M. P. CHURCH NOTES

The Loyal Workers' Class is planning to hold a rummage sale in the building that was formerly used by W. E. Jacobs as a store. The sale will be conducted this Saturday afternoon and evening and the following Saturday. If you have anything that you care to let these have, either send it to Mrs. R. W. Sapp or Mrs. H. L. Boyer, or let them know that you have something for them.

The Conference year comes to a close this Sunday. There will be two more Sundays before Conference, but those two Sundays count on the next year. After this week the newly elected officers of the church have charge. We are quite a bit behind financially. If you can help the stewards in any way, they would greatly appreciate it.

The last Quarterly Conference will be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock, in the Sunday School room. If you are a member, do your best to be present. It is hoped that we will get through in time to organize the stewards and make plans for next year.

After this Sunday evening, the evening hour for service will be 8 o'clock.

We have planned a very fine month of services for June. The first Sunday in June we will have a Communion Service in the morning. In the evening the high school baccalaureate service will be held. The pastor of this church will preach the sermon to the graduates. You are given a special invitation to be with us on this occasion. It will be a union service with our sister church.

The evening of the second Sunday in June will be Children's Day. Of course you expect to come out and see what these little ones are capable of doing. The Junior Choir will have charge of the music.

FARMINGTON CHURCH NOTES

Remember the temperance rally tonight, Friday, May 26, in Farmington M. E. Church. The Rev. Wine, of Bethany Brethren Church, will be the speaker of the evening. A special program of vocal and instrumental music is being planned for this occasion. Everyone is invited to come.

Rev. Robert S. Hodgson, of Milton, will preach in Farmington next Sunday, May 28. Your pastor will occupy the Milton pulpit at the hour. Come out and give your former pastor a hearty welcome.

The two Farmington congregations united in a service of worship at Bethany Brethren Church last Sunday morning. The Rev. Wine had charge of the devotions, and the Rev. Langral preached. We are looking forward to another Union Service in the near future.

Prospect Church was filled almost to overflowing at the Mother's Day service last Sunday afternoon. The success of the program was due very largely to the efficient leadership of Mrs. Ellen Pomatroy and her associates. We are very proud of the splendid efforts of our own young people, and very grateful to the visiting ringers and musicians for their talented assistance. The offering amounted to more than $6.00.

The pastor was happy to receive ten persons in preparatory membership last Sunday evening at Farmington and there are others yet to come.

Church Calendar for Sunday, May 28:

Todd's Chapel—10:00 A. M., Sunday School; 11:00 A. M., Memorial Day sermon. Miss Beva Zott will sing.

Epworth Church—2:00 P. M., Sunday School; 3:00 P. M., Memorial Day sermon.

Farmington—8:00 P. M., Rev. Robert Hodgson preaching.

STATE'S QUOTA IS FILLED FOR FORESTRY WORKERS

Applicants for the forestry corps reported for enrollment and physical examination Monday morning at Wilmington, when Delaware's contingent was completed. The group of 200 young men from New Castle county reported at the Army at 8 o'clock advanced time. As rapidly as they passed the first examination, they were transported in trucks to Fort duPont, where they underwent conditioning for the forestry service.

On Tuesday morning the contingent from Sussex and Kent counties reported at the army at 8 o'clock standard time, and following an examination were transported to Fort duPont. Extra tents were erected in order to take care of the new men.

According to officials of the State Temporary Emergency Relief Commission the quota assigned Delaware has been reached and a goodly number in addition to the number originally agreed upon for the State. The benefit of the preliminary training the first Delaware group has received at Fort duPont has resulted in this gratifying volunteer enrolling of unemployed single men for this service.

M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Rev. Dayton E. McClain, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, gave a strong address at the morning service.

The 44th anniversary of the Epworth League was observed at the evening service. Miss Layton sang a solo and Miss Margaret Simpson and Ellis Cordray sang a duet. These special numbers were much enjoyed by all. Miss Alberta West led the devotions and Miss Eloise Chipman took the leading part in the program, assisted by a number of the members.

The offering next Sunday for World Service.

7:30 P. M.—The Booster Class will have charge of the program. The service will be held in the auditorium. Rev. Frances Burgette Short, of Milford, will be the guest speaker. They also are having the Red Mill Quartet.

BALLOTS READY FOR ELECTION

The official ballots for use at the special election on Saturday, May 27, for the election of 17 delegates to the State Convention to be held at Dover next month to act on the Eighteenth Amendment repealer, have been printed.

The ballot contains the text of the repealer at the top, followed by instructions to voters. Beneath the instructions are three columns, the first listing the names of the 17 candidates for delegates who are for repeal, the second column listing the candidates who are against repeal. The third column, which was for the listing of candidates who would go to the convention uncommitted either for or against repeal if elected, is blank, as no uncommitted candidates were filed.

The column headed "Uncommitted" is being used in the ballot, although no uncommitted candidates were filed, because the law provided for the form of ballot with three columns.

No voter is permitted to write in any names on the ballot or to fill in any of the blank spaces in the "uncommitted" column. To write in any names would ruin the ballot.

A voter cannot vote for more than seventeen candidates. The ballot contains the names of thirty-four candidates—17 for repeal and 17 against repeal.

To vote for all candidate in favor of ratification of the 18th Amendment repealer, or all candidates against ratification, a voter should make a cross mark in the block at the head of the list of candidates for whom he wishes to vote. No other mark can be made. To vote for individual candidates a voter should make a cross mark at the left of the candidate for whom he desires to vote.

Thirty-six States must ratify the repealer before it becomes a Constitutional amendment. It reads:

"Section 1. The seventh article of amendment to the Constitution of the United States is hereby repealed."

"Section 2. The transportation or importation into any State, Territory, or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors in violation of the laws thereof is hereby prohibited."

"Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by conventions in the several States as provided in the Constitution within seven years from the date of submission hereof to the States by the Congress."

GREENWOOD GRANGE

The Greenwood Grange met in the auditorium of the new school building Wednesday evening. The purpose of the meeting was to confer the third and fourth degrees on a class of eighteen candidates taken into the Greenwood Grange during the Grange Improvement Contest that closed on May 8. The contest stressed the enrollment of new members and attendance to meetings.

State Master Robert P. Robinson and Mrs. Robinson were among the invited guests of the evening. State Master Robinson congratulated the local organization on its achievement during the past few weeks in showing such an increase in membership. He stressed the value of farm organizations, especially during the present period.

A degree team, consisting of 30 people from Milford Grange, was present and presented the candidates with the degree work. The degree team displayed skill and exactness in carrying out its duties, and considerable praise was given the members of the team.

During the business session of the Greenwood Grange, the summer program of work was announced. One meeting early in June will be devoted to a strawberry festival at the home of one of the members of the local organization. In July an outing for one day will be held at Oak Orchard. During August, a watermelon party is being planned. On Monday evening, September 25, a home coming supper will be held in the Greenwood Community Building. This meeting will mark the beginning of the regular fall and winter activities of the Grange. At that meeting programs for the Grange meetings will be outlined by the lecturer, H. R. Elzey.

After a short business session, those present numbering about 80, enjoyed refreshments served by members of the Greenwood Grange.

STORM VISITS DOWN-STATE

One of the worst storms in years visited the Greenwood-Bridgeville section early Wednesday evening. A most severe hail storm, accompanied by a strong wind, wrought havoc to crops in that section.

