Two Youths Die in Crash Near Dover

William Vockel, Jr., 18, of Bowers Beach, and William Tribbett, from the same place, are dead as the result of an automobile accident on Route 113, at Moore's Lake, on mile south of Dover, Tuesday.

Vockel, who was given first aid at the Kent General Hospital, was taken to the Memorial Hospital in the Smyrna American Legion Post ambulance. He died a short time later.

Tribbett was given a 50-50 chance to live, following an operation at the Kent General Hospital. However, after two blood transfusions were given, he died, a few hours later.

The condition of William Tribbett's twin brother, John Tribbett, was reported to be fair.

Others treated at the same hospital and released were: Linwood Jackson, bruised left leg; Walter Vannaman, 18, head injury; Clark Ney, 19, sprained back.

According to state police the truck, occupied by the boys, all National Youth Administration enrollees, attempted to pass another automobile. At that moment, another car, driven by Mrs. Grace Wharton, 36, of near Dover, started to pass the truck, and the two vehicles collided, police said.

Witnesses said the impact tossed the six youths from the truck, with Vockel landing head first on the concrete highway. Passing motorists took the injured to the hospital.

Later, Lynwood Jackson, 19, driver of the truck, and Mrs. Wharton were arrested and held under $1,000 bail each by Judge John P. LeFevre in the Kent County Court of Common Pleas on charges of assault and battery.

SHALL HITLER RULE AMERICA?

BY L. LEE LAYTON, JR.

People carry fire and life insurance for years without using it. The prospects of Hitler conquering the U. S. A. are greater than the average insurance risk—yet people won't spend the time and energy to keep Hitler out.

If a bomb burst and kill a few people, everybody would try to help. But most people won't help to keep thousands of bombs from bursting over here. While we have a lot to fear from Hitler, we have even more to fear from our own indifference and the Chamberlains in our midst.

The Chamberlains have done the world more damage than Hitler. In the first place, there is only one Hitler, and there are thousands of Chamberlains, although most of them go by other names. Hitler is only one person, with some human traits, combined with the inhuman qualities of the buzzard, the tiger, and the rat. He has only one mouth and one brain. In spite of the fact that he is a good organizer and has inspired fanatical devotion among millions, nevertheless, he is not a super-man. Although there is danger that he will control this country in less than eighteen months, it would only be because he was helped by Chamberlains and their type.

Think of the original Chamberlain in England today. If he is human, think of the Hell he is living through, every day that he learns of the slaughter of men, women, and children in the British Isles, for which he and his friends are responsible. But he is not the only one in England who suffers the pangs of remorse. And if Hitler conquers us, there will be thousands of unconscious Chamberlains in this country who will always regret their earlier actions.

One of Chamberlain's crowd admitted he knew in 1935 that England was in danger from Hitler. He admitted that, if he and his party had been frank about it, they would have lost the election. Politicians in this country, who are more interested in the election than they are in the safety of their country, are like the Chamberlains in England five years ago.

While German slaves were working long hours preparing for the war, British and French labor leaders were engaging in short hours and were fighting about labor conditions. That condition was corrected, but too late. Today, in this country, our labor leaders are apparently more interested in social welfare than they are in the condition of the country as it would be under Hitler—concentration camps or death for the labor leaders, slavery hours and wages for the workers. There are many Chamberlains among the labor leaders.

Some French industrialists were more concerned in making money than they were in the future of their country, and helped sell France out. The people in this country, who are more interested in making a dollar than they are in the future of their country, don't realize that they are Chamberlains, big industrialists, who refuse to consider anything but their own short-sighted interests. We have little Chamberlains, thousands of them, who say, "I realize that this country is in terrible danger, but there is nothing I can do about it. You see, in business, you must be careful; otherwise, you will lose customers". Yes, we have our little Chamberlains, as well as big ones.

Some people say "We should not send any war materials to England, as we need them all for our own defense". After Munich, Chamberlain's defenders stated that he did the best thing, as they needed time to prepare. But when the war finally did take place, Great Britain was worse off than she would have been at the time of Munich. Think of all the potential allies Chamberlain sacrificed or allowed to join Hitler. Do the Chamberlains of England regret their previous actions? If they are human, they do. What will our Chamberlains think of themselves when we have to fight the rest of the world without any allies because we let Great Britain be destroyed when we might have saved her?

It will take from five to seven years to build a two-ocean navy to defend ourselves. Nevertheless, we are starting to build it. Why? Because we fear Hitler. We are starting on an immense program for building up the army and air force that can't be finished in less than a year or so. Will Germany wait for several years while we are getting prepared? Of course not. The only chance of getting the time to build up our defenses is by helping England now with everything we have, in order to keep Hitler surrounded by the British navy that much longer. Yet our Chamberlains don't say so.

In addition to the Chamberlains, a real joy of Hitler's heart is the vast, inert, jelly-like mass of the American public, easy prey for the fifth columnists. When some people say "I don't think we are in any danger from

As he had received payment for some farm produce, some suspected foul play. All the local amateur sleuths quickly assembled and searched every barnlot, vacant lot and hilltop, but to no avail. Lights were kept burning in all windows in case the slight eastern storm which visited this section had obliterated all familiar landmarks. However, on Sunday morning, all efforts were rewarded by seeing the wayward one return, slightly ruffled and perturbed, but evidently profiting by a much needed rest and vacation.

Result That Counts
He had just treated his girl friend to a restaurant dinner, and as they departed from the food shop, she said—'Don't you think it is bad form to sop up your gravy with your bread?'
He replied—'It may be bad form, but it's very good taste.'

Pity Mother
Hubby—Why are you crying, dear?
Wife—Cook has left, and poor mother has all the work to do.

Professional Pride

Hungry and tired after his long walk, Weary Willie at last came to a wayside cottage.
'Please, ma'am,' he said to the kindly woman who came in answer to his knock, 'could you spare me an old coat?'
The cottager looked down at the tramp's garments.
'But, my good man,' she said, in tones of deep surprise, 'the one you are wearing is nearly new.'
'I know, ma'am,' said Willie, despairingly. 'It's this coat that's ruining my profession.'

The One Who Won

Miss Slater—Are you living in the handsome house left you by your aunt, Colonel—the house you went to law about?
Colonel—No, my lawyer resides there.

Justified Protest

Two boys had to write their name 500 times for talking in the classroom. Presently one voiced his complaint thus: 'It's not fair, Miss Brown. His name is Bush and mine is Schluttermeyer.'

POLITICAL CHATTER

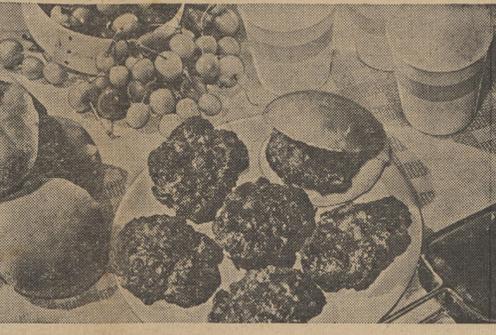

Friend—Then you expect the other party to win, of course?
Suggestion
'Now, we'll play zoo,' said Willie. 'I'll be the elephant.'
'That will be fine,' said Aunt Mabel. 'But what shall I be?'
'Oh, you can be the nice lady that feeds the elephant buns and sugar.'

Everything

'How is everything at your house?' asked the friend of the bridegroom.
'Oh, she's all right,' responded the young husband happily.

WHEN YOU PLAN A PICNIC FOR A CROWD (Recipes Below.)

Community picnics are fun! They offer an opportunity for a carefree day under the open sky—carefree for even the chairman in charge of affairs, if she's planned her program well and chosen her helpers wisely.

If the crowd to be served is a really large one, it's a good idea to have one committee member responsible for each main dish such as meat, potatoes, salad, dessert, and beverage, and one responsible for extras such as buns, butter, relishes, etc. There'll be a serving committee and a clean-up committee, as well.

