1940, all unregistered Brown Swiss animals must be tattooed before the application or registration will be accepted. The objection to ear tags and number neck straps is that they are sometimes lost.

In order to insure satisfactory results the following simple rules should be considered:

The inside of the ear should be thoroughly cleaned of all dirt, wax and oil so that the tattoo ink will penetrate the punch marks. Soap and water may be used, provided the ear is wiped dry with a clean cloth. A clean cloth soaked in gaso-line or alcohol is very effective. In getting ready to tattoo, be sure the letters and numbers are placed in the marker right side up and in the correct order. First try the marker on a piece of cardboard to be sure.

Place the mark in the area inside of the ear that is free from hair. Avoid crossing any large veins as a safeguard against excessive hemorrhage that might cause the ink to wash out, resulting in failure.

Be sure that the needle points are sharp and fine so that they will penetrate the ear properly. By placing one or two thicknesses of cardboard between the punch and the outside of the ear you can insure proper penetration. Apply a liberal application of ink inside of the ear and work the ink into the small holes with the forefinger after the punch is made.

There are a number of satisfactory tattoo inks, pastes and oils on the market. The following formula may also be mixed by any druggist, using 20 grams of lamp black (dry); 50 cc grain alcohol; 50 cc glycerin and 50 cc of water.

A system of both letters and numbers are often used that will indicate the owner of the animal and also the date of birth as well as the

An Amateur Decorator Uses a Curved Needle

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

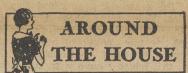

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: Some time ago in an article you suggested using a curved needle, such as upholsterers use, for sewing heavy cord trimming in place. I found that these needles are also used in making candle wicking bedspreads and are on sale in most notion and fancy work departments. Mine has been very useful to me; especially when reupholstering an old chair. This is just one of the many useful hints I have found in your articles and books. Thank you so much for all of them.—G. H."

Here is the picture of the curved needle used to sew bright contrasting cord to an upholstered couch. It is a useful tool when you are sewing to fabric that is stretched tightly. Everyone who finds pleasure in making a home attractive needs to know these little tricks that give work a professional touch.

Original ideas with complete directions for slipcovers; draperies and other furnishings are in the new Sewing Book No. 3. Every homemaker should have a copy; as well as everyone who likes to make gifts, and items for bazaars. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Used Diversification

There was a gentleman farmer of certain renown living on the banks of the Potomac who worried because his poorer neighbors always had too much tobacco on hand and not enough good food. Their Negro hands were often not in the best of health. Records indicate that offtimes taxes were paid partly in money and partly in tobacco, for lack of other medium.

The gentleman farmer, who tended to his own place carefully, and had definite success growing a variety of crops and only a lesser portion of tobacco, called a meeting of his better-fixed neighbor farmers. They all recognized the problem of one-crop farms and were glad of a leader to change the practice of farmers in that neighborhood.

The gentleman farmer was George Washington and he started Fairfax county, just outside of Washington, on a crop-variation system that has existed to this day. In all Fairfax there is not a commercial patch of tobacco.

Negroes have a few plants in the back yard to twist into "terbacker" for their own use.

Potato Storage Pits

Properly constructed pits provide cheap but satisfactory storage for potatoes throughout the storage season. The spuds should be placed in the pit as soon as harvested but should be given only a light covering at first, says A. E. Hutchins, vegetable specialist. Care must be taken to keep them dry and well ventilated, he cautions, and when the ground freezes the covering should be increased. Pits should be made in well-drained soils. A good size is four feet deep, six feet wide, and as long as needed. Pits of the above width and depth will hold about 100 bushels for each five feet of length.

Plucking Live Geese

The plucking of live geese to save the feathers is quite common practice in many country districts. It consists of the removing of the small feathers just before moulting time. One can tell by plucking at one of the geese whether the feathers are ready to come out. Never pluck feathers from a goose when they are moist on the end. Only the small feathers should be taken off the bird and the down should never be removed.

Well Nourished Plants

A plant properly nourished with the essential soil elements is in better physical condition and more able to resist disease and insect pests.

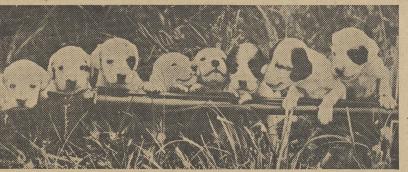

Scientists of the United States department of agriculture have found one plant-tobacco-that diagnoses its own nutrition problems by typical leaf symptoms when any one of nine essential soil elements are deficient. The elements are nitrogen, phosphorus, magnesium and iron

Above: A bad dog habit is chasing vehicles. The above bicyclist is braced against a nasty fall. But curing this trick is a simple procedure. Following the arrow, you'll see Mr. Spitz making the dog crawl several times around the vehicle he has chased, meanwhile scolding.

