NEW YORK.—When we went into the World war, Sen. Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa said our crack riflemen would win for us if he were allowed to re-were born marksmen, and the rifle would be suited to our native genius. He was soundly patriotic and moving, as he worked in Daniel Boone and individual initiative, but his plea went unheeded-in fact, the senator's suggestion seemed amusing to most commentators.

But, at that time, there was a young fellow popping off the conveyor belt ducks at Coney island with such accuracy that he became a virtuoso of rifle fire, and, in between war years, made the rifle the mainstay of our army firing power, just as Senator Brookhart said it ought to be. The Garand self-loading, semi-automatic rifle, tested by National Guardsmen at Camp Smith, Peekskill, has for several years been put down by military men as the world's most sensational achievement in light arms. The army took it over in 1937. It is the creation of John C. Garand, the young toolmaker whose earlier laboratory was a Coney island shooting gallery. It weighs only nine pounds, and fires 60 shots to the minute—one shot with one trigger-pull.

Young Garand made several models, embodying his basic idea, and sent one to the navy department at Washington. They planted him with the bureau of standards to continue his experiments.

Later, they sent him to the United States armory at Spring-field, where in 1923 he brought through the deadliest small weapon ever made. It has been steadily improved since then, and, according to the most authoritative military judgment, has more than trebled our army's firing power. Automatic in all but the trigger-pull, muzzle gas is used to power it.

John C. Garand was born in a French-Canadian village, 20 miles from Montreal, and was brought to Putnam, Conn., by his father, when he was seven, after the death of his mother. He was the seventh of 14 children. He was a textile mill machinist at 18. In 1930, he married a Canadian girl. They have a boy and a girl. He is 52 years old, still a gunsmith at the Springfield ar-

Within the last few days, plans for the grand remodeling have gone forward, with two sets of blueprints on each side of the west wall. Franz von Papen thinks the new commonwealth of Europe will be devised by Germany, while Paul Reynaud, French minister of finance, and his confreres in London, are making other arrangements. The wide range of planners swings from intellectuals, such as Julian Huxley, the British scientist, to the man of action. General Wladislas Sikorski, premier of the Polish government which is just now camping out in France.

General Sikorski, the latest matriculate in the peace seminar, visions a "consolidated Europe," but one in which a reconstituted Poland will somehow be happily encysted.

He is a soldier who became a writing, as well as a fighting man, also, with his gift of ready speech, an orator and politician. He was an effective leader of the war of 1920, when the French general, Maxime Weygand, helped the Poles stop the Bolsheviks, and he became premier in 1922 when he was replaced by Marshal Pilsudski as chief-ofstaff. He was forced out in 1923, and in 1924 became minister of war. One of his first official acts was to forbid women workers in the department to wear silk stockings. He decreed dark, high-collared dresses, high shoes and cotton stockings. He is a strict disciplinarian.

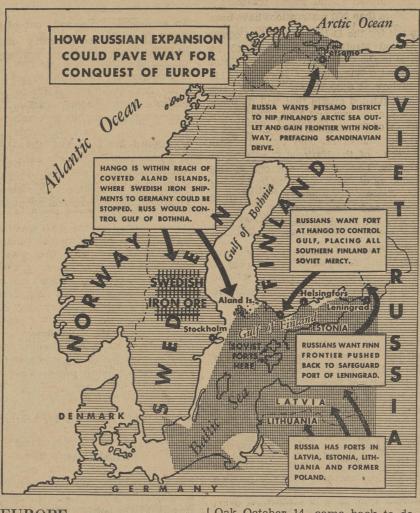

A handsome and romantic figure of the old feudal Polish aristocracy, he took full account of modern conditions as he tried desperately to tool his country into modern statehood. Now, it appears, he would just skip it and take a chance on the world of tomorrow.