Picnics for four or five families are usually co-operative affairs. Each family may supply its own lunch, but more often each one provides one item in large enough quantities to serve the crowd. One family might provide the salad, one the meat, and still another family the dessert, which might be watermelon, a luscious chocolate cake, or a freezer full of old fashioned ice cream. With a little planning, the cost can be fairly equally distributed.

When an outing is in the offing and it's up to you to plan the menu for a crowd, you'll find these picnic pointers helpful.

1. If lunch is being prepared at home, choose foods that permit beforehand preparation, and that are not too difficult to carry or to serve.
2. Provide a fairly simple meal, with plenty of everything but not so much variety that it will cause confusion and lots of extra work.
3. Unless you are sure of a good water supply, it's better to carry the water from home.
4. Carry fruit juices, tomato juice or milk in thermos bottles.
5. The main dish for the picnic—which might be chili, baked beans, or scalloped potatoes, can be cooked the day before, then in the morning brought to the boiling point, and the Dutch oven or casserole wrapped in several thicknesses of newspaper to retain the heat.
6. Don't overlook the possibilities in frozen foods for picnic use. Quick-frozen meats can be carried, without ice, even on a warm day. They thaw out on the way to the picnic ground and will be ready to use.

You'll find other picnic pointers in my cook book, "Easy Entertaining." There are menus and tested recipes for beach parties, hikes and a "Colorado beefsteak fry."

When you write to me, won't you tell me something about the "community meals" your group has served? Do you serve dinners for the church, for business men's organizations or for the farm bureau, perhaps? How many people do you serve at meals like this, and what are your favorite menus? I'll be waiting to hear from you!

There's something very social and heartwarming about entertaining friends in your own home. And entertaining needn't be expensive, nor does it necessarily mean a lot of work!

- 1 teaspoon white pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon red pepper
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 1/2 tablespoons salt
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1 1/2 cups tomato puree or condensed tomato soup
- 1 1/2 quarts meat stock
- 3 large onions (sliced)

Cook the meat until tender in enough water to cover. Drain, and grind coarsely. Combine seasonings and flour. Add tomato puree and the meat stock, and cook for 5 minutes. Add to the creamed mixture alternately with the milk. Blend cocoa and boiling water. Add to the cake batter with the vanilla, and mix just until the batter is smooth. Pour into 3 8-inch square pans, which have been greased and lined with wax paper. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 30 minutes.

Lamps Should Be Fresh and Fashionable

By ELIZABETH MacRAE BOYKIN

A lady can wear a good coat or suit for years, providing she keeps her hats in the latest style. The same thing goes for a room. The basic furnishings needn't be changed often, but watch out to keep the lamps looking fresh and fashionable or the room will begin to look dated in no time.

That sounds more extravagant than we mean it to be. Fine lamp bases can usually survive many a cycle of fashion—it's the shades that need watching. But the cheaper bases reflect fads, and since their investment doesn't involve much replacement then to when they're "out." Right now the ones most of us could do without are those too-small lamps that speckled every room a few years back. They had parchment scenic shades or else pleated shades that would look dinky even if they weren't so dingy with use. So away with the likes of them!

Smart lamps now are big to start with and they have that I. E. S. indirect lighting unit that diffuses the light and eliminates those harsh shadows. And they have a crisp look whether they're white or pastel. Or a gleaming look if they're metal. Or the mellow look of woods and wood tones.

While white shades still lead, there are dramatic dark shades for Regency rooms, with punchwork or gold trimmings. Many dark shades are sprayed with gold or with another color in the room, creating a flecked effect. Rose shades, those romantic numbers of the early 1920s, are coming back, says an important designer, but in more sophisticated versions. Decalcomania designs on shades are important, and you'll be hearing more about horsehair braid for trimming. Yarn and string trimmings, braided and used in amusing ways, are seen on informal shades, as are such fabrics as linen, hosiery, homespun, plaid cottons, chintzes. Pleated shades are back but in new versions.

When stewing fruit, add the sugar just before taking the fruit off the stove. In this way far less sugar is needed than if it is put in at the beginning.

Make cuts in marshmallows, insert bits of butter and jelly. Arrange on crackers and broil or bake until the marshmallows are puffy and brown.

Mustard and baking powder settle in cans and should be stirred lightly before using.

Grass stains can easily be removed from linens, cottons or white stockings by rubbing the stains with molasses before washing.

Delicate colors in washing materials will not fade if before being washed they are soaked in tepid water to which a few drops of turpentine have been added.

All vegetables should be put on to cook in boiling water. This holds the major portion of the mineral matter and starch within.

The backs of pictures should be inspected from time to time. If there are any holes in the paper, fresh pieces should be pasted over them, or dust will get in.

Clean paint brushes used for enameling with turpentine. When used to shellac, clean with denatured alcohol.

Congressional Expenditures Pass Twenty-One Billion Dollar Mark

This money Could Buy Entire Railway System of U. S. Or House One-Fourth of Families in Nation, According to Survey by A. F. I.

William Bruckart, for many years Washington correspondent whose letters appeared in this newspaper, died suddenly Sunday, August 4. Temporarily the Washington letter will be written by Carter Field and others.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

By G. F.

WASHINGTON. — For the first time in American history one session of congress has authorized federal expenditures in excess of $20,000,000,000.

The nation was astonished and indignant in 1913 when two sessions of congress appropriated $1,000,000,000. It was our first "billion dollar congress."

In 1934, we had our first $10,000,000,000 session.

Six years later, between January 3 and August 15, 1940, the third session of the Seventy-sixth congress authorized spending to the extent of $21,439,678,000.

How much is $21,000,000,000. It would buy outright the entire railroad system of the United States—every mile of track, every bridge, terminal and yard, every piece of rolling stock and locomotive equipment, every mile of telephone and telegraph equipment, plus every station and siding.

The official reports of the Interstate Commerce commission place the current value of American railroads at roughly $20,000,000,000. The nation built up this railroad system over a period of 115 years.

It is difficult for the mind to grasp such spending. But we may reduce the authorizations of the present session to familiar terms. Let us assume that the whole amount authorized since January had been devoted to building houses at $3,000 each. That would be a substantial house—better than the average American home today. Federal appropriations for these eight months would build 7,000,000 such houses, or one for every fourth family in the United States.

Translated into bushels of wheat at current market prices, the expenditures approved for the program since January this year tell a more impressive story.

Assuming a farm price of 70 cents a bushel and an average yield of 30 bushels per acre, we arrive at a gross production of $21 per acre.

This means that it will take a billion acres of wheat to pay for the federal spending authorized in eight months—assuming the government took every ounce of the national farm production.

But, of course, we could not raise a billion acres of anything in a single year. The combined harvested area of all American farms and all crops is only 300,000,000 acres. This means it would take the full crop of three successive harvests, plus one-third of the fourth harvest, to pay the federal spending bill as approved in the year 1940 to date.

Stated another way, every American farm would have to produce its normal crop and turn everything over to the government for more than three years to pay for this first $20,000,000,000 congress.

This would mean nothing left on the farms for feed, seed, or family food supplies. It would leave nothing for routine operating expenses.

Our federal government is the fastest growing "industry" in the United States.

Recent official figures show public employment in 1939 as 125.3 per cent of 1929—despite a small decrease in the combined state and local payrolls over the decade.

Only one major sector of American industry employed more persons last year, as compared with 1929—the electric utilities, with employment at 102.4 per cent.

But total factory employment for 1939 was but 80.4 per cent of 1929.

Employment in retail trade was 75.6 per cent; and railroad employment, 64.7 per cent.

The U. S. civil service commission's July report shows a few more than 1,000,000 civil employees on the federal payroll—against 564,487 on March 4, 1933.

