Ads, Telephone Make Excellent Sales Combine

By GEORGE T. EAGER

THE essence of good sales-I manship is to make it easy for customers to buy. But despite the fact that the number of telephone calls made each day exceeds the number of letters written each day, many business men who advertise their goods or services, fail to list their telephone number in advertisements, circulars and letters.

A few days before last New Year's day the sales manager of an important book publishing company noticed a large display advertisement of a restaurant in the local newspaper of a small town in Pennsylvania. Although most of the space was used to urge customers to telephone their reservations for New Year's Eve, the restaurant failed to publish the very telephone number that customers were expected to call. The sales manager had a good time showing the advertisement to business friends and commenting on the inefficiency of small town business men.

His own duties involved the advertising of a set of reference books selling for several hundred dollars a set, and directing a sales force of 80 salesmen to follow up the written requests for booklets describing the set. Many of these inquiries came from children who could not buy and were therefore a constant cause of annoyance and wasted effort. In the midst of his scoffing at the restaurant advertisement that carried no telephone number, he suddenly realized that his own advertisements, circulars and letters did not feature the telephone number of his own local office. It was immediately added to his advertising. He discovered that telephone in quiries about the reference books came only from interested people and resulted in a high percentage of sales. He also found that although children may write for booklets they do not telephone for them. A cause of wasted effort and expense was thus eliminated by fea-turing the telephone number.

devote a great deal of thought and attention to his business. He is generally thinking about it most of the time. But this in 11/2 cups of rich milk (or half intense interest leads him to see his business from the inside and to completely miss the outside point of view. He is like Yankee Doodle who, "could not see the town, it was so thick with houses.'

The most important function of the advertising man in modern business is to supply this outside point of view-to see a business product or service as the customer sees it. It is the business of the advertising man to interpret the public to a business and to interpret a business to the public. A retail store, a bank, a laundry, a florist's shop-in fact, any enterprise that deals with the general public may have buried in it an interesting and appealing story that properly told would increase sales. Routine often keeps the very men responsible for its existence from appreciating its virtues.

It has been frequently observed that newspaper men and novelists who write most interestingly about the city are usually from the country. To their fresh point of view routine things become novel and vivid. Like the advertising man they have the outside point of view.

Every Home Actually Needs Guest Room

The guest room sounds like rank luxury in the household where company doesn't turn up very often. Actually every household does need a guest room so that hospitality can be an easy gracious part of every-day life. But this room should certainly not be idle in between . . it can have ever so many spare-time duties if you plan it thoughtfully. It might, for instance, be a study or a sewing room or both.

The first thing to include is plenty of closets or put-away space of some sort for hiding the room's other activities. If the room at your disposal doesn't have such facilities, then enlist the interest of the man of the family and make some changes. Two closets in parallel corners of the room, for instance, can have drawers below and cupboard space above, leaving an alcove between for a built-in dressing table. # Recall Story of 'Windwagon' Thomas Who Built the Queerest Vehicle That Ever Traveled the Santa Fe Trail

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

HINK of the Santa Fe Trail and you think of wagons - "wagons creaking up long prairie slopes; wagons rolling down hills; wagons grinding through heavy sand, sucking through sticky mud, swishing through tall grass; wagons with locked wheels plunging down steep river-banks; wagons snaked through clinging quicksands, or jiggling over ribbed sandbars rough as cobblestones; wagons hauled yard by painful yard up the forbidding rocks of the Raton Pass, two slow miles a day; wagons corraled against the attack of treacherous redskins: wagons broken down, abandoned, stranded by the loss of animals stolen by raiding savages; wagons burned in prairie fires; wagons warped and shrunken by the heat and drouth. Wagons crammed with rich furs, Mexican silver, gold bullion."

Thus writes Stanley Vestal in his book, "The Old Santa Fe Trail," published recently by the Houghton Mifflin company of Boston, and the first chapter in that volume of interesting yarns is devoted to the story of what was probably the queerest vehicles that ever traveled over that trail. The scene of this true story is laid in Westport, Mo., the eastern terminus of the trail, and is described by Mr. Vestal thus:

"One spring day in 1853, the citizens of that frontier town were amazed to see a light vehicle steering down the street, driven by the wind which filled its white sail. Horses reared and ran away, women and children fled into their houses, dogs scuttled for safety, and the men of Westport stood with open mouths, watching that strange craft come sailing in.

"Its pilot lowered the sail, locked his brakes, and rolled to a stop before the entrance to the Yoakum Tavern. He disembarked, and the startled citizens gathered to inspect his bark and

Navigator of the Prairie.

"They learned that his name from somewhere east, and that his sole cargo consisted of a compass, a water butt and a carpetbag. He walked like a seafaring man, and they suspected that he was tattooed under his faded monkey jacket. Was he a whaler, had he ever struck a fish? They could not tell, for Thomas wasted few words in telling of himself. He announced that he had come as the Navigator of the Prairies. and invited them to join with him and form a company to engage in the Santa Fe trade!

