

FOURTEEN BILLS FOUND MONDAY BY GRAND JURY

Two Indictments Were Ignored at Opening of October Term of Kent County Courts

FINAL DIVORCE DECREES FOR TEN

The Grand Jury at the October session of Kent County Court at Dover Monday returned fourteen true bills and ignored two. Five indictments for desertion and non-support were against Lister V. Hall, John W. Wroten, Wilbur S. Camper, Nicholas Kuzien and Carroll Hickman.

The other indictments were Ivory Powell, charged with carrying concealed a deadly weapon; Sara Emma Sibitzky, George Daniels and Leonard Turner, larceny; Roland Langrell and John C. Uber, assault and battery.

Three indictments were found against John Brown alias "Jimmy Brown," two for carrying concealed a deadly weapon and one for assault and battery.

The two bills ignored by the jury were Charles W. Jackson, charged with desertion and non-support and Wilbur Sherwood, selling intoxicating liquors.

Of the 24 divorce cases scheduled to be heard before the judges of the Superior Court, decrees nisi were granted in 10, on Monday as follows: Laura Hiller Cahall from Elwood Cahall; Victor D. Owens from Bertie Marie Owens; Pearl Emma Hardy from John R. Hardy; Anna B. Parks from William B. Parks, Jr.; Susie P. Davis from John R. Davis; Pearl T. Marker from Amos Marker; Samuel G. Bradley from Cora S. Bradley; Maude B. Heavolow from Harry Heavolow; Francis R. Denney from William F. Denney.

In the Kent County Court of General Sessions at Dover Thursday, James Brown, Negro against whom three indictments had been found by the Grand Jury, two of which were for carrying concealed deadly weapons one a razor and the other a revolver and a third for murderous assault and battery on George Beckner, aged white man, at his home near Farmington, Del., pleaded guilty to all three indictments and as the assault and battery indictment was the most serious, he was sentenced to two years in the Kent county jail. The other two cases were retired.

Leonard Turner who pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny was sentenced to three months imprisonment in Kent County jail.

George Daniels who also pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny was sentenced to nine months in Kent County jail.

Ivory Powell who pleaded guilty to carrying concealed a deadly weapon was fined $25 and costs which he paid and was released.

Of the five indictments found by the Grand Jury against defendants for desertion and non-support, four of the defendants entered pleas of guilty and the court made orders of weekly payments against such defendants as follows: Carroll Hickman, $3.25 for support of wife and child; Lister V. Hill, $2.50 for support of minor children; Wilbur S. Camper for minor children $4; John W. Wroten and one child $7.

Additional divorce decrees nisi were granted by the judges sitting at the Superior Court as follows: Elizabeth Forkum from George H. Forkum; and Mabel M. Hayes from Joshua Paul Hayes, both of Dover.

Mrs. Sara M. Sibitzky of Farmington against whom an indictment was found for first degree arson, was arraigned on the charge and entered a plea of not guilty. It is likely that some disposition of the case will be made next week.

The Grand Jury having concluded its work for the year, submitted their annual report to the court which was read in open court and ordered published and presented to the Levy Court of Kent County. The Grand Jurors serving for the year 1933 commenced with the April term of court this year.

The report follows: "We were in session four days. The office of the attorney general presented us with 39 indictments, all of which were carefully considered. We found 33 true bills and ignored two and had four withdrawn.

"At this, the closing term of the year, we visited the Kent County jail. We found it a very creditable institution for Kent County. It is a wonderful building and we found it kept in a very clean and sanitary condition. We think the sheriff deserves a great deal of thanks from the citizens of Kent County. We do think, however, he should have more help inasmuch as there is too much work for the sheriff and his present help.

FIELD DAY AT STOCKLEY

The Annual Field Day and Poultry Party at Delaware Colony, one mile south of Stockley, will be held under the direction of the Delaware Commission for Feeble-minded on Saturday, October 21, from 2:00 to 4:30 in the afternoon.

REPORT MADE TO AID CHILDREN

That a determined effort has been made to aid the underdeveloped, physically handicapped and retarded children of Delaware is revealed in the annual report of the Delaware State Health Council, of which G. F. Hendricks, director of Health and Physical Education of the State Department of Public Instruction, is chairman.

The Delaware Whitehouse Conference on Child Health and Protection, called by Governor Buck a year ago, revealed that approximately 4,000 school children in Delaware are suffering from physical, mental and social disturbances, with an additional 40,000 children suffering from diseased teeth, tonsils, adenoids, vision and hearing, all sufficiently serious as to warrant immediate correctional measures. In view of these facts the Delaware State Council was organized and dedicated itself to a program of active service in an attempt to stimulate interest and bring about medical correction of some of these physical defects.

How well this group succeeded in its labor on behalf of the needy children of Delaware is revealed in the following figures: Number of pupils examined with serious defects, 19,944; total number of defects disclosed by examinations, 39,726; total number of defects corrected as result of the Health Council campaign, 1,726; approximately expenditure for defect corrections, $6,350.

The report shows that during the school years 1926-29 when no concerted effort or drive was made, only 3 per cent of total defects discovered were corrected, while during 1932-33, and in response to the campaign of the Health Council, 25 per cent of the discovered defects were corrected.

A council member in explaining the report said: "We directed our attention to such defects as could be remedied with the least outlay of money, realizing parents, organizations and communities, during the extended depression, were finding it difficult to meet all needs and calls. We, therefore, gave special attention to teeth, tonsils, vision, adenoids, vaccination, hearing nutrition, immunization, blood tests, tuberculosis tests and minor operations.

SAFETY COUNCIL RULES FOR SAFE CAR DRIVERS

According to the Delaware Safety Council a man may have a mechanically perfect car but because of careless driving he may cause an accident that results in serious injury or death to himself or others. Reckless driving is not a demonstration of skill. A moment or two saved today by reckless speeding is not efficiency for speeding tomorrow may result in a smash that will lay up the car for several days and the operator for several months. Hurrying to get ahead of a train, a streetcar or another vehicle saves only a moment or two at the ultimate destination and again is not worth the price. There is too much danger of accident.

The best drivers are especially careful at dusk or twilight. There is then neither enough daylight nor sufficient artificial light to make objects distinguishable at ordinary distances. Slow up for all turns in the road. Blind corners are dangerous. When it is impossible to see what is coming from around the corner, be prepared to stop, sound horn a short distance from the corner. Don't zigzag from one side of the street to the other. Remember that there are ruts or rough spots at the bottom of nearly all hills. Hitting these spots at too high a speed may cause the driver to lose control of the car. Drive slowly at bridges and at culverts. A moment's inattention may throw your car against the structure. When attempting to overtake and pass another car going in the same direction, start turning out at least 75 feet to the rear. If you get up too close, your view of the road ahead is obstructed and you may turn directly in front of another car coming towards you. When you have passed a car, do not cut back again into the road nor slow down too soon.

When operating an automobile, do not attempt to carry on a conversation with other passengers. Small children should preferably sit in the rear of the car. They should never be held in or between the arms of the driver. Safe driving demands your full attention and undivided attention.

Mrs. George C. Hering entertained the members of the Home Missionary Society Wednesday evening.

The first regular meeting of the Felton Avon Club was held in the club room on Wednesday, October 11, with their chair, Mrs. D. A. Petry, in the chair. Mrs. Petry greeted the members and expressed her confidence that the co-operation and loyalty of the members would make the coming year an outstanding one in club work. During the business meeting several communications were read and appropriations from the treasury made for financing the club work. The club voted to contribute $5.00 to the Student Loan Fund and the treasurer was instructed to forward that amount. Two new members, Mrs. Mary Abercrombie and Mrs. Lawrence Kates, whose names had been previously presented, were unanimously accepted into membership. A very interesting and concise report of the State Federation was then given by Mrs. R. W. McFadden and Mrs. John Hargadine. A program, "Vacation Reminiscences," was given with Mrs. Louisa Reeve as chairman. "A Stunt in G," with Mrs. B. T. East at the piano, consisted of a medley of songs appropriate to the vacation season, and was sung by the club. Mrs. A. C. Dill then read a poem, "Thank God for Summer." Miss Ada Warren gave a very interesting account of a two-weeks' vacation at Rehoboth. As a conclusion to Miss Warren's talk, Mrs. Reeves recited from memory the poem by Alfred Tennyson, "Break, break, break." A fishing trip to the Delaware Breakwater was described by Mrs. W. A. Hargadine, and a similar trip to Bethany Beach by Mrs. John Hargadine. Miss L. M. Stevenson offered as her contribution to the program the song, "Stars of the Summer Night," which was sung by the club. Mrs. T. B. Case told something of the beauties of nature during the storm at Rehoboth. Mrs. H. O. Bostick said that while she did not indulge in an extended vacation, she had spent much time in her "Friendship Garden" at home.