American industry in 1939 paid taxes aggregating $611 for every person on the payroll. This is the figure reported by the American Federation of Investors, on the basis of detailed reports from 183 leading corporations.

RECORD EXPENDITURE

For the first time in history, the United States congress appropriated a sum exceeding $21,000,000,000. Congressional expenditure passed the $1,000,000,000 mark for the first time in 1913, according to a recent study released by the American Federation of Investors. The study reveals that this sum equals the entire gross income from American farms for more than three years.

Installment Financing Is Found to Be Very Profitable

NEW YORK.—Sales finance companies, whose principal business is the financing of retail installment sales, as a rule realize a high rate of return on their invested capital. For national companies the rate of return is generally higher than it is for regional and local companies. The foregoing are two of the conclusions reached in a study published by National Bureau of Economics Research.

All taxes were 54 per cent of combined net before taxes. Seven corporations earned a profit but landed in the red after paying taxes. Taxes were $3.05 per common share outstanding, against dividends of $1.62 per common share paid for the year.

These corporations maintained average employment of 3,378,255 persons.

Conclusion of the study: "Ever-mounting tax burdens are not only a handicap to the national welfare, but also raise added problems for every manufacturer and business man. They directly affect every employee and stockholder. They increase the cost of doing business, and reduce or wipe out profits."

They Call It POLITICS

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON. — Aid to Britain has slipped into second place, with our own preparedness now first. This is not because President Roosevelt wants it that way. The President believes that aid to Britain is the best possible policy for the United States—that every day Britain holds off the Nazis gives the U. S. that additional day to prepare, that every weakening of Germany under the British defensive blows will make the eventual task of the United States that much easier. Put a little stronger, he believes that when we give the British soldiers and sailors something to fight with, we save the lives of American boys later on.

There is a very strong following for this theory throughout the country, entirely distinct from the group which sentimentally favors Britain as a country or as a form of government, in contrast with the dictatorship. Actually it is believed here that the Republican high command feels the same way, with the exception of the vice presidential nominee, Charles L. McNary.

Yet it is politics which has caused the President to turn cagy on new steps to aid Britain. He has to be SURE that he is not endangering his own re-election. Not because the high command of the Republicans would attack such an action, but because the isolationists are making such a determined effort to convince the public that Roosevelt is leading us down the path to war.

For instance, take the matter of these 50 destroyers. Ambassador Lord Lothian said in a radio interview a few weeks back that the greatest aid this country could give Britain IMMEDIATELY would be 50 of those World War destroyers. These are the destroyers which up until the present war broke out everyone thought would eventually be broken up for scrap. They had been packed in grease, with no thought of their ever being put in commission until last fall, when President Roosevelt ordered them put in shape for use. At that time there was much talk about the "neutrality patrol."

But later there came the torpedo-boat episode. It developed that the United States had built some of these little ships with 18-inch torpedo tubes, the size used by the British. We have no 18-inch torpedoes; our navy does not like them, preferring the 21-inch type.

Congress discovered by accident that these torpedo boats were to be turned over to the British and there was a terrific outcry from the isolationists. They protested despite the obvious absurdity of our keeping a type of boat which fires a different size torpedo from the one we use when the British were eager to pay for them, and we could use that money to build the type we do want.

So eager is the President to aid the British that there is no doubt he would have forced the issue, and have forced the issue more recently on the 50 old destroyers, if he were not alarmed by the strength shown by Wendell Willkie in the polls. As it is, he is afraid of alienating the followers of the isolationists—just a few of them voting against him in November might decide whether or not there is to be four more years of the New Deal.

But he is working on public sentiment. The fact that Secretary of State Cordell Hull virtually summoned photographers to picture him congratulating Gen. John J. Pershing, after Pershing's radio appeal to let Britain have the destroyers, speaks volumes.

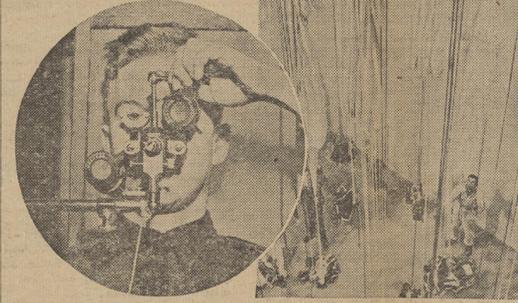

President Roosevelt is not going through the campaign without a little stumping in addition to the "fireside chats." There are two reasons for this. One is that regardless of what other talents he may have, Roosevelt's new running mate, Henry A. Wallace, has never been accused of being a rabble rouser. Roosevelt's fond dream of the vice presidential candidate carrying the stumping load doesn't fit in with his practical political views. Other reason is that the early polls indicate some definite Willkie trends.

Training Winged Gladiators At U. S. 'West Point of the Air'

Now that the government has launched its huge preparedness campaign, the classes at Randolph Field, Texas, Uncle Sam's "West Point of the Air," will be bigger than ever. The course consists of about 70 hours of flying, of which 30 hours are dual instruction and 40 hours solo. Civilian candidates must be unmarried male citizens of the United States, between 20 and 27, in excellent health and of spotless character.

One of the classrooms at Randolph Field. The students are receiving instructions in radio code work. Messages are tapped from the rostrum on a "buzzer." The students receive them through their headphones and write them down. Three classes enter the school each year.

The eyes of this cadet are undergoing a rigid test. Ears, heart and muscular action also come in for rigid inspection. Parachute instruction. The cadets are dropping the "skyhooks" with 200-pound dummies in a special room at Randolph Field.

This U. S. training plane is about to go into a slow roll, with a student pilot at one of the dual controls. Right: Model planes are used to demonstrate proper air technique.

On their way to the training planes to go aloft in their first solo test.

Type Measured

Type is measured by the number of points in the height of the face thereof. A point is approximately one seventy-second of an inch (actually .013837 inch). There are 996 points in 25 centimeters. Nonpareil type, the size generally used by newspapers, is a six-point type and therefore sets 12 lines to an inch, measuring up and down the column. Twenty-four lines of nonpareil type make what is commonly called a stick. There are usually 10 sticks of type in a newspaper column.

Printed Bible

The printed Bible was made official in England in 1538. The proclamation is as follows: "That ye shall provide . . . one boke of the holy byble of the largest volume in Englyshe and the same set up in sum convenient place within the said church that ye have the cure of, where as your parishioners may most commodiously resort to the same and read it. . . . That ye shall discourage no man prively or apertly from the readyng or hergyng of the sayde byble."

Digging a Cellar.
QUESTION: I intend digging a cellar under the kitchen. The bungalow is supported by eight concrete piers. The plot is near a lake and composed entirely of sand. Would you suggest concrete block or poured concrete? Would the caving in of the sand be too much of a hazard? Do you think the cellar would be too damp to use? Would like information on the easiest and cheapest way of doing this.

ANSWER: My preference is for a poured concrete cellar. If there is any danger of the sand "caving in," the sides should be shored up with boards. As to dampness in the cellar, much will depend on the quality of the concrete and the drainage qualities of the soil. The Portland Cement association, Chicago, Ill., can furnish you with printed matter on this subject.

Removing Wallpaper.
QUESTION: I should like to have your formula for removing old wallpaper.

ANSWER: Old wallpaper can be removed by a thorough soaking with warm water to soften and free the paste. A handful of washing soda to the gallon of warm water may quicken the action. Be careful not to splash the solution on painted or finished woodwork, as it will destroy the finish. Do not let it run down on the floor. When the paper loosens, tear it off, starting from the top. With the paper off, while the wall is still damp, sponge it with clear, warm water. After drying, sandpaper the wall lightly to remove bits of paper and hardened paste.

Cracked Plasterboard Joints.
QUESTION: The ceilings of my six-room, one-story house are plasterboard. The paper on them cracks at every joint between the boards. How can this be avoided?