Hitler Discredited, Friendless As Result of Finland Invasion: Reds Gird for Blow at Reich

(EDITOR'S NOTE-When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

EUROPE: Finnish Finish

Moscow civilians knew only that their Premier Viacheslav Molotov had first denounced Russia's nonaggression pact with Finland, and next had broken off diplomatic relations with that little republic. But a few minutes after the second step Russian troops invaded the Karelian isthmus; Russian planes bombed Helsingfors, Viborg, Imatra and Tammelsuu; Russian warships began tossing shells all along the Gulf of Finland's northern shore. The Finnish government, which only a few hours earlier had withdrawn frontier guards and pleaded for a peaceful settlement, resigned immediately and President Kyoesti Kallio declared war. But everyone knew the Russian juggernaut would swallow his nation in a few days.

All the world watched this outrage painfully, but only the U. S. took concrete action. The charge d'affaires in Moscow was instruct ed to offer mediation, but nothing came of it. England and France, busy at home, had no chance to help little Finland.

Most pained of all was none other than Adolf Hitler, who must have realized all too suddenly that Finland's death at Russia's hand made him Europe's most discredited ruler. Having staved off war on two fronts in September by making friends with Russia, Der Fuehrer had seen Joe Stalin come first into Poland, next into Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, and now into Finland, always for "defensive" purposes. Against what nation but Germany would Russia need defenses? And how easily could defenses be turned into offensive positions. (see

The Reich had no alternative but to "sympathize" with Russia, but nobody was fooled. By not sympathizing, Germany would automatically fall in beside the allies against Russia, thereby discrediting Adolf Hitler. There no longer remained doubt about the position of Italy, erstwhile axis partner of Germany. Marshal Italo Balbo's Corriere Padano was outspoken in its admiration for Finland's opposition to "brutal pressure of the colossus with feet of clay."

of 260 lives. Magnetic mines, scattered helterskelter from airplanes, were obviously a violation of the international law which demands that nations announce the location of their mine fields. But Britain's revenge was also a violation of international law: King George signed an order blockading all German exports on neutral ships, and within 24 hours the wrath of the world was on London. Japan, refusing to recognize the blockade, threatened to seize British ships. The Netherlands and Belgium protested. Greece, one-half of whose imports come from Germany via sea, faced an economic crisis. Hearing that Britain threatened to close the Suez canal, the straits of Gibraltar and the Dardanelles, Rome's Giornale d'Italia departed from Italy's noncommital attitude to of-fer food for thought: "The blockade is most dangerous. If Franklin Roosevelt still hoped for a third term, he could take heart from the latest Fortune magazine poll, which claimed that 47.4 per in the White House. Percentage before the war: 34.9 per cent.

Far bigger political news was the attempt of both Republicans and Democrats to jockey into position for the 1940 campaign. Each wanted to hold its convention after the other, so badly that G. O. P. COMMERCE: Rough Sledding

Only through broad international trade, said British Premier Neville Chamberlain a few weeks ago, can peace be assured. In Washington Secretary of State Cordell Hull echoed his words because he needed that argument to defend his reciprocal trade program. Since Europe went to war the U. S. has rushed to make treaties with South American nations whose Old world trade outlets have been cut off. The joker has been that South America's export surpluses, which she would exchange for U. S. manufactured granted any nation is immediately accorded all other lands which hold treaties. Hence, if the program keeps expanding, critics fear all U. S. tariff walls will be broken down, our self-sufficiency will be destroyed and the U.S. will become dependent on foreign sources.

Opened in Washington were hearings on a pact with Chile which would reduce tariffs on copper and beans, among other things. Since the reciprocal treaty act comes up for renewal before congress next session, it was noteworthy that three good Democratic senators (Colorado's Johnson, Arizona's Hayden and Idaho's Clark) protested. Said Johnson: "The trade program persecutes and undermines domestic enterprise . . . permits greater infiltration of foreign goods . . . trades off American jobs . . . replaces American taxpayers with foreign producers who pay no taxes here.'

Even making allowance for any sectional interest these senators might have, it was pretty certain the trade act will have rough sledding in congress.

LABOR: Anti-Strike Weapon?

