STATE HIGHWAY TO OPEN MANY BIDS ON DECEMBER 4

Chief Engineer W. W Mack Believes Road Work Will Employ About 930 Men

MANY ROADS TO BENEFIT FARMERS

Complete plans and specification y be obtained by road contractors or after Wednesday from the State Highway Department on twelve proposals which will be opened December 4, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, for the awarding of contracts to the low bidders on road work that is estimated by W. W. Mack, Chief Engineer, to furnish employment to 930 workers for 300,000 han hours.

Some of the projects are for clearing and aroding researchers to let-ng and grading, preparatory to lat-er paving, and the remainder are sec-ondary roads or connecting links in construction.

The Wrangle-Hill-Glasgow contract will prepare a short cut from For duPont and surrounding country to the main roads to Baltimore and Washington, while another is preparatory to a continuation of the North East Boulevard, outside of Wilming-ton. Better roads through the Col-ored State College grounds are in-cluded and a slag road south of Clay-ton will afford better transportation for farm crops to the market.

The old state road from Delmar to Hearns Cross Roads which taps a prosperous farming section, and a six-teen-foot two mile and half traffic bound link will complete the highway anxiously awaited by farmers from the Gumboro section, reaching the strawberry, tomato and poultry buy-ing market at Selbyville. Local farmers will mostly use a four-mile stretch of twelve foot traffic-bound road which will bring Millsboro and Stockley buying markets closer to their fields, while a six-mile sixteen-feot traffic-bound road will complete a hard surfaced road from Whitesville in the lower end of Sussex coun ty, to Georgetown, the county seat. Another traffic-bound road will give a hard road outlet to the fishermen and farmers from Bennett Pier on the Delaware Bay, though Thompson-ville to Route 113 and to Milford or Dover markets.

Nearly three miles of traffic-bound road will finish a short cut to points on the Delaware Bay and to the sea at Rehoboth Beach, through Lincoln from Farmington and towns

Continue Diptheria Immunization

With 1213 Wilmington school chil ng the two weeks that the State and City Boards of Health have been conducting a diptheria immunization program, Dr. Jost, Executive Secretary of the State Board, is express-ing confidence that the set goal of 5,000 immunizations will be easily at-uring the first two weeks, up to last Friday, we expect to administer immunization treatments to at least 3,000 school children in Wilmington," he said. "Since this is well over the number of new students enrolled in Wilmington Schools for this year, it means that in so far as the schoolage group is concerned, the already established protection is being not only maintained, but increased.

This leaves only 2,000 in the pre-school age group to be immunized if we are to reach our set goal of 5,immunizations," he concluded, "and in view of the fact that we immu-nized as many in this age group last year, and more parents are being 'sold' on the idea each year, we feel that this number should be easily attained.

Though fewer diptheria cases wer reported in the state during the first ten months of 1935 than in any previous ten month period, the State Board of Health is actively pushing this year's immunization program in the hope of protecting such a large percentage of the population as vir-tually to wipe out the disease. The original immunization program was carried out in 1926, and has been persistently executed each year since. with a resultant drop in diptherial deaths in the state from 30 in 1925 to 4 in 1934. During the years the immunization program has been car-ried on, all the diptheria deaths, and almost all the reported cases have been among un-immunized portions of the population.

The age groups from nine months to twelve years are the most susceptible to this dred disease, and after the completion of the school immunization programs, city and state health authorities plan to concentrate. on the pre-school age groups. It is expected this will be done through free clinics for families in straight-

No Increase of Pastures in Kent

For the past several years one or the major projects in the Agricultur-al extension program for Kent coun-ty has been the campaign for an in-creased acreage of desirable pasture and hay crops, for as a general rule this section of the United States does this section of the United States does not produce a sufficient quantity of these home-grown feeds to take care of our live-stock demands, and this is particularly true with reference to dairy cattle.

In addition to growing legume crops for pasture and hay purposes, many farmers each year are seeding these crops for soil improvement and cover crops. This practice has be-cover crops. This practice has be-come rather common among these wheat farmers who signed adjustment contracts whereby a certain acreage on their farms was contract-ed for by the Federal government and released from wheat production, as this acreage could be used for soil improvement purposes as one of the accepted terms of the wheat con-

In order to determine the total acres seeded to legume crops each year in Kent county, a survey is made of the quantity of legume seed sold to farmers, and some interesting sold to farmers, and some interesting facts regarding this acreage have been obtained by County Agent Russell E. Wilson when this survey is taken each fall with the co-operation of local seed dealers and distributors. As the usual rate of seeding such crops as alfalfa, sweet clover and scarlet clover is one bushel to three acres, the total acreage seeded may be calculated upon this basis with a reasonable degree of accuracy.

The survey for 1935, however, has not been completed, but it is expected that the acreage seeded to these crops will remain about the same this year as for the past two or three crears, as many farmers have not been financially able to spend as much money for field seeds as they would have spent under more normal conditions.