The rain fell in blinding sheets and the wind reached a velocity of 50 miles an hour. Trees were uprooted, telephone poles were leveled and many wires were torn down. Hail as big as marbles fell for ten minutes and covered the ground and could be scooped up in handfuls.

The most severe damage was to the home of Magistrate H. H. Cohee. Planks ten feet long and a foot wide were picked up by the wind and hurled with terrific force against the side of the frame dwelling which they pierced as though it were butter. The planks entered a bedroom, wrecking the walls and ceiling and damaging some of the furniture. The enclosed porch on the rear of the house was also torn away by the wind.

A number of one and two-car garages were torn from their foundations and the freight station at the junction of the P. R. R. and the Maryland, Delaware and Coast Railway was moved several feet from its base. The front of the Hilltop Garage of Schulte Brothers was blown out and many windows in homes were broken and many shutters blown away.

Between Greenwood and Bridgeville a large tree was blown down on the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad and a mail train leaving Greenwood at 5:45 was delayed an hour and a half in reaching Bridgeville.

Many cars parked on the streets in Greenwood were damaged when trees were blown down. Branches littered the streets and highways in all directions.

While other towns in Sussex were deluged with rain, no damage was reported, and in some places the rain was said to have been very light.

Washington.—The great experiment in farm relief is under way at last.

Farm Relief Machinery

Already, regulations and policies are being issued from the office of George N. Peek, administrator of the agricultural adjustment act, in quantity and complexity equalled only by those promulgated for enforcement of prohibition. They are the work of a dozen or so of men who are designated as experts, and the consensus around Washington is that only experts are going to comprehend them fully.

President Roosevelt and every one else is hoping the law will rescue agriculture and construct a firm foundation for the entire economic structure of the country. To help attain success, the President called Mr. Peek away from his vast implement manufacturing business at Moline, Ill., to take charge. Mr. Peek is sympathetic with agriculture in every respect. He realizes, for example, that agriculture must prosper or his plants are going to be idle. He will sell no farm machinery. So the law will be administered at the top by a friend.

But as the machinery for administering the act is developed, it becomes painfully apparent that the danger lies not in what goes on here in Washington with respect to it. The fear is held by many supporters of the law that the small army needed to carry its provisions into effect will be the breeding spot for trouble. However intensive is the desire to get the best out of the law, there is bound to be varied construction of its terms and the regulations promulgated under it. It is humanly impossible to have it otherwise, and there are plenty of precedents in the administration of other federal laws that have attempted to go too near the individual citizen. Then, probably there will be mistakes in honest judgment and a little graft as well. It has happened in other laws dealing with individuals. This one presents brand new opportunities in that direction.

The Department of Agriculture is striving, however, to acquaint the country with facts as to what the law means, how it operates and what it proposes to do. It is seeking the cooperation of all. Without co-operation, success is likely to be limited. The department, therefore, is seeking to have the farmers understand the necessity for the statute in advance of appointment of the vast personnel that will be needed to reach into every county where agriculture predominates. If that can be accomplished, it is argued, the agents of the government will have something with which to work when they interview farmers concerning their willingness to join in reducing acreage. It is by reduction of acreage, of course, that the main profit for the farmer is expected. That is the way it is figured to force prices higher.

Secretary Wallace and Mr. Peek and others connected with the job here in Washington have been holding conferences with representatives of producers, of processors (those who grind the wheat or spin the cotton, etc.) and other agencies. The processors are directly concerned, for they are going to be taxed in several ways to obtain funds for payment to the farmers who agree to reduce production. That is one way of creating what the bill calls price parity. The main purposes of these conferences have been to gain the facts concerning the amount produced, how and where it is sold, and basic information that will serve as guide for laying the tax. This phase of the groundwork is probably more complicated than any other, yet is the most vital. The amount of the tax, of course, is added to the price of the commodity received by the farmer. If it is fixed too high, consumption of the wheat or the cotton or whatever it is, is bound to decline. If the tax is too low, the farmer is not going to receive the full reward promised him for cutting down on his production.

It is easy to understand, therefore, why the processors have been fighting against the tax. They foresee reduced business for themselves. It is likewise easily understood why the producers' representatives want to force the tax up to the last cent obtainable. Both sides are avicious; they are human.

While the section of the farm relief act relating to mortgages and methods of refinancing them may not awaken the interest generally that the other part of the measure does, it seems to me that the provision enabling the Federal Land banks to issue $2,000,000,000 worth of new bonds holds forth more promise. The Federal government guarantees the interest on these bonds, and the proceeds of them will be used to make new mortgages or refinance existing mortgages on farm lands.

See Hope in Bond Issue

The Federal Land banks are authorized to buy outstanding mortgages from the present holders, or to exchange the new bonds for them, but the law specifies that this must be done "on the best possible terms." The plain meaning of this is that the land banks must seek to force a scaling down of the debt wherever possible. It is believed by many persons that holders of mortgages on which the interest has not been paid and on which perhaps installments are overdue, will be willing to reduce the amount of the debt in order to dispose of the mortgage. In other words, the holder of a $5,000 mortgage that is delinquent is considered as likely to accept something less than that amount if he gets what amounts to a government bond in its place. He knows the interest will be paid.

This section of the law likewise grants what amounts to a moratorium on interest payments by the owners of the mortgaged land during the next five years. It prescribes lower interest rates also, so that the debt will not be mounting so rapidly in the meantime. Of course, the interest eventually will have to be paid, but the thought is that now is the time when freedom from forced payment of the interest will be of most help.

Direct loans to the farmers by the land banks are allowed under the mortgage section of the law in cases where farmers live in communities having no farm loan association. The land banks will require such a borrower to agree to join a farm loan association if one is organized in his vicinity, but the law opens the way for him to obtain credit despite the absence of such an organization. It is well to recall that the original farm loan act specified there should be farm loan associations of at least ten members organized before loans would be made. In this manner, the members of the association really were co-guarantors of each other and it was considered that the bonds were better secured because of this.

On top of these increased benefits available to the farmers, the law appropriated $200,000,000 of Reconstruction Finance corporation money to enable farmers to redeem or repurchase farms lost through foreclosure, or to reduce or refinance what is known as junior mortgages and obligations. These commitments may include such things as mortgages on live stock or farm machinery and other equipment. Congress sought to provide assistance by providing means of getting rid of the pressure occasioned by the local bank or other lender of money who naturally wants to be paid off. It was argued that no farmer would be successful in a full measure if he had threats hanging over him of losing his work stock or whatever he had mortgaged to provide working funds.

Loans from the Reconstruction Finance corporation funds may not exceed $5,000, but it is provided there need be no repayment of principal for the first three years. As was stated in debate in the senate, this privilege enables a farmer to put his debts into one second mortgage and feel a little bit free until conditions improve. And it might be added that if conditions do not improve within three years, money will not be worth much anyway.

It is almost three months since the Roosevelt administration took over the government. Many things have happened, some of them of an astounding character, in that time. In the broader perspective, one of the things that has attracted attention of those who look into the future is the deep-rooted economic policy that President Roosevelt has fostered.

Economic Policy

In some respects, the President has been driving hard toward what may be described as economic nationalism. For example, there is the law which he describes as placing the government in partnership with industry. In other respects, he has sought ends properly described as economic internationalism. The tariff truce and the program for lowered tariff barriers throughout the world constitute proof of this course. I have found it difficult to reconcile the two, yet it has been pointed out to me that the President will be free to follow either course after the forthcoming world economic conference is ended. If all nations stand hitched, there will be tariff reductions through the world; if they do not agree in that conference, Mr. Roosevelt can turn back to economic nationalism.