Having at last settled the 54-dayold Chrysler dispute, organized labor turned its guns on the justice department for a much more important campaign. The target: Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, who recently advised that unions are punishable under the anti-trust laws if they (1) prevent use of cheaper materials: (2) compel hiring of useless labor; (3) enforce systems of graft or extortion;

(4) enforce illegally ARNOLD Labor was afraid. (5) destroy an established system of collective bargaining. A few days later A. F. of L.'s President William Green fired a protest at Attorney General Frank Murphy (whose appointment last winter was protested because he was "too friendly" to labor). Said the procent of the voters want him to stay lest: "We do insist that the antitrust laws cannot be invoked against labor organizations because these . do not permit proseculaws . tion." Labor's reasoning: That the Clayton act expressly exempts unions.

It took no Philadelphia lawyer to read the fear in labor's eyes. If the justice department is upheld in its present campaign against material dealers, contractors and union lead-Successful at changing Thanksgiv- ers in the building trades conspiracy case, the unions can be prosecuted in restraint of trade for all strikes.

CONGRESS: Build-Up

By cutting expenditures in the face of increased revenues, the government hopes next year to put itself in shape for electioneering. Even so, the President admitted at Warm Springs that his planned economies are striking no impressive total. Actually, since Europe's war will necessitate a $500,000,000 boost in defense outlays, other items must be pared tremendously to hold down the total appropriation.

Recently the President announced that any decision on new revenues must be made by congress. That body could choose between raising the $45,000,000,000 debt limit (to be reached this year) or levying new good idea to postpone both conventaxes. Rumblings About Federal Spending Come From Two Schools of Thought

One Side Proposes Policing U. S. Operations; Another Insists Wanton Outgo Must Continue; Secret Memorandum Offers Program for 'Rebuilding America.'

> By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.-Rumblings have | curtailed. As to this, however, one begun to occur again lately about federal spending. Some are for, but most of them are against, continued outgo of federal funds. They have of $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 would recome from widely separated schools of thought, as might be expected zation. The civil service commiswhen there are those in the government who favor unlimited spending and those who believe in watching government finances with an eye to the future. I will try to piece them

Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, an avowed seeker after the nomination for President, and Senator Adams, of Colorado, a Democratic member of the senate committee on appropriations, and therefore influential in policy-making, seem to be agreed that spending has got out of hand. They are proposing some-thing in the way of a policing of government operations, and obviously such policing will be done by an agency of congress.

Secretary Morgenthau of the treasury has been going to some lengths to have the country know there will be no violation of the present national debt limit. It is now fixed by law at $45,000,000,000. The national debt is approaching $42,000,000,000, in direct obligations of the federal government as distinguished from the four or five billions of debt incurred by federally owned corporations. Many persons feel this debt must be considered as a part of the public debt. Anyway, Mr. Morgenthau says there is no real reason to believe the $45,000,000,000 limitation will be reached before next June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

President Roosevelt has sent around word to the various departments that their spending in the next fiscal year must be curtailed to some extent. He did not mention a balanced budget which he said a few years ago should be accomplished in 1940, but he took the position that the deficit in the next fiscal year should not exceed $2,000,000,-000. That is, the spending for all purposes, under the President's present conclusions, shall not exceed receipts from taxes and other general revenue by more than

Secret Memorandum Calls For Additional Spending

While the statements from the senators were being chewed over for the good of the nation. and while the word about Mr. Roosevelt's determination was sinking in, it was disclosed that a memorandum about future government spending was going the rounds among the so-called New Deal thinkers. The authorship of the memorandum has not been made known. None will admit where it came from or where it is going beyond the fact that it was being circulated for the information of those high in administration circles who desire that thought shall be given to next year's political campaign.

Stripped of all of its excess language, the secret memorandum points out a program for "rebuild-ing America," for building up Amer-ica. Incidentally, and only casually, readers of the memorandum are told through its entire length that there must be additional federal spending in execution of this program. But haste is made to assure us that there should be no worry about additional spending-amount not named—because the borrowings can be paid back "out of increased | Sentiment With Money income of our citizens.' And the war figures in it, too. The author of the memorandum observes that America "may be the last remnant of civilization." It has a special duty to all of the world, therefore, and the thinking element wants to make sure that our nation is ready to assume this new burden. There are many paragraphs of argument in the secret memorandum in support of the position that our nation must be "restored" and those who put it together reluctantly admit that it will take a great educational campaign to accomplish the rebuilding. What better opportunity can be afforded, then, according to the memorandum, than the election campaign of 1940. So, in case you are still ignorant; in case you do not realize the leadership the United States must accept; you may be fully educated next year by speeches and propaganda. This certainly will make you understand how important it is to spend more money out of the federal treasury.