Slot Machine Messages

Making or cancelling engagements is easy for the user of a device known as the "Notificator," developed in England for use in railway stations and stores and at large public gatherings, says Popular Science Monthly. By stepping upon a small platform and dropping a coin in a slot, the patron exposes a slowly moving paper roll on which he may write a message to a friend. The message remains in view for two hours. Several rolls are provided on the machine, so that a large number of messages can be accommodated. Such messages include explanations for unkept appointments.

Conestoga Wagon Drivers First to Keep to Right

First to Keep to Right

Why do American drivers keep to the right instead of to the left as in England and some Contineifidal countries? In the new Columbia Encyclopedia drivers of the famous Conestoga wagons are credited with origimating the custom because they rode the left wheel horse. The wagons, often called "ships of inland commerce," carted freight over the Alleigheny mountains before the railroads were built in 1850,
'The Conestoga wagon originated in Pennsylvania before the Revolution, according to the encyclopedists.
It was pulled by a six-horse team and was capable of carrying a fiveton load. The bottom of the wagon box was curved, rising at both ends so that in going up and down hills the goods would shift less easily and the end-gate be subject to less strain.
The prairie-schooner was a modification of the Conestoga wagon.

All of us are familiar with the hobautomobile horns.

All of us are familiar with the hobbyist. Even those of us who are wont to describe a neighbor with "Oh, she's a nut on antiques," will ask the corner druggist if he can give us Indian pennies in our change.

We find such "nuts" in every walk of life. Nuts? Well, look at who some of them are.

Museums Are Hobbyists.

Museums Are Hobbylsts.

To begin with there are the historical museums. Yes, they are hobbylsts. They collect everything from arrowheads to locomotives. And a great many of the most priceless exhibits in such museums—the Field museum, the Metropolitan and others—were made possible by the acquisition of collections by amateur hobbylsts.

Among the amateurs whose collections.

Among the amateurs whose collecting has become famous are—might as well begin at the top—Franklin D. Roosevelt, who is a "nut" on stamps, historical prints, ship models and autographs; Henry Ford, who collects almost anything historical for his museum in Dearborn, Mich.; Mrs. Alf Landon, wife of the governor of Kansas, who collects luster pitchers; and Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, who loves to browse through dusty old files in search of gems for his Lincoln collection. Some of the collections could not be bought at any price; others, like the $500,000 Jade collection of former Governor Stevens of Michigan, have mounted to tremendous values. "Nuts?" Well, hardly.

Among the collectors is a spirit of Among the amateurs whose collect "Nuts?" Well, hardly.

Among the collectors is a spirit of co-operation that makes them all brothers and sisters under the skin. Many of them will acquire no end of curious things which will not fit into their own collections in the hope that they may trade them to other hobby-ists for articles they really want. For such as these, the hobby shows that are held in four of the principal cities at this time of every year are truly Meccas.

These annual "fanatic fairs" take.

These annual "fanatic fairs" take place in New York, Cleveland, Los Angeles and Chicago. At the one recently closed in Chicago, the average daily attendance was about 10,000 persons—almost every one of them a collector of something.

Covering an entire floor of the Hotel Sherman were more than 300 exhibits. Most of them were the displays of curlo shops and professional collec-tors, showing their wares' in the hope that some eager amateurs would pounce that some eager amateurs would pounce in wild-eyed delight upon a Chippen-dale chair or a garter worn by the secret sweetheart of some far-removed emperor.

What's in a Name?

What's in a Name?

A most interesting booth was that of the "Chicago Filee Market," which prided itself particularly upon a wase made in the factory of Louis XV. It seems the factory wasn't paying, so Louis took the thing over himself. He broke so many vases in his eagerness to unwrap them to show them to friends that few of them are left; this was one the royal fingers had evidently dealt with more tenderly. The French-American lady who presided over the exhibit explained that her shop was named after one in her native land, which collected so much ancient and unclean clothing and furniture that it became jokingly known as the "Paris Flea Market." She was forced to change the spelling to "Flee" because so many window-shoppers came in and wanted to see the trained fleas.

Vastly more interesting to the casual observer were the exhibits by amateurs, for here was visual evidence of many happy hours spent in patient, painstaking work to satisfy whims that had evolved into preclous ambitions, whether they be for saving stamps, prints, vases or string.

One dear, little white-haired lady saved buttons. She is Mrs. K. L. Browne, of Kansas City, Kan, and her collection of buttons was such a hit at church gatherings and other social affairs in Kansas City, she was prevailed upon to bring it to the Chicago show.

In only-three years she has saved more than 10,000 buttons and she had carefully arranged them in the orderly neatness you can't help feeling is characteristic of her. Probably no two of them are alike, although she refuses to admit this is absolutely true; at any rate/there are no duplications to the best of her knowledge.