The price parity bill, which I have just analyzed, is essentially nationalistic, and if it proves successful there will be sufficient unto ourselves. In this connection, the gold embargo should be recalled. While our tariff rates have been high, holders of capital in this country loaned billions abroad. These events surely have the appearance of a foundation for "planned economy," and affect our own development. They do not relate to world affairs.

President Roosevelt is not going to allow the American delegation to talk about the debts owed to the American government. That subject remains in his hands. It is safe to say he will be his own secretary of state to receive any communications the eleven foreign nations have to make respecting their inability to pay their semi-annual installments in June and later.

Just Hard Workers

In considering what the Roosevelt administration has done since March 4, many observers here have reached the conclusion that the President did not need to select strong men for his cabinet. The makeup of that cabinet never has been looked upon by those inclined to analysis as being outstanding in any particular respect. He has chosen honest, hard-working individuals for the various posts, but it is no secret that announcement of appointment of some of them brought questions among some rather important persons in the President's own party as to the identity of these named. Indeed, in the case of one cabinet member, I heard two long-time Democratic senators remark that they never had heard of him before.

The point of all this is that Mr. Roosevelt has come to be the government insofar as one individual can possibly be. He has dominated congress far beyond anyone's expectation or hope and he controls his cabinet to the point that in some instances makes of them just obedient servants as far as policies are concerned. He conceives the ideas; they effectuate them. Consequently, there has been no loss to the country in the failure of the President to appoint outstanding individuals.

Faulty Nutrition Is Peril to Our Young

Survey Reveals Condition Is Widespread.

Chicago, Ill.—Asserting that the health and efficiency of the coming generation is seriously threatened by a prevailing condition of faulty nutrition, Miss Anna E. Boller, dietitian of Rush Medical college and head of the National Live Stock and Meat board's department of nutrition, urges parents to use every care in planning an adequate diet for their children.

"The condition is widespread in extent and alarming in its significance," said Miss Boller. "Evidence of the gravity of the situation was brought forcibly to my attention by a survey in which I recently participated among a representative group of school children. It was found that approximately 90 per cent of this group, picked at random, had developed nutritional anemia in varying degrees. More than half of the cases were markedly or very markedly anemic.

Diet Out of Balance.

"Information secured in the survey indicated strongly that a diet out of balance rather than a lack of food was the basic cause of this condition in the majority of these children. In the case of 90 per cent of this group, the amount of protein, especially meat, in the diet was extremely limited, a fact which may have contributed materially to the anemic condition."

Miss Boller pointed out that modern research has revealed the high value of liver for the prevention and treatment of anemia, this discovery being recognized as an outstanding scientific achievement. She stated that in addition to the iron, so necessary in combating anemia, liver is such an excellent source of other nutrients, including vitamins, that it would seem advisable to include it in the child's diet at least once a week.

According to Miss Boller, malnutrition in children may be manifested by various symptoms, including marked overweight as well as marked underweight for height and age, an abnormal color, fatigue, posture, lack of endurance, and inattention at school. Although the extent to which this condition may bring about permanent injurious effects is dependent upon various factors, it is her opinion that if long continued, serious results are inevitable.

Ideal Daily Diet.

Miss Boller outlined the ideal daily diet for a child as consisting of milk, meat, egg, cooked and uncooked fruit, vegetables including potatoes and one baked and one uncooked vegetable, orange, tomato juice, cereal, bread and butter. These foods provide such vital elements as protein for growth and for tissue repair, iron for building blood, phosphorus and calcium for strong bones and healthy teeth, and the vitamins necessary to general health.

In conclusion Miss Boller called the attention of parents to the fact that they may well consider the less-demanded cuts of meat in planning the children's menus. She said that these cuts are just as desirable in flavor and food value as the so-called select cuts and that present prices make them available for even the most restricted budgets.

REALIZATION OF SECURITY

by LEONARD A. BARRETT

With investments, which a few years past paid dividends, one felt safe and secure.

Future plans were made by many persons on the basis of the income from these securities which they confidently thought were invulnerable. This depression has clearly demonstrated the futility of expecting to find that snug feeling of absolute security in material investments.

Another benefit which has come to us is the opportunity of transferring the source of our sense of security from tangible and material values to values which reside within us. The most productive and satisfying investment one can make is in one's self. The investment of health, education, courage, integrity, plus one's natural ability in a chosen field of work, pays dividends which no depression can ever take away.

No one can change his past. He may have made grave mistakes which later proved to be errors in judgment. This past is irrevocable, but not without its experience and lessons. This experience may become the stepping stone upon which we rise to higher things. What we all need is courage to forget the mistakes of the past, benefit by its experience, and begin all over again. Such an experience imparts the spirit of adventure and makes life worth the struggle. The sense of absolute security which makes effort and struggle unnecessary breeds ennui, satiety and unhappiness. The loss in material values may be very inconvenient, and in some cases serious, but not fatal. The loss of one's integrity and confidence in mental and spiritual resources means death. That person will safely "carry on" who has transferred the source of security to investments he has made in himself.

Firm Pledged Millions to Get Revenue Stamps

Humorous Incident of Recent Banking Holiday.

By WILLIAM L. BRUCKART

Washington.—Now that the banking holiday of ten days in March is only a nightmare of memory, some of the humorous situations that it developed have come to light. One of them involved a great tobacco manufacturing company, and the length to which it had to go to obtain the tiny revenue stamps which the manufacturers are required by law to affix to each package of cigarettes before the package leaves the factory.

The bureau of internal revenue can sell the tax stamps only for cash. It is not uncommon for a tobacco company to have as much as a couple of million dollars tied up in such stamps. But the supply dwindles rapidly, and so during the banking holiday every large factory ran short of stamps. It also was without money with which to buy them from the collectors of internal revenue.

Bureau officials here, after consultation with the treasury, agreed to allow the collectors to sell the stamps if the tobacco companies buying them would put up government bonds in lieu of cash until funds could be obtained. The plan worked splendidly with all save one of the greatest companies. It held no government bonds. All of its money was in banks and the banks, of course, were closed. The situation was dark. A new appeal was made to the bureau. After further consultation, the bureau agreed to let the company have stamps without cash, but before it did so it required and obtained a resolution from the company's board of directors by which it pledged to the government all of its property, cash in bank and everything else as surety for payment of its bill for tax stamps. The capital stock of the company is well in excess of $50,000,000.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

One piece of furniture which is in every room of a well-furnished house is the chair. It occupies this place of prominence because of its universal utility. The different models of chairs are innumerable. They are made to suit every requirement of style, period, and comfort. Persons buying for the latter reason should always make experiments in comfort by trying out chairs before making final decisions. They should sit in the chairs and see if the size, shape and height suit their requirements.

Requirements. A chair to be satisfactory for enjoyment must fit the body as a shoe fits the foot. It must be neither too wide, nor too narrow, too high nor too low and its curves and lines must conform to the restfulness of the body. Most persons prefer upholstered chairs for pure ease, but occasionally some are liking a style devoid of springs and stuffing.