Tighter Hand on Government Spending to Be Laid Down

There can be no doubt that relief spending will have to be large again in the next year. It cannot be avoided. Business is not doing any better. It is not employing more people, or to state it another way; unemployment is just as great as ever, and people must be fed.

governmental activity that may be the cultural field.

might ask a pertinent question. It will be recalled that the President anticipated a reduction, a saving, sult from the government reorganision and treasury figures, lately made public, show that there has been an increase of approximately $100,000,000 for general expenses since reorganization was ordered. It seems in order then to ask how there can be curtailment, except and unless there is a willingness to abandon some of the numerous agencies of government along with the functions they perform.

It is in line with the idea of curtailing expenditures, however, that Senators Taft and Adams spoke. They mentioned profligate and unwise spending. The old leaf raking jobs that former Relief Administrator Hopkins sponsored, I believe, can be cited as an example.

The blasts by Senators Taft and Adams, along with the constant criticism of waste by Senator Harry Byrd, the Virginia Democrat, must be accepted as portending a change. It seems to me to be a very important sign, and a healthy one. When members of congress get up n arms sufficiently, they naturally take quite a following of public support with them. My own hunch is hat in the observations of Senators Taft and Adams there lies the germ of a great governmental reform. It may not come in the next session of congress, nor even in that which convenes in 1940, but I am quite convinced that a tighter hand on government spending is going to be laid down by congress.

Describes How Government Appropriations Are Made

To make the circumstance clear, t probably is well to describe how appropriations are made. The national budget, of course, is framed by the budget director under the irect supervision of the President. The budget director gives each agency a chance to submit estinates on the amount of money its officials think it needs. They are given the opportunity in hearings to justify their figures. The budget director considers their arguments and adjusts the amounts on the basis that he believes is proper and

The budget eventually is submitted to congress. There, the appropriations committees go to work. They examine all of the estimates for expenditures and eventually call in officials of every agency seeking an appropriation and listen to the story about the programs and the funds needed. The committee then makes up its own mind, and its figures are laid before the house and the senate.

That seems a very fair way. Experience, however, indicates there are better methods. The reason the system fails is because of bureaucracy. Every government official and every agency wants to expand operations, power and influence.

Thus, when Senators Taft and Adams propose policing federal expenditures, they have started something that may eventually result in development of a new arm of the Most observers here have long known that the new crop of spenders that now occupies the key positions have taught the old timers something fresh in the way of gaining congressional approval of appropriations. They are adroit in building up sentiment back home when it comes to teasing people into line. But they are adroit only when they can use money. It has been plain that ordinary political methods can not be used successfully by the socalled inner circle of the government. And for the reason that they can not use time tried methods not being politicians who have hustled for votes—they are doomed to failure.

Adroit in Building Up

The surprising thing about the whole situation is that President Roosevelt has been convinced so many times. The President is a right clever politician. He has flopped several times very badly, but he will get along in most any political company, especially if he has the aid of Jim Farley. The fly in his ointment is that he has turned all too frequently to the inner circle of advisors and has ignored Farley and the others, such as Farley's former trust advisor, Emil Hurja. The inner circle does not like Mr. Hurja, and it is their loss.

Now, that the flurry about the United States getting into Europe's war has blown over, I believe it is the consensus that the inner circle Mr. Roosevelt has indicated that group have turned again to a variawhile spending for relief cannot be | tion of pump priming and "spending dodged, there are other phases of our way out of the depression"-to

It was late when Evans went up-stairs. He had spent the evening with his mother, discussing with her some matters where his legal knowledge helped. They did not speak of Jane. Their avoidance of the subject showed their preoccupation with it. But neither dared approach it.

On the bedside table in Evans' room lay the valentine he had bought for Jane. There it was, with its cupids and bleeding hearts—its forget-me-nots—and golden darts.