"In Yoakum's Tavern, leading citizens split a bottle with him, while he diverted them by explaining his plan. He proposed to build—with their backing—a fleet of large prairie clippers to carry cargo to the cussed Spaniards. The advantages of wind-power were numerous, according to the nautical stranger. Speed, economy, freedom from the expense of buying and the trouble of feeding draft animals, freedom to leave the Trail along the Arkansas River (since there would be no animals requiring water) and sail on the high prairies by compass. Westport was the outfitting place for all travelers bound west; it would be easy to have the wagons built there. Injuns would be scared of the strange craft. And there would never be any lack of wind to drive them.' All of which sounded perfectly logical. But, according to Mr. Vestal, there were skeptics in the crowd who suspected that there was a catch somewhere in the scheme proposed by this clever Yankee. They scoffed at his idea of building what they derisively referred to as a "dryland navy. By gum, they weren't going to put any money of theirs in such a crazy proposition!

Proved It Would Sail.

But Thomas wasn't discouraged by their skepticism. Just to prove that his plan was practicable he announced that he would sail his queer craft to Council Grove—150 miles away and then come back and make them eat their words about his "windwagon." As he left town in a cloud of dust and lumbered off across the prairie, they were quite sure that they would never see him again. But they were wrong, for in about a week he returned, bringing with him a letter from a man who ran a blacksmith shop at Council Grove as

A 'CLIPPER OF THE PRAIRIE'

Almost as strange as the "windwagon" described in this article was the vehicle conceived by the imaginative writer of one of the popular nickel novels of 50 years ago. Shown above is the illustration on the cover of No. 87 of Vol. IV of the Frank Reade Library which bore the title "Frank Reade Jr.'s Clipper of the Prairie; or, Fighting Apaches in the Far Southwest." This "prairie clipper" seems to have been a cross between a modern war tank and a trailer. The living quarters had an observation platform on the roof and a good-sized cannon mounted forward. It was propelled by steam on caterpillar-tread wheels and had a ram-like projection from the front with which that intrepid hero, Frank Reade Jr. ran down buffalo and impaled them!

The former skeptics were now convinced that he knew what he was talking about and they agreed to finance the construction of a super-windwagon. They organized the "Overland Navigation Company" and the stockholders included some of the most prominent citizens of Westport— Dr. J. W. Parker, the leading physician; Attorney J. J. Mastin; Benjamin Newson, the Indian agent; Henry Sager; Thomas W. Adams; and, of course, the inventor, "Windwagon" Thomas.

A Huge Wagon-Ship.

Under his direction there was built a huge prairie schooner, 25 feet long and with a seven-foot beam, mounted on four big wheels, each 12 feet in diameter. The sides of the wagon, which formed the "cabin" of this ship of the plains, rose to the top of the wheels and above it was the "deck." Toward the front was a tall mast which carried only a mainsail, but instead of the front being the prow, as it is on a seagoing vessel, the tail-gate of the wagon was the prow and the tongue of the wagon was brought up and over the stern to serve

Came the day when "Windwagon" was ready to demonstrate his land leviathan. It required two yoke of oxen to haul it out on the open prairie. Then the directors of the company—who, according to Mr. Vestal, had "fortified themselves at Yoakum's bar"-went aboard. That is, all of them did except Dr. Parker. Evidently he decided that his professional services might be needed before the "voyage" was over and he wanted to be able to supply them. So he mounted his favorite mount, a mule, and prepared to follow the bold navigator, Cap'n Thomas, who mounted the deck, hoisted his sail and reached for the tiller.

A strong wind was blowing and as it began to belly the huge sail, the wagon-ship got under way. Gradually it picked up speed and Dr. Parker had to "put the gad" to his mule to keep up with it. Cap'n Thomas' passengers were delighted when the windwagon started, thus justifying their faith in its navigability and reassuring them that they hadn't invested in something that would prove to be a failure. But as its momentum increased they began to be a little alarmed and as it went careening over hill and dale they became frightened. It was going so fast that they didn't dare jump out, as they wished to do. So they began to yell to the skipper to slow his craft down.

"Windwagon," however, was figuratively, if not literally, "on the crest of the wave," due partly to the stimulation of the cargo he had taken on at Yoakum's bar and partly to the heady wine of success. Instead of heeding their frightened cries and shortening sail, he began to demonstrate his

"Watch me run 'er against the wind!" he shouted as he put over the helm. That was a mistake, as he soon learned. For as the heavy ship-wagon came around, something went wrong. Evidently the wind caught her sail the wrong way for suddenly she went into reverse. The quick-footed mule on which Dr. Parker was riding jumped aside just in time, otherwise both it and its rider would have been run down.

