

The Harrington Journal

HARVEY BURGESS, EDITOR

1.00 Per Year in State; 1.50 Out of State

Entered as second class matter on May 9, 1913, at the postoffice at Harrington, Delaware, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Articles for publication must be accompanied by the name of the writer to insure publication, but not necessarily for publication.

To insure publication in the current week, all communications should be in this office not later than 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The Wilmington Star's "Kent and Sussex Fair Edition", issued in tabloid form, is a neat paper, well edited, attractive and interesting—but we are puzzled that it is called the Kent and Sussex Fair Edition.

On the front page it has about two columns concerning the Fair and it has two or three illustrations, with comments on another page or two.

By scanning the third page, we find most of it devoted to the career of U. S. Senator John G. Townsend, Jr. Now, John Townsend is a fine fellow, and we're glad he has a career. A career can never harm anyone, when it is as wholesome and as generous as John's—but what has that to do with the Harrington Fair? Beneath John's career—and that's where it belongs—is a statement that Thomas C. Frame has been active as an attorney since 1894. It also contains a photograph and a short write-up of Governor Buck. Governor Buck's write-up comes second to Mr. Frame's, and this is not an anachronism, for Tom has been active longer than Douglass. It also says that Insurance Commissioner Shaw is serving well. We have never heard this disputed.

By consulting the fourth page, we find that Melvin Hopkins also has a career. Melvin is an able attorney, and we believe he is going to have a splendid career. It further accuses Senator Wharton of having been a member of the State Senate since 1926. Why rub it in on a man? We all make mistakes. And we find that Houston (the town, not Bob) is proud of G. A. Wilson; that Highway Commissioner Mack has had wide and vast experience and it heaps ignominy upon the innocent head of Charles T. Jackson by accusing him of being a member of the Delaware Legislature.

Further on, this Fair Edition extols the ability of State Detective Wharton, claims prestige upon the scroll of valor for Dr. Holloway and H. B. King and says that Richardson and Robbins (of Dover) was founded in 1855. It gives an interesting write-up of Clayton and glows with eloquence over the Delmarva ice cream (of Dover). It tells of a Smyrna milkman who has been active fifteen years and avers that John Morris, also of Smyrna, is an expert contractor. It has numerous write-ups of residents of Dover, Wyoming, Smyrna, Milford and all by-stations, but we can find only one Harrington citizen—or firm—mentioned. And right at the last the paper has a conspicuous announcement—"The Star Sells Electric Refrigeration"—probably to Harrington.

What is wrong with Harrington. Surely some of its people must have had careers. The Journal demands justice for Harrington—but not too much justice!

This is no criticism of the Star. It took the business where it found it.

This thing has happened before. A few years ago the radio carried to the four winds that the Kent and Sussex Fair was located near Milford. The Journal took up the cudgels in behalf of Harrington. More recently, the State Board of Agriculture issued a booklet carrying illustrations of everything from sand dunes to quails' eggs—and failed to mention Harrington and its Fair. Again the Journal went to bat and told the State Board of Agriculture—or the Bureau of Markets—of its error. Now the Fair Edition of the Star goes from Dan to Beer-sheba, from alpha to omega, making divers side excursions into the hinterland—and fails to locate Harrington.

Whose fault is this? Is it Harrington's?

When will it awaken to the fact that outside papers care nothing for you? They will give you complimentary notices so long as it does not conflict with the interests of their own towns. Then you are ignored—or, maybe, censured. They are within their rights. They violate no code of ethics. Their first duty is to stand by their own towns and most papers do this.

For fifteen years we have done our best to work for Harrington, while we were making our living from sources outside the town. One can't live forever on a one-way street. If you expect someone to fight your battles, you must give that someone substantial encouragement or you must fight your battles alone. A few have stood by us with the finest loyalty in the world. Others speak of co-operation—some of them pronounce it "corporation"—and it may be just that for it seems to mean that the other fellow is to help you, while you withhold help from the other fellow. With a spirit of unselfish co-operation what wonders could be accomplished for this town. The Journal is willing to do as much as any other agency in the town—but it is tired of the one-way street proposition. Hereafter traffic must flow both ways or it will not flow at all.

FIRST KENT AND SUSSEX TENNIS TOURNAMENT

There will be held during the third week in August, from August 14th to 19th, inclusive, a Kent and Sussex County Men's Tennis Tournament at Dover, open to all residents of Kent and Sussex counties, who have lived in either county for the past year. All matches are to be played in Dover on the three courts located at the High School. The entrance fee will be 50c, which will be expended on prizes, balls and stationery expenses.

Those desiring to enter will mail their applications and entrance fee to the writer, and those entering in double should indicate with whom they are going to play doubles. It is the intention to play all the matches during the week with the exception of the semi-finals, which will be played on Friday, August 18th, and the finals on Saturday afternoon, August 19th.

In sending in your application, will you indicate whether it will be possible for you to play during the week in the afternoon or, if on account of work, will it be necessary to play beginning five o'clock in the evening? In other words, insofar as is possible, we will try to run certain matches off during the afternoon so that those who cannot play during working hours can do so after five o'clock.

The time of filing entries closes Tuesday, August 8. The schedule of play will either be published in the paper after the entries have been received, or else individual notices will be sent to each participant.—R. C. Beckett, Dover, Del.

Billions of Dollars in Added Values

Billions of dollars have been added to our national wealth by the recent rise in grain, commodity and security prices.

This tremendous increase represents something solid and definite to indicate the nation-wide progress that has been made in the past few months. It brings a degree of encouragement that nothing else could.

People are now looking forward to the future with increased confidence.

This huge increase in commodity and security prices will strengthen the position of every business and every bank. Thousands of people will have more money for spending, for paying their bills, and for rebuilding their savings reserves. Activity should be stimulated in every line.