Mrs. D. A. Petry gave a very interesting account of the penning of the ponies at Chincoteague Island. Mrs. Cooper Gruwell gave a synopsis of her outstanding experiences during the summer, including a visit to Valley Forge and a trip to New York City. Mrs. George Hering described a trip to Baltimore, which included a visit to the grave of Edgar Allan Poe. At the conclusion of Mrs. Hering's talk, Reeve gave from memory the poem, "Annabel Lee." A very interesting account of a trip to Tangier Island was told by Mrs. John Jester.

APPLICATIONS APPROVED FOR WHEAT CONTRACTS

Those wheat growers in Kent and Sussex counties who have signed applications for wheat allotment contracts will be interested to know that their applications are now in the possession of their district committees for corrections and approval before these papers are returned to the county allotment committee for final approval and this work is being conducted as rapidly as time will permit. The allotment committee of the Kent and Sussex County Wheat Production Control Association consists of R. Harry Wilson, president; Robt. A. Garton and C. Arthur Taylor, who were elected to this position at the organization meeting which was held in the Kent county extension office on September 23.

If all those wheat growers who have signed applications had filled out their papers correctly with all the information which is necessary to make them complete in every detail in accordance with the Federal regulations, the work of the district committees would have been made easier, and much time could have been saved in correcting the papers previous to their being turned over to the county allotment committee. All of this additional work upon the part of the district committees has greatly delayed the completion of this project, but every effort is being made by those in charge of this wheat allotment campaign to finish the work just as soon as possible in order that the benefit payments may be received from the government. It has been announced by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, that no payments will be made to the wheat growers in any one county until all the allotment contracts from that county have been approved and accepted.

After these allotment contracts have been signed by the wheat producers, they will be forwarded to the Secretary of Agriculture for his approval and the premium payments will be issued to those wheat growers whose contracts have been accepted by the Federal government. In the meantime those growers who have applied for allotment contracts may proceed to sow an acreage of wheat this fall which will be 15 per cent more than their average acreage for the three base period years of 1930, 1931 and 1932, according to the County Agent Russell E. Wilson, who is the wheat administrator for Kent county and secretary of the Association. It is not required that each applicant seed the entire allotter acreage, but at least 54 per cent of the average acreage for the base period years must be seeded.

FIRST CANCER CLINIC OPENS IN WILMINGTON

Several patients were treated last week at the cancer clinic of the Wilmington General Hospital, the first of its kind ever to be opened in this State.

This clinic was the first of a series of clinics which will be opened throughout the State. Others will probably be placed in the Kent General Hospital in Dover, for Kent county and in the Beebe Hospital in Lewes, for Sussex.

The clinic is under the direction of Dr. Douglas Gay, pathologist of the Delaware Hospital, assisted by Dr. W. Edwin Bird, who is attached to the staff of the Wilmington General Hospital.

The principal work of the clinic at the present time consists of diagnosis of patients sent there by doctors throughout the State. Treatment is recommended for less serious cases, however, and it is hoped that as the plan develops these clinics will materially decrease the number of fatalities from cancer in Delaware.

Local doctors are at present carrying on all of the work, but later specialists from other States may be called in to lend their aid.

CONFIRMATION PARTY

On Sunday, October 15, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dember gave a party in honor of their son, Seymour's, confirmation on his thirteenth birthday. A cold dinner was served at 7:00 o'clock. Music was furnished by Ike Blackisto's orchestra.

APPROVE PROJECTS TOTALING $23,319,204

The report of the Delaware Industrial Recovery Survey Commission, which was submitted to Governor Buck on Monday, shows a program of approved projects which total $23,319,204.73, and would provide 15,737,472 work hours.

The report also expresses the hope that the extraordinary session of the General Assembly which convenes in Dover this week, to consider a public works program, will function swiftly in acting upon measures to secure permanent, desirable and necessary public facilities and at the same time afford improvement to thousands of persons.

In addition to these projects the report notes that public funds are already available for the following upon which work has been started or bids have been asked.

New high school for Wilmington, $1,500,000; State Highway Department, grant Federal Government, $1,819,088, and State Highway Department, construction for 1933 and 1934, $2,600,000.

The report states in part: "Your commission has held nine meetings in Dover, has reviewed 206 projects that were presented, and held hearings for boards, commissions, committees and private citizens numbering 106 persons.

"The commission concerns itself primarily with the desirability and necessity of various projects rather than with the engineering features thereof. Efforts have been made to incorporate into those projects approved, a schedule that would afford a large measure of employment which would be of material assistance in restoring normal employment and aid in the program of business recovery.

"Your commission had before it delegations representing Port Penn, Delaware; Delaware City, Delaware; Little Creek, Delaware; Bethany Beach, Delaware and the Indian River Inlet Project.

"In these various projects, upon which no recommendations can be made because of their not having final approval of the Department of the Federal Government in charge, it is recommended that the Delaware Water Front Commission be directed to make further investigations concerning the same and upon their findings to recommend their inclusion in the projects conducted by the Federal Government.

"The commission has endeavored to interest incorporated and unincorporated towns in Delaware in various sewage and water projects. With minor exceptions the commission's suggestions have been ignored.

After an illness of several months, Mrs. Sydney Larrimore died at her home here last week. Funeral services were held at the Nazarene Church, with interment at Hollywood cemetery.

EDUCATION NEEDS OF COUNTRY IS STRESSED BY P.T.A.

MEETING HELD AT FELTON SCHOOL

Plans to strengthen the local units of the Delaware Parent-Teachers Association and to co-operate with the Delaware Citizen's Association were discussed at an informal meeting held in the Felton school Thursday night at which President Howard T. Ennis presided. Mr. Ennis summarized a recent meeting of the board of managers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in Washington.

Referring to the serious situation confronting education and the cuts already made in many States, Mr. Ennis declared: "Education is worth as much as anything in our national life. Why pick on the educational budget? We need more, not less, of the right kind of education." Mr. Ennis cited Delaware as one of two States where teachers are being paid on time but expressed the conviction that no State will be free from the backwash of the movements to curtail the schools. Mr. Ennis also referred to the strong resolution passed by the American Legion in convention in Chicago to the effect that education should not be the single item upon which all the economies should be concentrated.

Miss Etta Wilson, executive secretary of the Delaware Parent-Teacher Association, urged local units to enroll large numbers and by so doing make the public conscious of the strength of the friends of the schools. "By sheer force of numbers alone we can effect the situation," said Miss Wilson. "This is the time to counsel, to bring people together in groups," she continued.

Offering the meetings of the Delaware Citizen's Association of which former Judge Hugh M. Morris, is president, a clearing house for friends of the schools throughout the State, Miss Wilson outlined a plan to hold four luncheon meetings a year at which educational problems will be discussed. The findings of these meetings will be reported to local groups by their representatives so that all may be informed of educational trends in the State.

Mrs. W. R. Keys, State chairman of health, referred to the many corrections of physical defects in school children already made. Mrs. Keys requested local health chairmen to send in their complete reports to her at Clayton not later than October 28, in order that the report to the National Congress of Parents and Teachers may be complete.

Mrs. Orville R. Wright, State chairman of publicity, asked local publicity chairmen to forward their reports to her at Farmington promptly after each meeting.

Superintendent D. A. Petry and others participated in the general discussion. The group went on record in favor of the quota plan in carrying on the membership campaign which will receive special emphasis during American Education Week, November 6 to 12.

DELAWARE CROP REPORT

Generally favorable weather prevailed throughout the State during September, which aided to some extent, improvement in field crop prospects according to Richard C. Ross, agriculturist for Delaware. Following the storm damage of late August, practically all field crops improved slightly and the Oct. 1 indications are somewhat higher than on Sept. 1.

The indicated production of corn is now placed at 3,528,000 bushels. However, the grain, especially in the southern part of the State, ripened prematurely resulting in only partially filled ears. Much of the grain is chaffy and fodder will be practically worthless for livestock feeding.

The potato estimate is about the same as last month. Sweet potatoes show some improvement.

Fruit prospects, except grapes, show a decline from the September estimate. Indicated production of apples, peaches and pears is somewhat lower. Grapes however, promise a slight increase over the September estimate.

Milk production per cow in herds of crop correspondents is about average and slightly above last year's October estimate. 'Oct. 1 pasture conditions are above tverage.

PASSED-UP ALL FOR CLAM PIE

Delicacy That Made Hit With "Sea Devil."

Jot Small was telling me about the "Sea Devil" visited Commander McMillen, of Arctic fame, in Provincetown, Mass.

"Mac brought the count and some other guests over here, to my Galley for supper one night," Jot related. "And I just locked the doors after they got in, so we wouldn't be disturbed by no other customers."