Then the steering-gear seemed to have locked and before Cap'n Thomas knew what was happening his ship was going around and around in ever-widening circles. By now his passengers were terror-stricken. High as they were from the ground and risky as a jump was, they decided that it was high time to heed the urge to "abandon ship." While their befuddled skipper roared out orders in nautical terms which neither they-nor probably hecould understand, they leaped overboard. By some miracle of good fortune no one was killed and the worst anyone could charge up against the experience was a few bruises and a thoroughly agitated mind.

As for Cap'n Thomas, true to the traditions of the sea, he stuck by his ship, evidently determined to go down with flying colors and perish with it if need be. But there was no such dramatic end For within a few minutes his craft ended up with a bump against a stake-and-rider fence on the bank of Turkey creek and stopped suddenly, albeit so suddenly that he was jolted off and landed in a heap on the ground.

With this inglorious end to his first voyage, his dream of a fleet of prairie ships vanished. "Nothing Windwagon could say would induce the Company to build the rest of the fleet," writes Mr. Vestal. "The lubbers had no heart for prairie seafaring. They went back to their shops and their offices, put the venture down to profit and loss, and thanked heaven that they were still alive and What else could be expected of men who halted on the edge of the sea of grass?

'Windwagon' Vanishes.

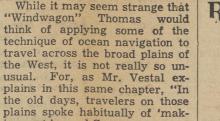

"But Windwagon remained undaunted. He embarked once more in the small, light craft in which he had come to Westport. made sail, and vanished as swiftly and mysteriously as he had come. History has no more to tell of him.

"Maybe he sailed away to shoot buffalo from the after-deck, or harpoon redskins daring enough to run afoul of him on their cruising ponies. Perhaps he ran hard aground in some deep valley or ravine, where no wind came to fill his sail, and no bull-whacker blundered in to haul him out upon the sandy plain. Perhaps the cussed Injuns found him thus becalmed, and hung his hair upon some pony's bridle.

"There are legends among the Indians of a vehicle seen on the prairie, a wagon that was bigger than any wagon, which moved without horses or oxen to draw it and carried a white 'flag' as tall as a tipi.* What became of the Navigator of the Plains will never be known.

"But, in two respects, his story is significant, showing us how men of those days thought of the Plains, with all the beauty and mystery of the sea, and also illustrating the dauntless character of the men who crossed them, made them their home."

* * * *According to Mr. Vestal's notes in the appendix to his volume, an account of this incident appeared in the Kansas City Star for August 6, 1905, and recent files of the Southwest Review gives a version of the Indian legend referred to.

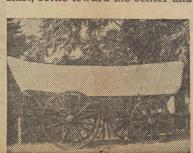

plains in this same chapter, "In the old days, travelers on those plains spoke habitually of 'making port,' urged Congress to enact navigation laws for the 'prairie ocean.' Their covered wagons, appropriately dubbed 'prairie schooners,' were in fact watertight boats mounted on wheels, rising high at prow and stern. They thought of the plains in terms of seafaring, and felt the glamour of them as a magic of the sea. They named the jumping-off place in Missouri, West-

The "prairie schooners" of Santa Fe trail and Oregon trail fame were modifications of the original "covered wagon," an eastern vehicle which was developed in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. This was the Conestoga wagon, which antedated the western "prairie schooner" by at least a century.

Although the first of these vehicles were modified English covered farm wagons, which came into use in New England and other places on the Atlantic seaboard early in the colonial days, local conditions in Pennsylvania -notably the greater distances between the producer and his market, which made it essential that the Pennsylvania farm wagon hold twice as much as the New England farm wagon, where distances were shorter, hence the sturdier built and heavier wagon requiring from four to eight horses to pull it—quickly resulted in the development of a distinctive type of wagon for this region.

Gradually the excellence of the wagons made by the wheel-wrights of the Conestoga valley of Lancaster county caused them to become famous throughout the country and "Conestoga wagon" became a sort of trademark for this type of freight carrier. They differed from the English wagons from which they sprang in that the bed was longer and deeper and had considerable sag in the middle, both lengthwise and crosswise. There was a very good reason for this. If, while the wagon was pursuing its way over some rough trail or down a steep mountainside, the load would shift, settle toward the center and not throw its bulk against the endgates. Unlike the bows, which held the white cover of the English wagon, which were vertical, the bows of the Conestoga followed the line of the ends of the body and slanted outward, thus keeping out rain and dust. The whole appearance of the Conestoga was that of a boat and, as John Omwake, author of "The Conestoga Six-Horse Bell Teams of Eastern Pennsylvania, 1750-1850," says, "It is easy to see why this wagon should have been called the Ship of Inland Commerce, as it cruised with its great white top between the green Pennsylvania hills."

The Conestoga wagon came into existence just in time to have a part in making American history. As early as 1745 Benjamin Franklin was issuing a broadside urging wagoners to enlist with their wagons and teams in the king's service against the French and Indians. Ten years later when General Braddock set out upon his ill-fated expedition it was very necessary that he have adequate transport for his provisions during his march into the wilderness. Securing this was only one of the many difficulties of that harassed leader and it was not until Benjamin Franklin came to his aid and persuaded the Pennsylvania wagoners to enlist that the expedition was able to make any progress westward.