Dogs, like humans, have a way of getting sick-and disliking some medicines. The hard way of dispensing it taxes tempers of both man and dog. The easy way is shown at the right. Take the left thumb and forefinger and pull the loose skin of cheek and corner away from teeth. This forms a natural funnel. But keep his head up and prevent him from shaking it until swallowed. Below: This unusual association is the result of perfect training. Only a properly taught dog can be expected to show such helpfulness towards a fellow creature. It takes patience, but its worthwhile.

Farmers Need Bank Service and Protection

> Each year after the harvest, crop money flows into this bank. Farmers no longer wish to assume the worry and risk of safeguarding large sums in cash. A checking account gives them complete and ready command of their money but frees them from the care of it.

We are glad to do our part in safeguarding this home-produced wealth. No accounts receive better attention at this bank than those of our farmer friends.

Reunion of Spruce Production Division Recalls a Little-Known Chapter in the History of America's World War Effort

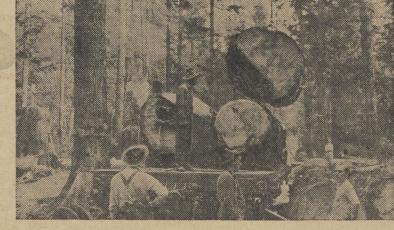

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON (Released by Western Newspaper Union.) ▲ MONG the many reunions to be held during A ions to be netted of the 1939 convention of the American Legion in Chicago September 25 to 28 there's one that's unique. For the first time in Legion history, former members of the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen will get together to reminisce over the days when they were doing their part to "help win the war" even though it was up in the great forests of the Pacific Northwest thousands of miles from the battle front.

You never heard of the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen, or the "4L," as it is sometimes called? Then perhaps you know about its wartime nucleus under the longer and more official name of Spruce Production Division of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps of the United States Army.

However, if you don't know about it even under that name, you're not much different from thousands of other Americans. For it was one of the least publicized of all the units which Uncle Sam mobilized for service in the greatest war in which he was ever engaged. But it's high time that you should learn about it, for the achievement of this Loyal Legion was one of the most brilliant in the history of America's war effort and, as is so often the case, it was due primarily to the genius of one man. That man is Brig. Gen. Brice P. Disque, U. S. A. (Ret.) and many of the veterans of the Spruce Production Division who are coming to Chicago for the reunion are coming for no other reason than to see and salute again their commander of 22 years ago. Also they're coming to form a permanent organization of Loyal Legion "alumni" and to see what can be done about obtaining recognition for the Spruce Production Division from the war department in the form of an assignment as a divisional number and insignia, even though they are proud to be known simply as "Disque's Own." Tribute to Disque.

That fact is eloquent testimony to the caliber of the man who told Disque bluntly. The "other obstacles," it developed, were numerous enough and difficult enough to have daunted anyone except an army officer who was accustomed to obeying his orders to "get the job done.

For several years the spruce industry of the Northwest had been almost paralyzed. The low wages, long working hours and disgraceful living conditions of the logging camps had made them fertile ground for the I. W. W. to sow its seeds of discontent. The result was a succession of strikes and a campaign of sabotage carried on by the "wobblies." As though this were not enough trouble, the operators added to it by their practice of stealing men from each other. This, in brief, was the situation which confronted Colonel Disque when he arrived on the scene, charged with the responsibility of getting out great quantities of spruce and getting it out in a hurry. His first step was to call a conference of operators and workmen, who heretofore had been hopelessly deadlocked over the question of reducing the 10hour day to an eight-hour day.

Installs 8-Hour Day.