ANSWER: One side of the ceiling is exposed to the warmth of the house and the other to the chill of the attic, which results in swelling and shrinking. Also, with the ceilings chilled by the low temperature in the attic, there will be condensation against them from moisture in the house air. Under this condition no kind of filling in the joints will be permanent. Your best move will be to cover the joints with thin strips of wood, nailed through to the supporting beams and papered with the ceilings.

Fireplace Tile.
QUESTION: My fireplace is faced with brick-colored tiles that are not handsome. Could I cover them with marbled linoleum and blacken the tiles of the floor?

ANSWER: Wall linoleum can be applied to tile, but I do not think that the effect would be particularly good. It would be better to bear with the tiles for a while until you are able to replace them with tiles that are more attractive, or with slabs of real marble. If the floor tiles are glossy, the color cannot be changed. If they are dull, you can blacken them with nigrosine dye, to be had at a paint store, or with black ink.

Leaking Terraces.
QUESTION: How can I take care of flagstone terraces that are leaking? Is there any such thing as a waterproof transparent paint that can be used by applying three or four coats, and doing it each year?

ANSWER: All cracked mortar joints should be raked out and repointed. A porous stone or mortar joint can be treated with two or more coats of a transparent waterproofing. A poorly mixed mortar, however, might be difficult to waterproof. It may even be necessary to repoint all the joints.

Bungalow Plans.
QUESTION: I understand you send out blue prints, at a small cost, to readers of your papers. I have in mind a bungalow 31 feet by 33 feet; four rooms, bath and front porch. Will appreciate any information you can send me.

ANSWER: I am sorry, but I do not furnish this kind of service. The Superintendent of Documents at Washington has a booklet of "Farmhouse Plans" which may be helpful to you. Write for Farmers' Bulletin 1738. The price of the booklet is 10 cents in coin.

Water Heater Piping.
QUESTION: I would like to move the hot water storage tank from the kitchen to the cellar; to be connected with the tank water heater and the furnace. Is there a book I can buy, which will tell me how to make these connections?

ANSWER: Manufacturers of water heaters publish data on the proper way of making connections between the storage tank and the heater. I am sure the firm whose heater you are using will furnish the necessary data.

Sweating Tank.
QUESTION: In the bathroom of my country home there is water on the floor most of the time, due to the flush tank sweating. The water coming out of the well is usually about 50 degrees. Can I insulate the tank to stop this dripping?

ANSWER: A wooden box lined with some form of insulation, made to enclose the tank on all exposed sides, is one way of overcoming this condition. Warm moist air must be kept from coming in contact with the cold surface of the tank.

Finish for Doors.
QUESTION: The woodwork in my kitchen is white, but the three doors have a dark varnish that does not look so well. I do not want to paint them. How can I improve their looks? I am told I could get a red varnish stain. Please let me know if this is true.

ANSWER: If the doors are already dark, a varnish stain will not improve them. Your best move will be to take off the finish to the bare wood, to smooth the doors with sandpaper, and then to use a mahogany varnish stain.

Hitler—"listen to the first three words—"I don't think". Those three words, at any rate, are true.

Some years ago some Englishmen were being quoted as saying, "It would be better to be governed by Germans of the Right Wing than by Englishmen of the Left". Those people, through control of the press and the radio, kept Englishmen from finding out the danger until it was too late. Now innocent people are being bombed in England as a result. In this country today, we have the same thing. Some people frankly say that they see nothing to choose between the dictatorship of Hitler and a dictatorship created to fight Hitler. How will these people feel when they realize that they helped cause the bombing of thousands of defenseless Americans?

Some people have said "After all, I don't have many more years to live. Why should I worry about it?" This type of citizen probably waves the flag and takes off his hat for George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. He would feel sick if he could hear what George Washington and the others would say about him.

Some people say "I believe in preparedness, but I don't approve of sending men to fight on foreign soil." Has this country ever been in a war when it did not fight on foreign soil? Can any country expect to win a war unless it fights on foreign soil?

Some people say "Hitler has already stated that he has no intention of disturbing the Western Hemisphere, so why should we have to prepare?" To most people, the foolishness of such an argument is apparent. To the rest of the people, logic and common sense do not appeal. It is useless to reason with people who believe any statement made by Hitler, Goering, et al for American consumption.

No one can do much to stop Hitler by himself. Nevertheless, the person who says "There's nothing I can do about it," and then does nothing, is mistaken. In years to come, if Hitler does win, anyone who does his best to stop him, will at least have the satisfaction of knowing he had tried to do something. And if enough people try, Hitler may be stopped.

Are you going to do your part in trying to stop Hitler? What are you going to do? You don't know. You don't have time to think about it because you have something else to do right now. Maybe you will start some day? That is just it. That is the reason Hitler is depending on you. He knows that there are enough others, just like you, who will keep this country doing nothing until he (Hitler) has cleaned up England, and then we will be gone.

What can you do? Write your congressman and your United States Senators that you are in favor of giving all possible help to Great Britain immediately. Also say that you dislike the idea of the German and Italian diplomatic services being used as nerve centers for espionage against the United States. Then you can add, that since Hitler is really at war with us anyway, we have nothing to lose by being at war with Hitler. This will close up the hostile embassies and consular offices and also stiffen British resistance.

If you do this, you will make yourself unpopular with some people. But what is a little unpopularity compared to the danger of German bombs followed by Hitler domination? Dover, Delaware.

In part this trend is due to the desire of banks to be of maximum helpfulness, and in part to the growing complexity of modern life, which accents the importance of individual financial management. This trend will continue, we believe, into the world of tomorrow. This bank, for one, will continue to study the needs of the average individual and to provide new or improved banking services whenever necessary. 1,000 Nazi Bombing Planes Launch 'History's Greatest Mass Air Raid'; Aliens in U. S. Start Registration; Aircraft 'Bottleneck' Slows Defense

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union

A French soldier and sailor are pictured here reading the poster written by General De Gaulle, head of the French military forces in England. It reads: "To all Frenchmen: France has lost a battle—but France has not lost the war."

THE WAR: 'Greatest in History'

From Wales to Scotland, German bombers attacked the island of Great Britain in what was being called the "greatest mass air attack in history." Always before as the Nazis dropped their numbers could be reported in fives and tens but this time dispatches from both Berlin and London indicated that there were hundreds of planes in the air.

One official British source estimated that in a single day a Nazi air armada of more than 1,000 planes had rained bombs on all of England—from Scotland's border right through the Midlands to Wales. Even London itself was bombed for the first time during the war as the German pilots dropped tons of high explosives up and down the river Thames, concentrating on a terrific attack upon famed Croydon airport, one of Europe's largest and best equipped landing fields.

As usual both Germany and England claimed that the enemy came out second best. England said that her famous fighter planes had driven off the Nazis in time to prevent "great damage." But Berlin, while not at first admitting that London had been bombed, did claim that "the entire Thames valley witnessed methodical, irresistible German air attacks which threaten all military establishments with destruction."

Southern Exposure

Mussolini has chosen to attempt the Italian version of a blitzkrieg in Africa. He sent 250,000 soldiers streaking across British Somaliland with control of the Suez canal and the British lifeline to India as stakes in the gamble.

The campaign will be hot in more ways than one. This is the time of the year when intense heat of more than 120 degrees grips Somaliland and the monsoon blows from midnight to mid-afternoon. Clouds give little relief from the enervating sun and there is little rainfall. The British hold all the best oases, where men must drink or die.

ALIENS:

I (have, have not) . . .

Five million questionnaires in six key languages are being distributed to aliens living within the United States. All must answer 15 searching questions asked by the government before December 26. Before that time also all residents not native born or naturalized must be fingerprinted. The crowd boomed and cheered.