The Conestoga wagons played their part, too, in the struggle for liberty. It was these vehicles which carried supplies to the American army during that terrible winter at Valley Forge and in the spring of 1778 a sturdy Conestoga wagon, drawn by four horses and with a full company of Continental soldiers as a guard, brought $600,000 in silver, the loan of the French government from Portsmouth, N. H., to the government treasury at York, Pa., (where the Continental congress was then meeting). But it was in the period after the Revolution that the Conestoga rose to its full glory—as the carrier of freight back and forth to the West and as the vehicle of the emigrants into the Kentucky and Ohio country. It also served once more as a weapon of war during the War of 1912 when Conestoga wagons carried powder from the Brandywine mills to Lake Erie, there to be used in Perry's brilliant victory at Put-in-Bay.

The great Conestoga wagons which carried such large loads of freight, required sturdy horses to draw them and gradually there evolved a breed of draft animals known as Conestoga horses which were as distinctive as the wagons themselves. They were the product of English or Flemish draft horses and Virginia mares and were a race of large, patient animals with short, arched necks, full manes, good legs, sleek round bodies and weighing around 1,400 pounds or riore.

Revival of Brocade Tunes to Vogue for Fabric Elegance

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

W HEN in a dress-up mood, what to wear is the question. The revival of brocade among fabrics of high fashion, as announced for spring, may well be regarded as a perfectly good answer to the query.

The big news is the neat-patterned brocades in necktie silk effects that make up into most wearable daytime frocks that are dressy at the same time that they are eminently practical.

If you are looking for a daytime frock that will guarantee style dis-tinction take note of the three swank afternoon types here illustrated. The material used for this trio of exceptionally smart fashions is the new-this-season brocade of damaskwoven bemberg rayon. You can get it in monotone or two-color effects, its high and low luster filaments producing a handsome brocade patterning. If you are your own seamstress, buy a few yards of this attractive brocade, provide yourself with a reliable pattern and turn on power for your electric sewing machine. ## New-Length Sleeve

Sleeve lengths grow capricious. The type most called for and one new in the field today is the braceletlength sleeve. The dress pictured is so sleeved. Another feature in current styling is that dresses are subtly designed to achieve "lines" that take inches off the strategic points so as to slim the figure according to fashion's way of thinking. Details that accomplish this feat in the gown pictured are wide shoulders so as to make the waistline look smaller in comparison, darts above the waistline to accent the new "nipped in" look, and smoothness around the hips. ### Garment Bags Made From Odds - Lu Ends

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I thought you might be interested in how I made garment bags for each member of my family, almost entirely from things I had on hand. The foundation part of each was made of 1/2-inch board; a screw-eye; a hook from a hanger; and five small screw hooks underneath. For the bag, I combined muslin flour sacks with odds and ends of figured cottons and trimmed the joinings with bias tape. I followed your directions in SEWING Book 2, for initials of bias tape to mark the bags."

At the upper left is sketched the foundation that this reader used. If a zipper is used for the opening, the 36-inch length is best. If you put it in a curved line, your will have a wider opening. Each step in applying the zipper in this way is shown here.

THE AMERICAN SPIRIT

66 JF EVERY citizen will cease to look to Washington in his moment of stress and strain, and individually assume the responsibility of self-improvement, of self-advancement, of self-preservation, I believe the turning point then may be reached, and from that instant we begin again to be a happy, a contented, a prosperous people with eyes raised high to greet a new day. This is the American way, this is the American creed, this is the American spirit."-U. S. Representative Albert E. Austin.

NEW YORK.—Word comes from London that Sir Seymour Hicks, who, last September, became official bucker-up of British civilians, Sir Seymour's Laughter Bombs exploding laugh bombs Buck Up British all over the kingdom, which eventually may blow down the Siegfried wall like the trumpets of Jericho.

Sir Seymour, who had a similar job in the World war, is England's favorite light comedy actor, a leading producer and actor-manager, a writer of consequence and a rallying point for both masses and classes, as they both claim him as their own. He is 78 years old and last month celebrated his fifty-second year on

He started life as a call boy in a London theater. His next job was as an undertaker's mute, a hired mourner, sometimes filling in as an emergency pall-bearer and the like. He wore black well and did nicely in his new career, until his memories of the theater obtruded at an unfortunate moment. He was walking solemnly behind a hearse, when a distant band struck up a tune, which carried him back-stage again. He swung open the door of the hearse and called out, "The overture begins now, sir."

That shunted him right back to the theater, which, by all accounts, he never should have left. He has written and produced 64 plays and is the author of eight books of reminiscence, comment and criticism. He was knighted in 1935, and Mayfair made a tremendous fuss over him, with similar cheers from the populace. In the World war he organized concerts and shows for the soldiers and kept up a drum-fire of spirited humor which rated him as the leading empire morale-builder.

