AIR BLITZ:

Over England

The fourth German air army contains the veteran and most expert of Nazi bombers. It never had been used over England, although it is the best equipped and largest of the German air forces. The fourth air army was trained in Spain, used to smash Poland in four days and dive-bombed the French army into submission and out of the Maginot

Now many believe it has been assigned a mission across the English channel. The mission would be to grind to debris the British industrial Midland area. Two such attacks have been made. The first was on ancient Coventry, historical cathedral city when Lady Godiva made her famous horseback ride. Coventry in modern times had become the "Detroit of England." Here was made the larger portion of British airplanes and thousands of her 169,000 people were employed in defense industries In a single 10½-hour night raid, Coventry was turned into a shambles, hardly a single home being left unscathed. Berlin said all of the plane factories were in ruins from explosive and incendiary bombs. The British denied this but gave no details. It was admitted, however, that almost 1,000 civilians were killed, many air raid shelters which thought bombproof being crushed like paper. The three-towered cathedral; almost a thousand years old, was left with hardly one stone atop another, except for a single spire. After a lapse of a few days the raiders concentrated on Southampton, city of a million people, also in the Midlands. Berlin said the hometown of the late Neville Chamberlain, who appeased Hitler at Munich, was given the same treatment. Southampton is a textile town and Hopes for Peace also had been turning out a large cargo of automobiles and munitions.

Greeks Fight On

In the Italo-Greek war neutral observers shook their heads and admitted they could not understand how Greece was holding out. Outnumbered three to one, the balletskirted, pom-pom slippered Evzone troops cut the Italians to ribbons and pushed them back into Albania on all fronts.

These observers still believed the Greeks were putting up a valiant but futile battle. No one in authority considers the Italian army seriously, estimates running from derision to contempt. But the Greek's military supplies were known to be low. Also there is no opportunity to give them help, for all Greek guns, both rifles and artillery, are of a special Greek manufacture and no ammunition of foreign make will fit their weapons. Once spring rolls around and the Italian mechanical force can get into action, there may be a different

One thing seemed certain. Mussolini in his attempt to carry on a war by himself was tangling up the plans of the entire Axis. Control of the Mediterranean which the Italians call Mare Nostrum (Our Sea) may come diplomatically rather than militaristically. Adolf Hitler came to the Duce's rescue in this respect, once it was certain the Italians had bogged

John James Audubon, Painter of Birds, Now Revealed as an Important Writer Who Was 'Witness to Our Heroic Age'

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON (Released by Western Newspaper Union.) O MOST Americans the name "Audubon" is synonymous with just one word - "birds." Three species bear his name, as does the society which is dedicated to the study, protection and preservation of those feathered denizens of America which were his life-long passion. We remember him also as the author-artist of a set of books which a fellowscientist once called "the most magnificent monument that art has yet raised to ornithology." Yet there is another—and possibly a better -reason why John James Audubon should be remembered gratefully by his fellow-Americans.

That is because he was "a witness to our heroic age" and, as an appreciative and understanding witness, he was one of its best interpreters. Such is the theme of a new book, whose publication by the Houghton Mifflin company of Boston, was a major event of the 1940 publishing season. The book is "Audubon's America — The Narratives and Experiences of John James Audubon," illustrated with nearly a score of facsimiles of his prints and paintings in full color.

But more important than this inclusion of authentic reproductions of Audubon's paintings in a popular-priced book is the fact that his "narratives and experiences" in it are edited by Donald Culross Peattie. And Mr. Peattie, naturalist and author of such books as "Singing in the Wilderness" and "A Prairie Grove," is probably the one man in America today who is most competent to act as an appreciative and understanding interpreter of John James Audubon, a witness to and an interpreter of our heroic age.

Some of the most charming prose that Mr. Peattie has ever written is included in "What Audubon Knew," which serves as an introduction to the book. It says in part: 'The source of history is the narratives of those who lived it Now of all those who ever lived here, traveled and greatly adventured, none could bear more fascinating testimony than John James Audubon. He had the advantage of being a foreigner

. . . So that he took nothing for granted, and in the perspective of a more mature culture, all things American struck him as fresh. He had the further advantage that he was a genius, and a genius of art at that, so that to observe, to depict what he saw, was habitual and instinctive. "But Audubon had, too, a genius for the art of living. He lived with zest for the adventure and with personal ardors. He

THE VIRGINIAN OPOSSUM.

