ington, Ind., who have been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Dufendach, has been considerable discussion concerning the action of squatters erecting cottages along this road on land that belongs to the State of Delaware and it is quite possible that this agitation will reach such proportions that Legislative action will follow.

The State of Delaware has already spent large sums on this project and has set aside more money to be used on it. The existing road from Rehoboth to Bethany Beach cost about $155,000. The State has spent $40,000 for dredging at the mouth of Indian River inlet and $25,000 for a bridge of piling at the inlet.

OR many years there has been talk of one big reunion of the Blue and the Gray and now it is about to become a reality. For Dr. Overton H. Mennet of Los Angeles, national commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Gen. James M. Claypool of St. Louis, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, have accepted the invi-tation of the state of Pennsylvania and the federal gov-ernment to join their forces in celebrating the 75th anni-versary of the battle which versary of the battle which not only was the turning point in the War Between the States, but which is also listed among the "Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World."

The reunion will be held from June 29 to July 4 and invitations have been sent to 8,000 veterans of the war throughout the country to come to Gettysburg at Uncle Sam's expense. For congress has appropriated $275,000 to pay for their transportation and food and housing costs during the week's encamp-

During the reunion they will stand by as President Roosevelt dedicates a new memorial on the battlefield. In it will be a "perpetual light," symbolic of the Torch of Freedom that burns brightly over a reunited country. And on the last day of the re-union, July 4, they will join in celebrating together the day which knows no North, nor South, nor East, nor West. For it is Independence Day, the birthday of the whole republic.

whole republic.'

It is estimated that 2,500 veterans of both the Union and Confederate armies will attend the reunion. Only 2,500! Thus have the years taken their toll of both the Blue and the Gray. On that July day three-quarters of a century ago when the battle began there were nearly 150,000 of them —78,000 in Gen. George Mende's Union army and 70,000 of Gen. Robert E. Lee's Confederates. But when night fell on the last day of the battle and the two commanders counted the cost, these were the fruits of three days of bitter fighting:

The Union army had lost 3,072 killed, 14,497 wounded and 5,434 captured or missing—a total of 23,003.

23,003.
The Confederate army had lost 2,592 killed, 12,709 wounded and 5,150 captured or missing—a total of 20,451.

Four months later Abraham Lincoln stood on the battlefield of Gettysburg and spoke these im-mortal words: "The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say

"The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here; but it can never forget what they did here."
"Long remember"!
"Long remember"!
What memories will come crowding into the minds of these veterans as they go over this "hallowed ground"?
To some of them may come the memory of that breathless moment on the third day of the battle when Gen. George Pickett led his brigade of 5,000 Virginians from under the brow of Seminary ridge and started across the valley for a last desperate assault on the Union defenders of Cemetery hill. the wind, he salutes his commander, General Longstreet, as he passes, nor notices how "Old Pete" bows his head sadly as he returns the salute. For Longstreet knows that he is sending most of these gallant Virginians to their deaths. And then ... "The long Federal array, with its double line of supports, was revealed to view. As the advancing column came in sight Meade's guns opened upon it, but they neither paused nor faltered. Round shot, bounding along, tore through its ranks and ricocheted around it. Shells exploded, darting flashes before, behind, overhead.

"A long line of skirmishers."

A Storm of Death.

"From Cemetery Hill burst the fire of 40 cannon. Pickett's men fell like grain before the sweep of the scythe. There was no pause. The survivors pressed on with a force which seemed to have grown stronger with the concentration of all the lives which had been freed from the fallen brave. Straight down upon the center of the enemy's position—on, on, the column moved with iron nerve.

"One hundred Federal guns now concentrated their whole fury of shot and shell upon the advancing line. Every inch of air seemed to be filled with some death-dealing missile. The men and officers were fast being slaughtered. Kemper went down, mangled and bleeding.