DINING with Henry F. Grady many years ago, this writer noted that he had that old-time freetrade religion. He has never backslid. He is Grady Sticks to

Secretary Old-Time Free Hull's Jephthah, girded Trade Religion to smite the Ammonites hip and thigh as they assail the secretary's trade agreements program.

Mr. Grady, 57-year-old Celtic cialist in foreign trade, is assistant secretary of state and has taken over the job of expounding and putting forward the agreements. The law authorizing the plan will expire June 12. and the continuation of this trade policy will be an early and exciting kick-off in congress.

Mr. Grady, a San Franciscan, educated at St. Mary's university, Baltimore, is a man of encyclopedic learning in trade matters, a lecturer at many universities, the author of many books and treatises and a member of many learned societies. He boils down a mountain of data and statistics to his vehement insistence that, no matter how we may tinker with tariffs and quotas, the only helpful reality is the flux of good through the international bloodstream.

He was designated secretary of the Leningrad Communist party committee on December 16, 1934. That made him a virtual dictator of the Leningrad district, the Pittsburgh of Russia. M. Zhdanoff has been particularly bitter against Britain, and several correspondents have attributed to him the disruption of last summer's negotiations of the allied powers with the So-

He is 43 years old, a Revolutionist since 1912, when he left school to engage in agitation against the czarist government. Until 1917, he was chiefly occupied dodging the police and joined the army as a germcarrier for the Bolsheviks. In the early revolutionary years, he was one of the leading organizers of party propaganda and was thrown into close association with Josef Stalin. It was the beginning of a beautiful friendship, which, quite possibly, the skiing Finns have dynamited. He is of a middle class family, one of the cleverest wordsmiths of Red Russia. "Dear Alben" Barkley settled cal trade act and national defense: down for six months in Washington. "We'll be here until June," he told reporters, "but I doubt if there will be much new legislation. There probably will be efforts to amend the Wagner act and the wage-hour law. The reciprocal trade treaty program probably will cause the greatest controversy." He told no lie there, and President Roosevelt knew it. Striking fast, before the opposition had a chance to open its mouth, the President keynoted the second session of the seventy-sixth congress in a stateof-the-union speech which attacked the "destructive mine-field of trade restrictions." Plumping for renewal of his "most-favored-nation" program in which the administrationnot congress—has the power to sign trade pacts, he offered this defense: it is advisable to provide, at times of emergency, some flexibility to make the general law adjustable to quickly changing conditions." Only one other concession did he want in 1940, because it is an election year: "I am asking the congress for army and navy increases which are based not on panic but on common sense.' Conservation of resources, protection of national health, extension of social security and the merit system were also mentioned, but in a moderate voice. Only out-andout political dart was a crack at G. O. P. Hopeful Tom Dewey, who recently accused the New Deal of "defeatism." Said the President: "To warble easy platitudes that if we will only go back to the ways that have failed, everything will be all right—is not courage."

Next day congress got the budget.

COURTS:

Tell It to Congress

Well-timed if its intention was to heighten congressional demands for revision of the Wagner act, a decision by the Supreme court upheld the much-criticized National Labor Relations board on three counts:

(1) For refusing to place an allegedly company-dominated union on ballots used in a bargaining agency election at the Falk corpora-

(2) For designating a C. I. O. union as collective bargaining agency for waterfront workers along the Pacific coast.

(3) For ordering employees of the Jackson, Mich., power company to vote on the question of affiliation with C. I. O., after a ballot on C. I. O. versus A. F. of L. had brought no majority vote.

These decisions offered no particular commendation of NLRB, however. Commented Justice Harlan Stone: ". . . this failure (of congress) to provide for a court review (of NLRB decisions) is productive of peculiar hardships . . . But these are arguments to be addressed to congress and not to the courts."

'Pressure Groups' Already Are Worrying Members of Congress

New Deal Agencies, Seekers After Justice and Promoters Of Various Movements Active as Usual; Old Age Pensions, Unemployment Insurance Not Neglected.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON .- About the time, ber of seekers after justice in Washcongress reconvenes each year, the | ington. national capital is deluged with what have come to be known as 'pressure groups." It is a poor description. I believe most of them can be called "selfish groups" for the reason that the self-righteous in- forthcoming census certain quesdividuals who lead (or promote) movements or causes or demands for justice usually have jobs of their own at stake.

They want to keep their followers | cated reports. The church reprehappy, especially the saps who contribute hard-earned dimes or dollars so that their representative or their delegation may put up a good front in the city of Washington.

Any way, it is the open season for them, again. They are busier than a hive of bees. They are engaged in the annual invasion upon senators and representatives and among the numerous New Deal agencies, seeking justice, urging help for those whose liberties are being trampled into the mud, appealing for this and that and the other.

