LOVE YOUR ENEMIES

Quite a bit of excitement is being kicked up because the present head of the State Police, who is a Republican, has not been removed, and the job given to a Democrat.

One of the applicants for the job is John R. Fader, of Newark, who was speaker of the house at the last session of the legislature.

What right has Mr. Fader or any of his friends to kick because a Republican holds the job, and what right has Mr. Fader to expect anything—as a DEMOCRAT?

Mr. Fader, like most of the Democratic members of the legislature, owed his election to the fact that he promised to support the policies of President Roosevelt.

As speaker of the house, he appointed himself chairman of the printing committee. Since the Harrington Journal is the only paper in Delaware whose loyalty to the Democratic party has never been questioned, and since it was the first paper on the Eastern Shore to declare for Mr. Roosevelt, naturally we expected fair treatment from Mr. Fader.

But how did this sterling Democrat apportion the printing of the legislature? He gave something like $17,000.00 in printing to the paper published by Col. Bob Houston, who has been fighting the Democrats since he was three years old—and he must be around 70 now.

And the baneful Ted Woodyard influence. Mr. Woodyard lives in West Virginia. There is nothing else in the world comparable to the elasticity of Mr. Woodyard's political complex. He publishes Democratic papers in Democratic counties and Republican papers in Republican counties. The week before the national election in November, in a signed editorial in his short-lived Georgetown paper, Mr. Woodyard compared Roosevelt to Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler—and Mr. Fader gave Mr. Woodyard something like $10,000.00 in printing.

How much printing did the Harrington Journal receive from the Democratic speaker of the house? Well, not very much; in fact, not one cent!

The city election this week was an oddity. The idea of a man being re-elected mayor of Harrington without any opposition is a remarkable tribute to Mr. Rash—for the voters of this town delight in staging rough-and-tumble election contests. It would not surprise us if Mayor Rash should start a regime that out-Woodfords Mayor Woodford, of Dover, who has hasn't had any opposition in years and years.

According to the papers, they are organizing a Delaware Democratic Society in Washington. Good—if they can do it—and if they succeed, we should invite them to come over and organize a Democratic party in Delaware.

LIQUOR DEALERS FAVOR MINIMUM PRICE

The large majority of liquor dealers throughout the state, licensed by the Delaware liquor LCommission to sell bottled goods for consumption off the premises, favor fixing a minimum retail price 25 per cent above the wholesalers' list price. This was announced following a luncheon conference of 185 dealers in the Hotel duPont, Wilmington, at the call of Pierre S. duPont, state liquor commissioner. Several dealers, however, later stated they will not follow such a price policy. Mr. duPont decided to call the conference in an effort to sound the sentiment of the various types of off-the-premises licensees, on the price-cutting war which has been sporadic for several months, chiefly in Wilmington. One dealer contended that many stores were selling bottled goods at a profit of only about two per cent. He challenged the dealers to promise not to sell at a price less than 25 per cent above wholesalers' list price. Those willing to agree to such a price were asked to so signify by holding up their hands. The majority agreed.

Mr. duPont, in addressing the dealers, strongly urged them to cease price-cutting competition. He pointed out that he expects the dealers to govern themselves and establish a price level—not price fixing—to eliminate further price-cutting disputes.

It was announced following the conference that the commission contemplates no action at this time, and plans to wait and see what remedial effects the conference might have.

AUTO MISDEEDS SHOW DECREASE

Automobile accidents throughout Delaware decreased three per cent in 1937, compared with the previous year, although fatalities due to accidents showed an increase of 36 per cent. The number of persons injured in the state last year was approximately one-half of one per cent greater than in 1936.

These percentages are arrived at by a combination of the report of the state police, covering rural New Castle, Kent and Sussex counties, which was made public last week and that of the Wilmington police.

Last year there were 2,226 automobile accidents in the entire state, compared with 2,302 in 1936. There were 1,474 persons injured last year, and 1,467 in 1936. Fatalities in 1937 numbered 107 compared with 85 in the previous year.

State police reported there were 1,070 automobile accidents in the state, outside of Wilmington in 1937, with 889 persons injured, and 88 persons killed. Figures of the Delaware Safety Council, however, show 89 fatalities in the state outside of Wilmington, the state police not including the death of a child near Bridgeville last summer who was injured in the rear yard of its home when struck by a motor truck. While fatalities in Wilmington last year declined 18 per cent those in the state, outside of Wilmington increased 41 per cent. Property damage caused by last year's accidents amounted to $185,817. In 1936 there were 902 accidents in the state outside of Wilmington with 808 persons being injured and 61 killed. This latter figure does not include (Continued from page 4)

Delaware Safety Council Notes

According to the Delaware Safety Council, in spite of the great number of accidents which have resulted from gasoline explosions, drivers and garage workers continue to do things which endanger not only their own lives, but also the lives and property of others. It seems needless to caution against the use of matches, cigars, cigarettes and other open flames near gasoline, or near oil-soaked rags and clothing.