It is at this point in his essay that Mr. Peattie points out how Audubon's fame as an ornithologist, the renown which has made his name synonymous with the word "birds," has obscured his value to his fellow-Americans as "a witness of our heroic age." Moreover, his art as a painter has overshadowed his ability as a writer. For a professional writer he was, a man who wrote to sell and who did sell.

"I am not saying that he knew how to write history like the learned Parkman, or style like the choice Thoreau, or that he thought as an equal with Emer-son," observes Mr. Peattie. "I am asserting only that while Cooper went to England while he wrote 'The Prairie' (an unreadably dull book, to my ears), Audubon was on the prairies. That where Emerson knew his Carlyle, Audubon knew his Mississippi savored everything, even the unsavory. He saw almost everything, from 1803 to 1849, from Florida to Labrador, from New York city to Fort Union on the borders of Montana. He lived among Pennsylvania Quakers, in Kentucky among pioneers from Virginia, in New Orleans among Indians. He explored Maine and South Carolina, Texas and Flortraveling around Concord, Audubon was traveling around North America. While Parkman was writing history, Audubon was making and witnessing it."

JOHN JAMES AUDUBON A self-portrait in oils, made at Beech Woods, Feliciana parish, La., in 1822 at the age of 37.

Considering these facts, seems strange indeed that until now no attempt has been made to bring together into one volume a general selection of the firsthand narratives of what Mr. Peattie calls "this shrewd and eager observer of all conditions and aspects of American men, manners and scenes." This has been due partly to the fact that Audubon's writings have been scattered through a wide assortment of volumes, many of which are to be found only in the larger libraries and are therefore known to only a few scholars and specialists in American history.

For these reasons Americans generally know little about Audubon, the writer, even though they may be familiar enough with Audubon, the artist, and what they do know about him as a chronicler of the period in which he lived is when he is quoted "in evidence for the unbelievable numbers of the passenger pig-eons, or the destruction of the buffalo, or on some other point in natural history."

Therefore the great value of this book is that it "makes up in some measure for neglect of Audubon's precious testimony." For, as Mr. Peattie says, "as editor, I have preferred to bring him forward less as the naturalist than as one who knew river captains and roustabouts, pioneers and men of letters, Indians and scientists. This without, of course, slighting his natural history writings but reducing them to some reasonable proportion to the whole. That whole is the America of his day, America as he, and perhaps only he, knew it -Audubon's America.'

How richly that promise is fulfilled is shown by a reading of the chapters which follow the in-troductory "What Audubon Knew," and Mr. Peattie's evalua-tion of "Audubon as a Witness." The titles of those chapters are indicative of the diversity of Audubon's experience, the catholicity of his interests and the scope of his "traveling around North America"—"Kentucky Days and Nights," "Hunters' Tales," "Pioneer Types," "Deep South,"
"Four Proud Fowl," "Down East
for Birds and Subscribers" and "Out West With Buffalo and Indians.'

To those who think of Audubon only in terms of birds, the amount of his writing about animals will be revealing. After completing his monumental work, "The Birds of America," he began work on "The Quadrupeds of America" and "into the new project the old master entered with all the zest, so he wrote his young friend Spencer Baird, that he had once felt for birds." So it is appropriate that this new book reproduces almost as many pictures of animals (seven in all) as it does pictures of birds (eight). Not the least interesting feature of the book is a "Biographical Note" (a long "note" albeit, since it covers 22 pages!) which tells in interesting fashion the story of his life from the date of his birth, April 26, 1785, at the port of Les Cayes or Aux Cayes on the south coast of the republic of Haiti until his death in New York city on January 27, 1851.

This biographical sketch discusses the much-disputed story of his paternity and cites the fact that available documents prove conclusively that he was the natural son of Lieut. Jean Audubon of the French navy and a Creole woman of good birth, whose family name was either Rabin or Fougere. Says Mr. Peattie: "This should set at rest the preposterous claim that has recently (and only recently) been set up for him, that he was none other than the lost Dauphin, Louis XVII, majesty disguised as a wandering artist! This legend would be too far-fetched for notice if it were not, unfortunately, the one story about Audubon that sticks in many minds. Two women biographers of Audubon have recent ly taken it quite seriously, and thousands of words have been written in debate on this point. They can all be cut short by laying down a fact denied by nobody. The unfortunate little Bourbon prince had a deformed ear, while Audubon's ears were both quite normal.' Who will seriously argue the point beyond this?"