More dear to her heart, though, is Pitchers Are Her Pride. More dear to her heart, though, is More dear to her heart, though, is Mrs. Browne's collection of pitchers. She has more than 1,200 of them, and they are a dominating influence in the Browne home. The house is a large and "homey" one, a friendly landmark atop a green hill. Its shuttered windows have sills about 18 Inches deep; it is on these, and hanging from the sides of the window niches, that her pitchers rest, 75 to a window. They pitchers rest, 75 to a window. They pitchers another all blue and so on. The left-overs find their places on an "Empire" sideboard that is dated 1807. "When the sun shines through our windows, the whole house is softly bathed in a myriad of bright and happy colors," Mrs. Browne says. Can't you just imagine the charm of this fine old home with its qualat rock gardens outside and its pitchers full of happy hours and sentiment in the windows?

Another collector of buttons is Fred S. Ettineer of Chicago, He has thoudisciberand that is dated 1807.

"When the sun shines through our windows, the whole house is softly be been deady to be seen on the collection of bright and happy colors," Mrs. Browne says, and the old home with its qualit rock gardens outside and its pitchers full to hope hours and sentiment in the windows?

Another collector of buttons is Fred S. Ettinger of Chicago. He has thousands, but the quaintest of all are those in his "charm string." The charm string was a necklace of button with those in his "charm string." The charm string was a necklace of button." The sweet young thing of the therm string was a necklace of button." The sweet young thing of the production. The sweet young thing of the production. The sweet young thing of the production. Now you must give me one to replace it!" A pretty custom no doubt, but tough on us bachelors who have to see on our own.

Mr. Ettinger's pride and joy is his collection of book-ribbons. He is a book dealer, and in search of these qualit book-marks of the latter half of the Nineteenth century, he has examined 2,000,000 books. "To tell you the truth the figure is nearer 5,000."

Fun in the Parlor.

He exhibited about 300 ribbons al-

Fun in the Parlor.

He exhibited about 300 ribbons although his collection includes thousands. It seems that every member of the family had his own book-ribbon in the old days. Each was inscribed with some motto, usually expressing devotion for the person to whom it was given, Book-ribbons were much in favor as gifts, and usually were of petit point, needlepoint, cross-stitch or crochet work of the giver. It was possible to convey all kinds of messages in the most sly and subtle fashion with the aid of a book-ribbon. For instance, there was the one consisting of an embroidered card with a string attached to each end. Mr. Ettinger explained that swains of the eighties Fun in the Parlor.

gave this gem to their lady loves. In its immobile state it was merely a thought gift, but when the lady spun it by means of the strings, while her sultor looked over her shoulder, it spelled out the invitation: "Kiss Me." "Then he would brush her cheek reverently with his lips," Mr. Ettinger hastened to add.

Equally facetious were gentlemen's calling cards of those days, the Ettinger collection reveals, They were sissy stuff, kind of, and had gorgeously hued illustrations of flower-baskets; the baskets could be opened, and inside were heart-beats like "You are the flower of my heart" or "Will you be my pretty violet?" and such allly talk. One brazen scamp had a card with the message: "May I. C. U. Home? If Not, May I Set on the Fence, and C. U. Go By?" Tsk, tsk!

Pat Salmon, a tramp printer (better say "ilinerant," says he), has a collection of 1,000 pipes which is possibly the most complete of its kind. One pipe, a German porcelain, is three feet long, weighs 25 pounds, holds five pounds of tobacco "and takes a draft horse to pull it," as Pat says. It sports an ambitious painting of the kaiser raviewing his cave'ry one, the bowl. There are tiny pipes used by Chinese women, great Turkish water pipes which are as big as old-time parlor lamps and not unlike them, and a comfortable curved briar that once belonged to Mark Twain. I pointed to a common corn-cob that seemed a little forlorn in this august assembly, "What's that doing here?" I asked. "That, sir," repiled Pat Salmon, "is a fine specimen of Missouri Meerschaum!"

The father of Charles Bragin of Brooklyn used to have a hobby of thrashing the daylights out of Charley for reading dime novels, and now Charley's hobby is collecting all those literary delights once forbidden him. He has more than 30,000 different copies, valued at $25,000.

Western Union Has Hobby.

It was something of a jar to discover that the Western Union tele-of these collecting folk, and a born organizer. You might have taken him for a Y. M. C. A. secretary, but for his necktle, which was itself a collection—of all the colors of the rainbow, except the less brilliant ones. A stick-pin topped by a gold race horse kept it from getting entirely out of control. I thought it might be fun to find out what this master-hobbyist collected himself. I asked him if he had an exhibit in his show,

"Yes, indeed," he said, turning his beaming smile upon me. "Right there

"Yes, Indeed," he sald, turning his beaming smile upon me. "Right there on the wall is a collection that both afforded me a great deal of pleasure and required no end of stoic perseverance."

I looked. It was a collection of speakeasy pass-cards.