Reclining chairs are particular favorites with men. There is one type which extends beyond the ample arms, and which has a well shaped back high enough to rest the head against, which is supplied with most luxurious springs and hair cushions or those of down. This chair goes by the inviting name of an English lounging chair. Here is a chair to gratify the got out of bed she immediately sat in the chair and put on her shoes and stockings or slippers. Its necessity is easy to understand when once you remember the height of old-fashioned beds. To this day many women use boudoir chairs for this very purpose realizing that sitting on the edge of a bed is harmful to mattress and springs alike. Shoe chairs represented luxury in a sleeping room which was furnished, of course, with equal attention to other details. Modern boudoir chairs reflect in a measure this same suggestion of luxury.

Fertile Farm Tract in Iowa Never Cultivated

Manchester, Iowa.—Although Iowa is a comparatively young state, there exists in the state only one sizable tract of virgin prairie land. All the rest, at some time, has been turned by the plow. This tract of untouched prairie is owned by Charles C. Barry, seventy-seven years old, a retired farmer here. The land was purchased by Barry's father from the federal government in 1856 for $1.25 an acre. Barry still possesses the original grant, a sheepskin deed bearing the signature of President James Buchanan. The prairie is tillable and highly fertile, but never was cultivated because it was located a mile distant from the remainder of the farm, said Barry.

The MAY DAY MYSTERY

by OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

Copyright by Octavus Roy Cohen.

We find it in Vernon's room and identify it positively—or will pretty soon—as being part of Vernon's collection of weapons. We have every reason to believe that the kid went plumb loco and took part in a bank robbery because he was desperate. The robber probably made a deal with him that all he had to do was drive a car, figuring no one would ever suspect a college student's car in a college town, even if it was hitting sixty on the road. We're sure Vernon was mixed up in that because we know he didn't have a thin dime before the thing happened, yet the very next day he buys a new car and pays the difference of twelve hundred dollars in cash. And I also know that he has lied like the devil about everything since I put him under arrest. Jim whistled softly. "It sort of makes Mister Vernon out to be a pretty tough hombre, John."

"He isn't that. I just think he went nuts." "Maybe so. . . . But he sure stayed crazy a long time." Reegan was a trifle annoyed. It did not please him to have his damning summary greeted with even the slightest semblance of skepticism. "What's wrong with my case, Jim?" Hanvey arched his eyebrows in surprise. "Golly, John! I didn't say anything was, did I?" "No. But you looked funny."

"I can't help it if I look funny, John. A guy who has a face like a custard pie and a shape like a goldfish is entitled to look funny, ain't he?" "But," accused Reegan, "you don't really think it was Max Vernon?" "Who says I don't?" "Do you?" "Pretty near."

"What do you mean: Pretty near?" "Well—" Hanvey drew a long, audible breath. "I sort of just happened to remember Larry Welch."

"Vernon had left the fraternity house before Welch got there, yet Welch says that he had a long talk with Thayer. Now that sort of seems to me, John, that if Thayer was already dead, Larry would have noticed it, wouldn't he?" "Hmph!" Reegan was crestfallen. "I think Larry lied."

"Are you in charge of this case now?" "Yes, Miss Welch—I guess so."

"Well, I'm glad. This man here—" she jerked her bobbed head toward Reegan—"is absolutely dumb."

"I'll be, really?" "I'll say he is. Else why would he keep my brother in jail? Anybody could talk to Larry and see that he isn't the kind who would kill anybody. That is, anybody but a cop!" Hanvey turned gravely to his companion.

"You see what the public thinks about you, John. And seeing that we don't need any solid ivory around here—suppose you run along and let me talk to this young lady alone?" "Very well," Reegan rose, without resentment, and started for the door. Hanvey followed. He spoke in guarded tones. "Just had a hunch I could do more with her alone, John. Suppose you take this knife down to the jail and ask Vernon if he's ever seen it before."

"And then?" "Come back and come in. I got a hunch she and I will be pretty good buddies by then."

Reegan marched off and Hanvey reentered the dean's office, closing the door behind him. He liked the trim little figure—although she somewhat frightened him. She was sitting now in a straight chair, and her legs were crossed—disclosing a frank expanse of pink flesh between the knee and the hem of the dress. Hanvey felt himself blushing, but Ivy seemed totally unconscious of her display.

He settled comfortably in the dean's swivel chair, mopped his forehead and the back of his neck, and then grinned dismally at the girl. "Answer me one question, Miss Welch: Ain't I the terriblest looking detective you ever saw?" The girl's blue eyes opened wide and a faint smile appeared. "Well, I wouldn't say you were a shirk."

heap thinner—I had a girl! And I lost her. . . . She married another feller, and it sort of seemed as though she had died."

Ivy sensed the very genuine sympathy and the deep human understanding. The campus tragedy had hurt more than anyone suspected. There had been the shock, the horror. . . . then the fear that Larry might have done it. Only her roommate knew of the long hours of crying. . . . only the roommate could tell of the heroism which sent Ivy Welch bravely out on the campus. But Ivy had not talked to that roommate. Hanvey, now—was different. She felt that he understood, and would help. It was a relief to talk. . . .

"Pat Thayer and I were engaged," she said simply. "Gee. . . ." "Of course, we weren't thinking about getting married just yet. We both felt I was too young. But I was wearing his fraternity pin and he was wearing a diamond ring which used to belong to my mother." Again her eyes filled with tears. "He had it on when—when he died, Mr. Hanvey."

Jim shook his head. "Where is it now, Miss Welch?" "I don't know. I suppose it's still on—on his finger. I put it there myself."

She suddenly buried her face in her hands. Hanvey, filled with a deep pity, watched her in silence. Then the blond head jerked upward and she forced a smile. "I won't talk about it any more, Mr. Hanvey. I'll try to be a good scout. You're going to help get Larry free?" "Yes—if he is innocent."

"Surely you don't think. . . ?" "No, Ivy—don't. But I do think that Larry has talked himself into a lot of trouble. And if he won't tell the truth it's up to me to find it out from someone else."

"I'll tell you everything I know." "Good. Now first: Weren't you with Mr. Thayer day before yesterday just about noon?" "Yes, sir."

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

BEAUTIFYING SCHOOLS

SCHOOL ought to be a lovely place. Children thrive best in beautiful surroundings. That does not mean elegant surroundings. Things can be beautiful without being elegant, or expensive, or loud. Beauty is always best when dressed in simplicity. A school building ought to be long and low, spread out on the grass like a brooding hen. Vines should dress the walls and old trees shade its grounds. Flowering shrubs should snuggle in the corners where children's feet do not reach them, and tucked in about their roots the spring bulbs should flourish.

The inside of the building is where children live. That means that it should be as beautiful as it can be made without becoming obviously decorated.

I think there ought to be one good picture in every room. I like that picture to be the one that appeals strongest to the children who use that room. Pictures ought to inspire the children, so they must be those that the children can read. They can only read a picture that calls upon their experience and their dreams.

I would not have a lot of children's work planned about a room. It gathers dust. Schoolrooms are not a good place for plants and animals, birds and fishes. If we can make them beautiful for the children we are doing well. First, let us make them clean. The walls, the floor, the ceiling and the woodwork, all ought to be clean as brush and cleansing water can make them. The furniture should be smooth. Its fair surface unmarred. The chairs and benches ought to be comfortable. It costs no more to supply a comfortable bench than to buy one that makes a child hunch and huddle and squirm to find a comfortable angle in it.

There must be plenty of light and air. A dark room with poor ventilation is never beautiful. The closets and wardrobes should be sufficient and they should be convenient. When hooks are higher than children's heads they cannot hang their things on them and they use the floor instead. What- ever makes for cleanliness, order, convenience, and comfort will make the classroom and the school a beautiful place to live. This is a good time to check up on paint and washing powders, furniture and equipment. Where the children live ought to be a place of beauty.