There are the usual spokesmen for corporations and groups of corporations. They, too, are seekers after justice. They are no more selfish than the lesser racketeers. Those fellows, however, have a different kind of stake in the results. The seekers after individual justice,

May Be Just Tuning Up For the Election Campaigns

There is, however, something disturbing about this year's invasion. It seems to be utterly impossible that so many new injustices could have arrisen within the last year. There always has been a considerable amount of this low form of high pressure around Washington, but the increased number of seekers after justice this year would seem to | national headquarprove that the whole country has ters here. What is gone to pieces. It may be, of course, that they are tuning up for the election campaigns.

Seriously, however, few persons have been able to analyze the situation. Some suggest that the current trek of seekers after justice results from the fact that the national government has become the focal point for "relief" from everything since the depression fell upon us in 1930. Others feel that a sense of futility about life, itself, has crept into this country from the lands where dictators hold a human life to be nothing more than a chattel.

If either of these answers is correct, we have a dangerous condition on our hands. It is the defeatist

It represents a decaying civilization and national leaders had better wake up to what it means.

Now, lest someone charge me with having changed my tune from several years ago, I want to recall that

I once feebly attempted to pin a senator's ears back for seeking legislation to make everyone register who visited a senator or a representative in behalf of legislation. He wanted to brand each one as a lob-

I maintain that everyone has the right of petition to any government agency. What I am trying to do here, however, is to show that there are so many more 'petitioners' now than heretofore 50 business organizations and trade and to find the reason for it. Many Seekers After

Then Eloise and Edith came in, and presently the men, and Lucy and Del from a trip to the small porkers, and Adelaide going out with Del to dinner was uncomfortably aware that Jane had either artlessly or artfully refused to discuss with her the women who had been loved by Frederick Towne!

The dinner was delicious. "Our farm products," Delafield boasted. Even the fish, it seemed, he had caught that morning, motoring over to the river and bringing them back to be split and broiled and served with little new potatoes. There was chicken and asparagus, small cream cheeses with the salad, heaped-up berries in a Royal Worcester bowl, roses from the garden. "All homegrown," said the proud new hus-

Jane was young. And to youth, love is for the eternities. The thought of herself as one of a succession of Dulcineas was degrading. She was restless and unhappy. It was useless to assure herself that Towne had chosen her above all the rest. She was not sophisticated enough to assume that it is, perhaps, better to be a man's last love than his first. That Towne had made it possible for any woman to speak of him as Adelaide spoke, seemed to Jane to drag her own relation to him in the dust.

The strength of the wind increased. The table was sheltered by the house, but at last Delafield decided, "We'd better go in. The rain is coming. We can have our coffee in the hall."

Their leaving had the effect of a stampede. Big drops splashed into the plates. The men servants and maids scurried to the rescue of china and linen.

The draperies of the women streamed in the wind. Adelaide's tulle was a banner of green and blue. The peacock came swiftly up the walk, crying raucously, and found a sheltered spot beneath the

From the wide hall, they saw the rain in silver sheets. Then the doors were shut against the beating wind.

They drank their coffee, and bridge tables were brought in. There were enough without Jane to form two tables. And she was glad. She wandered into the living-room and curled herself up in a window-seat. The window opened on the porch. Beyond the white pillars she could see the road, and the rain-drenched

After a time the rain stopped, and the world showed clear as crystal against the opal brightness of the western sky. The peacock came out of his hiding-place, and dragged a long, heavy tail over the sodden lawn. It was cool and the air was sweet. Jane lay with her head against a cushion, looking out. She was lonely and wished that Towne would come. Perhaps in his presence her doubts would vanish. It grew dark and darker. Jane shut her eyes and at last she fell asleep. She was waked by Towne's voice. He was on the porch. "Where is everybody?"

It was Adelaide who answered him. "They have motored into Alexandria to the movies. Eloise would have it. But I stayed-waiting for you, Ricky." "Where's Jane?"

"She went up-stairs early. Like a sleepy child.'

Jane heard his laugh. "She is child-a darling child." Then in the darkness Adelaide said, "Don't, Ricky."
"Why not?"

The lightning flickering along the horizon showed Adelaide standing beside Towne's chair. "Ricky" - the whispered words

CHAPTER XVI

Young Baldwin Barnes, on Saturday morning, ate breakfast alone in the little house. He read his paper and drank his coffee. But the savor of things was gone. He missed Jane. Her engaging chatter, the spirited challenge, even the small irritations. "She is such a darling-

dear," was his homesick meditation. Oh, a man needed a woman on the other side of the table. And when Jane was married, what then?

Oh, if he might! If Philomel might sing for her! Toast and poached eggs! Nectar and ambrosia! His little house a castle!

"But it isn't mine own," the young still the mortgage." He came down pussy-cats. Then he went down to the post-box to get the mail.