Wallace, Democratic candidate for vice president, posing for news photographers the following day, asked them to "see what you can do to make me look like an eminent scholar and gentleman." When asked if he intended to debate with Willkie, Wallace wise-cracked: "I really do not know. Don't you think Willkie should endorse the Democratic ticket. He's with us now on the farm and foreign policies. All he needs to do is get in line on social security and the WPA."

CHRISTENING — For the new navy aircraft carrier, soon to be launched, President Roosevelt has selected Bon Homme Richard, name of the flagship of John Paul Jones, father of the United States navy.

NEW JOB—James A. Farley, resigned as postmaster general, will become head of the Coca Cola Export company. The former Democratic national chairman will not devote his full time to the New York Yankees, although he still may head a syndicate to purchase the ball team.

IDEA — When Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D., Mont.) suggested a national referendum on the matter of conscription, he had all of Washington stumped. Experts agreed there was no way to carry out such an idea.

DEBATE—Six weeks were required from the time the selective service bill was introduced in the World War until it passed congress. The present measure was in senate committee alone for seven weeks.

JAIL BIRDS—Life of Riley being lived by British Fascists in their London jails is arousing protest. It was revealed Sir Oswald Mosley, the chief, is attended by a personal valet; women have bridge clubs, and all are permitted to have better-than-prison-fare meals sent in to them. One wealthy prisoner ordered 36 bottles of champagne in a day.

furthering the political activities, public relations or public policy of a foreign government."

Solicitor General Francis Biddle isn't ruling at this time whether membership in the German-American Bund or the Communist party would require an affirmative answer to the above.

The nation's 45,000 first and second class post offices will have charge of distribution of questionnaires and fingerprinting. They expect to complete the records in six months, under the supervision of Earl G. Harrison, Philadelphia who left a lucrative law practice to take over the job.

Questionnaires are printed in Italian, German, Russian, Polish, Spanish and Yiddish.

DISCORD: On the Downbeat

Radio sopranos, bellowing baritones and swing bands may soon be sounding another tune. The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers faces a revolt with the National Association of Broadcasters.

The ASCAP collects royalties on 95 per cent of the music broadcast. Its anticipated 1941 revenue is $8,750,000, 5 per cent of the income of virtually all stations. Next year it wants 7 1/2 per cent. But station executives threaten to do business only with Broadcast Music, Inc., which has a scale of only 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 per cent.

If the break is not healed before January 1, virtually all popular music will be off the air. Many musical stars may even be forced to change the theme songs which identify them to millions. BMI controls only a few tunes, but expects to be in better condition before that time.

However, such favorites as Irving Berlin, George Gershwin, Jerome Kern, Victor Herbert, Cole Porter and the newer crop of composers are ASCAP standbys.

THE CAMPAIGN:

Repapete

Republican presidential candidate Wendell L. Willkie, speaking in Des Moines, Iowa, said he was glad to appear in the home town of "that eminent scholar and gentleman, Henry A. Wallace." The crowd boomed and cheered.

Wallace, Democratic candidate for vice president, posing for news photographers the following day, asked them to "see what you can do to make me look like an eminent scholar and gentleman." When asked if he intended to debate with Willkie, Wallace wise-cracked: "I really do not know. Don't you think Willkie should endorse the Democratic ticket. He's with us now on the farm and foreign policies. All he needs to do is get in line on social security and the WPA."

Back and Forth

Additional signs that the campaign was warming up came when Willkie suggested the Hatch act be amended so that the President "and members of his family" would declare their complete financial holdings on entering the White House and when they leave.

Asked about the proposal President Roosevelt replied since entering public service he was much poorer—and wiser.

"We are all poorer since 1928," shot back Willkie.

ETIQUETTE:

Bermuda Protocol

The duke and duchess of Windsor arrived in Bermuda, en route to the former king's new job, governor of the Bahamas. Social precedent was set by the wives of the highest placed matrons on the island. Mrs. Hastings Brooke, sister of Maj. Gen. Denis Kirwan Brooke, the governor, and Lady Kennedy-Purvis, curtsied to the duke. The duchess got a friendly nod, no curtsy.

The American liner Excalibur went several hundred miles off its course to set the royal couple down in Bermuda, instead of New York. British marines boarded the liner and seized 110 bags of mail for the censors.

Receipt for behavior: For the duke: A curtsy. For the duchess: A friendly nod. For obliging U. S. shipping authorities: A kick in the pants. N. B. There are plenty of women in Bermuda who would be thrilled to exhaustion by even a friendly nod from "curstying" hostesses.

NAMES

. . . in the news

George Bernard Shaw, British playwright and vegetarian, is laughing at meatless rations. "I cannot hope that we will become a nation of Bernard Shaws," he said "that would be too much to hope for."

Herbert Hoover is backing the movement to feed Belgium and France, if the English will lift the embargo.

Rear Admiral Robert L. Gormley expects to have a reserved seat for the British invasion. On special orders of the President, he was sent to London as an observer, the highest ranking officer ever to hold this position in peacetime.

Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippines, was voted virtual dictator powers by the national assembly. He has control over wages, farming, industry, profits, transportation, rents and prices.

Lady Byng, widow of the one-time British field marshal, arrived in the United States as a refugee. Of the value of German bombing she said: "It was a bit wearying."

Fugitive

Patricia Wynne-Williams, little refugee from London—a fugitive from an aerial blitzkrieg—is pictured as she arrived in New York, en route for Chicago, where she and her sister will stay with friends until the war is over. She seemed a bit bashful as the cameraman pleads for a "big smile."

BUILDING PLANES: Speed Up

U. S. arsenals and navy yards went on 24-hour schedule as contracts for arms, ammunition and ships began to pour out of the office of the national defense commission. Many industrial plants, bidding on thousands of articles needed to equip and train an army, also were given orders amounting to billions of dollars.

Bottleneck

Production of vitally needed airplanes still is the headache of all concerned. William Knudsen, production chief of the NDC, said American factories now are prepared to turn out planes at the rate of 10,800 a year and by next January will have speeded up to the rate of 18,000 a year.

But immediately following this announcement came the depressing news from War Secretary Stimson that although congress had appropriated money for 4,000 fighting planes, contracts had been let for only 33 of them.

And national guardsmen on maneuvers at the Canadian border are without equipment. Trucks are used as make-believe heavy tanks, station wagons simulate light tanks, logs are passed off as cannon, and gas pipes have signs informing those to whom it may concern that "this is an anti-tank gun."

Stimson said businessmen wanted to know, before they undertook contracts, how they would be taxed, as well as assurance of tax credits for the cost of plant expansion. Stimson said a company which undertook building of new factories for defense orders was taking an abnormal risk because the plants might turn out useless in case of "a sudden cessation of the emergency."

On the QT

Inside dope is that some airplane companies are not waiting for congress to make up its mind about taxes. Planes are being produced and put on the shelf. When congress passes the tax legislation, planes will be available at once.

MISCELLANY:

Touring

Mrs. Alice Cornelius of Glen Head, N. Y., parked her car on a hill and went shopping. The car was missing when she returned. So she walked down to the police station at the foot of the street to report it. She found: A wall of the police station smashed in, furniture wrecked, a stove overturned, and halfway up to the chief's desk, her automobile.

Not Funny

A 30-year-old man was convicted in New Hampshire for violation of that state's ancient statute, "tickling the feet of a minor without her permission." The man was convicted of entering the girl's bedroom and awakening her. Instead of screaming, she turned on the light and recognized him. He also was charged with breaking and entering and pleaded guilty to both charges. Result: Three months in the house of correction.

Canadian Memorial Recalls Career of A Judge and Humorist Who Contributed To the Evolution of Our "Uncle Sam"

First known cartoon of a symbolical figure representing the United States. It appeared in Punch in 1844.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

YOU may never have heard of Thomas Chandler Haliburton, Canadian barrister and judge, who died in England 75 years ago this month. But you, as an American, should have good reason to remember Thomas Chandler Haliburton, author. For he was the creator of "Sam Slick," the Connecticut Clockmaker" and Sam Slick provided one of the elements out of which gradually evolved our symbolical figure of Uncle Sam. More than that, he had an influence on and contributed largely to a type of humor which we have come to regard as typically American.