To this conference the colonel announced that eight, instead of 10 hours would be the basic working day and that there would be no cut in wages because of it; that living conditions in the camps would be raised to the standards of the United States army; that employers must stop stealing men; and, finally, that under his administration there would be a square deal for both operators and workmen. To bring that about he submitted to them, for their voluntary adoption, a constitution and by-laws of an organization which he called the Loyal Legion of Log-broader view came enormous increases in total production of spruce and—what is still more important-an almost unbelievable improvement in the quality of the product. The thick spruce stands of the inaccessible regions have been tapped by railroads-Thirteen separate railroads thirteen of them-located, built were decided upon and construcand operating in less than a year, tion of 167 miles of main line and a new goal of practically track and 149 miles of branch doubling the present output was line was begun. This railroad recently announced Popular atbuilding would take time, of tention during the year has been course, and in the meantime elsewhere, and the men in the spruce was urgently needed for Spruce Production Division have new Allied airplanes. So Colonel been too busy to tell of their work, if they would. Therefore, little is generally known of prob-Disque made contracts with the operators for the delivery of all the "clear" spruce they could get. Besides that he sent his own crews of soldier-lumberjacks into the forests to augment their efforts. Over the protests of the operators he inaugurated a system of "selective" logging, that is, cutting down only those trees which had been picked by expert timber cruisers as best fitted for airplane stock. Where the stand of timber was too sparse to justify building roads over which to bring out these logs, or where the country was too rough to get the huge logs out "in the round," they were "rived" where they fell, that is, the logs were split, the knotty heartwood was removed and the remaining lumber was split into "flitches" of convenient size. But selective logging was not the only innovation which Disque introduced. He maintained that logs could be sawed to get a much higher percentage of clear, straight lumber than was obtainable by methods heretofore used. Some of the lumbermen said it couldn't be done. He produced his own expert who designed a huge government sawmill to be built at Vancouver, Wash., across the river from Portland. The lumbermen said that such a mill couldn't be built in less than a year and then it might not be a success. As a matter of fact it was built in 45 days and instead of the 25 per cent of airplane

YOU are a very naughty boy," said Mrs. Wilson to her little son, as she looked with dismay at the mutilated magazine she had just taken from him. "If Donald were not on his way to tea with you, I would put him off and punish you severely. You know this magazine belongs to his mother and was only lent to us. I shall have to explain to her, and what will she think? It is not easy to get another copy. Run away, I am out of patience with you," she added, flushed and greatly annoyed. It was an unhappy and sullen child that slipped off to his playroom.

A little later a ring of the bell announced the arrival of the visitors, Mrs. Macgregor and her son Donald. The boy was carrying a large parcel and looking very happy about it.

"May I see Harry at once, Mrs. Wilson? I have a present for him," said Donald eagerly.

The two mothers listened for a few moments, and excited exclamations of joy soon reached their ears. "You look disturbed and worried. I hope you are not in trouble," said

Mrs. Macgregor.

"Yes, I am. Sit down. I am so glad you have come, though I did think of putting you off, to punish Harry for his naughtiness. First of all I must confess to you about this magazine of yours," responded Mrs. Wilson. "I have just caught Harry in the act of cutting the picture of a dog out of it. I am so sorry." Mrs. Macgregor laughed. "It does not matter in the least. I wonder what made him do it," she added thoughtfully.

"That is just what I should like to know. It is not the first time he has done that sort of thing. He has a perfect passion for cutting out. The strange thing about it is, that though I have given him old magazines to clip to his heart's content he does not confine himself to them. When the impulse seizes him he is liable to cut from any paper or magazine without any scruples whatever. Only the other day, I found his sister Ethel terribly upset. Harry had cut the picture of a spaniel out of the book her father gave her on her birthday. Cutting No Idle Impulse.

"That is bad. He must be taught to respect other people's property. You said it was th spaniel? Another dog? Is he fond of dogs?"

commanded them in 1917-18 and who so commands their respect today. He entered the regular army in 1899 as an enlisted man and was advanced from sergeant to first lieutenant while serving in the Philippines. In 1913 he was a cavalry captain on the Mexican border and later was assigned to construction work which took him to the Philippines again. Resigning from the army to accept the position of warden at the Michigan state penitentiary at that time one of the few self-sustaining prisons in the country, he gave that institution a notably successful administration

But it was a brief one for, when the United States entered the World war in 1917, he applied for his old commission as a cavalry captain. Instead he was made a lieutenant-colonel in the Signal corps and was on his way to France when his sailing orders were suddenly canceled. The reason was this:

In the summer of 1917 the Allies were "fighting with their backs against the wall" and French and English high officers were warning the United States that if the war was to be won it must be won in the air. Their great need was airplanes and more airplanes. Spruce wood was vitally needed for airplane construction. Since the best spruce available was in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, Uncle Sam could best help his Allies by hurrying vast quantities of it from the Pacific Northwest to the battlefront.

That was why Colonel Disgue's sailing orders were canceledhe was the man selected for the post of commander of the new Spruce Production Division of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps and he was ordered to Portland, Ore., to take charge of the job of speeding up spruce production, speeding up shipment of it from half a million to thirty million feet per month and cutting down the time of its shipment from the forests in the Northwest to the Atlantic coast from 50 days to 10 days. In less than a week after Disgue had 1 ceived his orders he was on the job in Portland.