Arthur Lane and Sandy talked it over. "I wonder what has happened. He looks dreadful."

The two boys were on their way to Castle Manor. They wanted books. Evans' library was a treasure-house for youthful readers. It had all the old adventuring tales. And Evans had read everything. That morning Baldy had had a letter from Jane and had handed it to Evans. It was the first long letter since her engagement to Towne. Baldy had written to his sister, flamingly, demanding to know if she were really happy. And she had

Since he had heard the news of brary. Jane's approaching marriage, Evans had lived in a dream. The people about him had seemed shadowshapes. And now this letter! "You see what she says," Baldy had raged. 'Of course she isn't in love with him. But she thinks she is. There's nothing more that I can do."

Last year's Holiday mail was the biggest ever handled by the United States postoffice, and this year's will probably be bigger. Cards, childish letters to Santa Claus, carelessly wrapped and addressed packages and the always-present human element of waiting until the last minute complicate the job. First mail to be handled each year is that for foreign countries, shown above being placed aboard a transatlantic liner. Such packages must be mailed early.

Towns bearing Christmasy names like Santa Claus, Bethlehem, Nazareth and Christmas (they're real towns, too) always have a landoffice business in re-mailing cards and packages forwarded from all parts of the country. Above, at Bethlehem, Conn., Postmaster Earl S. Johnson stamps the special postmark used last year. It is the shape of a Christmas tree with the words, "Greetings from the Little Town of Bethlehem." He handles about 80,000 pieces of mail each season.

Pity the poor postman at a time like this! Small town postoffices usually add more clerks at the holiday season. In big cities additional mailmen like these are pressed into service. Uncle Sam does a good job of it—just so your cards and gifts will be delivered by Christmas morning!

Plan Songs, Games To Combat Dullness After Heavy Dinner

For that "stuffy" feeling after a heavy Christmas dinner there's nothing better than a few games to clear the atmosphere. Or, for that matter, any of the following:

Jot down a few parlor games and get together (in advance) whatever paraphernalia you need for them. Give charades. For this plan what kind (words, proverbs, etc.) and collect some gadgets or "properties" or sketchy costume materi-

Toys Not Chief Business For Most Manufacturers

As a result of keen competition in the toy manufacturing industry, most large manufacturers are almost invariably not toy specialists. They may make almost anything else, from automobile tires to carpet sweepers, and add a toy department with a minimum of expense and risk. Department stores in 1938 sold about $35,000,000 worth of toys. These stores form the principal outlet for the toy manufacturer.

Sandwich Filler.—Peanut butter mixed with a little cream is a good filling for white or graham cracker sandwiches for children.

* * * White Silks.—To keep white silk stockings, blouses, etc., from turning yellow in laundering, use a little alcohol in the rinse water.

To Hasten Cooking.—When using a double boiler the food will cook more quickly if the water in the outer vessel is salted in the proportion of a fourth of a cup of salt to one quart of water.

Mixing Flour and Lard .- Don't rub lard into flour with your hands when making pastry. Use a silver fork, which divides and mixes very quickly. This is easier than chopping lard in and saves using a chopping tray.

Cleaning Photographs.-Photographs that have become soiled may be made to look like new by washing them with a piece of white cotton wadding dipped in cold water. Do not use colored cotton wadding and never use soap, soap powder or ammonia—just cold water.

Hanging Window Curtains .-When hanging short window curtains it will be found an excellent plan to invest in small staples. These driven into woodwork or wall, hold rods firmly in place. If tapes are used, they may be drawn through the staples and fixed so firmly that there is no chance of the "droop" which so often spoils the effect of otherwise attractive curtains.

Step Aside! "My son wishes to become a chauffeur. What do you advise?" "Well, personally, I wouldn't stand in his way.'

DON'T GIVE A "Bargain" Remedy You

Ask your Doctor before giving your child doubtful "bargain" remedies. No family need take this chance today. Wait. Think first. Are you absolutely sure you should give a single dose of that drug to your child? Internally? It was sold, you recall, as "something just as good", for a few pennies less.