In drawing or pouring gasoline from one container to another, static electric sparks may be developed. It is advisable always to keep the two containers with each other, or to attach a chain to the pouring container which will maintain the contact. This will lead off the electric charge and prevent sparking. Sparks often result from striking together two pieces of metal. It is best to use kerosene instead of gasoline when cleaning oil and grease from metal parts.

Every motor vehicle should carry a tetrachloride fire extinguisher. For garage use probably the best fire extinguisher is one of the foam type. Never use water on a gasoline or oil fire; it will spread the fire. A mixture of sawdust and soda (about 10 pounds of bicarbonate of soda to a bushel of sawdust) is a good solution to put out oil fires. Sand is also used effectively. The drip pan, side pans and car in general should be kept clean and free from excessive oil. If present, excessive oil may do much to spread the flames in case of fire.

Enter and leave the garage slowly. If extension cords are used for portable electric lights, it is necessary to guard against electric shock and fires resulting from electric causes. It is therefore advisable to use vapor-proof globes and further protected with a rigid cage to prevent breakage. It is also advisable to have armored cable instead of ordinary electric cord; this should be kept in good condition.

When it is necessary to jack up the car and get underneath, be sure the car is up securely. Be especially careful if any of the wheels have been removed. Block the other wheels to keep them from moving. If the support should give way, the car may fall and crush you. It is best to use a pit if possible. Never depend on jacks when it is necessary to get under the car. Horses are better supports than jacks, ordinary boxes, or blocks. Remember, the brakes are not operative when the rear wheels are jacked up off the ground.

When in the garage, the engine should not be run longer than necessary. Carbon monoxide is contained in the exhaust gases, and unless the garage is fairly well ventilated may cause headaches, other discomforts, and even death to the persons in the garage.

If you haven't a self-starter, be careful not to break your arm when cranking. Always pull the crank up, not down, and don't spin it unless absolutely necessary. When grasping the crank, place the thumb on the same side of the handle with the fingers, then if there is a kick-back, the handle will slip from your hand. Keep the spark retarded until the engine has started.

Be careful when working around or using rags near rotating fan. Keep wrenches and other tools on good condition; if badly worn they should be discarded.

Street car motormen, pedestrians, children, other drivers and garage workers may not be looking.

Don't drive too close to the gasoline pump at garage or filling stations and always be sure to shut off the engine when the tank is being filled with gasoline.

two other fatalities included in the safety council tabulation. Property damage in 1936 was $164,741.

Figures of the city police showed a decrease of 17 per cent in automobile accidents last year, compared with 1936, while outside the city accidents increased 18 per cent.

The state police accident report for December also made public last week, shows 115 accidents last month with 98 persons injured and 12 killed. In December of 1936 there were 83 accidents, with 70 persons injured and three killed.

Books, Chemicals and Other Products of Indianapolis

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

FROM atop a high building you see glittering Indianapolis spread over the prairie. Nebuchadnezzar, who viewed Babylon from his flat-roofed palace, would enjoy the picture here, with all its temples, shrines, monuments, and tree-lined avenues. Here are restful parks and floral displays, quite as satisfying to many as were the hanging gardens by the Euphrates; and here is a war memorial as impressive as any temple raised by Babylonians.

No one great city, however, dominates Indiana. Chicago pulls at it on the north, Cincinnati and Louisville on the south. Yet Indianapolis, its capital and nearly its geographic center, is the seat of Hoosier power.

In 1820 a small spot was cleared of forest here, and the capital later moved from Corydon, in the south. One wagon, two weeks on the wilderness trails, hauled all the young state's papers, furniture, books, and money. From the streams men seized fish in such quantities that wagonloads were fed to hogs.

Settlers increased; the national road came through from the East, driving west toward the Missouri. West-bound "movers" multiplied. Some days saw hundreds pass in covered wagons, freighters, stagecoaches, often with women or girls driving the teams while men and boys herded other animals after the wagons.

Crossroads for Highways. Today Indianapolis stands, a typical, well-balanced midwestern city, intersected by four national highways used by three-fourths of all transcontinental motorists.

High above the city rises America's largest neon aviation beacon, usually visible from 75 miles away.