Don Alfredo, wealthy, Spanish owner of a Southern California rancho, refuses to heed several warnings of a raid by a band of outlaws, Sierra Indians. One day after he has finally decided to seek the protection of the nearby mission for his wife and family, the Indians strike. Don Alfredo is killed and his two young daughters are torn from the arms of the family's faithful maid, Monica, and are carried away to the hills. Padre Pasqual, missionary friend of the family, arrives at the ruins of the ranch and learns the story of the raid from Monica. After a trying and difficult trip across the plains and mountains from Texas to California, youthful Henry Bowie, a Texas adventurer, with his friends, Ben Pardaloe and Simmie, an Indian scout, sight the party of Indians who have carried off the two little girls. The three Texans attack the war party of fifty-odd Indians and through a clever ruse, scatter the savages to the hills. The girls are saved. The group makes its way out of the hills and meets the distraught Monica, the children's maid. The girls are left with Monica and the friendly Padre at a mission, and the Texans proceed to Monterey. Here Bowie completes his business for Gen. Sam Houston of Texas, who has commissioned him to deliver an important message. Bowie decides to have a look at the wild untamed country that California was in the middle Nineteenth century. Bowie disappears from California but returns eight years later and makes the acquaintance of a friendly Spanish family at the Rancho Guadalupe. "The Indians are growing constantly bolder, Don Ramon," said his nephew indignantly. "I hear it on every hand. They raid our neighbors already. Soon they will be after our horses. Yosco and Stanislaus long ago taught them rebellion. They need to be driven out of these mountains."

"Don't undertake it yourself, Don Francisco," remarked his uncle, who knew his fiery disposition.

"Nevertheless, my uncle, you will see them give us trouble if they are not taught a lesson."

Don Francisco proved too good a prophet. The horse-stealing Indians did grow bolder. Their depredations increased, and they raided the big ranchos with less fear of consequences. Every young Californian along the foothills was angry. They demanded something be done by the soldiers at the mission or the pre-

But the authorities were indolent. Following minor depredations at Rancho Pinole, the Indians, emboldened, ran off, one dark night, every saddle horse on the place. Don Jose Martinez and his son had to borrow horses from Don Ramon at

The neighbors were infuriated. They organized a party and set out to recover the horses and chastise the thieves. Don Francisco of Guadalupe was chosen captain.

The posse was in the saddle early next morning, and two vaqueros tracked the marauders through the hills to a canyon in the mountains where, toward evening, they charged the Indians in a surprise attack.

It was made too hastily, and the red men, scattering at the onslaught of the rancheros, sent back a cloud of arrows at their pursuers. Pedro and his vaqueros took advantage of the sudden confusion of the warriors to run the stolen horses out of the canyon and head them downhill for home. For a time the brush was fast; but there were too many In-You mean to go upriver to dians. Don Francisco called a retreat, and the Californians slowly retired from the field.

As the leader of his little band. Don Francisco was the last to wheel from the scene of battle. The youngcomrades, an arrow struck him between the shoulders. The duty of informing Don Ramon of the capture of his nephew was put upon Don Guillermo Castro, eldest of the young men. Hat in hand, he headed his companions into the living room. The family were, unfortunately, there - Don Ramon, Dona Maria and Carmen. No sooner had Don Guillermo spoken than all seemed to grasp the dread tidings at once.

Bowie raised his hand. "That is why I am here. The bad news reached me in Monterey tonight. I came down the river this morning with Pardaloe and Simmie, bringing a batch of furs. They are with me. And I came at once to offer any help that I can to my friends, Don Francisco and yourself."

Don Ramon recounted briefly the tragedy and said the rancheros were waiting for daybreak to assemble

When the sleepy-eyed vaquero appeared Bowie plied him with rapid questions. Don Ramon listened, impressed by the ease with which Bowie reconstructed, step by step, the fatal fight. It was almost as if he had been there.