A very dear purchase it could be! For your own peace of mind alone, give no home remedy you're not quite certain about without getting your own doctor's opinion. And never go against it.

Even in the case of the common children's remedy, milk of magnesia, ask your doctor what he apsia, ask your doctor what he approves. And when he says "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" see that you get exactly that by asking expressly for "Phillips'" when you buy...never ask for just "milk of magnesia". If your child prefers Phillips' in the newer form—tiny peppermint-flavored tablets, give it this way. But whether you get liquid Phillips' or Phillips' Tablets get the genuine Phillips'. Look forthe name "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" on bottle or box.

COOKIES MAKE CHARMING CHRISTMAS GIFTS (See Recipes Below)

Holiday Fruit Cakes And Cookies

Half the thrill of Christmas is in the pre-holiday preparations. Making cakes that are crammed with fruit and nuts, baking an endless variety of cookies to be frosted and "trimmed" in true holiday fashion, and packing gift boxes of Christmas confections, is as much fun as the great day itself!

Fruit cakes are a Christmas holiday tradition. The dark cakes do improve with age and should be made as early as possible. They won't mold or dry out if they're properly stored. Wrap the cooled cakes well in wax paper, then store in tightly covered cans. If you like, brandy or wine may be spooned over the cakes at two-week intervals during storage. White fruit cakes make a pretty contrast with the dark, but they dry out rather soon and should be eaten within a few weeks after baking.

Don't forget that fruit cakes, cookies, and small plum puddings make charming Christmas gifts, especially for the friends and relatives who'll be away from home on the holiday.

Christmas Fruit Cake.

Add fruit. Fold in beaten egg whites. Place in baking pans lined with wax paper. Cover pans with cheesecloth and steam 5 hours. Then bake one hour in a slow oven (275 degrees).

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

Four Score Years Have Passed Since John Brown Died on the Scaffold But His Renown 'Goes Marching On'

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

OR four score years the d body of John Brown has lain "moldering in its grave" but his fame "goes marching on." The fires of the Civil war have long since died down but the song which once fanned its flames is still being sung by a generation of Americans to whom the story of this "martyr" (or "fanatic") is but a dimly-remembered legend.

They can, however, obtain a little clearer picture of what manner of man he was and why he was instrumental in setting millions of Americans at each other's throats if they read a book published recently by the Kansas Magazine Publishing company of Manhattan, Kan. Last year Kirke Mechem, secretary of the Kansas State Historical society wrote a play about John Brown. It won the 1938 Maxwell Anderson Award of Stanford university. It was published as a book on October 16 of this year—the anniversary of John Brown's famous raid on Harper's Ferry.

As December 2, 1939, approaches, it is appropriate to turn to the last two pages of this book and read there

CURTAIN

Thus the poet-dramatist's version of the historic event which took place on that December day 80 years ago. For the version of an eyewitness, turn now to the July, 1921, issue of the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Quarterly and in it read "John Brown at Harper's Ferry and Charlestown — A Lecture by S. K. Donovan." In 1859 Donovan, who later became editor of the Columbus (Ohio) Times and a contributor to the Cincinnati Enquirer, was a reporter for the Baltimore (Md.) Daily Exchange. He was the first newspaper correspondent on the ground after John Brown's raid on Harper's Ferry began. He interviewed Brown after his capture, accompanied the "angry man of God" and his fellow raiders when they were moved to Charlestown and was present when Brown was placed on trial for his life. Here is Donovan's account of the execution of John Brown:

The air on the second day of December was crisp and sharp such as we have in this latitude in early December when the weather is fine. Early in the morning there were fleecy clouds shrouding the sun, but by 10 o'clock these had dissipated and the sun shown brightly.

John Brown dressed for the execution when he rose from bed. About nine o'clock, bedizened with laces and cords and spangles, General Taliaferro, commandant of the 3,000 Virginia uniformed militia, called at John Brown's cell. The old hero was engaged in writing. As he looked up and recognized the general he

"I will have finished my correspondence before that hour," he replied as he resumed his pen. Taliaferro stood for a moment and then turned on his heels and left the jail. He did not awe the old raider by his imposing presence and attitude.