"Imagine, if you can, these heroes reforming and aligning their ranks while their comrades dropped in death agony about them, the shells bursting above their heads, and an iron storm beating them to death. Yet the line was formed, and coolly they awaited the command: 'Forward! Quick march!' With perfect precision, with all the grace and accuracy of the parade ground instead of the bloodiest of battlefields, Pickett's division took up its death march, each man with the 'red badge of courage' pinned over his heart.

"Now they broke forward into a double-quick, toward the stone wall whence the Federal batteries were pouring forth their deadly missiles. A flanking force attacked the left, pouring in a deadly storm of musketry. Here the fighting was hand-to-hand. Muskets seemed to cross. Men fired to the right and left and to the front.

"The Federals in front fell behind their guns to let them belch their grape and canister into the oncoming ranks, pilling up the dead and wounded.

"Armistead, sword in hand, sprang over the stone wall, crying: 'Come on boys! Come on! Who will follow me?'

Ebb Tide. "He reached the battery. His hand touched one of Cushing's guns. Then he and Cushing fell together, and a crimson river washed the base of the copse of trees which marked the high tide of the Confederacy—a river formed of the noblest blood that formed of the noblest blood that ever flowed in American veins."

Thus the words of one who "wrote the most graphic and heart-stirring description of Pickett's charge that has ever been produced "—Mrs. La Salle Corbell Pickett, widow of the man who led it.

Across the fields he came, musket in hand, to offer his services to Colonel Wister of the One Hundred Fiftieth Pennsylvania. The colonel advised him to fight in the woods since there was more shelter there.

But that suggestion didn't appeal to old John Burns—no, siree! So he joined the line of skirmishers in the open fields, fought beside them until they retired, then attached himself to the famous "Iron Brigade" of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota troops. And it wasn't until he was wounded three times that he allowed himself to be carried to a wagon and taken to the little home for which he had been Barlow's Knoll . . . another place of memories. There Brig. Gen. Channing Barlow of New York and Brig. Gen. John B. Gordon of Georgia led their commands in a bitter fight for possession of this mound. In the midst of the fight Barlow fell from his horse desperately wounded.

Gordon riding into the thick of the fray, saw the stricken man, a soldier of equal rank. He drew rein at his side and asked if there was a last request. The New Yorker asked that his sweetheart, then a nurse caring for the sick and wounded in the Old McClellan house, be notified. A dispatch rider was sent to the improvised hospital and the young nurse escorted to her sweetheart.

Saved by His Sweetheart.

Undaunted by the nature of his wound, an apparently fatal one, the stout-hearted young woman secured his transfer to a nearby farm shed where for three days she nursed him through the crisis.

Then came weeks and months of tender care. A few years later the young New Yorker regained his full health. He became attorney general of New York. He was informed unofficially that the officer who granted his request on the field extended his request on the field extended. his request on the field of bat-had lost his life at Gettys-

The Georgian emerged from the war with new laurels. He later became governor of Georgia. Misinformed as the New Yorker had been, the Georgian believed that Barlow had lost his life.

Twenty years later, at a banquet of Union and Confederate veterans in Washington, the two officers, prominent in civic and political life, met. They were on the same program. Each, of the opinion that the other had been killed, recognized the other and a touching reunion was held at the banquet table.

"Oh, dear! Is there really going to be a battle? Where shall we go?" saked Josephine Miller.

"Yes, we shall have a battle right here, and you will either have to go to the rear or down cellar, if you have one."

"Yes, we have a small cellar. I think we will stay."

So Josephine Miller went right on with her baking.

the very same stove on which she had baked her bread.

Yes, Josephine Miller was one woman at the Battle of Gettysburg who lived to tell her children and grandchildren about it. But there was another who didn't—sweet-faced Jennie Wade (Will there be any veteran there who remembers her?) History has written her down as "the only woman who was killed at Gettysburg." But history isn't always right. As witness:

Not more than 100 feet from the huge bronze open book, that marks the place where "the high tide of the Confederacy" broke and receded, is a spot, unmarked, unknown to thousands who have visited the battlefield, and seldom spoken of but a sacred spot withal. For here lies a young Virginia woman who died at Gettysburg.