"Well, it was a Sat'day night, so of course the principal dish was baked beans. And after while, I got to noticing that Von Luckner didn't seem to care much for the beans. Oh, he was polite about it, all right, but he wasn't what you might call eager. He et bread and he drank coffee, and he pushed the beans and the pork around on his plate and went through the motions. But beans wasn't his dish."

"So pretty soon I whispered to Mac, 'Do you think he'd like clam pie?'"

"Try him and see what happens," says Mac.

"So I cut a big wedge of clam pie and put it down by his plate. He looked at it, sort of uncertain, for a minute. Then he reached out for his fork and cut off a little nibble. Then I seen his eyes kind of sparkle. He took a bigger bite. Then he took both hands and made a motion like a man swimmin', and pushed the beans one way and the coffee and bread the other, and pulled that pie right in front of him."

"By Chove," he hollered, "I haf found somed'ing!"

"He swallered that wedge like a fogfish stein's bait, and he held out his plate for more. That happened three times, and then he'd et the hull dam pie. And every time he'd finish a piece, he'd say, 'By Chove, I haf found somed'ing!'"

"He'll be droppin' his hook in these waters again, some day. Because he's goin' to have a heck of a time tryin' to teach 'em to make clam pie in Germany!" — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Vast Pampa Source of Welfare in Argentina

Argentina, richest of South American countries, draws its wealth from the pampa—a rockless, treeless sea of grass, 2,800 miles long and 900 miles wide, grazed by millions of head of stock. Fecund, half-wild herds of horses and cattle, seed of the conquistadores' mounts and milk cows, have been scientifically bred up to the stable and the abattoir.

Calmer herds, tamer men. Almost gone is the gaucho, cowboy son of Spanish settler and Indian squaw. Apotheosis of the type was Dictator Juan Manuel Rosas, who a century ago routed the Indians, united his countrymen, and ruled in a palace, with a court jester. On the pampas only the pampero (cold wind, rain or hail storms) and locust plagues remain fiercely primitive.

Buenos Aires, with its 2,000,000, is Paris, Chicago and pampa in one. Quite effete now, it no longer flaunts in its Boca section advertisements of cheap, expeditious murder by expert assassins. For safety and comfort, wheeled traffic is barred from the city's shopping district between 4 and 8 p. m.—World's Work.

Texas' Navy

Prior to its admission to the Union as a state, Texas maintained a navy, says a bulletin issued by the Navy department. The Texas fleet was composed of the brigz Potomac, Wharton and Archer, the sloop Austin, the steam packet Zavala, the schooners San Antonio, San Jacinto and San Bernard and other craft named Galveston, Houston, Brazos, Texas, Trinity and Asp. Commander Moore commanded the fleet.—Kansas City Times.

TRY THIS! When children won't eat—and won't gain weight

The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little syrup of figs will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain! Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Read what the "California treatment" is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

A FOUND A WEEK. Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure syrup of figs to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week, until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, syrup of figs will soon set things to right. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a billious yellow, California syrup of figs will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will filly devour his food.

The claims made for California Syrup of Figs are true and it will do the same for you—IF you get genuine CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs. Don't accept any substitute.

MUM'S THE WORD

Mr. Monkey—During a little conversation I had with the lion just now I asked him if he was the king of beasts.

Mr. Leopard—And what did he say?

Mr. Monkey—He said he was, but he made me swear not to tell his wife he said so.

"Those who think they know how to raise children and those who think they know how to raise chickens."

ALL ARRANGED

"So you think Kitty made a very suitable match?"

"Yes, indeed! You know what a nervous, excitable girl she was, well she married a composer."

NO CROWD

"As long as there was another boarder in the same house you had somebody to talk to."

"Yes, but as there were only the two of us there was nobody to talk about."

BONEHEAD

Wifey—I wonder why we are going tired of each other?

Hubby—I haven't an idea.

Wifey—Yes, maybe that is the reason.

CABBAGE?

"What makes you think he is a vegetarian?"

"I've smoked one of his cigars."

Maid—No, ma'am; but I hope to be luckier than you were.

THE QUESTION

Daughter—I've made a good match.

Mother—But will your match light the fire?

Farm Name Brings Pride and Profit

An Advertising Stunt That Pays and Appeals to the Public.

By Bristol Adams, Editor of Publications, New York State College of Agriculture, NYU Service.

Any farm that is worth working on, and living on, is worthy of an individual name. And if it has a name, that name should be used in every possible way short of cluttering up the highway with too many sign boards. The more the farm is definitely known, and identified, the more it is likely that the owner will take pride in it and the more he will bestir himself to see that the farm is favorably known.

It is a safe plan to take some natural object as a name source. Some of the more common names are "Hillside Farm," "Lake View," "Stony Ridge," "Far View," "Inlet Valley," "Rock Ledge," and the like. But whether the name has a geographic, topographic, or historical basis, it is better in an English speaking country, to stick to English names. A good old Anglo-Saxon name, combined with either of the English words for farmstead, "hurst," or "croft," makes a satisfactory farm name, as "Warrenhurst," or "Allencroft." These two words also combine with a natural object, as "Oakhurst," or "Cedarcroft."

A farmstead may be labeled with a neatly lettered sign at the entrance gate, generally at one side of the portal. An archway, with the name at the top may be too pretentious, and, besides, any arch which is high enough to allow for the passage of a load of hay is likely to be too much of a good thing.

A farm with a name should have the name on a clearly printed letterhead. Such a letterhead, which costs little, gives an air of prosperity, and of personal pride in the home place, and carries more distinction than the mere letters "R. F. D." and the name of the nearest post office.

Many Farm Groups Pay Visit to Stockyards

No longer in Ohio are farmers uninformed about the fates of the live stock they send to market. They know now how they are handled, who sells them, how they are graded, and what kind of chops and steaks they make when slaughtered.

They have come by this knowledge in three years by visiting, in organized groups, leading live stock markets, according to C. W. Hazmanns, extension specialist in live stock marketing for the Ohio State university.

During the last two years approximately 100 organized groups visited the stockyards and packing houses at Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Attendance on these tours totaled about 8,000.

In five counties in the southwest quarter of the state in which live stock raising is a major agricultural industry, as many as 500 to 1,000 farmers have made such trips. In groups of 50 to 100.

Cover Crop Time

Cover crops help ripen the wood of orchard trees in preparation for winter. They also add humus to the soil when turned under and hold fallen leaves in the orchard to add more humus. Another important duty of cover crops is to protect the tree roots against winter freezing and to hold snow in the orchard as a protective blanket for the roots.

Around the Farm

A ton of alfalfa removes about 30 pounds of lime from the soil.

Alfalfa in the Nevada desert near Las Vegas was found to grow 42 inches in 26 days.

Four carloads of white arsenic, four carloads of blackstrap molasses and several carloads of bran were used by the state of Wisconsin in fighting grasshoppers in 33 northern counties of the state this year.

Italy now claims self-support in its wheat production. The quality however, is poorly adapted to macaroni.

The Greek government has decreed that all containers of canned foods must show the dates of packing and release from packing plants embossed in the metal.

The typical New York state farm consists of about 65 per cent of grassland.

North Carolina farmers are urged by extension specialists to develop a regular market in fuel wood to dispose of cull trees.

The bureau of agricultural economics says that the lowest recorded price per bushel received by producers of oats since 1900 was 23.1 cents per bushel in 1931. The highest was 70.9 cents, in 1918.

Hate for Baby Gone Parents Now Want It

Future May Be Decided by State Referendum.

Denver.—A state-wide referendum may decide the future of Baby Erkenbeck.

A movement has been started to have as many as possible of Colorado's citizens express unofficially through a newspaper poll what should be done with the "hate child" of Maynard and Margaret Erkenbeck, now an inmate of a home for dependent children.

On July 20, the father and mother of the tiny baby appeared in Denver's famous Juvenile court with an amazing request. They swore that they never wanted the child, hated the sight of him, and wanted the state to take care of him.

They Want Freedom.
"We didn't want him; we don't want him now," the father, a regularly employed laborer, declared. "We want to be free to go here and there."

"Imagine, Judge, how you'd feel living always in the presence of something you detested."

Judge George H. Lerg of Golden, sitting on the juvenile bench in the absence of Judge Stanley Johnson, committed the child to the state home.

The father's work took him to Oregon. The mother remained in Denver. Although free to go "here and there," she chose to remain near her baby.

Daily she visits the state home, watches her baby being fed and holds him in her arms.

"In the same hour that my baby was taken from me, I knew we had done wrong and that I could not live without him," Mrs. Erkenbeck declared, as she pleaded with state officials to restore her child to her.

"We were impulsive and selfish. My husband isn't cruel. We loved each other. We had been together all the time since our marriage. When the baby was coming we didn't want him and when he came and interfered with what we wanted to do we resented his presence—or thought we did."