About the city runs the first belt-line railway built in America, and the seven-acre Union station with elevated tracks accommodates 40 trains at once. Every 24 hours, 82 mails—by air, rail, and truck—reach the city; and it averages a convention a day—five days out of every week the year round. One auditorium seats 10,000. What a change since Henry Ward Beecher preached here in his small church, and edited his farm paper!

Get up early, any morning, and you see some 500 trucks coming into town from all directions, hauling hogs, cattle, calves, and sheep to the largest stockyards east of Chicago. Among world grain markets the one here ranks sixth, and as a cash mart it leads in the United States.

Some 840 factories make many things, from insulin and inner tubes, automobiles and canned food, to birdcages and popcorn machines. One shop can make 5,000 bicycle tires every day. Another makes chains—chains that went with Admiral Byrd to the Antarctic; chains for the first Wright plane; for the dirigibles Macon and Shenandoah; for battleship hoists and elevators; chains for 40 foreign countries.

Doorbell ringers all over the nation sell silk hosiery made here, while another product is advertised by a singing barber who fills the air with saponaceous rhapsody.

Armored cars for the shah of Iran; trucks to haul pipes that carry oil from Mosul to the Mediterranean; hams and bacon for the world's breakfast—they originate here.

Center for Literature.

If wastebaskets gave up their dead, what a place a great publishing house in Indianapolis would be to trace Indiana's literary career! It has bought and published many a manuscript which brought fame to a hitherto unknown writer. Not only Hoosiers, but writers from all over the Union have been launched by this house. Long ago it started Mary Roberts Rinehart, whose first work, "The Circular Staircase," other houses had ignored. Lately it published "Oil for the Lamps of China," which brought fame to Alice Tisdale Hobart.

Look over its lists, old and new, and you are astonished at the millions of books issued from this midwestern plant. Charles Major's "When Knighthood Was in Flower" sold more copies than did "Uncle Tom's Cabin." This firm, putting on what James Whitcomb Riley called "his literary overalls," published every book the famous Hoosier poet ever wrote, and all without ever a written contract! It introduced Harold MacGrath to the world with "The Puppet Crown," and Meredith Nicholson with "The Main Chance" and "The House of a Thousand Candles."

Other titles are remindful of days gone by. Here Brand Whitlock brought "The Thirteenth District";

Emerson Hough his "Mississippi Bubble"; Anna Katharine Green, "The Filigree Ball"; George Randolph Chester, "Young Wallingford"; Zona Gale, "Romance Island"; George Ade, "The Slim Princess"; Earl Derr Biggers, "Seven Keys to Baldpate"; Ring Lardner, "Gullible's Travels"; and Irving Bacheller, "The Light in the Clearing."

Because of its early conspicuous success with fiction, fiction especially is associated in many minds with the publishers. But its contribution in other lines, aside from its law and educational publications, shows scores of titles on subjects from "Backward Children" to "The Chinese"—too many to list here.

Great Chemical Laboratory.

Carved on the stone front of a great laboratory at Indianapolis are the same chemical symbols used by ancient alchemists—who took them from the Chaldean—who thought the earth's metals were related to the planets! Hence such old planetary names for drugs as lunar caustic and saturnine poison.

Yet look into this plant and see what incredible strides chemists have made since the dim, distant age of alchemy, quackery, and philosophers' stones!

In this temple of scientific research and in the giant production plant attached to it, where machines roll 500,000 pills a day and grind tons of strange things, from dandelions to bovine stomachs and livers, you meet a thinking brigade of chemists, pharmacists, bacteriologists, and medical investigators representing the best scientific brains of many lands, from England to China.

How to turn new ideas, theories, and discoveries about medicine into practical use is the business of this vast industry. It worked with the Toronto Insulin committee and with the Harvard Pernicious Anemia committee to put their drugs quickly into doctors' hands.

Here is not only pure research in many things, from toad poisons to Chinese herbs, but such mass-production problems as packing millions of doses of ground liver in capsules instead of vials.

In plain English, here in Indiana is an astonishing example of how highly organized, efficient business takes up where science leaves off.

Jenner learned long ago how to vaccinate against smallpox, but it takes huge capital and infinite skill to make enough vaccine and supply it fresh to the whole world, when and where needed.

You can think of many such examples, from common disinfectants to diphtheria antitoxin.

But for such mass production of drugs, chemicals, and medicines, we could not check or control infectious disease and epidemics, despite the great discoveries of Koch, Pasteur, Lister, Sir Ronald Ross, Schaudinn, Von Wassermann, and Ehrlich.