So, even though few Americans know that such a man as Thomas Chandler Haliburton ever existed or have forgotten it if they did know, we have more than a passing interest in a project now under way up in Canada. The Haliburton estate at Windsor, Nova Scotia, is being rehabilitated and a noted painter, Sir Wylie Grier, has been commissioned by the government of Nova Scotia to do a full-length, life-size painting of the man who created Sam Slick and whose writings, a hundred years ago, were delighting readers not only in Canada but in the United States and England as well.

Haliburton, the scion of an ancient Scottish family, was born in Windsor in 1796. Educated at King's college in Nova Scotia he was admitted to the bar in 1820, later was elected to the house of assembly of the colony, was raised to the bench of common pleas in 1829 and in 1840 became a judge of the supreme court. In the midst of his judicial duties, he found time to write a series of sketches for the local newspapers. In one of these he satirized the character of the New England Yankee in the person of "Sam Slick of Slickville, Onion County, Connecticut," a clockmaker and peddler whose knowledge of human nature, unsophisticated wit, droll speech and cleverness in using what he called "soft sawder" immediately made him a favorite with Canadian newspaper readers.

First published anonymously in a paper called the Nova Scotian, a collection of these sketches was brought out in book form by Joseph Howe, the editor of the Nova Scotian. A copy of this book fell into the hands of Thomas Bentley, the English publisher, who immediately issued an English edition.

A 'Best Seller.'

"The Clockmaker," or the Doings of Sam Slick of Slickville" was first published in 1835 and was an instantaneous success. It ran through 50 editions, a "best seller" record which, considering the time and the size of the book-buying public, has never been equaled.

The success of the first book of sketches encouraged Bentley to issue a second in 1838, a third in 1840, and a fourth in 1844. In all, there were five volumes in which "Sam Slick" was the principal character. Three of them were devoted to "The Clockmaker." The fourth was called "Wise Saws and Modern Instances" and the fifth "The Attache, or, Sam Slick in England." In the latter Sam appears as an attache to the American legation in London and his shrewd and humorous observations on the upper classes of England and their pampered servants were as mirth-provoking as his satires on life among the Yankees.

"Sam Slick," after a drawing made by Leech, artist for Punch, who made the drawings for the English editions of Haliburton's books.

As for the influence of Haliburton and "Sam Slick" on American humor and American literature in general, a writer in the Dearborn Independent several years ago declared that "Bill Nye, Artemus Ward, Mrs. Partington, O. Henry, all have lighted their brands at one time or another at the torch of Judge Haliburton. Certainly no other book produced on this continent has had so widespread and unmistakable an influence."

This writer then goes on to point out that "Mark Twain's 'A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court' is an emanation from 'Sam Slick, the Connecticut Clockmaker.' 'Innocents Abroad' is inspired by the same model."

Not only did later writers get ideas for characters and situations from Haliburton but they also used some of his words and expressions verbatim or almost verbatim. For, as this same commentator points out, "The one most quoted expression from 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' is that 'Topsy' 'just grewed.' That is cribbed directly from 'Sam Slick' who was read and quoted in Harriet Beecher Stowe's family, as he was in every other family throughout the United States. . .

"We use the expression 'corn fed' and fancy it originated in our Middle West, but it comes from 'Sam Slick' who always described women in the terms which he uses for horses, one of his most commentary ones being 'fine form fed.'"

As for "Sam Slick's" contribution to the evolution of our symbolical figure of Uncle Sam, this same writer declares "That figure with his shrewd smile, his goatee, striped trousers held down by long straps, the symbolical Uncle Sam—we are apt to think that he was hit upon by someone in a moment of inspiration and pictorially set forth to symbolize the United States. Not at all. This figure is 'Sam Slick,' the hero of 'The Clockmaker, or the Doings of Sam Slick of Slickville,' as conceived by Judge Haliburton and as drawn by Hervieu, a Frenchman, and Leech, the artist, who made Punch famous, to illustrate the English editions."

A glance at the illustrations at the top of this article will demonstrate the credibility of that theory. In the center is the figure of "Sam Slick," as delineated by

First American cartoon of Uncle Sam, drawn by F. Bellow and published in 1852.

Leech, the artist for Punch. At the left is reproduced a picture which is generally accepted as the first known cartoon of a symbolical figure representing the United States. It appeared in Punch in 1844 and although the name of the artist is unknown it may have been Leech.

At any rate, the resemblance between this figure and the figure of "Sam Slick," especially in the matter of costume and "long-leggedness" is striking. It represents a young man, of decidedly flippant tendencies, thumbing his nose at the spectators and was intended to depict the rowdy young nation of the United States. The symbol of this nation was "Brother Jonathan" as "John Bull" was the symbol of England.

The First Uncle Sam.

The picture on the right is usually regarded as the first American cartoon of Uncle Sam. It was drawn by F. Bellow and was published in the New York Lantern, a comic weekly, on March 13, 1852. In it is pictured an amused young man, wearing the high beaver hat, tight trousers, low-cut waistcoat, high collar and bow tie in which he is still portrayed. The costume is the same as "Sam Slick's" and even the face resembles Sam's. The only difference is that Uncle Sam's trousers are striped.

It will be noted that Uncle Sam was then a beardless young man. English and American cartoonists continued to portray him thus down to the days of the Civil War. Then Thomas Nast, one of the greatest cartoonists this country ever produced, began making some changes in Uncle Sam's appearance. It was Nast who put chin whiskers on him and made him the kindly old gentleman that we know. It is said that Nast had in mind Abraham Lincoln when he began depicting Uncle Sam. He also added the familiar starred vest and striped coat and put stars on his hat. Since that time, cartoonists generally have followed Nast's lead in portraying Uncle Sam.

But the essential fact is that he is the tall gangling man in tight trousers, swallow-tailed coat, high collar, bow tie and tall hat and represents the spirit of America. Typifying America in both costume and spirit, he traces directly back to the typical American character created by a Canadian judge more than a hundred years ago—"Sam Slick, the Connecticut Yankee."

Haliburton the Historian.

Haliburton was not a writer of humorous works only. Some of his more serious works included "Rule and Misrule of the English in America" and the first authoritative history of Nova Scotia. Incidentally, Longfellow is said to have drawn part of his inspiration for writing "Evangeline" from this history. But Judge Haliburton could not be very serious even about his serious work. Concerning this history he once said that "Next to Mr. Slick's History of Cattyhunk in Five Volumes, it (this history) is the most authoritative account of unimportant things I have ever seen." However, the government authorities of Nova Scotia thought enough of it to recognize it with a ceremonial speech of appreciation in the house of assembly.

In 1850 Haliburton retired from the supreme court and went to England to live. In 1859 he was elected as a conservative in the house of commons and held his seat there until its dissolution in 1865. Because of ill health, he declined a re-election. The University of Oxford conferred the degree of D. C. L. upon him a short time before his death at Isleworth, England, on August 27, 1865.

two keys to a cabin by Lida Larrimore

MACRAE SMITH—WNU SERVICE

John stood looking at a post-card from Dr. Sargeant. A crescent moon reflected itself in dark blue water. A round white tower, a light-house, perhaps, rose against a star-strewn sky. A slim red boat with a half-furled sail lay at anchor against a strip of land where dark trees grew. Constantinople—Phener Bagtche. The lettering conveyed nothing to his mind, but the boat reminded him of the red canoe at the lake. He stood thinking of the cabin, of Gay.