In the uniform of a Confederate soldier she had fought beside her husband in more than one battleg hag, identity known only to him. During Pickett's charge her husband, a standardbearer, was shot down. She stooped only long enough to kiss shim good-by, then raised the colors aloft and tried to push on. But she, too, was struck down. Some of her comrades found her lying beside the dead standard-bearer. Suspecting the true relationship of the couple, they wrapped their bodies in a Confederate flag and buried them there on the hillside.

Who was she? No one knows—unless, by some strange quirk of fate, some veteran of Pickett's brigade attending the reunion recalls he story and, after 75 years, tells her name.

Top on the second day of the battle? A shell had exploded among them, tearing one animal to pieces. Thereupon the others, terrified by the shells bursting in air over them, rushed first to one side of the valley and then to the other. A Union officer who had tied his horse to a tree before crossing that valley started to return on foot. During the three days of the battle he was never in greater danger than at that moment as he made his way among the terror-crazed animals.

Today half-way between Devil's Den and Round Top is a dry gully. Seventy-five years ago it was overflowing with a crimson stream that gave it the name of Bloody Run. Across its banks shot and shell poured. Men raced back and forth across it—but some dropped in it, never to rise. Horses trying to leap over it were shot down. Choked by the bodies of man and beast, the stream overflowed its banks and the bloody waters steeped the banks a deep crimson.

C. Houston Goudiss Offers More Advice About Reducing

Describes the Perils of Unscientific Methods for Losing Weight

By C, HOUSTON GOUDISS

East Moth Street, New York City.

MY RECENT discussion of reducing in these columns brought many letters, indicating that the modern woman is, fortunately, weight conscious. This is an encouraging sign. For it shows that you are alert to the dangers of overweight, which not only destroys beauty but may indirectly contribute to heart disease.

Guard Against Unscientific Reducing Methods Some of these letters caused me

Some of these letters caused me great concern, however, because they indicate that in spite of my warning against unscientific methods of weight reduction, man y women still cling to the idea that there is some magic in the various pills, powders, capsules, saps, salts and mechanical devices that are sold at fancy prices and hold out alluring promises of speedy reducing without detting or exercise.

It is bad enough that most of

Dangerous Drugs
Drugging is particularly to be condemned, and no one should attempt to reduce by this method except under the advice and watchful eye of a physician. There are many invalids today who would be happy and healthy if they had not attempted to take some "reducing medicine" without consulting a physician.

One preparation that is still bought by foolish women—in spite of repeated warnings against its use—may even result in permanent blindness.

Almost equally objectionable are excessive purging — which may leave you a wobbly wreck—and fasting, which is even more dangerous to women than men.

Don't Diet Without Direction

Don't Diet Without Direction
A carefully regulated diet will not only maintain normal weight, but will banish overweight by forcing the body to burn its own excess fat as fuel. Having heard of this scientific principle, many women frantically and foolishly attempt to prescribe their own reducing diets — often with disastrous results.

There is always the possibility that one may omit calcium-bearing foods and thus impair the teeth, or leave out foods rich in iron and copper and interfere with the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment in the blood.

One of the most common and

One of the most common and most serious errors is to omit all bread, potatoes and cereals, in the belief that carbohydrates are "fattening foods." Carbohydrates are required by the body in order to utilize the fats in the diet, and when reducing, they are also necessary to burn up excess fatty tissue.

Just as fire cannot burn without air, fat cannot be utilized in the

to Reduce

The one-safe, sure and scientific method of getting rid of surplus weight and at the same time maintaining top health—is to consume a diet that is balanced in every respect, but to count your calories at every meal, making certain that you consume fewer calories each day than your body requires for its normal energy expenditure.

It is bad enough that most of these fall to reduce. For they may delay the day when the victim of overweight will undertake a sound and scientific program of weight reduction that will effectively take off weight—thus improving appearance, benefiting health and increasing the chances of longevity. But what is far more serious is that some of these preparations may endanger health or cause lifelong physical impair ment.