Both Want Him Back.
"As a child I was brought up with twelve brothers and sisters. My father was a shoe cobbler, but mother and he were good to us and did everything they could for us. At twelve I went out to make my own living nursing babies. Children, children, children. That's all I knew. I wanted to be free. Maynard and I were happy as could be. Then our baby came. We had to change our ways. So we did this awful thing."

The father, too, has made up his mind that he must have the baby back. "How is the baby getting along?" he asks in his letters from Oregon. "I hope you can get him soon, so we can all be together again."

Ancient Funeral Mound Yields Viking Relics

Upsala, Sweden.—A handsome pre-Viking helmet, with a visor ornamented by red garnets, and a number of weapons and other implements dating from the Seventh century A. D. have been unearthed in an old funeral mound at Valsgarde.

Around the prow of a partly burned boat were found the remains of four horses, all handsomely equipped with bronze trimmed bits. There also were bones of a cow and other household animals, and in the present a kitchen outfit with several utensils, including two drinking horns, richly ornamented in bronze.

Sleeping Sickness

By
LEONARD A. BARRETT

Encephalitis, commonly known as sleeping sickness, still remains a mystery to the medical profession.

The epidemic in St. Louis, which lasted about two months, caused the death of about two hundred persons. Many others suffered from the malady but recovered at least partially. The difficulty seems to be that the disease attacks one without warning, and no one has been able to ascertain exactly how it is contracted. Even the cause still remains a mystery. The germ or virus, or whatever the vital element is through which the disease is communicable, is still undiscovered. Specialists from several of our largest and most important laboratories have labored incessantly upon the task of isolating the germ. If this could be accomplished, an anti-toxin could be made which would arrest the disease. This was accomplished with the dreaded diphtheria and many other diseases which formerly took a heavy toll of life.

The means of transference is thought by some to be the secretions of the throat or nose, others believe to be the blood, and still others believe it is carried by insects.

The Household

By
LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

HERE is work which is labor saving in itself. The work is preparatory. Unless these preparations have been made, and made correctly, the main task is more difficult and time-consuming.

For example a mother saw her daughter attempting to do some sewing which should have been basted first. She said: "You'll find that easier if you baste it first."

"I haven't time for that, I'll baste it afterwards," was the daughter's reply.

The mother knew it would take twice as long to do the sewing without the gatherers being evenly basted first with basting stitches. Later on, when the daughter became more proficient with her needle she used to laugh over her mistaken labor saving.

The person who takes clothes from a line and carelessly tosses them into the laundry basket, makes a crease in them which must be ironed out. They were not there at first but were of her own making. Worse than this is the rolling up of sprinkled clothes without any attempt to smooth them before dampening down, or to keep them flat when rolled. The dampness sets the wrinkles, and makes scores of new ones, thus greatly increasing the work of ironing. It requires a little longer to keep the clothes smooth than to toss them about and roll them up in any fashion, but the task of ironing is increased in much greater proportion. The work of preserving the clothes from wrinkles is a labor-saving and time-saving method.

Extra Work

Pouring hot water into a cold pitcher or china teapot, without first tempering the water so that the china is taken off, is neither time-saving nor money-saving. The pitcher is liable to break which means replacement outlay, to say nothing of the annoyance of having to wipe up the spilled water, and possibly scalding the hands.

Dishes can be dried much faster with a fresh towel, than with one previously used. So it is labor-saving to rinse dish towels after meals. This takes but a moment and in the end saves time. Putting things away in their proper places after using them is work which pays a good premium. Every one knows the time lost hunting for misplaced articles is out of all proportion to the little time it takes to put them in the proper places at first—and good tempers are sorely taxed, if not lost entirely while doing the necessary hunting. Covering an ink bottle or well after writing, or putting the cap on a fountain pen, is the work of an instant, but it is labor-saving. If not covered dust settles in the ink left exposed in the well, and the pen trails we disgusting lines on the paper afterwards. The ink dries on an up-capped fountain pen and the flow is clogged. These are annoying incidents. A little preventive work would prove labor-saving.

Window Draperies.
Window draperies may need renewing. Here outlay may prove a deterrent. If so, do not be discouraged. Dye the old ones if they are worth it, and are not too heavy for your own dye pot. If new hangings are imperative, you can do much with inexpensive materials, well chosen for color and deftly ornamented with your own needle. For example a fair quality of natural colored burial, hemstitched at edges and having a running border made of the floral crochet applique with leaves and stems of a faded looking green wool, and flowers in brown wool will be excellent. These colors will fit in with any color scheme. But if you wish to accent some particular color use it for the flowers. But be very careful to have the colors dull. Avoid any too-brilliant hues. These hangings will be not appropriate with handsome furnishings, Italian, Spanish, French, etc., but are well suited to many styles, and to the usual type of home decoration.

It is better to have few ornaments, and these right, than many which are not correct. Avoid multiplicity of colors. Use brasses for lightening dark parts of rooms. They catch and reflect light. Watch for all details which combine to make good decoration.

Palace Neighbor Given Auto as Gift From King

London.—Motoring past Buckingham palace gardens recently, King George saw a car standing at the gate. Its paint work was spotless, but the lines betrayed its age.

A few days later Sister Agnes Keyser, to whom it belonged, was astonished to find in its place a brand new car of the same make as the king's and in the royal colors of maroon and scarlet. It was a gift from his majesty.

Sister Agnes, who conducts a hospital near the palace, is a close friend of the king and queen. She has her own key to the royal gardens and often strolls with the king.

Famous London Palace of Historic Memories

The old Georgian building known as the Horse Guards occupies the site of the tilt yard of Whitehall palace, which Henry VIII took from Cardinal Wolsey upon the latter's downfall. In this palace the great Queen Elizabeth held her court. In front of it Charles I was beheaded, and at Whitehall Charles II led his merry life.

The Horse Guards building dates back to the middle seventeenth century and is an excellent example of Georgian architecture. An archway under the clock tower leads to an open space facing St. James' park. Through this archway only the king and a few highly privileged persons may drive.

The scene beyond is the scene of one of London's most gorgeous pageants, the annual "trooping of the colors" on the king's birthday. On this day the royal guards pass in review before the king with their regimental colors flying. Picturesque uniforms of gorgeous hues, firr drilling, and a distinguished audience combine to make this one of the greatest of the "free shows" of old England.—New York World-Telegram.

Real BAYER Aspirin "Takes Hold" of Pain in Few Minutes

New comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia... the fastest safe relief, it is said, yet discovered.

Those results are due to a scientific discovery by which a Bayer Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. A Bayer Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And thus is ready to go to work almost instantly.

When you buy, though, see that you get the Genuine BAYER Aspirin. For Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always say "BAYER Aspirin."

U. S. Will Chart the Ocean Bed Again

Six Ships of Survey Fleet to Resume Work.

Washington.—The marine "Woodpeckers" of the Department of Commerce have gone to sea again to take another try at a job that is never done, charting the shifting floor of the ocean along the Atlantic coast.

Storms of unusual ferocity this summer have made innumerable changes in the coast line and have given a new wave though not a permanent one, to part of the ocean bed.

It is the task of the coast and geodetic survey division of the Commerce department to keep up to date topographical maps of the terrain under coastal waters.

Six ships operated by this division make up the woodpeckers' fleet. On the coastal bottom is kept so up to date and is so exact that a commercial ship equipped with a "woodpecker" device, as many now are, can place its position when other means are an available merely by taking progressive soundings and checking again the coast and geodetic survey maps.

But this means constant rechecking and remapping, and the hurricanes of the past summer have made unusual changes. So the "woodpeckers" are out again, taking another try at a job that is never done.

To determine the exact position of each sounding, bombs are thrown overhead which explode on striking the water. Position is computed by a method of triangulation based on the length of time it takes the noise of the bomb to reach two known points ashore or two ships anchored at known positions.

This charting of the convolutions of the side of each ship is a sounder, in effect a hammer which beats against the hull. Scientists measure the time it takes for this sound to go down to the bottom and echo back to the surface. Knowing the rate of speed of sound under water, this gives the depth.

Back and forth the woodpecker ships go, rapping out their staccato sub-sea chatter, and the listeners chart depths as they proceed.

WE'RE SUNK, FELLERS!

It had to come. We had been expecting something like this, but we never dreamed it would go so far. First, women secured the right to vote, then she began smoking cigarettes and sprang into the realm of politics. We felt no alarm at this as she has a right to her political convictions—but we thought her ambitions would end there. She began to place herself on the footing of men, and to hold positions usually held by men. The modest, shrinking violet of yester-year has become a brisk, hustling, and in some cases, a brazen, go-getter. Men ceased their attempts at gallantry, at chivalry. No longer did they offer their seats in the street cars to the ladies—for the ladies usually took the seats anyway. The erstwhile weaker sex horned in on Olympic Game honors and pushed the men aside. They secured places in the cabinet of the President of the United States. In some cases, they made men stay home from the lodges and attend to the children while the ladies spent the evenings at bridge clubs. Still, we thought it would end there; that women would not further encroach upon man's domain, upon his time-honored rights. By thinking so, we proved ourselves wholly inadequate to cope with the peculiarities of the feminine mind. We were mistaken in our conclusions—sadly mistaken. An avalanche, when once it gathers momentum, does not pause until annihilation is complete.