WHY?

I WISH I knew some way of making Clarisse practice her music." "Doesn't she practice?" "I should say not. If I didn't force her to go to the piano and stand there until she began playing she would not touch it. I've promised her everything but it's all no use." "Why don't you try letting her alone for a change."

"She wouldn't do a thing, I'm telling you. Know what she did last week? So deceitful. I was so upset I cried. I made her go to the piano and I stayed there until she got her music on the rack and began running her fingers up and down. I had people coming to dinner so I had to go. I listened every once in a while and I heard her playing. At least I heard the piano going."

"Well, her father came home early on account of the company and he came to me in the pantry and said, 'Mary, is Clarisse supposed to be practicing or what?'" "She's supposed to be practicing."

"But as a matter of fact she was reading a shocker and the kitten was doing the practicing." "There she sat reading a perfectly awful book and every once in a while touching the keys, and letting her kitten go up and down the keyboard to fool me into thinking she was playing."

Unknown Soldier's Tomb

Shrine at Arlington National Cemetery where Memorial day observance will mark the nation's tribute to the memory of the heroes of all wars in which the country has participated.

First Civil War Monument

ON a gentle rise of ground in the quiet village cemetery at Tipton, Mich., stands the first monument to the "brave and patriotic men who gave their lives in defense of the Unity of our common country."

At the time Tipton and Franklin township were cited in the national press for the energy and rapidity with which definite acknowledgment was made for the great debt of gratitude to those who made the supreme sacrifice that the Union of States might live, and since then the well-designed shaft has had recurring attention by the seekers of Civil War shrines as the years have mellowed its stone, and time has softened the memories of the hardships which it signifies. But clear and readable yet are the inscriptions:

On the south face: "Preserve the Union of the States cemented by our prayers, our tears and our blood." On the north face: "These died that the nation might live, republican governments be perpetuated, and personal rights secured."

The Heroes

THE flag they followed over seas floats silently overhead, Soft blows the poppy-scented breeze Above our hero dead.

Wrote "Battle Hymn of the Republic"

IN THE Civil war days of 1861 Mrs. Howe was visiting the army camps near Washington when she received the inspiration for the verses which were to live long after she was dead. Blending the emotions of religion and patriotism she wrote the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Then the words were set to the music of "John Brown's Body" and immediately the song was heard throughout the North.

"Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord." In back parlors of little cottages in obscure towns women sang those words while wheezy organs gasped out the tune. The music united them in spirit with their sons and husbands who had gone away to war.

Men Born in Northern States Who Won Distinction While Fighting for the South

A SIDELIGHT on Civil War history seldom noted is that many of the leaders of the Confederate forces were natives of Northern states. Albert Sidney Johnson, of Charlotte, N. C., who bears the name of one of the most distinguished of Southern generals, compiled a considerable list of "men who resigned their commissions or who, though removed to manhood in other sections, gave their all to what they believed was a fight for constitutional liberty."

These included Maj.-Gen. Martin L. Smith, New York city; Brig.-Gen. Albert L. Blanchard, Charleston, Mass.; Brig.-Gen. Johnson Kelly Duncan, York, Pa.; Maj.-Gen. Franklin Gardner, New York; Maj.-Gen. Bushrod R. Johnson and Brig.-Gen. Otto French Strahl, Ohio; Maj.-Gen. Josiah Gorgas, Maj.-Gen. Lunsford L. Lomax, Newport, R. I.; Brig.-Gen. Clement Hoffman Stevens, Norwich, Conn.; Brig.-Gen. Albert Pike, Boston; Brig.-Gen. Daniel H. Reynolds, Ohio; Brig.-Gen. Daniel M. Frost, New York, and Maj.-Gen. Mansfield Lovell, New York city.

Cover Them Over

COVER the thousands who sleep far away— Sleep where their friends cannot find them today; They who in mountain and hillside and dell Rest where they wearied, and lie where they fell. Softly the grassblade creeps round their repose; Specially above them the wild floweret blooms; Zephyrs of freedom fly gently overhead, Whispering names for the patriot dead. So in our minds we will name them once more. So in our hearts we will cover them o'er; Roses and lilies and violets blue Bloom in our souls for the brave and the true. Cover them over—yes, cover them over— Parents and husbands and brothers and lovers; Think of those far-away heroes of ours, And cover them over with beautiful flowers! —WILL CARLETON.

Memorial Day

MEMORIAL DAY, tenderest of national holidays, is with us again, reminding of the debt a grateful country owes the men who gave their all for its safety and perpetuity. Amid its preoccupation with economic stress, the Republic pauses to celebrate with piety and pride the deeds of bravery and patriotism performed by its sons on land and sea in the hour of emergency. It does so in the reassuring confidence that should duty ever call again the breed will not be found to be extinct. Its glory and its traditions survive in the hearts of living Americans, despite the organized efforts of certain groups which appear unable to see the necessity for national defense.

This day of remembrance of our heroic dead has more than ordinary significance. The need of the hour is for the stamina that has overwhelmed every armed enemy of the United States. The situation calls today for no whit less of courage, of perseverance, of the will to conquer than our forefathers have always displayed when they faced the foe. It is meet to recall the vicissitudes of the founding fathers and to derive inspiration afresh from their fortitude and faith. It was these virtues, as well as valor in battle, that made their cause triumphant.

Shakespearean Touch in Passing of "Stonewall"

FOR a national masterpiece of dying, nothing has ever impressed me so much as the death of Stonewall Jackson, writes Charles D. Stewart in the Atlantic Monthly.

The bullets that struck him down while he was reconnoitering after his successful attack at Chancellorsville came by mistake from some of his own men. Eight days after being wounded (having borne up under the amputation of an arm) he passed away in delirium; and history has recorded the things he said as he died:

"Order A. P. Hill to prepare for battle. . . . Tell Major Hawks to advance the commissary train. . . . Let us cross the river and rest in the shade." It was a stubborn battle, a hot fight, with quick strategy and high and rapid thinking. And when it was over he crossed to the other side. He must have entered into peace riding at the head of a victorious army, for certainly if it had not been a victory he would not have given that order to cross the river and rest in the shade. Here was a truly Shakespearean passing. It is great drama written by life itself. If Shakespeare had found it standing thus in Plutarch he would have kept it and made no alteration—a thing he was great enough to do. Jackson's death was a greater shock to the South than is easy to conceive. It was an event that filled the South-erners not only with sorrow, but with forebodings of defeat; for his victories had been so notable, and so almost certain, that they had learned to depend upon him as on some newly invented engine of war.

Some Never in Battle

MEMORIAL day reminds us of the devotion of men to a great cause and a great land. We decorate the graves of those who fell in our battles for the freedom and the preservation of our national existence; but the thought of Memorial Day is even broader than that, for there have been many of our best men who gave their last measure of devotion to their beloved land though they never fought on the field of battle.

Manner of Eating

All other creatures, except man, eat in much the same manner, with one eye on the food, and another on the rest of the world. Man alone manages to mix smiles with his dinner. He does this, first, because it is the custom; second, because it helps digestion; third, because it is fun, and fourth, because it stretches out the pleasant process to its ultimate length.

Actual "Dogs of War" Once

"Dogs of war" were no mere figure of speech in ancient time, for the Assyrians and other nations used dogs in the fighting, and often dog fought against dog when armies met.