The Film Stars' Method
This simple and scientific method of controlling the weight is the one used by film stars in Hollywood. It is essential that they keep slim and practically every important film player has a clause in her contract calling for a cancellation if she permits her weight to increase beyond a certain point. But at the same time, film stars must safeguard their health, for their work is the most strenuous of occupations!

Excepting occasional stately junks with eyes painted on either side of the high bow to enable them to "see their way," there is little to suggest the Orient on the way up the Whangpoo river in Shanghai. Before the dock is reached, however, China obtrudes itself upon the sight and its adors penetrate the nostrils.

From a downstream wharf it is a half hour's ride in a tender to the customs jetty in the city. Wharves, warehouses, and factories line the shores.

warehouses, and factories line the shores.

Immediately beyond the Japanese docks in Hongkew appears the curve of water front upon which three consulates now stand.

Beyond lies the mouth of Soochow creek, the crowded stream which meanders tortuously through the city. It bristles with the floating homes of innumerable Chinese—Chinese who are born, live their entire lives, and die on the sampans which huddle together in its murky water. Bables, toddling too near the gunwales, sometimes topple in, and, having been fished out, are set casually to dry. Water dipped up over the side is used by the women for cooking rice and vegetables; clothes are washed in it; and it imparts that certain flavor to tea.

A sampan gaily pavilioned and festooned in red indicates that a wedding will soon take place. For tunerals the drapery is white, the Chinese color of mourning.

Great Britain was the first of all the nations which now have such valuable commercial interests in the city "above the sea" to recognize the vast potentialities of the little fishing hamlet on the muddy shores of the Whangpoo.

fishing hamlet on the muddy shores of the Whangpoo.

In 1842, emerging victorious from the so-called "Opium war," she concluded with China the Treaty of Nanking by which Shanghai and four other coastal cities were established as treaty ports.

Within two years the United States and France, realizing that Shanghai's geographical position made it the natural outlet for products of the rich Yangtze river valley, followed suit and signed trade pacts with China. Ninety-six years ago, when the foreigners first obtained areas for settlement, land on the water front brought only $200 (Mex.) an acre. By 1935 an acre of Bundside property was valued at more than four millions.

The Chinese have proved remarkably adaptable in adjusting themselves to contact with English-speaking nations. They have adopted automobiles, foreign clothes, jazz, and golf. The natives of the treaty ports have evolved a bizzare speech based on English with which they can communicate satisfac-

Since the average occidental resident of Shanghai will not take the trouble to learn the local dialect, the natives use pidgin, or "business" English. In fact, two Chinese from different provinces often resort to this jargon, for each is almost sure to have difficulty in understanding the dialect of the other.

derstanding the dialect of the other.

In pidgin English one word often does duty for three or four. Thus "my" signifies also "I, me, mine" and their plural forms. "My no savvy," of course, means "I do not understand." "What thing have got?" is to say "What have you?" When the supply of butter is exhausted your cook will come to you with the complaint, "Butter have finish, missie."

There is a convenient custom followed by many foreigners in China, that of "boarding with the cook."

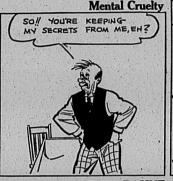

For a definite number of local dollars a month, your cook by contracts to feed you. Each guest costs a dollar extra.

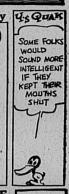

SUNNY SIDE OF

THE FEATHERHEADS By Oak

There is the tradition of "face" which governs the duties of each employee within ironbound limits. Your cook will not mix cocktails. He leaves this to the number one boy, who, in turn will not clean shoes or run errands. These tasks are the coolie's "pidgin." The wise foreigner does not attempt to change customs which have existed for centuries.

Chinese servants are justiv faturies.

Chinese servants are justly famous. As a class they are unsurpassed in loyalty, industry, patience and cheerfulness. They sometimes wonder at the strange customs of the foreigner, but they bear with him.