This week a group of scientists (and we do not doubt that some of them were women) after numerous experiments, have discovered that by the injection of a very simple drug into a long-dormant gland in the breast, will convert the male animal into a milk-producing creature, capable of nursing its offspring. In fact this has been tried—and the experiment was successful. That

NRA consumers, come on, sign your name and take your base.

President Roosevelt is asking every consumer to sign a card that he or she will do all they can to bring the nation out of the depression.

We need volunteers for just a few hours' work, just as many as can spare a few hours to put on a drive Thursday, October 26, starting at 10 o'clock P. M., and the depression is headed for history.

Please report to Mrs. Clarence Morris or Mrs. John Sheldrake for particulars. This program applies to white and colored alike. All colored volunteers please report to Prof. Warren, principal at the colored school.

It is our desire that this work be completed in one day, and we ask that every business house and consumer comply with our President's wishes.—O. C. Passmore, Chairman Chamber of Commerce N. R. A. Committee

Members of the Beerage

There is Bill Galloway. He puts his invitations for the week-end into a hat and draws one.

He is probably dreadfully spoiled, but he has great charm, and even men like him. He does about what he pleases, and his tastes are definite. He hates crooked seams in girls' stockings or fruit in salad, for instance. Once he went on one of his week-ends and arriving hot and dusty from the drive called for beer and got some that made him make a face. Rather gently he left the house and got back into his car. His hostess thought all was over. But he returned in fifteen minutes with an entire case of Piel's, which he delivered to her reprovingly. He made quite a hole in it himself that week-end. And his hostess was far from annoyed. She was a wise woman who could pick up a thing or two. When she invites him now she specifies that there shall be Piel's. This bears some weight with Bill.

Bill Galloway's personal China-boy is well-trained. He knows how to take care of what is probably the most discriminating bachelor in New York. He can make a superb curry, can even arrange flowers for a centerpiece, and never forgets to trot around to the grocer's and squeak "Piel's!" to the grocer in plenty of time for it to get cold on the ice before Bill comes home.

Chevrolet gives most miles per gallon

CHEVROLET No argument about the camel. When it comes to miles per gallon, there's nothing in all the Gobi desert—or Sahara—or anywhere else—that can beat him. No argument about Chevrolet, either. It's the most economical form of full-size transportation on wheels.

You can travel a long, long way in a Chevrolet Six without a single stop for gas or oil. In fact, you can get more miles out of a gallon of gas in a Chevrolet, than you can get in any other full-size car. The best proof of this is the way Chevrolet is being preferred by leading national business firms. These firms know their mileage figures. And today, Chevrolet is their first choice by an overwhelming count. Chevrolet is also first choice of the American public by the widest margin in history.

Recognition of Russia

Washington—Almost no one can talk about Russia, her relations with other nations, or her recognition form of government without taking sides, yet we are hearing so much about Russia these days that the situation can hardly go unnoticed. Whether it is right or wrong to recognize the Soviet government and establish diplomatic negotiations is rather likely to continue a long time as a controversial question, but there are numerous facts available that are important to know. It is from that angle that I propose to examine the question. Obviously, economic questions enter into international relationships whatever the problem may be that forms the focal point at the moment. And economic questions are to the fore in the present Russian equation. Outstanding proponents of Russian recognition, and a great many others who merely think they are outstanding, are urging that the United States has suffered immense loss of trade by the long delayed recognition. They argue also that our position of delay has afforded other powerful industrial nations to get there ahead of us, to gain a foothold from which it will be difficult to jar them loose. Because of recognition being withheld so long, they contend, other early birds got the important worm. And another thing about which recognition exponents proclaim their feelings is that our government has been inconsistent in its foreign policy and has insisted the people of a great nation by withholding diplomatic relations from them. They point to that which is true, that the United States has recognized dictators, or revolution-made, governments throughout the Central and South American nations with the very minimum of delay. Why, they have asked, has our government accorded recognition to governments in South America where the individuals at their heads have been little, if anything, more than brigands (racketeers, we call them in our own cities)?

Being acquainted with a good deal of the Soviet program to bring about recognition of their government by the United States, I took occasion to look up the trade records. The figures in black and white ought to be convincing to anyone. They fall to show that any nation which has established diplomatic relations with the Soviet under the dictator, Stalin, has profited from that recognition.

As to Trade Results of the nations whose diplomatic representatives were accredited to the Soviet. Our trade has gone up or has gone just about the same as has the volume of those nations that have recognized the Russian experimental regime. This seemed to me to establish that recognition had nothing, whatever it did with the question. Further, it seemed to prove that the other nations had gained no advantage, no foothold, which our own exporters had not had. To me, the figures definitely confirmed the statement made by the former secretary of state, Bainbridge Colby, that recognition had no bearing whatsoever on trade results.

There are some social and humanitarian objections to recognition, however, that strike me as being worthwhile in view of the history of our nation and the freedom of religious worship which was guaranteed by being written into the Constitution. President Roosevelt got very close to the key in his speech in New York on October 5 when he suggested that no nation denying its citizens the right of religious worship could subsist long. He intimated a belief that eventually such a government would find itself alienated from other peoples, and if that be true, then Mr. Roosevelt predicted the ultimate outcome of the system of which Stalin is now the overlord. So it seems to me that instead of insulting the Soviet by denying, or rather, withholding, recognition, we insult our own people when we take a position that makes equals of those who destroy all evidence and rights of religious worship.

Now as to reasons for the lack of development of Russian trade: the best authorities tell me that Russia can export only a given volume of the several commodities, figuring in international trade. She cannot increase that because she has had insufficient equipment with which to produce, except by a very slow process. The natural question to follow, of course, why not sell her that equipment? To this the reply is simple: who will pay? Russia has not the money and she cannot get the money from outside her domain because she has no credit.

in the treasury the other day, and it was so interesting that I feel it should be described in these columns. The treasury had decided to exercise its optional right to redeem a portion of the gigantic fourth Liberty loan. It wanted to "call for maturity" approximately one-third of the issue which now has a total outstanding in excess of $2,235,000,000. To accomplish that purpose, there were certain requirements of law to be met, and one of them was a determination of which of the bonds would be called by a method of chance.

The great issue, sold during the strife and strain of World war days and on the basis of patriotic appeal, was not due to mature until twenty years after its issue which made it mature in October, 1938. But when the government sold the bonds, it reserved the right to call them for redemption five years before maturity if it so desired. Money market conditions made it seem likely that bonds bearing a cheaper rate of interest than the 4 1/2 per cent carried by the fourth Liberty bonds could be sold. If they could, the government, which means the taxpayers, could save money on interest. Hence, the determination to call a part of the issue and, hence, the ceremony. It was felt that only a portion of the big issue could be resold at this time, so only one-third of it was called.

Knowing of the program, I went in advance to the lobby of the undersecretary's office. A tall, wooden pedestal stood in the middle of the room. Atop it was a glass bowl. At the appointed time, an attaché of the treasury's office deposited ten envelopes in the bowl. Each was neatly rolled and held by a rubber band. Each envelope carried a formal order directing the retirement of certain portions of the issue and stating that interest on those bonds would cease as of April 15, 1934, the future date being necessary because the bonds themselves stated that a notice of six months had to be given in case of redemption in advance of actual maturity.

Presently, the tall, dignified, Dean Acheson, undersecretary of the treasury, entered the room. There was much taking of pictures, stills and movies. Mr. Acheson then reached into the bowl and drew therefrom an envelope. It was opened by Frank Birfield, the treasury's chief clerk. Mr. Acheson read its contents aloud. It said that fourth Liberty bonds whose numbers ended in the digits "9" "0" or "1" or whose letter designations were either "J," "K" or "A" were called for redemption. That meant that anybody holding any of those bonds either would have to turn them into the government or lose interest on them after next April.

The new issue will bear only 3 1/2 per cent interest, so that the saving will be almost $19,000,000 a year, because the bonds called total $1,875,000,000.

Secretary Hull, of the State department, apparently has had a stomachful of unwarranted German, or rather

Germany Irritates

Hiliter, assaults on Hitler's storm troopers, and has asked pointedly what is being done about ending such indignities. He will be told, of course, that efforts are being made to punish the offenders, but I think it is no longer a secret that the Washington government is not at all satisfied with the way Hitler and his cohorts are treating citizens of other nations. Indeed, I believe I can see signs that the Washington administration is growing a bit "cold" on Hitler, himself.