At 11 o'clock a furniture wagon, with two horses attached, was drawn up in front of the jail. John one side and Jailer Avis on the other stepped from the jail. Unaided Captain Brown got into the wagon and took a seat on a box which contained his coffin. Jailer Avis sat at his side. On the driver's seat sat George W. Sadler, Massachusetts man, resident of Charlestown, who thought it necessary that he should drive John Brown to his death, that he might attest his loyalty to southern institutions. The Charlestown cadets, under command of Capt. W. W. Gallagher, formed around the wagon, and preceded by military and followed by military the line of march was taken up to the field of execution just beyond the town limits and to the south of it.

Reaching the field, he got from the wagon unaided and started for the steps of the scaffold. Of not been uneventful, that scene at the scaffold is most indelibly impressed upon my mind. Tonight, as on that cool December morning nearly a generation ago, it stands distinctly before me. I see him as he places his foot on the first step. No bravado, but a calm mien and exquisite poise, step after step he takes, as though he were ascending the stairs in a gentleman friend's home to a chamber in which he was to rest. Reaching the top, he steps forward on the trap, glances at the thousands of soldiers by whom he is surrounded and turns to Jailer Avis with,

United States marines storming the engine house, Brown's "fort" at Harper's Ferry.

Equally interesting is another eye-witness account. This is contained in a letter written on the day of the execution by an officer, on duty with the Virginia Military Institute cadets, to his wife in Lexington, Va. It was printed many years later—in the January 31, 1934, issue of the Lexington Gazette. It says in

By 10 o'clock all was arrayed. The general effect was most imposing, and at the same time picturesque. The cadets were immediately in the rear of the gallows, with a howitzer on the right and on the left, a little behind so as to sweep the field. The whole enclosure was lined by cavalry treeps, posted as sentinels, with their officers continually dashing around the enclosure. Outside this enclosure were other companies acting as rangers and scouts. Shortly after 11 o'clock the prisoner was taken from the jail and the funeral cortege was put in motion. First came three companies-then the criminal's wagon, drawn by two large white horses. John Brown was seated on his coffin, accompanied by the sheriff and two other persons. The wagon drove to the foot of the gallows, and Brown descended with alacrity, and without assistance, and ascended the steep steps to the platform. His demeanor was intrepid, without being braggart. He made no speech, whether he desired to make one or not, I do not know. His manner was free from trepidation, but his countenance was not without concern, and it seemed to me to have a little cast of wildness. He stood upon the scaffold but a short time, giving brief adieus to those about him, when he was properly pinioned, and the white cap drawn over his face, the noose adjusted and attached to the hook above. few steps forward. It was curious to note how the instincts of nature operated to make him careful in putting out his feet, as if he were afraid he would walk off the platform. The man who stood unblenched on the brink of eternity was afraid of falling a few feet to the ground! He was now all ready. The sheriff asked him if he should give him a private signal, before the fatal moment. He replied in a voice which seemed to be unnaturally natural—so composed was its tone and so distinct its articulation—that "it did not matter to him, if only they would not keep him too long waiting." He was kept waiting, however. The troops that had formed his escort had to be put into their proper positions, and while this was going on he stood for 10 or 15 minutes blindfolded, the rope around his neck, and his feet on the treacherous platform, expecting instantly the fatal act. But he stood for this comparatively long time upright as a soldier in position, and motionless. I was close to him, and watched him narrowly, to see if I could see any sign of shrinking or trembling in his person. Once I thought I saw his knees tremble, but it was only the wind blowing his loose trousers. His firmness was subjected to still further trial by hearing Colonel Smith announce to the sheriff, "We are all ready, Mr. Campbell." The sheriff did not hear, or did not comprehend, and in a louder tone the announcement was made. But the culprit still stood steady, till the sheriff, descending the flight of steps, with a well-directed blow of a sharp hatchet, severed the rope that held up the trap-door, which instantly sank sheer beneath him, and he fell about three feet. And the man of strong and bloody hand, of fierce passions, of iron will, of wonderful vicissitudesthe terrible partisan of Kansasthe capturer of the United States arsenal at Harper's Ferry-the would-be Cataline of the South—the demi-god of the Abolitionists -the man execrated and lauded -damned and prayed for-the man who in his motives, his means, his plans, and his successes must ever be a wonder, a puzzle, and a mystery-John Brown was hanging between heaven and earth. Among the letters written by John Brown in the last few hours of his life was one to a friend in which he said: "I am quite cheerful. Men cannot imprison, or chain, or bind the soul. I go joyfully, in behalf of those millions that 'have no rights,' that this great and glorious, this Christian Republic, 'is bound to respect.' " Just before he was executed he is said to have declared, "I am worth more to the cause hung than I am alive."