By BAUKHAGE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.) WASHINGTON.—The battered old Ford with a tent tied on top and children protruding from every crevice didn't pull up at a lot of farm gates this fall. When the Okies and their ilk failed to call, rural America didn't feel socially slighted but it meant a labor problem had come up for a lot of farm-

Who kept the Okies from keeping their date in the harvest field? Why Herr Hitler, of course

Here in Washington we don't know just how many families making up 3,000,000 migrants who are needed by agriculture to help out at harvest time didn't show up this year but we do know a number were deflected into work in connection with the defense program. Reports reaching the Federal Security administration indicate that in more than one section of the country farm labor has been at a premium. Real shortage of labor hasn't turned up in industry—at least as far as unskilled workers go, but there is a shortage in the skills that is bound to affect the surplus farm population in the long run. I was in New England recently and although up there, the skilled workers are now being absorbed by the war industries faster than they can be trained, the New Englanders still want more industries. In the middle eastern states no farm labor shortage is noted as yet, although the cities are calling for the skills; Wisconsin has noted a lack of migrants, and in the southeast the big job of building army camps has taken a lot of skilled construction workers from other sections and also called a lot of unskilled labor away from the cotton and tobacco

Migrant Workers More 'Choosy'

From Wyoming to New Mexico the farmers and ranchers have found the migrants a lot more choosy. When they don't get the money and the housing conditions they want they move on.

The migrant worker in the United States is what might be called a necessary evil, at least in one sense. He's necessary all right, for harvests couldn't be brought in and large-scale roadbuilding simply couldn't be attempted if it weren't for him. And he's an evil, too, when it comes to size him and his relatives up as members of the Amer- studies of government enriched by ican family-he's a pretty bedrag- personal experiences in Springfield gled feather in the eagle's cap.

The rattle-trap car, the packingbox and tin-can shanty-town, the ditch camp and all that goes with the migrant laborer is a sad commentary on democracy.

Strawberry shortcake, peaches and ! a closer understanding of the "legiscream, the lettuce and tomato salad that is as much a part of the city meal as the knife and fork are taken for granted as necessary luxuries but if the rest of us didn't eat them. half a million families wouldn't eat at all. That's the estimate of the Farm Security administration. Their statisticians say 500,000 families. averaging three to a family mean at least a million and a half neonle pick up their beds and trek from crop to crop, carrying a choice assortment of disease and discomfort with them-and leaving a little behind each time they move.

Here is the record shown in a study of migratory labor made by the Works Progress administration

"Two and a half jobs a year; each job lasting eight weeks; median net earnings $100 in 1933, and $124 in 1934.

Other studies show median annual gross earnings for 1936 and 1937 ranging from $154 to $574—that only accounts for the ones who got jobs the rest of course earn little more than nothing. And somebody has to pay the bill.

Children Suffer Most From Plight

Since the children in these nomad units naturally suffer the most, each succeeding generation is a little worse than the preceding one. The children, as one observer expresses it, are "a lost tribe." They grow up without a stable home, without school or play and without health protection. The result of the last condition is 74 per cent more disabling diseases among migrants

S PORTS accessories like this are much in vogue among smart young things, not only for sports, but also for campus and runabout. Design No. 1265-B includes weskit, calot and chunky mittens, all of which you can easily make for yourself-all, of course, except the feather in the calot! The weskit is drawn in to a tiny waistline by back-fastened side belts-just like its masculine prototype; all three gay little gadgets are trimmed with stitching. Take a brief glance at the diagram, and you'll see how easy they are to make.

There are two conditions under which revolt might take place in Germany: First, a series of defeats of the German armies. Second, a winter as bad as last year.

RELIGION INDISPENSABLE

George Washington, in his Farewell Address, said that "religion and morality" were "indispensable supports" of the republic. The unorthodox Walt Whitman wrote: "I say that the real and permanent grandeur of these states must be their religion."

Our civilization was established, our government was founded, by men of religious cast of mind. If they were not all personally religious, their mode of thought had been fashioned in a religious atmosphere. A church was almost the first structure erected by the colonists, both at Plymouth and Jamestown. It was an austere religion at Plymouth, a light-hearted religion at Jamestown, but religion was the most important ethical influence in both these cradles of American civilization, and in the Maryland of Lord Baltimore and Charles Carroll of Carrollton.

No form of ethics other than that taught from the pulpit and at the fireside of religious fathers and mothers has had any serious hold on the American people. And in the decay of religious influence we may find much of the explanation of the loosening moral ties and consequent growth of vice and crime in this country. Religion has been pretty much dropped out of the scheme of things American. The family prayer that used to be first on the day's program in most American homes would be regarded as a curiousity today. The discipline maintained in the churches of half a century ago would be inconceivable today. People do not talk about or think about religion.