J. P. Morgan has nothing on us in one way—we paid no income tax the past two years either.

The way some of the relief organizations are functioning, we soon shall have to have relief against, or from, relief.

What the Senate needs to push the Morgan investigation is a man of the type of Jim Reed or Tom Walsh.

Many of our subscribers have not paid their subscriptions to this paper. Some are unable to do so, but others, who seem to have money for everything else, say that money is "close." With this class, it isn't the money that is close.

The editor of the Journal is no ganderbone prophet, but (and he can prove this by several reliable witnesses) he foretold about the sixth of April just when the Delaware Legislature would adjourn. He missed his guess by only four hours—and it wasn't guess work, either.

Now that business is on the upgrade, what about a sewer system for Harrington? We need one, and we will be forced to build one within the next few years, so why not build it now before labor costs advance in such proportion that it will cost the taxpayers much more?

A rose by another name is as sweet today as it was in Shakespeare's time. Z. L. Waters is leading the fight for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in Indiana, while Rev. Wine is to deliver an address in behalf of said amendment in Kent county.

Delinquent tax sales for five districts of Kent county appear in this week's issue of the Journal. Despite the stringency of the times, we have fewer tax sales in these five districts than we had in three districts last year, which, we might suggest, is quite a tribute to the ability of our tax collector and county treasurer, Nelson Slaughter.

IT HAS ACCOMPLISHED SOMETHING WORTH-WHILE

Through the Harrington Chamber of Commerce, Harrington has another shirt factory.

About one month ago a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held, and at this meeting were Mr. Robinson, who operates a shirt factory at Seaford, and M. Feinstein, his superintendent. These gentlemen stated that they had more orders than the Seaford factory could meet; that they would like to open a factory here if they could receive the co-operation of the business interests. The Chamber of Commerce offered to pay rent on one-half of the W. E. Jacobs building, formerly used as a shirt factory, for a stated time, and Mr. Jacobs made additional concessions in the way of rent reductions. This was accepted by Mess. Robinson and Feinstein and they are now busy installing machinery. Enlarging their plans, they have also rented the remainder of the building from Mr. Jacobs and will soon have the plant in operation. This will give employment to many people and add materially to the revenue of the town.

Suppose we had no Chamber of Commerce would we have secured this factory? It is extremely doubtful. Quick action was necessary. The Chamber of Commerce, through its membership, can secure quick action. No other medium could have obtained such instant results.

While this is the first major success of the commerce body, it is by no means the first worth-while thing it has accomplished for the town. It has accomplished many things, and has been of great value to the town and community. Its members know this the active ones, and that is why they are enthusiastic over the things accomplished. The member who seldom attends may, in a mild manner, criticize, because he does not know. But the most consistent critic is the non-member who wants to know just what has been accomplished. It is not necessary for him to know what has been accomplished, because he, the typical malcontent, never assists in lending a hand to help anyone but himself.

A RECORD OF SERVICE AND PROTECTION FOR 28 YEARS

One fact alone proves the strength and good management of this bank, the fact that it has held steadily year after year to one unchanging course of safety in spite of all the changes that have taken place in these years.

This has not been due to superior wisdom upon the part of anyone in this bank. We have simply been guided by certain fixed principles of sound banking from which we have never deviated.

We do not speak of these things in a boastful spirit, but rather in a thankful spirit. We thank our depositors for their splendid loyalty and cooperation. We thank all of our friends in this community for the confidence placed in us.

More than ever, we wish to make the services of this bank an aid to the financial success and security of every depositor. With this thought, we extend to you our best wishes for the future.

BREAKS LEG SECOND TIME PLAYING BALL

James Elliott, of Houston, on Saturday broke his leg the second time in the same place as the result in both instances of playing ball.

Just a year ago Elliott was playing baseball and in sliding home with a winning run he fractured a bone in his left leg. Saturday is the first time that he has played since his former accident and Houston wishing to win the deciding game from the strong Ellendale team induced the hard hitting Elliott to again don his baseball togs and accompany the team to the latter town where the game was played.

Elliott delivered the hit to score the deciding run but as he slid into home plate he again fractured his leg.

COUNCIL WARNS OF ROAD HAZARDS

Hundreds of Delaware organizations will this summer conduct outings to the parks, the shore, the mountains and surrounding countryside. According to the Delaware Safety Council, none of these delightful trips need occasion mishap or regret providing their managers will organize for safety just as they organize for all other picnic arrangements. A special responsibility rests upon the managers to surround the picnic group with every possible safe guard. The most serious of the hazards generally encountered has to do with transportation. Trains, trolleys and responsible bus companies, and licensed river craft are safest for the transportation of large parties and pleasure seekers. Picnic managers are urged to select transportation with the greatest care as to ability, experience, equipment and not the cheapest.

The condition of equipment is of paramount importance. Picnic managers are cautioned not to overload their vehicles. This commonly occurs in motor truck movements of private automobiles and in some instances has caused very distressing accidents in various parts of the country. Overloading of vehicles often causes top heaviness, invites panic, endangers driver morale, and occasionally leads to loss of control of the vehicle particularly on dangerous grades. Sufficient time must be allowed to make the trip safe both driver to make up lost time by re-ways. Never request or permit your less speed.

Another important factor not to be overlooked is crowding the driver. To crowd the driver's seat is to court disaster. Give him adequate space in which to work and the opportunity to keep his mind on the business in hand. In motor truck movements particularly the picnic supervisor should insist upon maintenance of safe distance between vehicles as a protection against rear end collisions.

Storm conditions are often contributory causes of public accidents. With storm clouds threatening and rain falling, the natural reaction of the picnickers is to strat for home particularly if the party is using uncovered vehicles. But with the roads filled with others similarly minded and pavements becoming increasingly treacherous, the accident hazard ratio jumps alarmingly. The picnickers may get wet but if the picnic safety supervisors function effectively they will lead all of their party home safe and sound.

ORDERS SIX RURAL SCHOOLS CLOSED

Six rural school buildings in the State where the average daily attendance was less than 12 during the past three years were ordered closed and the pupils transferred at a meeting of the State Board of Education at Dover, Tuesday. The schools effected are:

New Castle County—Fairview, No. 90, pupils to be sent to Newark; Hillside, No. 100, pupils to be sent to Newark.

Kent County—Fraziers, No. 50, pupils to be sent to Caesar Rodney; Cedar Grove, No. 62, pupils sent to Felton.

Sussex County—Phillips, No. 41, pupils sent to Millville; Rogers, No. 42, pupils sent to Georgetown.

A reorganization was approved for schools at Milton, Selbyville and John M. Clayton School in Sussex County and at the Mt. Pleasant School in New Castle County where new buildings have been erected so that the allocation of funds may be revised.

No action was taken on the matter of teachers' salaries or the personnel of the Department of Education for 1933-34 owing to bills passed by the recent Legislature not having yet been approved by the Governor.

J. O. Adams, business manager of the State department was authorized to make satisfactory arrangements for the placing of fire insurance on the State schools. The sum of $5,000 was voted for the painting of schools where needed.

Delegations from Rehoboth and Newport, asking for new schools were heard. Rehoboth seeks a new senior high school and Newport a junior high school. No definite decision was given pending the mapping out of a program and the amount of funds available learned.