The incident may or may not produce anything. It is possible that the secretary of state may take that step, as bold as it is rare, of issuing a proclamation that the United States cannot guarantee the safety of American citizens in Germany. The best judgment I can obtain is that this stage will not be reached in the controversy. To Washington observers, the early advice in response to Mr. Hull's order to check up on punishment of storm troopers who have assaulted Americans have meant nothing but that the Nazi chieftain was dodging the issue. When his foreign office said "efforts were being made" to catch the offenders, the corps of students of the situation here immediately ejaculated that slang, but quite effective, expression: "Oh! Yeah." For it is to be remembered that Mr. Hitler has complete domination of German affairs, and that, under conditions where the dictatorship is so completely in control, there ought to be little difficulty in putting an end to the condition of which Mr. Hull complains.

Among Washington observers these days there is a general tendency to hand a palm to Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader in the senate, for his courageous statement in favor of sound money. Senator Robinson, it is generally agreed, took his political life and his senate leadership in his hand by announcing the other day that he is unequivocally and irrevocably for sound money. I do not know what the outcome of his action will be, but of one thing I am certain: Senator Robinson broke open a breach as wide as the river between himself and many of the Democrats from the South when he declared for sound money.

It is to be noted, in passing, that such old-timers as Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, and Senator Duncan Fletcher of Florida, each holding powerful senate committee chairmanships, have cast their lot with the group of inflationists that numbers such individuals as Huey Long of Louisiana, Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, and Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma. Mr. Thomas, it will be recalled, was the senator who fathered the famous, or infamous, Thomas amendment that gives the President power to inflate the currency in half a dozen different ways. That group also includes Representative Patman of Texas, who wants to have the government pay the soldiers' bonus with greenbacks.

But to get back to the Robinson statement: the Arkansas Democrat has determined his position in the face of the opposition mentioned and in the face of public sentiment in many sections where demagoguery has replaced reasoning on the part of the statesmen. It may be the case in Senator Robinson's own state, but at any rate he has taken a position and will stick by it even with the job of getting himself re-elected to the senate next year as a hurdle to jump. The least that can be said is that "Joe" Robinson is a fighter for his own convictions, and it is, too bad there are so few of his type in public life.

Subsistence Homesteads Planned

PART of the "new deal," and a very important part, is the plan to get people back to the farm to live on "subsistence homesteads" which are to be financed by the government to the extent of $25,000,000. Dr. M. L. Wilson of the Interior department, director of the plan (left), is showing a model of one of the homesteads to W. A. Julian, treasurer of the United States.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

REDDY FOX ADMIRES JERRY'S HOUSE

IF IN all the great world there is anybody pleasanter than Reddy Fox when he tries to be pleasant I don't know who it is. Of course he is that handsome red coat of his he is very good looking, anyway. Then when he puts on the polite airs that no one knows better than he how to put on, brings into his eyes an innocent look, and smiles, he is as pleasant a fellow as you would care to meet. Only when he forgets and grins a little too broadly so that he shows all his long teeth does his face lose its pleasant look.

Now Reddy Fox was one of those who knew all about what was going on in the Smiling Pool. You know Reddy gets his living by knowing what is going on about him. Every night while Jerry Muskrat was at work on that new house Reddy had stolen over to the Smiling Pool, from among the rushes watched Jerry for a little while, and then stolen away again, taking the greatest care not to be seen.

"There isn't the least use in the world trying to get him now," said he, as he thought the matter over. "There won't be any use as long as he is at work on that new house. But when it is finished he'll have less to think about. I must see if I cannot find something to interest him."

Reddy grinned, and the grin was the kind of a grin which showed all his long teeth. He grinned just that same way each night as he trotted away from the Smiling Pool after watching Jerry work. At last came the time when Jerry stopped working because, you know, the house was finished. Reddy knew when Jerry stopped working. Oh, yes, Reddy knew all about it.

Then one evening Reddy visited the Smiling Pool quite openly. He sat right out on the bank in the moonlight, and you couldn't imagine anybody more pleasant than was Reddy. He had his most polite airs and his best grin.

"Good evening, neighbor Jerry," said he, and his voice was as pleasant as he knew how to make it.

Jerry stopped swimming long enough to look up at Reddy. Then, because he could hardly be less polite than Reddy, he squeaked: "Good evening," and started on his way. In a minute he dived and disappeared as he swam for the entrance to a certain tunnel in the bank. When he once more popped his head out of the water for a breath of fresh air Reddy was still sitting on the bank right

The Restless Sea

NOT REALLY RAINING

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE mists of morning always rise. Melt in the warmth of better skies. I never see the vapor drifting. But in the moving it is lifting. Give breezes time, the sun a chance. And, as the hours of day advance, The mists of morning rise and scatter. And prove a very little matter.

I wonder if we do not make On many mornings this mistake?— Mistake some little care for sorrow. Although it ends before the morrow; Make for ourselves a doleful list Of losses that are only mist That blows away, amid complaining. Because it isn't really raining.

I know we have our larger grief. But much that frets us is the brief, Upon life's surface floating bubbles. But mists that are not really troubles. Though many losses living brings. We sigh the most o'er little things. Let us be glad, somehow or other, Unless it's really raining, brother. © 1932, Douglas Malloch.—WNU Service.

GRAPHIC GOLF

OVERCOMING HOOK AND SLICE

ONE reason for the popularity of deep faced clubs is their tendency to cure a slice. While most of the average golfers either slice or hook, the slice is far more prevalent. For this reason the ordinary golfer would undoubtedly find that the deeper faced clubs were more suitable in his particular case. Deep faced clubs have the power to counteract the slice and this fills a particular niche in most games that cannot be easily discounted. On the other hand those golfers who show a penchant for hooking might find it well to switch to shallow faced clubs. With these clubs the tendency to slice would overcome the hooking proclivity and a fairly straight ball would result. With these two facts in mind it should be a simple matter to find the club that best suits one's game. There's nothing like a straight ball off the tee to start the hole right.

SEASONABLE FOODS

A MOST delicious dinner may be prepared in a Scotch kettle. Place a piece of brisket or shoulder of beef in the kettle with plenty of fat to brown all over. Then add a little water, cover it lightly and cook at a low heat. An hour or more before the meat is to be served add carrots, onions and later a few potatoes; cook, basting them occasionally and season well during the basting. Serve the meat surrounded by the vegetables and prepare a gravy from the liquor in the pan.

Molasses Pie.

It may be baked in individual tins or in the usual sized pie plate. Line a pie plate with flaky pastry and fill with the following mixture. Bring one cupful of molasses to the boiling point and add carefully a tablespoonful of butter rubbed to a paste with a tablespoonful of flour, cook in the molasses until slightly thickened, then remove from the fire and add the juice of a large lemon and a pinch of cinnamon. Pupils in This Class Must Keep Wide Awake

HERE is a class at Catalina Island, Calif., whose pupils cannot afford to show any indifference to their studies. If they fall in their work, they go into the drink with a big splash and that's all there's to it. When you hit the water a few times traveling at the speed of 40 miles per hour, you either make up your mind to stay on the skiddy board or quit school. This novel "aquaplane college" was organized by Roy Arnold, who is seen leading the class.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

DOES EDUCATION HURT?

"SPINSTER factories!" That is what women's colleges are called by a man who has been a teacher in two of them. He points out that fewer than half the women graduates five years out of college are married. And he blames it on their going to college.

We are given reasons to explain why so many educated women do not marry. In simple language, here they are: First, education misleads many young women into thinking that learning and the intellect are all there is to happiness. Then, learning makes domestic life repugnant. I think if a vote were taken among women college graduates, both the married and the unmarried, that ar-

Man's Right to Seek Alimony

Another angle to the always vexing divorce problem is found in this indignant outburst, addressed to a social economic authority:

"What do you think of a woman having to pay her husband alimony? A judge out in Omaha has ordered a wife to do this. It seems to me if that goes on, things will come to a pretty pass. What do you think of it?"

Pointing out possibilities where such a granting of alimony might be simple justice, the question is thus answered:

"Unfortunately we do not know the circumstances or the details of the matter to which our reader refers. So we hesitate to think anything. We can, however, let our imagination wander to the reasons for which alimony is usually paid.

"There might, of course, be the children for whom the husband has to provide. In that case no right thinking wife would object to sharing her income with him!

"Of course, there is always the argument that when a man has given the best years of his life in marriage he should be provided for. While the wage-earner's skills have developed and increased through the years, the man who has devoted himself entirely to his home cannot now go back to the occupation of his youth. How, then, should he live if not on alimony?"

"Then, too, there is the matter of compensation for the loneliness of separation after the years of companionship enjoyed by a married man. He has become domesticated; he has lost many of the resources of his youth as well as the attraction which so easily brought friends. Would not a conscientious wife willingly offer whatever consolation in her power in the form of alimony?"

"Regarding the case about which our reader writes we do not know. But we can imagine."