The Barnes' mail was rarely voluminous, rarely interesting. A bill or two, a letter from Judy—some futile advertising stuff.

This morning, however, there was a long envelope. In one corner was the name of the magazine to which, nearly six months before, Baldy had sent his prize cover design. The thing had almost gone out of his thoughts. He had long ceased to hope. Money did not miraculously fall into one's lap.

He tore open the envelope. Within was a closely typed letter and a pale pink check. The check was for two thousand dollars. He had won the prize!

Breathless with the thought of it, deprived of strength, he sat down on the terrace steps. Merrymaid and the kitten came down and angled for attention, but Baldy overlooked them utterly. The letter was astounding. The magazine had not only given him the prize but they wanted more of his work. They would pay well for it-and if he would come to New York at their expense, the art editor would like to talk it over!

Baldy, looking up from the pregnant phrases and catching Merrymaid's eye upon him, demanded, Towne, riding like mad along the Virginia roads.

'Now, what do you think of that? tell the world, I will.

Oh, the thing might even make it possible for him to marry Edith. He could at least pay for the honeymoon—preserve some sense of personal independence while he worked towards fame. If she would only see it. That he must ask her to live for a time-in the little house. He'd make things easy for her-oh, well, the thing could be done-it could be no harm in looking his best He arrived at Grass Hills in time for lunch. His little flivver came up the drive as proudly as a limousine. And Baldy descending was a gay and gallant figure. There was no one in sight but the servants who took his bag, and drove his car around to the garage. A maid in rose linen said that Mr. and Mrs. Simms were at the stables. Miss Towne was on the links with the other guests, and would return from the Country Club in time for lunch at two o'clock. Miss Barnes was up-stairs. Her head had ached, and she had had her breakfast in bed. "Will you let her know that I am here?"

The maid went up and came down to say that Miss Barnes was in the second gallery-and would he go right up.

The second gallery looked out over the river. Jane lay in a long chair. She was pale, and there were shadows under her eves. "Oh, look here, Janey," Baldy blurted out, "is it as bad as this?" "I'm just-lazy." She sat up and kissed him. Then buried her face in

"Of course not. A girl like you. You'd be miserable. And that's the end of it."

"Utterly miserable." She stared before her. Then presently she went on. "I stayed up-stairs all the morn-Lucy and Edith have been perfect dears. I think Edith lays it to the announcement of my engagement tonight. That I was dreading it. Of course it mustn't be announced, Baldy."

He stood up, sternly renouncing his dreams. "Get your things on, his dreams. "Get your things on, Jane, and I'll take you home. You can't stay here, of course. We can

He gave Jane the letter and she read it. "It is your great opportunity." "Yes." He refused to discuss that aspect of it. "And it comes in the nick of time for you, old dear." Their flight was a hurried one. A note for Lucy and one for Towne. A note for Edith! Jane was not well was the reason given their hostess. The note to Towne said more than that. And the note left for Edith was-renun-

Edith coming home to luncheon found the note in her room. All the morning she had been filled with glorious anticipation. Baldy would arrive in a few hours. Together they would walk down that trellised path to the fountain, they would sit on the marble coping. She would trail her hand through the water. Further than that she would not let her imagination carry her. It was enough that she would see him in that magic place with his air of golden youth.

But she was not to see him, for the note said:

"Beloved—I make no excuse for calling you that because I say it always in my heart—Jane has made up her mind that she cannot marry your uncle. So we are leaving at

"I can't tell you what the thought of these two days with you meant to me. And now I must give them up. Perhaps I must give you up, I don't know. I came with high hopes. I go away without any hope at all. But I love you."

Edith read the note twice, then put it to her lips. She hardly dared admit to herself the keenness of ner disappointment.

She stood for a long time at the window looking out. Why had Jane decided not to marry Uncle Frederick? What had happened since yesterday afternoon? From Edith's window she could see the south lawn. The servants were arranging a buffet luncheon. Little tables were set around-and wicker chairs. Adelaide, tall and fair, in her favorite blue and a broad black hat stood by one of the little Shall I resign from the office? I'll tables. She was feeding the peapicture, and Towne's window faced that way.

"I wonder-" Edith said, and stopped. She remembered coming in from the movies the night before and finding Adelaide and Towne out on the porch. And where was Towne did not eat lunch. He pleaded important business, and had his car brought around. But everybody knew that he was following Jane. Mystery was in the air. Adelaide was restless. Only Edith knew the truth.

After lunch, she told Lucy. "Jane isn't going to marry Uncle Fred. I don't know why. But I am afraid that it is breaking up your house party."

"I hope it is," said Lucy, calmly. "Delafield is bored to death. He wants to get back to his pigs and roses. I am speaking frankly to you because I know you understand. want our lives to be bigger and broader than they would have been if we hadn't met. And as for you" -her voice shook a little-"you'll always be a sort of goddess blessing our hearth."

Edith bent and kissed her, emotion gripping her. "Your hearth is blessed without me," she said, "but I'll always be glad to come.