Christmas Invitation

By Katherine Edelman

JACK TRESLAR hunched his broad shoulders deeper into the big chair, turning a new page of his book. He was reading a Christmas story, trying hard to become absorbed in the tale.

A sharp ring from the telephone brought him to his feet. Who could be calling him on Christmas eve?

A strange voice responded to his "hello." "I hate to bother you on Christmas eve, Mr. Treslar. But I'm ringing up to ask if it would be possible for you to come and spend Christmas with me. My name is Bevan Willers. I live out at Richmond. I have a big home, and-" "But-but I don't even know you,

Mr. Willers. There must be some mistake." "I want you!" the low voice was emphatic. "Will you come or not?" Jack repressed a quick exclamation. "I—I had thought of spending Christmas-" he began. "Wouldn't it be possible to change your plans? I have a feeling they could be side-tracked easily.' Jack thought of the lonely Christmas he had been anticipating. After all, there might be something to this unusual invitation.

"You are right about my plans," he admitted. "They are rather in the air. But—but going to spend Christmas with an utter stranger Had Mother Rode Alongtook me back for a moment."

"That's why I thought you might come." There was a note of disappointment in Bevan Willers' voice. "I probably got the wrong man,

Jack thought again of the lonely Christmas before him. And before he could debate the question, he heard a voice inside of him answering, calling through the wire to Richmond, "You got the right man, Mr. daughter, "they didn't get our Willers. I'm coming.'

An hour later, bathed and dressed, Jack Treslar was speeding along the frosted highway to Richmond. Following the detailed instructions that had been given him, Jack found the long winding drive leading from the horse and cart, too." roadway. What a secluded, ghostly place, he thought, as he drove under the snow-sprinkled trees.

BEVAN WILLERS was waiting. In the dim light from the chandelier, his tall bent figure seemed grotesque. "I have let the servants away for the evening," he said, his bony hand motioning toward the end of the shadowed hall. Jack Treslar felt a twinge of fear as he followed. Here he was-alone in the house with this strange old man. Anything could happen. There wasn't another residence within blocks. Then, his adventurous spirit reasserted itself, and he looked smilingly across the table at Bevan Willers. "Well, what's it all about?" A dead silence was the only answer. Gray eyes under heavy bristling brows stared at him intently. Jack stared back unflinchingly. Then a hearty laugh rang through the library. With amazement Jack saw the old man straighten up in his chair. Years seemed to fall off his shoulders. The twisted, grotesque appearance vanished as if by magic. He spoke quietly.

"I'm not crazy," he began; "I'm just a lonely old fellow, ticketed as a sort of recluse. The true facts are that I've been trying for years to write. Yesterday I got word that a story of mine had been accepted."

"But I still don't understand your strange invitation, and-" Jack in-

"I'm coming to that," Bevan Willers continued. "The hero of my book is a daring, adventurous fellow. A man willing to answer a strange call that came in the night. I got intrigued with the fellow, and began thinking. Wondering if there was any young fellow who would act as he had done. So I rang the first hotel that came to mind and described my hero. Young, unmarried, interesting sort of chap. Pretended his name had slipped my mind for the moment. They connected me with your room. You know the rest."

Jack stretched out his long arm across the desk, and gripped the old man's hand. "Now that I'm here, Mr. Willers, do you still believe you have got the right man." There was wistful entreaty in his dark eyes. "I don't just think—I'm absolutely positive.