"You'll have one hell of a job getting spruce out of northwestern timber, because of government red tape and other obstacles," the mayor of Portland gers and Lumbermen. Without going into detail into the way in which this organization operatea, it may be noted that, perhaps for the first time in American history, capital and labor recognized the mutuality of their interests, co-operated thoroughly and reduced disputes to a minimum.

The nucleus of the force which carried on these vast operations was soldiers from the National army and volunteers who had been transferred for this special work from other arms of the service. Many of them came from the timber districts of Michigan, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania. Eventually the total strength of the Spruce Production Division was 30.000 men and 1.200 officers. Added to that force were more than 75,000 civilians engaged in the task of getting out the vitally needed spruce so that the total membership of the Loyal Legion was nearly 110,000. Their first problem was finding the spruce. The heaviest stands of this kind of timber were discovered on a strip of territory about 50 miles wide on the western slope of the Coast range in Oregon and Washington which was then the wildest and most inaccessible section of the West Since fir timber, heretofore the chief source of lumber supply, grew on the eastern slope of this range of mountains, no railroads. roads or any other highways for transportation of timber had ever been built on the western slope. So the first step was to construct them.

ods from clear "flitches" it began turning out 65 per cent. 2,700% Production Increase.

ced by ordinary

It would require a book to tell the full story of the achievement of Colonel Disque and his Spruce Production Division-how they increased the output 2,700 per cent over that which had been possible before the organization of the Loyal League, how they met the Allies' demand for a million feet of selected spruce daily, and how it was rushed across the continent by fast express for shipment across the Atlantic. Included in that story, too, is how the attempts of the "wobblies" to create dissatisfaction and sabotage the spruce production was thwarted, how the effort of labor union organizers to "muscle in" was defeated, and how the Loyal League survived after the war to the benefit of capital and labor relations in the industry.

It would tell also how Colonel Disque, by this time a brigadiergeneral, resigned his "benevolent dictatorship" at the close of the war, liquidated the $10,000,000 United States Spruce corporation of which he was president; returned more than 96 per cent of the government's $10,000,000 investment, said good-by to the thousands of men who were under his command and retired to private life.

These are some of the things which the members of the Spruce Production Division will talk over when they hold their reunion in Chicago this month. There will be tales, too, of their buddies who were killed "in line of duty"_ impaled by flying splinters in the woods and mowed down by a blast of steel fragments when the huge circular saw bit into the spike imbedded in a log by a sabotaging "wobbly"—stories of feverish activity in building roads through the wilderness and constructing high pole bridges over streams and across canyons, of never-ending vigilance against the fire hazard around the sawmills with their huge piles of precious spruce timber. All these and a thousand other incidents of those hectic days when this, their first, reunion of the engineering pioneering involved. The policy of putting engineering problems in the hands of engineers has been followed by General Disque from the outset, and too much praise can not be given to start work on a big tree.

Six years later the social significance of General Disque's policies were recognized in an article which appeared in the Forum and Century magazine. Written by Earl Chapin May under the title of "A Model for the New Deal," this article, which appeared in the March, 1934, issue of that magazine, said in part:

"If, as and when the Supreme Court of the United States decides that the National Industrial Recovery act belongs in the discard it will not be necessary for President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his Administration to relegate the celebrated and promisactors. ing New Deal to history.

"To all important intents and purposes the Roosevelt New Deal has successfully functioned for 15 years in the lumber regions of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. For fifteen years capital and labor have dwelt in harmony; wages and profits have been controlled; production has kept approximate pace with consumer demand: peace has reigned where industrial war once flourished; and a large part of one of our major industries has been run on an even keel, by selfgovernment.

"Officially this co-operative is known as the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen. Pop-ularly, it is known as the "4L." It began under a military dictatorship as a patriotic movement to meet a wartime emergency. It has survived without any material change in organization machinery since 1921 and without a dictatorship, except that vested in mutually agreeing employers and employees.

"If anything goes wrong with the machinery set up by the National Industrial Recovery Actif the Supreme court or any other court or influence throws a monkey-wrench into the federal government's industrial recovery program-President Roosevelt and his "brain trust" can turn gracefully to the 4L and ride to recovery on its bandwagon. The National Industrial Recovery Act might become permanent by adopting some of the methods of the Pacific Northwest 4L." * * *

Of course, as everybody now knows, such a monkey-wrench was thrown into the federal government's industrial recovery program. That came about when the United States Supreme court gave its decision in a case which meant the death of the NRA. So, one wonders why the New Deal didn't "turn gracefully to the 4L" (and to General Disque!)

and "ride to recovery on its bandwagon" after the wreck of National Recovery act. Perhaps it may yet be done! exists on either.