Yet what subject could be more important to thoughtful men than destiny? There can be no intelligent philosophy which leaves out of consideration the thought of a Creator. Scientists may yet be able to prove that men evolved from lower animals or even from inert matter. But what mind can grasp the idea of anything starting without some superior force to start it? And what man, knowing the human spirit, can believe that men are only an assemblage of chemicals, thrown together and allowed to dissolve without meaning or purpose? Who can fail to recognize the spark of Divinity in man himself? Who can believe that the flame of life is a mere product of physical combustion which can be snuffed out like a brief candle? Who can contemplate the command man has attained over physical objects and the victory of human spirit over self, and space and matter, and still believe that men have only the destiny of weeds and stones? Reverence for God and worship therefore becomes the natural act of every normal human being, and the discovery of His laws and His plans for life and destiny is the duty of every thoughtful man and woman.

The religious institutions now ex-

Strange Facts Halved Liner Floats

Wives by Pound

Courtesy to Death I The Liberty Glo, an ocean liner that struck a mine in the English channel on December 5, 1919, was broken in two but did not sink. After floating safely to Ameland island, a distance of 10 miles, the two halves were salvaged, joined together and the ship restored to active service.

Among some gypsy tribes of Europe, fat wives indicate that their husbands are good providers and keep them well fed. Consequently, portly women are in such demand that, at bride auctions, bids for them are often made at so much a pound, usually starting at about five cents.

===== ¶ In Europe, gentlemen are supposed to kiss the hands of married women only, as a form of greeting and farewell, not those of young unmarried girls because it implies they are either matrons or spinsters. Lately, however, the men have made so many mistakes that some married ladies now wear an "OK" glove, which covers the thumb and first finger only, leaving the other fingers bare as an indication that they may be

(1) Pick a general chairman who can picture the job as a whole. (2) Appoint a responsible person in charge of each food. (3) Arrangethe kitchen conveniently for the different jobs. (4) Prepare as many foods ahead of time as possible. (5) Have utensils ready and garnishes at hand. (6) Name a hostess to direct waitresses. (7) Plan a uniform method of serving. (8) Plan menus well ahead of time.

If the meat dish is different, the whole meal seems to have variety. And there's many a trick for serving thrifty cuts differently. Take meat loaf, for instance. A ham loaf de luxe with a good mustard-horseradish sauce will "make" any meal. Beef stew can be thickened a little, ladeled into dripping pans, covered with rounds or squares or diamonds of biscuit, and when baked it appears crustily and temptingly yours. Modern Nurseries Have Real Charm

By ELIZABETH MacRAE BOYKIN | full fresh white muslin curtains. The Today's practical and hygienic baby is a far cry indeed from the voluminously clothed infant of other days who traveled in fantastic carriage with huge wheels, scrolls of reed and topped with a fringed umbrella. So it's not surprising that today's baby should have a nursery with less lace but more crisp charm than nurseries in those "good old days." Not only does it have more charm, but it is also far more prac-

Such a modern nursery was one we saw today. The furniture was of sleek trim contemporary lines, no gewgaws, streamlines, rounded corners, a white enamel finish as smooth as porcelain. Yet the room itself was not offensively modern because the small patterned blue and white wall paper on the walls had a quaint air about it. The same design in a cotton print was used to slip cover an arm chair and to make the bedspread and a small quilt, while windows were hung with spread and slip cover were finished with muslin ruffles—needless to say, made to go into the wash.

The floor was covered in white rubber tile with an over-rug of soft olue broadloom for warmth when baby reaches the crawling and toddling stage. Lamps and accessories were all of white.

A cleaner prettier effect than this blue and whiteness for a nursery it would be hard to find. 'Twas no less babified because it wasn't pale blue or pink involved with net and ribbons. And think how much more comfortable for baby and practical for mother! Another asset was the fact that a room like this would grow old gracefully-the background being as congenial for an older child as for a baby. Even the furniture. by a few shifts, could be adapted for later years, since it was that popular type consisting of units that, separate, are child size but combined are for general use

Set of Shelves From Spools and Can Lids

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE other day I went to a Hobby Show and there, hanging on the wall with a blue ribbon pinned on it, were the spool shelves from SEWING Book 3! Of course, I searched out the proud girl who had made them, and she told me that she had also made the end table of spools that is in Book 5. I felt most as proud as count for England. The former preshe did. All her friends are savinger, a stubborn hold-out against ing spools for her and her urgent war aid or closer alliance with Britneed at the moment was, "some- ain, relinquishes his leadership and thing to make for Mother for resigns from the reunited National-Christmas."