When He Is Making Love

When the bittern, which is a small heron, goes courting, it lets all the world know it. The cry of this wading bird is described as sounding somewhat like the roar of a lion and under favorable circumstances can be heard at a distance as great as a mile.

The courting season of the bittern is in the early spring, when the love-call of the male bird is heard as a loud, deep boom. The male selects a

Searching Out Tuberculosis

Simply, framices and painless though it is, the tuberculin test is a reliable means of discovering whother occurs in the body. The girl above is receiving the test. It consists simply of the injection of a drop of harmless liquid, called tuberculin, under the upper layer of skin on the forearm. If a red spot appears there by the following day it indicates that tubercle becilli, the gorms that cause tuberculosis, have obtained a foothold in the body. This does not mean that disease exists, but an X-ray picture should be taken to discover whether any harm has been done to the lungs and to what extent. If active disease is present the child should be placed in a sanatorium immediately. Tuberculin tests among school children to help discover the disease in its early and curable stage are one of the most important projects conducted by tuberculosis associations throughout the country. Tries."

The British major-may all he says be verified and multiplied by ten-says truly there is any amount of money in America, but it "revolves" too slowly. It will soon speed up and "revolve," or change hands thirty-five times a year.

If Lloyds would insure the accuracy of the major's prediction, a good many would buy policies.

The particularly offensive plan to buy in Germany steel to build the Triborough bridge in New York will probably not go through. It is explained by those concerned that they can buy 1,000,000 pounds of German steel piling for less than half the American price; as a further "reason" it is said "American firms submitted identical bids."

The government's blue eagle was invented to prevent price cutting; but invented to prevent price cutting; but

The government's blue eagle was invented to prevent price cutting; but that is not the question, nor is the difference in price or the fact that work is taken from American workers to give it to German workers the most important fact. Buying steel in Germanny, helping to finance the Germann steel Industry and Mr. Hitler's program, with American dollars, would seem to indorse Hitler's program of persecution. That is the important fact.

Officers of the American air corps, Capts. A. W. Stevens and Orvil Anderson, rose above the earth into the stratosphere to a height greater than any human being had ever reached, with the possible exception, of course, of Elljah going up in his charlot of fire. The American officers radioed: "We are at 74,187 feet, trying for 80,000 feet." They did not go higher, but foroke all records.

Seventy-four thousand one hundred and eighty-seven feet is more than 14 miles, 2,000 feet higher than the unomical Russian record of 72,200 feet.

A movie news reel photographer in Ethiopia, Edward Genock, was assaulted when he tried to make moving pictures of warriors at Harar. The Ethiopians beat the camera man, explaining afterward, "We shall lose our souls if we are photographed." That will surprise Hollywood, where the belief is the other way around. Once, it was generally believed, even by real Christians, that if you made a wax miniature figure of a man and stuck pins in it at intervals you would kill the original. Man is a superstitious biped.

Not long ago, when foreign countries were starving, America sent over American corn, and the foreign countries would not eat it. Even Russia refused.

Now, thanks to various devices for persuading our farmers to produce as little as possible, the United States imports more than 20,000,000 bushels of corn in one year.

Shortage of corn means shortage of food for hogs, and that meant expensive "hog meat," pork chops and bacon. Somebody always has to pay the bill, and now it appears to be those that eat, a decided majority.

At Maryland's Pimilco race track a horse named Axican, winning the $1,000 relay steeplechase, paid $340.40 for a $2 betting ticket, 170 times the amount paid. That news will cause many unfortunate geese to lose several times $340. Nobody ever won at race track gambling in the long run. If that were possible, who would support bookmakers and tracks?

That was not playing the game. It is customary for lawyers to get money from gunmen, although, doubtless, these were not that type of lawyer.

Self-Help Leaders Going to College

New Institution to Provide Proper Training.

Santa Barbara, Calif.—A new college to train leaders for the self-help co-operative movement has been established here.

As their laboratory and clinic, the students are working in the Santa Barbara county co-operative industries, a local co-operative which has more than 1,000 members and is rapidly developing into a model project of its kind.

Director of the new college is Dr. Ralph Scanlan, for the last several years professor of social science at Santa Barbara State college. A committee headed by Dr. Rexwold Brown, head of the Santa Barbara clinic and a member of President Roosevelt's com-

Students spend their afternoons working in the various sections of the co-operative on a revolving plan to gain a varied experience. They also attend round-table meetings of the planning committee, held Monday, Tuesday and Friday evenings, as well as the Saturday afternoon meeting of the government board.

Class work occupies the morning. There is a course in the technique of co-operative and the management of co-operative enterprises, under the direction of Hjalmar Rutzebeck, director of the Santa Barbara county co-operative industries and formerly of the division of self-help co-operatives of the federal government.

covery.* Mr. Leonard Ayres of the Cleveland Trust company at Cleveland, Ohlo, writes: "The lesson of this depression is that we cannot afford any more great wars." True. A prevailing, and rather persistent notion argues today that war brings prosperity. If we had another great war, all securities would increase in value and the produce of the soil like wheat and other grains would rise to fabulous prices. The fallacy of this argument is at once apparent when we consider the fact that the aftermath of the last great war was the depression through which we have been massing. In this same book Mr.