A voice addressed him. He turned to see Abbie descending the stairs, walking heavily, her hand sliding along the rail, her white apron crackling with starch, her round high-colored face wreathed in an amiable smile.

"Hello, Abbie," John said. Abbie had lived with the Sargeants for years. She was more a member of the family than a servant, as Huldah was in his mother's home.

"You in for good?" she asked, halting at the new post.

"I'll have supper on in half an hour. You sure your ears aren't frost-bitten?" she asked with kindly concern.

"It's just coming in where it's warm that makes them red."

"I'd advise you to rub snow on 'em," Abbie said. "It's a healthful life a doctor's called on to live. I don't know why, at your age, you're so set on it. Give me the word if you're called out, so's I can set something in the oven."

The office was shadowy with dusk. John switched on a light and dropped into the chair at the Doctor's desk. Dr. Sargeant would have known how to handle that whimpering creature he'd called on this afternoon, he thought, lighting a cigarette. He, himself, had been unable to sympathize with the woman who had poured into his somewhat embarrassed ears a stream of self-pity and imagined symptoms. His examination had checked with notes on the case he had found in the Doctor's files. Physically, she was as sound as a nut. His sympathy had been all for her husband, poor wretch.

No, definitely, he hadn't a bedside manner. John pulled the desk memorandum toward him. There were fewer notations than usual written in the clear handwriting of Miss Sprague, Dr. Sargeant's secretary and office nurse. One notation was made in writing quite different from Miss Sprague's. It asked him to call the Congress Square Hotel, Room 201. No name was appended. A guest, perhaps, who required the services of a doctor. He should make the call. In a few minutes when he'd gotten warm and had finished his cigarette—

He would be glad when this period of marking time had passed and he could go on with the work he enjoyed. John tilted back in his chair and propped his feet on the desk. He would never be happy in a practice. He liked the stark facts of science, but confused by human contacts, the crystal hardness of truth that could be checked and proved. He had thought that he might experiment a little on the side. Perhaps he could when he had become more accustomed to the routine of office hours and calls. For the present he was too tired when his long day had ended to do anything more exacting than read for a little or talk to Mary Adams before he went early to bed.

The crescent moon and the red boat on the postcard the Doctor had sent recalled the cabin again. He should have had a letter from Gay. She had been in Florida when last he had heard from her. It was impossible for him to imagine the life she lived there. As always, when his mind dwelled upon the dissimilarity of their separate environments, a chill of apprehension settled about his heart. He comforted himself by recalling the night she had seen him off at the station in New York. But a great many Wednesdays had passed since then and she had not come.

The memories of her which he liked best to recall went back to the time they had spent at the cabin. He found himself skipping over the visit to New York. There was, he thought, deliberation beneath that apparently subconscious evasion. When he recalled the visit to New York, incidents presented themselves which demanded clear and logical thought. It was more pleasant to feel about Gay than to think. Now, while she was so far away from him, when anything might be happening, it was disturbing to think.

He should begin again the experiment he had abandoned at the cabin. If he could become interested in something of the sort, he would stop this useless brooding over Gay. It was that, he admitted to himself with reluctant honesty, rather than fatigue or lack of time which had prevented his original plan of converting the small room in which the Doctor kept supplies into a laboratory. In his leisure moments, when he was not actively engaged in keeping together the Doctor's practice, his mind was so filled with thoughts of Gay that there was no room for anything else. It was likely to be harmful and certainly a waste of time. He must stop it.

He would call the hotel. Miss Sprague was almost terrifyingly efficient. She would be sure to ask him if he had when she returned for the evening office hours. He took his feet from the desk, sat forward, reached for the telephone—

"Todd Janeway was in Palm Beach. Gay had spoken of it in a recent letter. He was attractive. There was a strong bond between Gay and him. He remembered how she had looked the night they had coasted on the Janeway estate, when she had returned to him after climbing the slope with Todd, rested, relaxed, eager to be with him again. She had broken away from Todd and come swiftly to him, smiling through the fire-light.

How strong was that bond? Had his trip to New York convinced her that she had made a mistake? He wouldn't think of it. His hand reached for the telephone again, halted, knotted into a fist—

A rap sounded at the door. He ignored it. At a second rap, he wrenched his thoughts from an imaginary scene on a moon-lit beach in Florida and made a somewhat irritable reply.

The door opened. Mary Adams, Dr. Sargeant's daughter, stood hesitating on the threshold.

"I'm sorry," she said.

"That's all right, Mary." John's face cleared.

"Are you in a good humor?"

"Fairly so. Why?"

"I have an apology to make for my younger son." Contact with the tropical sunshine had given Mary Adams' skin a permanent tan. She was slight and worn, at thirty, from having dutifully, and gladly, followed the fleet, from having had two babies, "each in a different language" as she expressed it, from the struggle to keep up the necessary front on a naval lieutenant's pay. But her dark eyes in the sharp pixie-like brownness of her face were animated and cheerful and the stories she told of her vagrant existence were a source of amusement to John.

"What has Skippy been up to?" he asked.

"Look, John." She held out a crumpled sheet of yellow paper.

"Every Tuesday night since then I've thought, 'Tomorrow is Wednesday. Maybe Gay will come.'"

"Today is Tuesday. I couldn't wait until tomorrow."

They broke into soft laughter, free from constraint. The waiter placed food before them, hovered solicitously.

"That will be all," John said in definite dismissal. "The effect you have on waiters and taxi-drivers and bell-hops," he continued to Gay when the man who had served them had stationed himself at a discreet distance, against the wall beside a thicket of potted palms. "I've been in here pretty often and no waiter ever hovered over me like a setting-hen over an egg."

"Egg! I hate you!" She laughed.

"What are you going to do with me?"

"Kiss you again as soon as I get a chance."

Her eyes softened and shone. The crisp frills on her blouse ruffling out over the jacket of her dark tailored suit rose and fell with her quickened breathing. "I'm trying to be practical. You make it very difficult. Am I to stay here at the hotel?"

"Certainly not." His expression was offended.

"But I don't mind. Now that I know you're glad I came, I'm sure I'll become attached to the feud-delic and the raspberry-sherbet counterpane."

"You're to stay at Dr. Sargeant's tonight. Mary sends you the invitation."

"Mary?"

"Dr. Sargeant's daughter, Mary Adams, mother of Skippy and Rear-Admiral Byrd."

Her eyes widened. "John! Are you delirious?"

"I think I am, a little. I can't get used to having you here. I was referring, however, to Mary's older son, Nat. He was being Admiral Byrd this afternoon in the swing. They're nice kids. I think you'll like Mary."

The headwaiter, patrolling, halted beside the table.

"Everything satisfactory, sir?" he asked, addressing John, but with his eyes sliding toward Gay.

"Yes, thank you," John said curly.

"The steak is broiled as you like it?" The headwaiter's suave, discreetly interested glance was for Gay. "Not too rare or too well done?"

"It's very nice, thank you."

The headwaiter strolled off. John scowled, then grinned.

"You see," he said. "That never happened to me. The desk-clerk told him you are."

"Oh, nonsense. You attach too much importance to my name. Nobody in Maine ever heard of me."

"I don't believe it. Well, if that's true, it's the way you look. They think you're a movie star. That golden-brown tan—"

"Don't you like it? I worked awfully hard to get it. Maybe I could have myself bleached."

"Don't you dare," he said. "I love it. You're freckles scarcely show at all."

She made a laughing grimace.

"Not that I object to the freckles," he said. His voice softened. "His dark eyes, regarding her across the table, were bright but tenderly grave. 'I love everything about you. You're a little breath-taking until I get used to you. I think I remember, but each time you're a shock. You have beautiful bones.'"

"Can't you forget your profession for half an hour?"

"Good Lord! No, I can't." He glanced at his watch. "We must go. Office hours." He halted in the process of pulling back his chair.