Duties Well Defined

We all know what our duties are; no one is needed to tell us that.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation.

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be controlled. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the average person's bowels regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time. Why not try the action can thus be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste and a delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers and children. All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

SYNOPSIS

A girl finds herself in a taxi cab in New York with a strange man who speaks of an "awful shock." He leaves her for a moment, and she drives on for she fears him. She stops at the Biltmore, wondering who she is. Her memory is gone. She has a wedding ring. At the hotel a young woman vanishes with the girl's $900. An elderly woman, Mrs. Oscar Du Val, cordially greets the nameless girl, addressing her as "Doris," wife of Mrs. Du Val's son, Rocky. Rocky is abroad, and Doris is taken to the home of Mrs. Du Val and her sculptor husband, Oscar. Doris falls in love with Rocky's photograph, but cannot remember having married him. Visiting a store, a saleswoman insists she hide from observation. Rocky returns. He demands to know who she is and why his wife sent her to his home. She cannot tell him. They agree, for the sake of his parents, to pretend they are husband and wife. Rocky takes Doris to his New York apartment to confront his wife. He finds the flat empty. Doris sees the real wife's photograph and recognizes her as the girl who stole her $900. Doris Merrell's father identifies her. Doris faints. When she recovers, her memory has not returned. Rocky informs her he is going to take her to Canada by motor. They set out.

As Doris stared she remembered her promise to Rocky that she would keep her face turned away from any people they met. She bent her head, and turned over and over a black leather purse belonging to the real Doris.

The car was coming nearer. In a moment it would be past. But as it approached it slackened. It came almost to a stop. Someone shouted:

"Doris!"

Startled she looked up. A dark-eyed girl in a green evening dress had called.

"Oh—I beg your pardon!" said the girl. "I thought you were someone I knew."

A blond young man stuck his head forward. "It's Rocky's car."

"There's Rocky! Well, I thought you were in Europe, you dope!"

"He's leading a double life!"

The party, in evening clothes, got down. Rocky, approaching Doris with a clam in each hand, looked at them steadily. If he was surprised and changed, he did not show it.

"Have a clam," he said.

The girl in the green evening dress staggered up and seized one of the clams. Two unsteady young men supported each other.

"Clams! Jus' what I want!"

"Good old Rocky's got clams!"

Rocky was climbing in the car beside Doris. He was starting up the engine.

"Hey, wait a minute. Where you going? Say, wait a minute, Rocky."

His friends were running after him. The girl in the green evening dress jumped on the running board.

"What's your hurry, Rocky? We're all friends here, aren't we?"

She looked at Doris.

"This is Miss Smith, my father's secretary. I'm just driving her down to my father's house."

The girl closed one of her big eyes. She exposed a dimple in her browned cheek. "Pretty name, Smith."

Rocky frowned. "Go on, beat it, will you, Molly? I've really got to go."

"Rocky, the saint! Rocky—this pure young man." Eyes looked piously heavenward. Then the dimples appeared again. "Never mind, Rocky. I like you all the better for it."

She jumped down from the car. Rocky's face was set and grim. Without a backward glance he started up the car and got away.

Doris was red and angry. The car fumed on. The red sun appeared, a "rum awful" in the east.

Doris fixed her eyes on the flaming sky. Her good-humor had gone. She was indignant with Rocky, resentful of her false position.

"That girl, I suppose, is a friend of Doris—the real Doris. And she'll tell her you're gadding about the country with a—" managing things, apparently, with a high hand. But as she looked at him now, his warm face gleaming with a pride in accomplishing something that she felt sure was in the interests of her safety, it was easy to forgive him anything.

"With a—"

Rocky had provided food enough to last them throughout the trip, without stopping at inns. He had explained that by picnicking this way, they would save a good deal of time.

"I'd like to see a paper," Doris announced suddenly, as if the question had not been broached before. Rocky munched a sandwich doggedly.

"I'm sorry," Rocky ate hungrily.

"Well!" Her voice with its high note arrested him. She drew his blue, seriously objecting eyes to her face. His half-eaten sandwich was poised for the next bite.

"Well!" he repeated. "You know the answer to that one, don't you?" His tone was playfully hard. "The last time you happened to read a paper you didn't behave very well." He grinned faintly and took another bite, watching her.

"Oh!" Doris flung out an emancipated arm. "Won't you ever forget that? I could read anything today and not lose my health. Besides I have a feeling there is something in this morning's paper I ought to see. Tell me, please," she leaned over suddenly, "what it's all about."

"Put your glasses on."

"Why?"

"The better to see me with."

She put them on, turning her head to look up and down the road. "Who are these people, do you suppose?"

A small automobile had opened its doors to let out a crowd of motorists.

Rocky was already looking. He had even brought out a pair of binoculars.

Leveling them long and earnestly at the group in question, he answered, "As near as I can make out it's a healthy bootlegger who's taken his wife and family out for a picnic." He laughed, but didn't seem overwhelmingly amused. "Shall we go on?"

They got back into the car, soon making up the time lost in lurching. Rocky's plan was to reach Vermont by nightfall.

In the next town their car went cautiously through the business street. As it passed a news stand, Doris pushed her glasses above her eyes for an instant. There was a headline—

The car lurched forward.

"Don't be a fool, Doris," unreasonable words poured from Rocky: "This

He peered out at the next sign. They were two miles from a town. He looked sharply at Doris. "And when we stop to have it fixed," he said blankly, "for G—d's sake, don't speak to anybody!"

CHAPTER VIII

As Doris was beginning to feel sleepy, Rocky's advice seemed hardly as necessary as he thought. Besides, as she soon discovered, there was no one at the garage with whom she could talk. The mechanic bent over the engine.

She dozed, vaguely conscious at intervals of tools dropping and the whir of the motor.

Doris started and awoke. She half sat up. An old man who looked as if he might have been one of the founders of the village into which they had strayed was watching her from under his pushed-back hat.

She thought he was going to say something but discovered that he was chewing. He had dark quizzical eyes that drooped faintly at the corners.

He must be over eighty. He kept pinching his nose between his thumb and bent forefinger as if he were trying to improve the shape of it, but otherwise paid Doris his undivided attention.

"If you please," she began, "What town is this?"

His eyes glinted at her with such a knowing expression that Doris almost laughed outright. "Don't you know what town you're in?" he finally asked.

"No, I don't," said Doris apologetically. "We were driving through on our way to Canada, when something happened to the car."

"Driving through to Canada, you say?" He advanced slightly, putting one foot on the fender and clapping a velvety hand over the knee. "Been traveling long?"

"Oh yes, ever since this morning." Gradually she was growing less ecstatic over this quickly formed friendship. The place was getting on her nerves.

Rocky had taken off his coat and rolled up his sleeves. It looked as if the job were almost too much for the mechanic alone.

"Come from New York I bet," suggested the old man, "didn't you?"

"Yes," Doris looked at him firmly. "What town did you say this is?"

"This is Edgewater Junction."

Rocky looked up now at the sound of their voices. His eye fell on Doris, a short questioning glance. Doris unburdened herself of a weary gesture.

What's Doing in the Fabric Realm

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IN EVOLVING wardrobes which must prove 100 per cent efficient in meeting the demands of the present autumn and coming winter sports and social season, designers are playing up fabrics with more than usual zest.

More and more are we brought to realize that there is a fabric for every occasion, and for every occasion there is a fabric. Present couturier displays are a real schooling in this respect, since they so unmistakably classify materials as to their intent.

An especially intriguing display is being made this season of handsome woolsens and sturdy novelty weaves which tell you at a glance that they are essentially for sports and practical town and country wear. In this class a spectacular showing of plaids indicates that they will animate many a grandstand assemblage during the coming weeks. A costume which tines in admirably to a colorful autumn picture is shown in the group illustrated. It includes a skirt with matching belt and tie of brown and beige woolen plaid. The jacket of brown ribbed velvet tops a blouse of beige silk.

This idea of combining several weaves as instanced in this ensemble of plaid woolen, ribbed velvet and rough crepe silk is significant in that it is a gesture among designers which offers fascinating possibilities not only as to working several materials together, but the promise for alluring color schemes is limitless.

Perhaps you have heard that the smartest thing on the boards this season for practical daytime wear is a shirtwaist dress. These are being made up effectively of the new checked woolsens. The model pictured is tailored of a dark green and beige check. Its perfectly tailored knapsack pockets and its zipper fastening carry unmistakable style prestige.

As to more formal dress, the trend to elegance is reflected in the sumptuousness of the regal velvets, the sleek satins, crisp taffetas, glittering metal cloths, the beautifully colorful laces and a host of other seductive weaves such as the world as we witness. Then there are the new bengalines and ottoman silks. Their revival is one of the outstanding events of the season. A party frock of white bengaline becomes a necessary luxury in the wardrobe of the woman who attends society doings.