Champion Archer

Madeline Taylor of Brooklyn, N. Y. who won the national archery cham-plonship in 1933, captured the eastern title this year. She took part in the tournament at Newton, Mass.

Ayres writes, "The depression is one of the major consequences of the war."

The total cost of the last great war was upwards of two hundred billion dollars, shared by all the nations involved. An indebtedness so staggering as to leave ruin in its path; bank-ruptcles, wrecked fortunes, unbalanced budgets and economic failures. Yet in spite of this clearly defined evidence, some persons still insist that war brings prosperity.

Let us remain sufficiently soher in

Let us remain sufficiently sober in our judgment to ask, can we afford an-other depression? Surely we cannot Then we cannot afford another war.

Then we cannot afford another war.

The economic consideration, however, is not the most serious aspect of the case. The loss of the man power of our country distinctly forbids another war. Ruined homes and broken hearts with a corresponding loss of "morale," even in spite of organized efforts of relief, do not argue for prosperity or for national security. One of the most important views, expressed by some men in high places of responsibility, is their apologetic attitude for having persuaded others to a favorable aspect of the last great war. In some of their published addresses they frankly apologize to the "dead soldier" whose life was sacrificed on the battlefield of the last war.

Since the recent war has left noth-field of the last war.

Since the recent war has left nothing but ruin in its trail, we are asking in all seriousness, just how safe is our western civilization when the modern weapons of warfare have supplanted the gun and sword with air raids, poisoned gas and diseased germs. We frankly admit we cannot afford another war if we want to preserve what is left of the culture of our civilization and save for posterity the soul of America.

The Household

A UTUMN is one of the seasons when colds flourish. Many of these can be eliminated by attention to little things. So it is wise to take precautions. Colds, if light, are merely annoying but when severe may result in weeks of illness, sometimes accompanied with danger, and again resulting in a prolonged term of feeling miserable and run down, minus any danger element. Whether the cold is severe or not it is contagious or infectious enough for an entire family to get it, one after another, or at practically the same time and not in sequences. Great precaution has to be taken to avoid this an noying occurrence.

The change of season is reputed to be largely responsible for the prevalence of colds. This means that one should be on his guard to suit warmth of clothing to hot and cool weather. Also, as even a temperature as can be kept, should prevail in houses. Avoid having to hot and cool weather. Also, as even a temperature as can be kept, should prevail in houses. Avoid having to temper, the atmosphere and an increase of it when the sun goes down and the evenings get chilly. Extra heat in the early morning is necessary also. The adapting of indoors heat to outside conditions helps to ward off colds.

Outdoor and Indoor Life.

One of the dangers of taking cold is found in the change from a life in the open during vacations, and the confinement within four walls when work is resumed in the autumn. The body has become inured to the exigencies of outdoor elements. It has to readjust to indoor conditions. Therefore when it is possible, keep out of doors. It is one safeguard. Sleeping warm, and protected and having windows open to admit the pure outer air is another precaution.

And whether indoors or out seeing

And whether indoors or out seeing that the body is kept sufficiently warm, neither over protected and uncomfortably hot, nor without sufficient protection and liable to get chilled. With adults this should be their own concern, but with children mothers have the responsibility, and they have to keep an eye on the youngsters when playing lest they discard outer garments when they get hot instead of cooling off less suddenly.

As for guarding against taking colds from one another in a family, one way is for the person with the cold to sleep alone, not even in the same room with others. Another is the careful use of handkerchiefs to prevent them getting in the hands of those free from colds. A person should always sneeze into a handkerchief, lest germs escape into the air. The use of paper handkerchiefs which are burned after using is an excellent idea.

The Way to Happiness.

The Way to Happiness.

The Way to Happiness.

Satisfaction in life is seldom felt when a person is continually idling away time. Restlessness selzes such an individual. This is the urge to do something which will be of genuine worth. Those who are inclined to envy persons who, because of sufficient incomes, have leisure to do whatever they choose with their time, do well to consider this side of the matter. To follow the line of work one has chosen is really a privilege. To be employed in some worthwhile business is, a satisfaction. To be of use to those one loves is a blessing.

Even when jobs are not entirely congenial, a person has the compensation of realizing he or she is a self-supporting individual, and this is gratifying. Or it may be that the person is not only doing this, but is contributing to the needs or the comfort, or both, of one or more other persons. Could idleness bring any such satisfaction?

The zest of recreation is locking up.

tion?

The zest of recreation is lacking unless the pleasure is in contrast to every day experiences. When a person is being diverted by continual "good times," there has to be great diversity and after a time the rounds of pleasure pall. Dissatisfaction with life comes, and one is in a vortex of conflicting ideas. The wish to be continually amused is at war with the desire to do something real.