Consequently people were surprised when, after finishing "Four Daughters," he didn't rush back to Broadway, and he surprised them again, more recently, when he agreed to do "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" (which will be screened as "The City of Lost Men").

In the first case he was persuaded to stay on in Hollywood in order to get his screen career off to a good start. In the second, a nice, fat bonus check was used as persuasion.

In "Golden Boy" you'll meet a new movie hero, William Holdensix feet tall, possessed of brown hair, blue eyes, a pleasant personality, and so much ability as an actor that he was picked from 4,500 candidates for the leading role in the picture. And some of those other candidates were experienced

Holden wasn't. He'd gone to college, and been a member of Paramount's stock company. It was when he took part in a college play. in Pasadena that a talent scout spotted him, and he was signed to a seven-year contract. After that he didn't do anything but report at the studio and exercise in the gymnasium, until he made a screen test with a girl who was being considered for a role in "Golden Boy." Director Mamoulian saw the test, spotted Holden, Columbia bought a half-interest in him-and you'll see him in "Golden Boy."

Family notes: Paul Muni's wife took a screen test not long ago. Charles Laughton's wife (known to stage and screen fans as Elsa Lanchester) will appear on the Bing Crosby program September 21. "That is the explanation!" exclaimed Mrs. Macgregor. "It is not a mere idle impulse, you see. He cannot have a real dog, so he is doing the best he can with pictures of them. Why not help him to turn his thwarted devotion into a scrapbook hobby? As it happens, Donald has brought him a large scrapbook like his own. The very thing for his dog pictures." Mrs. Wilson gave a sigh of relief. "I like that idea," she said. "Harry will love to fill his book with stories and pictures of dogs. I'm afraid I haven't been sufficiently sympathetic with this urge of his. But of course he must learn to restrain himself when the pictures are in books and magazines, especially when they belong to other people. "Certainly he must. Why not encourage him to 'take you to see' each new dog before he appropriates it? Show him that if it were a real dog he would have to consult you. Then you two can talk over the possibilities. Improve Butterfat Yields

In 10 years members of dairyherd improvement associations throughout the country have so improved their herds that the average yearly butterfat production of association cows has increased about 30 pounds, reports Dr. J. F. Kendrick of the federal bureau of dairy industry. This increase in production, brought about by culling out poor producers, by feeding the remaining cows according to production, and by better selection of dairy sires, has increased returns to association members by about $8,000,000 a year.

SAFETY COUNCIL NOTES

Council, weaving drivers are a great & Son Company, Bridgeville, Delahighway menace. In an attempt to ware get ahead of that procession ahead, they cut out, crossing that certen line, on curves, on hills and at other danger points along the roadway. In not one case in a hundred is there any legiti-mate reason for their haste. If the center line on the pavement had spikes in it, you would not cross it. You would have too much respect for your tires, to say nothing of the chance for an accident, but as long as it is merely a painted line you do cross it many times when it is not at all necessary and sometimes when it is just as dangerous as if it were spiked

Just keep in mind that the center line is a life line. You cross it at your own risk, for beyond that line there is danger-danger to yourself, to other drivers and to pedestrians, none of whom expect to see a speeding car on the left side of the road. The Council urges all drivers to stay in line unless the road ahead is perfectly clear. Look upon that center line as the safeguard which it really is for those who heed it. It was put there for a purpose and that purpose was to safeguard your life and safety as: well as the lives and safety of all others using that highway.

MANY ATTEND WORLD'S FAIR FROM STATE

Delaware Day at the New York World's Fair was observed Wednesday by at least 1,000 persons from all parts of the state who participated in the "good will tour" which was arranged by the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the Delaware Advisory Committee of the exposition.

Gov. Richard C. McMullen and his staff headed the party for the trip, which was arranged for a date as close as possible to Sept. 17, the anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution by 'the Delaware convention in Philadelphia in 1787. Special tribute was paid the state, with a 19-gun salute for Governor McMullen which is reserved for state occasions

John Bassett Moore, Delawarean and authority on international law and relations extended greetings to the Delaware group at ceremonies held in the Equitable Life Assurance Society's Garden of Security. Governor McMullen, Mayor Walter W. Bacon of Wilmington, and Thomas W. Wilson of the Delaware Advisory Committee, and Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, director of the World's Fair States' participation, gave brief addresses. Luncheon followed at Perylon Hall.