Towne, riding like mad along the Virginia roads, behind the competent Briggs, pondered over Jane's

"I was not up-stairs last night when you came. I was asleep in the window-seat of the living-room, just off the porch. And your voice waked me and I heard what you said, and Mrs. Laramore. And I can't marry you. I know how much you've done for me-and I shall never forget your goodness. Baldy will take me home.'

Enclosed was a pink check. Towne blamed Adelaide furiousy. Of course it was her fault. Such oolishness. And sentimentality. And he had been weak enough to fall for it. Yet, as he cooled a bit, he was glad that Jane had showed her resentment. It was in keeping with his conception of her. Her innocence had flamed against such sophistication. There might, too, be a hint of jealousy. Women were like that.

As they whirled through Washington, Briggs voiced his fears. "If we meet a cop it will be all up with us, Mr. Towne.

The famous Brighton Belle pulled out of Hollywood the other day for scenes in that same picture. station, however, was a replica of the famous Victoria station, the train was a replica of the Brighton Belle, which covers the 62 miles between London and Brighton in 40 minutes, and the men who filed it. minutes, and the men who filled it were extras, not British Tommies.

But to many who watched, the atmosphere was the same as it would have been in the original setting. Producer Edward Small could not shoot the scene in London because of the present war, but in portraying a scene that dates back to the last one he brought to California, for a moment, all the feeling that fills the railway stations of Europe in these times, as trains filled with soldiers leave for the

A case of appendicitis was responsible for the March of Time's exclusive film of the island of Guam. Victor Jurgens, the 26-year-old camera man who last year filmed the March of Time's memorable motion picture story on Japan, was stricken with appendicitis while on his way to Guam; he was operated on at sea by navy surgeons, recuperated at Guam, and spent his time filming all aspects of civil and military life on the important little island. It is part of the new release, "Crisis in the Pacific," and is one of the best films the M. of T. has given us.

"Four Wives" proves that it's possible for a sequel to live up to the reputation established by a popular film. People liked "Four Daughters" so much that it seemed unlikely that the picture carrying the story along could be anything but a disappointment. "Four Wives" is so well done that it will make new friends for the family it portrays so engagingly.

Kay Francis will appear in "It's a Date" as Deanna Durbin's mother -a very glamorous mother, an actress. Norma Shearer may have a mother role, too, in the film version of the popular novel, "Escape." But since the mother in "Escape" who is also a famous actress, by the way-is middle aged and has a grown son, it seems likely that the story will be rewritten for Miss Shearer's benefit.

By a strange coincidence, Patsy Montana, "cowgirl sweetheart" of radio station WLS, Chicago, goes on the air every morning at exactly the same time as her brother does at station KSOO in Sioux Falls, S. D. It's rather hard on their proud mother—not only do they broadcast at the same hour, but it's 6:15 a. m.

Dave Elman will never have a seal on his "Hobby Lobby" program again if he can help it. The one he had recently cost him about $35. It had to be fed pieces of fish, frequently. The supply of fish, which had seemed ample, disappeared in no time, and Elman had to keep sending out to restaurants near the Columbia playhouse for more. The restaurants in that part of New York are far from cheap; the fact that the fish was for a seal instead of a human being didn't affect the price. So, if your hobby has anything to do with seals, don't try to land on the Elman program; at least, not until he has forgotten how expensive fish can be.

ODDS AND ENDS - Walt Disney's 'Pinocchio" will be released in February Robert Montgomery is going to England again, to make pictures... One more change of title for "Send Another Coffin"—this time it's "Slightly Honorable." (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Sweet Potato Starch

Sweet potatoes are becoming important as a source of starch, which in addition to usual applications can be made to yield a desirable sirup, says "Industrial and Engineering Chemistry."

Oregon Onions United States market service statistics indicate that Oregon may become the onion state of the Union. Preliminary figures for this year show a record-breaking yield of 84,-

Chinese Boy Thought One Letup Deserved Another

In a Shanghai bungalow shared by several young Englishmen, the Chinese houseboy had a perfectly round head which he kept shaved and polished like a billiard ball. The young men were always taking pot shots at this tempting target with paper pellets or giving it a pat as they passed by. To all of which the Chinese said nothing. One day they decided it was a shame to keep worrying the boy, so they called him in and told him they had decided to stop doing it. He replied: "Thank you, masters. I very pleased. Now I not make your coffee with dishwater any more."

Confetti Popcorn

2 quarts pop corn 3/2 cup water
2 cups sugar Vegetable coloring
2 tablespoons butter 1 teaspoon flavoring

Divide pop corn into three equal portions. Combine sugar, butter, water, and coloring; bring to boil and cook until the syrup spins a thread (about 15 minutes). Add the flavoring. Pour over popped corn and stir until kernels are sugar coated and separated. Repeat process three times, using a different color and flavor each time: mix batches.