Happiness is an elusive elf, and is not to be cajoled. He flirts with pleasure but abides with contentment.

If the turkey is young, continue the roasting at this moderate temperature with no lid on the pan until the bird is done. Baste with pan drippings about every half hour. In turning, be careful not to break the skin. A young 10-12 pound turkey will need about three hours in the oven.

Near-National Holiday
Thanksgiving day comes as nearly as any to being a national holiday. The President's proclamation calls upon the entire nation for observance of it. And it is a legal holiday in eyery state, territory and possession. Holidays are appointed by the state legislatures and not by congress. There are, strictly speaking, no national holidays, although all the states observe New Year's day. July 4 and Christmas.

Mr. Ramill had reacted in his own way. His temporary friendliness had disappeared. He was again the bland, adroit investor in mines who so generously presented worthy prospectors with a thousand, and in return took over claims worth many thousands. Huxby of course had been a hopeless case. But Garth had fancied there were possibilities in the older pirate. Lillith Ramill, however, was the real disappointment. Though she had done nothing, so far as Garth could tell, to disprove her declared hatred of him, she had seemed more and more to show a spirit of fair play. It had led him into thinking she possessed a true spirit of sportsmanship.

Yet now the girl avoided looking at him. Occasionally she gazed rather hard at her fiance and murmured about the hotel at Edmonton. But for the most part she sat in moody silence. The grease that dulled the brilliant blue diamond of her engagement ring seemed to annoy her. She rubbed at it with a bit of dry moss, between bites at her meat.

By the time Garth finished his own half-spoiled meat, he managed also to swallow his bitterness. After all, what else could he have expected? The girl was the daughter of Burton Ra mill—the selfish spoiled daughter of an unscrupulous business sharper.

He broke in upon her rubbing of the begrimed diamond: "May I ask you for the salt and tea bags, Miss Ramill? They're as good as empty, I see. But I can refull them for my return to the valley."

She stared at him, wide-eyed. "Valley!

The girl did not turn her astonshed gaze away from Garth. "Dad does not understand. I do. You mean now! You planned it from the first. All that caribou meat and the—"

"Good guess," he broke in. "It has taken a bit longer than I expected to get you out. But in my light birchbark, I fancy I can make the head of canoe water before the freeze-up. After that, frost and snow will make no difference. I'll have a pair of webs—snowshoes."

The millionaire spoke in place of his wild-eyed daughter: "But, man, the cold?"

Garth smiled. "Have you forgotten I told you that I wintered with the Eskimos at Coronation Guit?"

"They have dog teams."

"Some of those reams were reared from wolf pups. I might experiment. There are several wolf families in the walley."

"You're stark mad! If you think

Without a word of thanks, she dragged the blanket to the edge of the nearest outburnt fire and began brushing the fluffy gray wood ashes upon it with a spruce spray. Her father had been gazing thoughtfully at Garth. He took up his empty forskin bag. "Come on, Vivian. This is washday. Take Lillith's bag and get your portash." The wolfskin knapsack, with its platinum alloy treasure, had been left attached to the mooring line of the cance. There was no bag for Garth. He made one by opening the front of his buckskin shirt and hand-ladling wood ashes inside.

Lillth went over beyond the spruce thicket with her blanket-bagged ashes. Garth led Mr. Ramill and Huxby to the strip of sand below the beached cance. There he showed them how to cheat the buzzing insect pests. Instead of stripping for his laundry work, he muddled his ashes and plastered the paste all over his body and on the inside and outside of his clothes.

He rubbed in the mess and gave the weak solution of potash lye time to act. After that came the rinsing. He waded out and sat down in the water up to his neck. Thus protected from the swarms of stingers, he stripped off one garment at a time, washed it clean of ashes, and tossed it upon the edge of the beach. Before coming out, he took a luxurious swim in the clear river water.

Still in a friendly mood, but with shrewd calculation in his eyes, Mr. Ramill stretched out on his back in the long grass beside Garth.

"Well, young man, it appears that the game is played out. The joke on us is that you had the cards stacked. A cold deck, and no stakes up."

Garth differed: "Why not put it according to the facts, sir? I offered a square deal—a straight business proposition. The placer was in on that. Had I not sent out my papers for record, I would have had no legal claim to offer in my bargaining."

"Why—er— But when I refused your terms, and you refused mine, you said you preferred to play out the game."

"Oh, well, if you can't see that side of it, just recall yourself as you were when I had to holst you out of the monoplane cable."

That held the millionaire for a long moment. Then—

"Delicate!" Garth cut in. "Do you know of anyone more hard? The point in her case is that she was only a brittle, harsh siloy. Now she's at least parily tempered into true steel. I had hopes of still better results from the both of you. But hate and treachery blacken the blood."