Nor could mankind benefit from the findings of a Hopkins, a Mendel, or an Osborne as to vitamins, nutrition, and the prevention of nutritional disease, nor dare to hope in face of tetanus, diabetes, and anemia.

Look at all the live animals on which tests are made; look at all the strange weeds, plants, roots, that come to this busy place—and look at the endless barrels, boxes, jars, and bottles of mysterious mixtures that issue from it, and are shipped to drugstores, hospitals, armies, navies, and to doctors all over the world, and you walk out with this thought:

What good is any discovery in medicine—no matter how great its potential value—unless some industry exists like this one, able to make the new serum, vaccine, drug or tissue product in big lots, and then send it to places where people need it?

The Vitamin Family

A vitamin is any of a group of constituents of most foods in their natural state, of which very small quantities are essential for the normal nutrition of animals, and possibly of plants. Six distinct vitamins are recognized by the effect produced on animals when their diets are deficient in these vitamins, namely, fat-soluble vitamin A, water-soluble vitamin B, water-soluble vitamin C, fat-soluble vitamin D, fat-soluble vitamin E and water-soluble vitamin G. Vitamin D is especially abundant in cod-liver oil and in egg yolk. Lack of it causes rickets. Its presence in the diet appears to determine the normal deposition of calcium phosphate in the bones. There is some connection between the action of this vitamin and ultraviolet rays, because animals that are developing rickets on diets largely deficient in this vitamin can be cured by exposing their food to irradiation with such rays. The constituent activated by ultraviolet rays appears to be ergosterol.

U. S. Makes Photographs of Wild Life in Alaska

Cameraman Travels 12,000 Miles for Pictures.

Seattle.—Frizzy-thatched Joseph Yolo, "Martin Johnson of the North," returned from Alaska's forested ranges with more than a mile of travel for every one of the 12,000-odd feet of 35-millimeter film he shot of wild animals, birds and fish.

JUDGE ADVOCATE

Maj. Gen. Allan W. Gullion is pictured as he took up his official duties in his office shortly after being sworn in as the new advocate general of the United States army.

Caught Bears Fishing.

Yolo photographed grizzly bears fishing on Admiralty and Chichagoff islands. He traveled the old Richardson highway, the Valdez trail and the Steese highway—once the Circle-Fairbanks trail, worn by padded feet of dog teams in gold-rush days.

Met Famed Hunters.

On the Kenai peninsula he found hunters from all over the world: Kermit Roosevelt, a French duke, a Polish count, A. C. Gilbert, toy manufacturer, and many millionaires.

of elegance and dignity in her furniture coverings, but the problem was how to do that with a big active family like hers who were hard on furniture at best.

The Setting—Pale gray walls and a light gray carpet (one of those indistinct patterns that are so practical and smart).

For Dress-Up—The sofa is in a fine hunter's green damask and a pair of fireside chairs are in apple green leather.

For Everyday—A fresh informal cretonne with a large scale flower motif and a clear middle blue ground is used for a slip cover on the sofa.

You can picture what a transformation those changes make! The slip covers are washable, fast color, sanforized and of good stout weight and weave.

Life has, since the war, become so complex that no one country can remain isolated or independent of another.

What occurs in Europe today, affects us tomorrow, politically, economically, and socially. No longer can one nation say to another, "I have no need of thee."

The breakdown of the old order of isolation and segregated national consciousness has resulted in serious efforts to preserve life under the most favorable environment possible.

POSTOFFICE AT TOWNSEND ROBBED EARLY SUNDAY

Early on Sunday morning thieves broke into the postoffice at Townsend, forced off the combination of a small safe and stole about $500 in stamps and cash. About $65 of the loot was in money. Postoffice inspectors and state police were reported to have obtained evidence indicating that the robbery occurred about 2 A. M.

In March of last year thieves tried to blow open the safe with nitroglycerine. Their attempt was unsuccessful. Marks on the safe indicate the thieves used four powerful set screws to pull out the combination. Police are inclined to believe two men were involved in the robbery.

The robbery was discovered by Bradford Naylor, a clerk, who entered the postoffice to fix the fire for the day. He notified Miss Edna E. Conner, the postmistress, who, in turn, communicated with postal inspectors and the state police. Corporal Hession and Private Hartry were assigned to the investigation.

Entrance was gained through a rear door which was locked and the lock reinforced by a heavy oak bar placed across the door on the inside. The thieves inserted some sharp instrument and worked the bar back in its slots. They forced the lock.

If you have bed quilts to be made or covered, take them to Mrs. Mary Blades. She will do the work nicely.