The Selbyville and Milton School Commissions conferred with the Board relative to contracts in connection with the new buildings. A resolution was adopted requesting the Delaware School Foundation to continue its co-operation with the State School Building program. Alexander J. Taylor, of the School Foundation was asked if such an agreement could be approved and he said he would report to the officers of the Foundation and make a reply later.

SAFETY SALLY

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

May 15, 1933

Time and again I am told—by my own organization and by others—that I penalize myself by quality.

Friendly critics protest our putting into the Ford V-8 what they call "twenty-year steel." They say such quality is not necessary; the public does not expect it; and that the public does not know the difference anyway.

But I know the difference.

I know that the car a man sees is not the car he drives—he drives the car which the engineer sees. The car which is seen, comprises beauty of design, color and attractive accessories,—all desirable, of course. The best evidence that we think so is that they are all found on the Ford V-8.

But these are not the car. The car proper, which is the basis of all the rest, is the type of engine and its reliability; the structure of chassis and body, ruggedly durable; the long thought and experiment given to safety factors; the steady development of comfort, convenience and economy. These make the car.

A car can be built that will last two or three years. But we have never built one. We want the basic material of our car to be as dependable the day it is discarded as the day it is bought. Ford cars built 15 years ago are still on the road. It costs more to build a durable car—but two items we do not skimp are cost and conscience. A great many things could "get by"—the public would never know the difference. But we would know.

The new Ford V-8 is a car that I endorse without any hesitancy. I know what is in it. I trust our whole thirty years' reputation with it. It is even better than our previous V-8. It is larger, more rugged and mechanically a better job all round.

I readily say this in an advertisement because I know the car will back it up.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

PETER AND SHORT-TAIL BECOME FRIENDS

Who speaks a gentle, kindly word And does it in a pleasant way Will find ill-temper vanishing.

NOW when Peter Rabbit was so polite, and spoke in such a pleasant way, and said he hoped they might become acquainted, what could Short-Tail the Shrew do but say he hoped so, too?

But no one could be angry with Peter Rabbit for very long. Besides, he had looked so funny when he had discovered his mistake that Short-Tail had wanted to laugh in spite of his resentment.

"There isn't any reason that I know of why we shouldn't become acquainted," said Short-Tail, in his high, sharp squeaky voice.

"I'll come," declared Peter. "I'll come often. Where did you say your home is?"

"I don't say," grinned Short-Tail. "What is more, I don't intend to say. Some folks may feel safe in their homes where they are, but the fewer who know where my home is, the better pleased I'll be."

Peter looked as he felt—disappointed. "But if you won't tell me where you live, how am I going to find you?" he protested.

"Oh, you'll find me around if you use your eyes," replied Short-Tail. "Speaking of eyes, I don't like so much light, so you'll have to excuse me if I get back under that old log."

Saying this, Short-Tail darted back under the log. "Will I find you under this log when I call tomorrow?" asked Peter.

"I don't know. Can't say. Maybe. Maybe not. Never know where I am going to be another day. Maybe in Hooty the Owl's stomach. 'Hi, ha, ha!' All this was said lightly, and in that funny, squeaky voice.

"Don't joke like that, because it might come true, and that would be

U. S. Wheat Crop Poorest Recorded

Prospects in Ohio Indicate Larger Yield Than in Years 1926-1930.

Prepared by Ohio State University Agricultural College Extension Service, WNU Service.

Prospects for the winter wheat crop in the United States are the poorest on record, while the crop in Ohio promises to be better than average, according to crop reports received by the department of rural economics at the Ohio State University.

No other important winter-wheat growing state has prospects approaching the average for the years 1926 to 1930. Estimates place the Ohio crop at 81,650,000 bushels, which is 4,500,000 bushels larger than the average for three years.

Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma, the three leading winter-wheat producing states which produce nearly half of the total crop, report prospects of a one-third average crop. These three states together expect to harvest less than 100,000,000 bushels. Their average harvests totaled about 260,000,000 bushels.

Crop reports estimate the total crop for the country this year at 334,000,000 bushels. Average crops in the period of 1926 to 1930 were 500,000,000 bushels.

About two-thirds of the total wheat crop in the United States is winter wheat. Spring wheat makes up the other third.

Brighter Outlook Now Seen for Corn Market

United States corn will meet less active competition in world markets this year because of prospective short supplies of Argentine corn and the market reduction in the South African crop, it is expected by the bureau of agricultural economics.

The Argentine corn crop is forecast at 264,000,000 bushels, against 293,000,000 bushels produced in 1932, and the record harvest of 420,000,000 bushels in 1931. Stocks of old crop corn are low, with supplies for export estimated at approximately 8,000,000 bushels as of March 1, says the bureau. Shipments during March were about 7,600,000 bushels.

The bureau says shipments during the next Argentine corn crop season will have to be drawn principally from the new crop. The quality of the crop is reported as satisfactory, although rain interrupted harvesting in some areas. Supplies of corn in the United States are reported as materially greater than a year ago, although farm consumption is reported heavy.

Soybeans for Brood Sows

Soybeans may be safely fed to brood sows during the gestation period at the rate of one-half to three-fourths of a pound per head per day, and during the suckling period at the rate of one pound a day. Those who have soybeans available for that purpose will not have to buy tankage or other protein supplements. There appears to be no danger of the pigs producing soft pork even if their dams are fed soybeans. On the other hand, after the pigs are weaned and are fed for market, they should not be given soybeans at all—not even in small quantities—as that produces soft pork. Those who have not grown soybeans for hogs in the past should bear in mind that their use for brood sows is permissible. Whenever soybeans are fed to brood sows or used as a protein supplement for cattle, a common mineral mixture composed of one-third by weight of ground limestone, bone meal and common salt, should be supplied. The reason is that soybeans are deficient in mineral matter, especially in comparison with tankage.—Wallace's Farmer.

Learn to Use Explosives

Agricultural use of explosives, a new departure in the technique of tilling the soil, is being taught Alabama farmers by the agricultural extension service of Alabama Polytechnic Institute. Principal uses thus far shown the farmers include blasting of boulders and stumps that impede the progress of farm implements. Use of dynamite to control erosion will be taught later, according to plans announced.

Farmers all over Oregon are preparing to use some of the trees obtainable from the state forest nursery in planting windbreaks, shelter belts and woodlots.

Monterey (Calif.) packing plants diverted 94,500 tons of sardines out of the 1932 catch for manufacture into fertilizer and other by-products.

Proper choice of seed corn may increase yields to 50 bushels per acre, the agricultural extension service of the University of Tennessee reports.

POULTRY

POULTRY DISEASE PROVING SERIOUS

Range Paralysis Reported in Many Sections.

By C. L. Ferguson, Extension Specialist in Poultry Husbandry, Ohio State University.—WNU Service.

A disease of poultry, its cause unknown, is exacting an increasingly heavy toll in farm flocks in many sections. The disease is known as range paralysis and may become evident when the chicks are about fourteen weeks old. Chickens appear to be susceptible to the disease until they are eighteen months old.

Mortality due to the disease has been found to vary from 5 to 60 per cent in a number of flocks, and the first symptoms are lameness, or paralysis, in one or both legs, blindness, and the drooping of one or both wings.

Although the disease has become known as range paralysis, it is found to occur also among chicks raised in confinement away from the poultry range.

Until a means of prevention of the disease is known, flocks found susceptible to it should be treated as if the flock were contagiously infected. Strict sanitation, avoidance of over-crowding of the young chickens, raising of chicks in small units, and segregation from old hens, is recommended.