At the bitter statement, the millionaire flushed with anger. He started to turn over on his side to frown at Garth. The movement drew Garth's glance. Above a clump of wild currants, less than ten paces distant, he glimpsed the top of Huxby's hat and the outhrust muzzle of the automatic. As Garth ducked forward, the pistol blared. Garth pitched down on his face. At the same instant, startled by the shot, Mr. Ramill jerked up on his elbow. The long grass had hidden him. Huxby could not have known that his partner was lying so close beside Garth.

Huxby could not have known that his partner was lying so close beside Garth.

In the excitement of the moment, he must have thought he had missed his kill and that Garth was bounding uo again. He instantly pulled the trigger a second time. Knocked over by the shock of the builtet, the millionaire sprawled across the flaccic body of Garth.

Even as the roar of the second shot.

Even as the roar of the second shot

Even as the roar of the second shot dinned in his ears, the killer saw what he had done. The pistol dropped from his paralyzed hand. He stiffened erect on his knees to glare at that uppermost bödy. It did not move.

Before he could recover his wits, Lillith burst screaming from the spruce thicket. Hair clad, wet hair dying, she dashed forward to fling herself down on her bare knees beside her father. Under the partly washed off cont of mosquito dope, his face was the same sallow gray as Garth's.

She looked up, her eyes black with horror. Huxby had risen to his feet. He was advancing, once more cool. She flung out a forbidding hand.

"Stop! Keep away! You-murderer!"

His lips tightened. "You're mail,

"Stop1 Keep away! You—murderer!"
His lips tightened. "You're mad, darling—clear off your head. I shot to save your father, not at him. No, listen—you must listen to me! The d—d roughneck attacked your father—with the knife—had him down. At my first shot he dodged. I thought I missed. Your tather sprang up just as I fired again. It's the truth."

"Truth!" she cried—"truth! You've killed them—both!"
A great shuddering seized her—shock her like a fit of ague. Almost swooning, she sagged forward on the body of her father.
Huxby advanced with wary quickness. But at sight of the two men he had shot, he thrust his coat-hidden pistol into its sheath. All the back of Garth's sideward turned head was a crimson-blotch. What need of wasting powder on a man shot through the head?

Mr. Ramill's wound gave him no less satisfection, though for a vestile.

Garth's sideward turned head was a crimson blotch. What need of wasting powder on a man shot through the head?

Mr. Ramill's wound gave him no less satisfaction, though for an exactly opposite reason. The bullet had struck high up on the shoulder blade, between neck and arm. Huxby pulled the thickset body from under Lillih and opened the front of the leather coat. The steel-jacketed bullet had drilled clean through and come out below the collarbone.

"Look!" he shouted his relief. "Your father—he's not killed, only knocked out. The wound's not serious, so high up through the chest. Same way one of my classmates was shot by a hold-tup. Take hold. We'll get him into the canoe and make a quick run down across to the refueling post. That fellow Tobin will have a medical kit."

The pulling of her father from under her had let the girl down upon the body of Garth. Huxby's eager assurance roused her from the semiswoon. She struggled partly up, to peer at her father, her hands braced upon Garth's lax side.

Even as she gazed, the gray of her father's face became less ghastly. But in place of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the structure of the smile of relief for the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the smile of the smile of relief for the smile of relief for the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to the smile of the smile of the smile

Charon, the Ferryman
In classic myth, Charon was the ferryman of the Styx. Charon's toll is a coin, equivalent to about a penny, which was placed in the mouth or hand of the dead by the ancient Greeks to blue eyes. He spoke as if nothing had happened:
"Some of the ashes are now cool enough for you to use, Miss Ramili Rub them on as a mud paste till the potash cuts the grease, then scour with sand, and rinse. Better take your blue eyes. But when I refused when I refused to the sale with the game, and you refused mine, you said you preferred to play out the game."
"My game," Garth qualified; "not pay charon for ferrying the spirit across the River Styx to the Elvelan yours. It was you and Huxby who fields.

The Day Before Thanksgiving

New England Thanksgiving Busy Time

THANKSGIVING day! How these words spelled days and days of work and worry for the colonial housewife! A festive holiday it was called by proclamation, observes a writer in the Boston Herald, but actually it recessanted, day which de-called by proclamation, observes a writer in the Boston Herald, but actually it represented a day which demanded more preparation than most any other in the year. Our old New Epgland traditions required it—the Puritans did, so must we—was the common understanding of the day.

In days of yore grandmother would start her Thanksgiving preparation weeks in advance. The ples must be made. Of course she wouldn't serve mince ples that hadn't "ripened." They were made in quantity and put down cellar where they frequently froze to a solidity overcome only by a hot oven just before the feast.

In passing it might be well to remind you of the custom in one New England family to have three pieces of ple for breakfast on Thanksgiving morn. Mince, apple and squash were the three dictated by tradition.