It is understood that every replete wardrobe is to include at least one velvet dress. If only one, then let it be black with trimmings of white starched lace. The importance of velvet cannot be overstated. It is used for everything from hats and gloves to shoes and for autumn suits as well as afternoon and evening gowns and wraps.

Plaid velvet is the latest sensation—perfectly stunning for the new tunic blouses! Plaid velvet suits are also chic.

Velvet evening ensembles are very smart. We are showing a most lovely velvet evening ensemble in the picture to the left. It is sapphire blue. With the jacket removed it is extremely décolleté. Filled sleeves and ruff collar give the jacket distinction, also the fact that it has a slight train.

Competition for first honors between velvet and satin is keen. For immediate wear, suits and frocks of sleek satin are quite the thing. As an evening fabric, satin ranks high. The molded skirt with low fullness of the satin gown shown to the right, interprets the "very latest" in regard to this season's sponsored silhouette.

BUTTONS IN FRONT HELP TO CHILDREN

Small children arriving at the age to be taught to dress themselves will learn more quickly if their garments button in the front. The foundation garment should consist of a small waist, on to which the panties may be buttoned.

Petticoats may be of the wide-armed-and-open-necked variety, which slip over the head without buttons. Little dresses and suits, which button or tie, or snap down the front, can be found easily.

Little hangers may be purchased and a half-dozen hooks placed low inside the closet. As the child sheds his garments at night, he will take pride in placing them on hangers, "like mother does," and hanging them in the closet.

Unique New Fabrics for Fall Shoes Entered for Fall

A thrilling new material has just been produced by the man who has launched the pin-tucked kid which was such a success in the spring. It is kid, stitched and stitched every which way, so that the finished effect is oddly reptilian. It has the advantage of combining practically with great beauty and chic. Patent leather is a newcomer in the serious walking class and appears in the form of a low-heeled oxford. Alligator is our hardest perennial. It holds its well-deserved place in the sun along with its less utilitarian cousin, lizard.

Bird on Nellie's Hat Makes Comeback in Fall Mode

It now looks as though you could get out your hat again with the bird on it—yes, know, the one folks sang about in 1910. And furthermore, you'll probably want to add a few side dishes for 1933 in the way of a feather cape, feather muff, feather purse and so on. You may even hide behind your feather fan and roll your big movie eyes from that point of vantage if you like.

Brief Pointers on What They're Going to Wear

Sashes continue to intrigue. Velvet evening sweaters are something new this fall.

"Hedgehog velvet" is among the novel fabrics launched this season. The ribbed silks, fallies and bengalines are being very well received.

New styles may come and go, but the beret seems to go on forever. Just-to-the-waist jackets in contrast weaves and color, top evening frocks.

KNIT JACKET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It is not only the college girl who is going to spot this knit jacket for her own. It will be literally snatched up by the feminine world for golfing, for riding, for walking—for a hundred occasions when a jacket needs to be slipped on. This one is surely a surprise and a genuine find for—it is knitted of crepe paper! It really is. That knit crepe paper is becoming an honest-to-goodness fashion instead of a mere passing fancy. The strips of crepe and knit beautifully, wear sturdily and you have every shade and tint of the rainbow colors to choose from. Start knitting one of these jackets right away. You'll find yourself wearing it through the fall and under your suit or coat in winter. The jacket shown here is made of crepe paper in a neutral tint with red and blue edges. The directions for making it are simple, and best of all, the entire cost amounts to less than half a round dollar for you. If you've an eye out for chic, and if "do it now" is your motto for getting coming Christmas gifts together, you'll be making more than one.

How I Broke Into The Movies

Copyright by Hal C. Herman

By BUDDY ROGERS

I STARTED out to be a journalist. I wanted to head my own jazz orchestra, I became a motion picture star.

When I was eight years old, the leader of our town band in Olathe, Kan., organized a boy's orchestra and invited me to join. My father bought me a baritone horn.

By my eleventh birthday I was promoted to the men's orchestra. By my senior year in high school, I had firmly decided to become a theatrical jazz band leader.

The following year, I entered the University of Kansas, majoring in journalism. Outside of class, however, I played in a dance orchestra, and was mastering the trombone, the trumpet and the other brass instruments on down the line.

The summer of my sophomore year, thirty of us from the university went to Europe as deck hands on a steamer carrying mules. A few of us organized an orchestra and practiced after the mules had been bedded down for the night.

Upon docking at Barcelona, Spain, we played in that country and then went to Paris, France, where we played in some of the cafes and night clubs. Our orchestra was a success.

By the time we returned to America and the new school year had started, Paramount was organizing its picture school at Long Island and was recruiting promising young men and women from all over the country.

Our theater manager in Olathe insisted that I call at the Paramount exchange in Kansas City. He even sent in some of my pictures. I went back to school, however, and forgot all about our conversation until I received a wire from Kansas City asking me to report for screen tests.

These tests will always linger in my mind as a nightmare. In a public Kansas City park before a number of curious bystanders I was told to register hate, fear and so on to tender love. I had to jump, leap and run. Close-up after close-up was taken of me until I was exhausted. I felt confident that I had failed miserably.

So I went back to my school and jazz band, counting the tests merely as an unpleasant experience and a waste of time. In a few weeks, however, I received word that I had been accepted for the school.

Along with the opportunity to enter the school came an invitation to tour Europe with a college orchestra for the summer. To take one offer meant to give up the other. I wanted to do both things. In the face of two such excellent chances, I did not know what to do. Upon the advice of none other than Jesse L. Lasky, I declined membership in the orchestra and reported at the Paramount school.

In the graduation picture, "Fascinating Youth," I was awarded the male lead. Following the picture, I was sent to the west coast, but before I could be cast in a picture there, I received word from the East to return for a part in, "So's Your Old Man."

After that I received one of those fabulously rare things, a "break." I had been cast as the hero in "Wings."

Lois Weber Won Fame as "Discoverer" of Stars

Lois Weber, one of the three women who attained success as film directors—the other two being Dorothy Arzner and Dorothy Davenport (Mrs. Wallace Reid)—is known as the "discoverer" of Ella Hall, Mary McLaughlin, Cleo Ridgeley, Claire Windsor, and Billy Dove.

Miss Weber is the canny person who gave Claire Windsor her professional name when the blond beauty, then a newcomer, tried to crash the gates under the name of Ola Crnk. Once an actress in New York, Miss Weber entered films in 1912 and worked at the old Gaumont studio. One of the films she directed was Pavlova's "Blind Girl."

She married Capt. Harry Gantz in 1925, when her personal fortune from her movie earnings and Hollywood real estate ventures had ascended near the million mark, and retired from pictures until her return from a recent world cruise. Universal hopes to profit by her ability to pick out promising talent for new stars.

Mart for Precious Stones

Forhelm in Baden is the world's center for precious metals and precious stones. From 35,000 to 40,000 persons are engaged there in satisfying the world's need for gold and silver ornaments, and tourists flock there to purchase at the source.

U. S. Water Purest

Drinking water in the United States has the reputation of being the safest in the world because of the general use of liquid chlorine sterilizer in the storage reservoirs.

Keep Down Flood of "Phony" Money

Secret Service Men Busy at Work of Foiling Counterfeiters.

Secret service agents these days are kept on the go as they trace down sources of large numbers of counterfeit bills that have flooded the country during the depression. Since 1929 more counterfeit money has been passed than in any other corresponding period of the history of our country.

In 1931, there were 11 different kinds of counterfeit bills in circulation and in 1932 this number had been increased to 17 types. Exact figures for the current year are not known. An increase is admitted, however.

But if the counterfeiters and "shoving of the queer" (as passing of counterfeit money is known to the underworld and police) have increased, it is a comforting fact to know that the secret service operatives have redoubled their efforts in suppressing them with gratifying results.

Not only did they seize more bad money during the last year but they also arrested more persons connected with this class of crime. During 1931 1,524 were arrested and in 1932 the number of arrested persons totaled 2,133, a substantial increase.

Nearly a dozen big organized rings were broken up by these arrests and the backbone of this illegitimate industry is thought to be badly bent, if not broken.

Duties of the secret service take in many other things, including matters pertaining to the Treasury department and protection of the President of the United States and his family. But the chief work of these sleuths is suppression of said counterfeiting.

They work under the control of the Treasury department as directed by the secretary of the treasury, and their present chief, William H. Moran.

This is the highest ranking police organization in the United States and consists only of highly trained investigators. "I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I was surprised at the difference in my scalp after using, so I bought more, and I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and my scalp was healed." Breathes There a Man

(After Sir Walter Scott)

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said:
"I'll pay, before I go to bed,
That debt I owe the printer?"
Ah, there are some, we know full well,
Who never such a tale can tell;
But they, we fear, will go to—well—
The place where there's no winter!