Here is my suggestion. An adorable set of three corner shelves made of a lid from a tin candy box, one from a cracker can and a coffee can put together with wire, spools and two beads. These shelves were painted cherry red and hung up with a brass hook to hold salt and pepper shakers, vinegar cruet, and other things for making salads. Any homemaker will think of a dozen places where this handy set of shelves could be used. All the directions are here in this sketch.

There is time to make the hanging book shelves in Book 3, or the end table in Book 5, before Christmas, if you mail your order for these booklets today. Send or-

Having graduated from the Pasadena Community School of the Theater, eight young, enthusiastic Thespians decided that wherever THIS people congregated a theater could be built, with reasonable hope of success. So they went to Garberville, California, a thriving community in the heart of the giant redwood forests, which attracts visitors from WEEK all parts of the world. Here they built the "Redwood Playbox"—the

The players made their own stage sets, sewed their own costumes and built their own technical equipment, consisting of tin can spot and border lights; a spaghetti box and a lot of ordinary house wire became a switchboard.

"Not at all. The popular vote showed an enormous switch against the New Deal policies," he said. "Aw, go away! You just don't want unity," I said.

"Of course I want unity. It's the paramount need. But can't we still have it and talk reasonably?" he

"You're just another non-unity guy," I said. "You're too partisan. You're petty. You can't be big." 'Who can't be big?" he said. "You can't. You're a worm, that's what you are. You ain't got

THE LIGHTER VEIN AT TRAINING CAMPS

We're camping tonight on the old campground Camping tonight, my lady. Tenting tonight, tenting tonight Tenting on the old campground; There'll be fancy balls tonight, Bridge and movies lily-white-Tenting on the old campground.

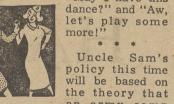

We are camping tonight on the old campground.

Hostesses here to cheer us: Tenting tonight, tenting tonight. We're tenting on the old campground;

Cheerful seem our training tests, For our folks are week-end guests-Tenting on the old campground. -Old Song Revised.

The draft army is to have no catch-as-catch-can entertainment this time. Recreation, diversion and good, clean fun are announced as a definite part of the army training plan, with hundreds of hostesses and junior hostesses bustling about the camps to see about getting up a dance, a bingo party, a bridge carnival or what have you.

The calls of "Squads right!" and "Tention!" will be mingled with
"May I have this dance?" and "Aw, let's play some more!' . . .

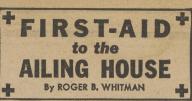

policy this time will be based on the theory that an army camp should in no way resemble a concentration camp, and that the more amusement the boys have the better.

The hostesses may be no younger than 30 and no older than 50, but their junior assistants may get under the wire as young as 25, which assures a reasonable amount of glamour and oomph.

Time was when the soldier boys used to sing sadly of the girl they left behind, but the girl they left behind may spend the next war singing of the boy who met a hostess.

The training camps of 1940-41 are going to look like something directed by Billy Rose, the late Tex Rickard and whoever arranges the Rose Bowl games. There will be athletic fields, vast recreation halls, swimming pools, moving-picture houses and even guest cottages and selfservice restaurants for visitors.

Tar on Porch Floor. QUESTION: I have an open porch with no roof over it, and a oneinch thick cement floor was laid last fall. I noticed a few cracks, and to prevent leaks I painted it over with roof tar. If never dried, and with warm weather the tar is very soft. Can the tar be removed? If nothing can be done, can I put down another one-inch coat of cement mor-

Answer: It is practically impossible to remove the tar entirely. The advisability of laying another cement floor over the present one will depend largely upon the strength of the beams supporting the porch floor. A well-known manufacturer of insulating boards makes asphalt saturated board specially for use as a flooring on roofs and open porches. It is light in weight. Ask your lumber dealer about it. In the meantime, cure the stickiness with a scattering of

House Centipedes.

A correspondent is greatly distressed over finding centipedes in her house. "There were two small ones, about one inch long, with a great many legs, but I was terribly frightened to see one the size of a mouse. (I assure you it is not my imagination.) How do they get in? How can I get rid of them? Are they injurious to health?'