Well in advance of the traditional day one would see grandmother take down the seasoning used but a few times a year, the crackers would be ground—up and gradually the stuffic. For the turkey was prepared—this also plucked, singed and hung up for a day before he was brought to the kitchen. Grandmother must make her famous nut bread for William ("he does like it so when he comes home"). "Sadle, you make the fudge—Alice, you make the molasses candy—Sue, you make—" and so it goes. Everyone hustles, all want-ing the same dishes, the same stove cover, the mixin' spoon, etc.

seasoning—and the erranus start.

These were typical New England days of preparation for the Thanksgiving feast, all of which must be executed in addition to the regular chores of making butter for market twice a week, churning the cottage cheese, collecting the eggs, etc., etc.

Then came the day—the house must be spic and span. Dozens of pictures must be dusted, the parlor must be opened up, wood brought in for the extra stove, chestnuts gathered to put on the fireplace hearth—and on went the great process of preparation.

The folks came, hugs and kisses went the rounds, the new baby was chucked under the chin and an immediate retreat to the kitchen by the feminine members took place. By one-thirty or two the feast took place—and then the dishes. Stacks upon stacks of dishes, pots and pans (usually the turkey pan went under the sink for scouring the following day).

Games, gossip, etc., occupied a brief period until time for supper, when again the kitchen staff swung into action and made turkey sandwiches, poured the cider and cut up the ples. As the lights were blown out it was usual to hear the women folks say, "Didn't we have a good time, but isn't Thanksgiving a tiresome day!"

went down cellar to ripen. We mustn't forget the plum pudding which was made well in advance and hung in a bag up in the attic suspended from a nail so interested mice could not approach.

Then came the days before Thanks; giving. Sons were drafted to collect and crack the butternuts, walnuts, beechnuts, etc. (and more than one finger was smashed in the process). Daughters were drafted to peel squash, turnips, carrots, potatoes, sweet and white, and of course the proverbial tearproducing onlons.

The turkey must be caught, killed,

The ruling of the council was that the old rock does not belong to the town or to any not belong to the town or to any private individual but to the entire country, all Americans having the same rights of ownership—in this

Thanksgiving Was Once

Most Popular Festival

UNTIL recent years, Thanksgiving day, the last Thursday in November, was a greater festival in the United States than Christmas, and was celebrated in much the same manner, says Tit-Bits Magazine.

After landing near Cape Cod, the Pilgrim fathers of the Mayflower set out in search of water, and, having found it, sat down to a repast which was regarded as the first Thanksgiving dinner. A year later, on November 21, 1621, a reunion of the colonisk was held, and this custom of a dinner was kept up annually in the New England states.

Thanksgiving Pumpkin Pies
From the time the first golden pumpkin makes its appearance until the last one has been taken out of storage, there's no more universally popular dessert than pumpkin pie. Although canned pumpkin is available at all times and makes excellent pies, pumpkin pie enjoys a definite season and is most appreciated during the autumn months. Everybody has his own very definite ideas of just what a pumpkin pie should be from color to taste.

CHEVROLET SETS NEW RECORD lem, will be the special speaker at 8 o'clock Friday night, November 29.

Countrywide sales by Chevrolet dealers for the first 10 days of November totaled 32,657 units, nearly double the highest total for the same period in previous years, it was announced by Chevrolet Motor Co. The total reflects the results of the early introduction of 1936 models and the change of date of the automobile show season, says the announcement.

Many true-color pictures of the holy Lands might make the places of interest from Dan to Beersheba. He has participated in an unusual missionary enterprise right in the Bible Lands.

change of date of the automobile show season, says the announcement.

The total of 32,657 not only exceeds the record of any previous corresponding period, but sets a new high mark for 10-days' sales following the introduction date of any previous new models, it was said.

"It is apparent that the early presentation of the new automobile shows in November instead of January, has had in important effect on seasonal "This first ten-day period in November included on day on which the new Chevrolets were not on sale, since they were not shown to the public till November 2, yet its sales exceed the total of 30-day November sales of all but four years in the his tory of the company. Our largest November record was in 1926, and the sales in the first ten days of that month were 17,678 units, only slightly more than half of the new record just established.

As to the effect of November vs. Jamuary introduction, it is significant that our first-ten-day's record for the current month is more than double our sales for the first ten days following any January introduction of Chevrolets. In other words, although the public has not been in the habit of buying largely in November, this new record indicates that it was not the season that kept them from purchasing, but rather the them from purchasing, but rather the fact that models on sales in previous Novembers were soon to be supplant-ed by new models at the January automobile shows. We anticipate that the new plan of presenting cars in November will, therefore, prove suc-cessful in attaining its chief object, which is to maintain a higher level of sales during the winter and thus result in a correspondingly higher result in a correspondingly higher level of employment in the industry through the winter months. "In Chevrolet, this effect is already assured for the winter, for our November and December production schedules, originally set at a figure for above previous output records for those months, have been stepped up till greater totals based upon both early sales reports and orders taken for future deliveries all over the coun-