When the disease becomes serious, keep over as many of the older birds of the flock as possible, for there are no known cases where the disease occurred after the birds were eighteen months old.

Certain families of chickens seem to be resistant to the disease.

Value of Good Hen Is Found in Egg Record

While all hens cannot be expected to lay as many eggs as a few of the most outstanding individuals, nevertheless, the exceptional individuals show the possibility of improvement, so it is worth while to occasionally call attention to some of the better records. O. A. Barton, of the poultry department of the North Dakota experiment station, reports the record made by a single Rhode Island hen in a two-year period. This hen produced 542 eggs in two years, or 284 eggs the first year and 258 the second year.

This hen consumed 190 pounds of feed during the two years, or only about twice as much feed as the weight of the eggs produced. The market value of the eggs was $10 for the two years, while the feed cost was $2. In other words, this hen made a gross profit above feed cost of $4 per year. Her average feed consumption was about four pounds for each dozen eggs produced. Thus, her feed cost was less than 5 cents per dozen eggs. Figures of this sort should encourage poultry producers to keep egg records and continue breeding from their most precious hens, mated with males from high producing stock.—Wallace's Farmer.

Colds and Roup

Colds and roup in chickens are frequently present. An outbreak of these diseases cannot always be prevented. Therefore, one has to resort occasionally to individual treatment. Applying an ointment to the head, face, comb and wattles of the affected chickens is often recommended. Such an ointment may be made as follows: Eight ounces of olive oil, one ounce of gum camphor, one ounce of carbolic acid.

In making this ointment the olive oil is heated and the gum camphor dissolved in same. The mixture is permitted to cool before adding the carbolic acid. Unless the mixture is cool at the same time the carbolic acid is added, an explosion will occur. To be safe it is usually desirable to have the druggist make the ointment.

The ointment may be applied every second or third day until it is no longer needed. In severe cases it is desirable to place a small quantity of the ointment in the opening in the roof of the mouth at the time the head and face are massaged.—Missouri Farmer.

Cater to Appetites

When birds are out of condition, feed should be given according to their appetites. When they regain their health and appetites, the regular feeds and schedule of feeding can be gradually resumed. Even with layers in the prime of condition, it pays to cater to their appetites as no two flocks are likely to have the same tastes. One flock will prefer one kind of grain or mash and another will prefer something else. It pays to give them what they want.

Cross-Breeding

Poultry raisers who have stock of the lighter weight breeds and wish to produce table birds often find it profitable to cross some of their hens with males of heavier breeds. In this way they may increase the weight of the chickens from one to two pounds each. If their own breeds are very heavy layers the cross-bred pullets will probably not equal them, but will still prove profitable layers through the winter and spring. There is a chance the cross-bred pullets will be better.

Sex of Geese

The sex of geese can be determined in various ways. One method is to go in the pen and drive them about, getting them in a corner. You will generally find the ganders on the outside of the flock, lowering their heads and hissing. The voice is also different in the gander, being hoarser, and as a rule the male is larger in the head and thicker in the neck. If you have a dog with you the ganders will always keep to the outside of the flock to protect their mates.

THE "COMING OUT" OF A DEBUTANTE

In other days a "coming out party" was not only of vital importance to the debutante for whom it was given, and to her own friends but of interest to society as a whole, which went to the ball or to the coming-out tea and made its decision as to the debutante's social qualifications.

To put horse shows and dog shows, country fairs and debuts in the same category is perhaps destroying to illusion, but it is not at all far from the truth.

A dance, instead of a ball, would include only the intimate friends of the hostess, all the season's debutantes and younger dancing men. This would mean that the daughter is "presented" only to her mother's best friends, to whom she is obviously well known, and to the girls of her own age.

In other days the social success of a debutante depended to a great degree upon the approval of dowager hostesses who invited her to their dinners and to sit in their opera boxes. If they did not approve they left her more or less marooned. Today, this power of the dowagers does not exist. The debutante who is liked by other debutantes is invited everywhere. Even the mothers of the debutantes (let alone the detached dowagers) have little or nothing to say about the invitations of the youngest generations.

Normally, then, let us say that the modern debutante is still brought out occasionally at a ball, more often a dance, and most often at a tea—either with dancing or without. Or perhaps the debutante is not "introduced" at all. Perhaps she herself gives a dance, to which she invites none but her own personal friends, both girls and boys. Or perhaps she gives a theater party with supper afterwards, or perhaps she gives a dinner at little tables. There is no limit to the type of entertainment to be given and no exaction as to the number of invitations. Or let us suppose that her mother wants to introduce her formally without giving a party at all! Nothing could be simpler, or more conveniently proper! She need merely have the daughter's name engraved beneath her own on an ordinary visiting card, and send this card in a small envelope, which fits it, to her entire visiting list.

At all events, no matter what the party may be, the debutante receives notice but her own personal friends, both girls and boys, and the debutante close beside her. No one else stands in line. Her best friends who are asked to "receive" are merely expected to wear light-colored dresses and no hats in the afternoon. At an evening dance there is no way of distinguishing those who "receive" from any of the other guests. (At an ordinary tea those who "pour" or in any way aid the hostess, wear hats. A debutante tea is the only exception.) On the other hand, it is best that all rules of convention be qualified by those of local custom. Meaning merely that under usual circumstances it is better to do as your neighbors do, than to attempt conspicuous innovations, because they happen to be the fashion in Paris, or London, or New York—unless the innovation adds to ease or to beauty.

A few last words of advice to the debutante herself, on the ever vital subject of popularity: A girl who dances beautifully rarely lacks partners! There was a time when the title "helle" was awarded solely to those who had most partners in a ballroom. No other test counted. Today a young girl who cannot learn to dance well—and who hasn't partner appeal—stays away from dances and chooses some other field for her pleasure, that of the bridge table, or the golf course, for example. Today it does not so much matter what she does, so long as she can learn to do something as well as, if not better than, anyone else.

Today's word for skill is—success. If she is good for nothing but to look in the glass, adjust the makeup on her face and pat her hair, while the storage spaces in her brain are left empty or littered with trash, life is going to be a pretty dreary affair. In other words, decoration of the outside of an Easter egg may compensate for emptiness within, but it is an unsatisfactory equipment for human happiness. It is said that once upon a time beauty was worshipped for itself alone, and it has glorifiers of sorts, today. But today's moderns do not care for beauty if it have neither heart, nor wit nor sense to "go with it," any more than they care for butter with no bread on which to spread it.

Blame Placed on Bees
Twelve years' research has disclosed that bees are to blame for the failure of sweet cherry culture in Vermont. Prof. M. B. Cummings, of the University of Vermont, who conducted the experiments, reported that "the lack of proper pollen bearers and the absence of bees for the crossing of flowers," explained why sweet cherries didn't flourish in Vermont.

TO REGISTERED VOTERS!

The following information under "How to Vote," and the marked diagram of the voting columns, are published for those qualified citizens who wish to end Federal Prohibition and give back to the State full power to control liquor. Such citizens will vote FOR REPEAL of the 18th Amendment by putting a cross at the head of the column of delegates who stand FOR REPEAL. This is a "Wet" vote in every-day talk, because it is compared with the attempt to enforce total abstinence by Federal police. But the vote FOR REPEAL, the so-called "Wet" vote, is truly a vote for temperance and decency under local laws which we can enforce; and under which we can wipe out the speakeasy, prevent the old-time saloon, and prevent sale to minors and to the intemperate.