Answer: If it were not for their looks, house centipedes would be welcome guests: for they live on other insects and go far to keep a house free of uninvited insect pests. They are not harmful to human beings. There are never many, and one sure way to get rid of them is to swat each one as it appears. They breed in damp places in the cellar; such places can be scattered with hydrated lime.

Gummed Paper. A correspondent writes: "I find gummed paper invaluable in my household. One of the many uses is the sealing of packages against moths; gloves, wools, furs, etc., are washed, or sunned and brushed, wrapped in newspaper and then packed in large paper bags saved from groceries. These bags are then sealed with gummed paper tape two inches wide. I have never had moths molest anything in these

Answer: Gummed paper tape certainly is useful, not only as suggested, but also for covering all joints of paper wrappings around rugs; for sealing cracks in boxes and chests to make them mothproof, etc. I am glad to recommend

Curling Rug.

Question: How can I keep my dining room rug from curling at the corners? It is a constant source of annoyance, not to say danger.

Answer: For a temporary remedy, turn over the curling rug, dampen slightly and press with a hot iron. For a more permanent cure, clean on both sides with your vac cleaner, and then brush the back with shellac thinned with an equal quantity of denatured alcohol.

Leaking Swimming Pool. Question: My concrete swimming pool leaks, though not cracked in any spot sufficiently to account for the loss of water. How can I make it hold the water?

Answer: Coat the walls and floor of the swimming pool with a cement composition paint. This material contains waterproofing. Also, check the condition of the cement around the drain, as well as the shut-off valve for the drain.

Corrugated Iron Roof.

Question: What can I do about leaks in a corrugated iron roof? 1 recently built a shed 50 by 50 feet. Rain comes in at quite a lot of places. Would it do to go along all the seams with tar?

Answer: Fill all the seams or joints between the sheets with an asphalt roofing cement. A coat of liquid tar or asphalt over the entire roof will keep it in good condition. Stiffening Chintz.

A housewife noted a recent suggestion of the use of starch for glazing chintz and for stiffening fabrics. For this purpose she recommends a thin solution of tapioca. which she "used on a pleated georgette ruffle, and it never changed a pleat. In applying the solution, stretch the curtain or iron it under a cloth. This will keep pleats in shape in all weathers.'

Oil Tank in Summer. Question: Should the supply tank of an oil burner be filled during the summer, or can it go nearly dry?

Answer: The tank should be filled full. If left empty or partly so, there will be condensation on the inside, and the water that forms may interfere with operation when you start up in the fall.

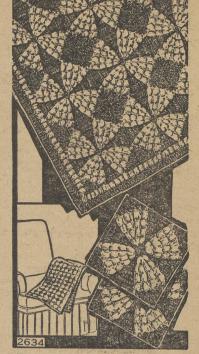

Killing Grass. Question: In order to kill grass and weeds on a large athletic field, can rock salt be spread and rolled in, to be dissolved by rain, instead of sprinkled with brine?

Answer: Yes; that will work, although if you do the job in a dry spell the action will not be as quick Sprinkling with calcium chloride would be better, for that is quicker to absorb moisture from the air.

Chipped Sink. Question: In nailing a shelf over my kitchen sink I dropped a hammer on the edge of it, chipping a large piece of the porcelain finish. Is it possible to repair the damage? Answer: Fair results can be obtained by coating the spot with a white enamel sold at most hardware stores for the repair of porcelain. Rub the spot with fine sandpaper until the exposed metal is bright. Wine with benzine (be careful of fire). Apply the paint in several layers in order to properly build up the hollow spot.

Declaration of War

Though the President of the United States may recommend a leclaration of war, he cannot declare war. The U.S. Constitution specifically gives congress and congress alone power to declare war. Thus, while the United States entered the first World war upon the recommendation of President Woodrow Wilson, it was authorized to do so by congress. On April 4, 1917, two days after Wilson's recommendation, the senate, by a vote of 82 to 6, passed a resolution declaring a state of war existed between the United States and Germany. On April 6 the house approved the senate war resolution by a vote of 370 to 50.—Pathfinder.

Our Humility

Humility is a means of progress. When we realize how little we know we shall yearn and strive to know more; when we feel how imperfect is our character, and not till then, we shall make earnest efforts after our improvement.

From the Sword The next great task of humanity is not deliverance by the sword but deliverance from the sword.