"But you haven't eaten anything—"

"Neither have you. The headwaiter will think the steak was too well done or too rare. And all these lovely French fried potatoes?"

"I've got to go, Gay." He signaled the waiter. "You stay and finish and come up to Dr. Sargeant's in a cab."

"I will not." Her voice was indignant. "I didn't come all the way to Portland, Maine, to eat French fried potatoes."

"Is that why you came?"

"Well, variety— You look—" Her glance dropped from his face to the table. She constructed a wigwag with a knife, a fork, two spoons. "Are you working hard?"

"You haven't forgiven me, have you?" His voice softened. He bent toward her across the table. "I don't blame you. It was dreary not to be met at the station. I can't tell you how sorry I am. What did you do all afternoon?"

"Stayed in my room. It has matching draperies and counterpane the color of melted raspberry sherbet. That's twenty-four-degrees light gray on darker gray, running lengthwise in the carpet from the window to the door."

"Is that all you could find to amuse you?" His laugh was reluctant.

"Oh, no." Her voice was light and quick. "I read the telephone directory and the Bible. The Psalms are rather wonderful. I think I should have liked to know David. Is he the same David that killed Goliath? I wanted to ask you. I'm sure that your Biblical training was more sound than mine."

"Gay, look at me."

She lifted her eyes. A half-smile trembled across her lips.

"You had a miserable afternoon, didn't you? Alone and thinking— What did you think?"

"I spent most of the time wishing that my impulsive nature had been more rigidly disciplined in early youth."

"I'm glad it wasn't."

"Do you remember the night I left New York you told me that you'd come to see me some Wednesday afternoon?"

She nodded.

"Every Tuesday night since then I've thought, 'Tomorrow is Wednesday. Maybe Gay will come.'"

"Today is Tuesday. I couldn't wait until tomorrow."

They broke into soft laughter, free from constraint. The waiter placed food before them, hovered solicitously.

"That will be all," John said in definite dismissal. "The effect you have on waiters and taxi-drivers and bell-hops," he continued to Gay when the man who had served them had stationed himself at a discreet distance, against the wall beside a thicket of potted palms. "I've been in here pretty often and no waiter ever hovered over me like a setting-hen over an egg."

"Egg! I hate you!" She laughed.

"What are you going to do with me?"

"Kiss you again as soon as I get a chance."

Her eyes softened and shone. The crisp frills on her blouse ruffling out over the jacket of her dark tailored suit rose and fell with her quickened breathing. "I'm trying to be practical. You make it very difficult. Am I to stay here at the hotel?"

"Certainly not." His expression was offended.

MR. FARLEY MAKES A SHIFT

Jim Farley has retired as National Democratic chairman to head the New York Yankees. Eight years of football have been enough.

Jim will find it a relief to be in a field where the pitcher doesn't want to bat, field and coach at one and the same time.

For nearly a decade he has been head over heels in national politics, where use of the "bean ball" is strictly ethical, and that's been long enough to convince him that life is more satisfactory in a business where its use is at least officially discouraged.

Jim is an old baseball man himself. He was a first baseman on the Haverstraw nine back home. But he had to get into politics to discover that a man could mean well and still get spiked in both.

After what he has been through in the last few years, it is understood that Big Jim has a terrific yen for a business where team play will be welcomed, where not more than one pitcher is used in the box at the same time and where the use of amateur coaches is barred.

James M. Cox, chief backer of Mr. Farley in the baseball deal, is Miami's Number One Citizen, and it may be that he has decided this is the only way to get the Yanks to train in Miami as an added winter attraction. Miami has everything else.

Governor Cox's chief sporting interest is in golf. But it may be that, like most golfers, he would like to get his mind off it and thinks it worth a couple of million to do it.

Big Jim Farley has been the most underpaid man in politics. That wouldn't be so bad except that he has a ball player to be in a position where he can't find out whether his star pitcher intends to keep pitching or to take a job as coach at third.

There is a rumor that one of his last acts as postmaster-general will be to design a DiMaggio postage stamp and a Babe Ruth memorial post card.

We wish Jim lots of luck in the baseball world. And we hope he doesn't find the change so confusing that he will signal for a caucus instead of the hit and run play.

Suede Fashions Due for Big Vogue This Fall and Winter

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IF YOU have not already been converted into a suede way of thinking, you will when you see the fascinating things designers are doing with handsome suede for the coming fall and winter. In a wide range of colors, never so beautiful, never so exquisitely supple and never before so versatile for all purposes, suede has reached the point where it is regarded as a staple medium for the making of smart apparel.

No matter what fashion angle the approach is made, suede qualifies as the perfect answer. There's nothing smarter on the boards for fall than a coat or a jacket, a suit or a one-piece dress made of suede. As to accessories of suede the rich colors of suede and its delightful reveal throughout a whole list of bags and hats, belts, gloves and footwear that add the swank touch to good-looking costumes.

Women of keen fashion-sense like suede because it not only has proved to be these little chapeaux are they practical, but when it comes to color suede is positively glamorous and stands in a class all its own when it comes to interpreting a new high in fashion.

Destined to be adored is the little jacket done in suede as shown to the left in the illustration. It is collarless with slightly padded shoulders. It boasts of three large patch pockets. Helen Wood, glamour girl of 1940 in filmland, chooses this jacket in a gold nugget hue to wear over a moss green suede dress.

Any school-faring girl will do well to include in her wardrobe a suede ensemble after the manner of the model shown to the right. Here you see Rosemary De Camp, dramatic cinema actress, in a one-piece dress made of porcelain blue suede. Softness is achieved by a fullness gather-

Red Corduroy

It's time to give thought to the inevitable easy-to-slip-on jacket that is indispensable when cool breezes announce that autumn days are here. The pick of them all, in the estimation of fashion-wise college girls and their younger school-faring sisters is the jacket that is made of bright red corduroy. A grand two-piece for early fall days on the campus or for general wear when the tang of autumn calls for comfortable wraps is a jacket of sport-light red corduroy such as is pictured here, topped with a matching hat of the identical corduroy.

Toque and Turban

Coming in are a series of toque and turban fashions that suggest the quaint bonnets worn in the sixties. You wear them back of the pompadour and the inspiring note about these little chapeaux are they becoming to youth and to the not so young, as well. In fact for the matronly type these turbans and toques solve the pompadour hat problem perfectly. An older woman who could under no circumstances venture to wear a wide brim posed back on the head such as the teen age delights in, finds that the little draped toques are a triumphant solution.

Gold Jewelry Will Be Worn This Fall

In spite of the fact that gold jewelry has been somewhat out of the picture for a brief spell comes reports to the effect that it has again come to the fore in the style picture. However, the new gold jewelry that will enliven smart black jersey dresses and those of sheer wool, is not of the garish spectacular type. There is exquisite refinement expressed in subtle detail and workmanship in the incoming necklaces, bracelets, pins, clips and lapel ornaments.

Pompadour Styles Fix Hat Fashions

The revival of the pompadour comes to some of us as a surprise, but here it is and no mistake, smuggled in under the guise of a group of flattering curls or some other softly arranged coiffure that is really very flattering. If there is one thing more than another that we are learning this season it is that the new hat fashions have to a certain extent been greatly influenced by the return of the pompadour.

Fringe and Lacing Decorative Trims

Soft fringe and lacing are two decorative trims used together on a pretty pair of white linen shoes shown by a New York designer. The shoe is a very high-heeled pump laced up the toe and down the back of the shank. The throat of the pump is edged with a rim of narrow fringe repeated in a straight band below each crossed lacing on the toe.

Picked Up in Studios of Style Designers

Suits made of crisp, rustling black taffeta are a favorite fashion. For the large figure, this season's popular ballerina suits will be becoming. A head covering and wrap, all in one, is easily evolved from the smart triangular shawls. Decorative trims are subtle and restrained in the new Lily Dache hat presentations for early fall.