Night Life in the City.

Night Life in the City.

Even during "trouble" the famous night life of this cosmopolitan city of Asia continues with vigor. At such times private entertaining is somewhat curtailed. Pity the poor hostess whose guests have been caught by the curfew and who has them on her hands until dawn!

Hotels and night clubs offer the usual diversions, profiting by the increased trade which results from the enforced stay of those who are caught by the curfew. At such times, as well as under normal conditions, the conservative old Palace hotel on the Bund and the Cathay, its up-to-date counterpart across the street, present pictures of gaiety at cocktail time.

The bar at the Cercle Sportif Francais, the popular sports' club in the French Concession, is noisy with sprightly conversation in a half dozen languages. Chinese boys, in long white gowns, their black pantaloons bound tightly about the ankles, move silently through the crowd with chits and laden trays.

The 20-story Cathay hotel offers diverse amusement. The glittering shops in its arcade are stocked with Peking rugs, jewel jade, silks, and curios. For swank one dines in its grill under the lofty black pyramid which surmounts its roof. The orchestra which plays in its air-conditioned ballroom pleases even blase American tourists, and imported singers and dancers entertain the guests.

Chinese dance halls have opened in large numbers in the last two or three years. The native musician has not yet become a master of American syncopation, and the orchestras are usually Russian.

she renews her make-up with the contents of a compact.

Until well into the Twentieth century Chinese women of the better class were not seen in public. When they did leave their homes, it was only in sedan chairs, concealed from the eyes of the world. With the influx of Western ideas of women's freedom the Chinese woman emerged from her isolation. Footbinding, possibly an expedient for keeping women at home, not only went out of fashion but became illegal.

Women Go Part Way Modern.

The transition period had its amusing aspects. Today the emancipated Chinese woman has her hair permanently waved, smokes, works in offices, frequents night clubs, and drives a car if she has a mind to. But with all her modern ideas she still is reluctant to adopt foreign dress. She wears silk stockings, discards her flat, embroidered satin slippers for uncomfortable spike-heeled shoes, but she resolutely clings to her long gown with its stiff, high collar and straight lines.

clings to her long gown with its stiff, high collar and straight lines. The gown may be split to the knee as are modish gowns in the Western world when the designers so decide, but her modesty still forbids her to expose her throat. The majority of Chinese shops flaunt gay red banners bearing in gold characters the description of goods carried within or announcements of bargains. These banners have almost entirely disappeared from Nanking road, but they hang in profusion the full length of the congested cross streets in the heart of the city.

The Hongkew district, north of Soochow creek, is a veritable "little Tokyo." Here factories built with Japanese capital abound, the clack of geta echoes on pavements, and shops do a brisk business in kinnons and the shiny ornaments which decorate the heavy hair of Japanese women.

Although far outnumbered by Chinese, foreigners dominate Shanghai. To escape the Western influence, to receive an impression of China untouched by the outside world, you have only to enter Nantao, the Chinese city extending south of the French Concession. It is a compact, congested area, which, until the nation became a republic, was enclosed by a wall. This squalid, odoriferous, teeming district is a maze of crooked, cobblestoned streets and stone or tile houses.

New YORK.—France is beginning to think she has another Clemenceau in Premier Daladier, and she still has Marshal Philippe How Petain Petain, one of the Gew survivors of the great generals of the World war. Two or three years ago, General Petain was counseling peace and conciliation with Germany. Now he warns the French people of their "serious situation in Europe," and urges them to consider realities.

to consider realities.

It is quite possible that rope-skipping is mainly accountable for General Petain being alive, trim, fit and active at eighty-two. He is an inveterate rope-skipper, ejected from his apartment in 1914, because he jarred the plaster from the walls. This writer's record as to that goes only to 1934, but, in that year, he was still skipping diligently. Joffre, Foch and Maginot, among the French, Von Mackensen, Ludendorff and Hindenburg among the Germans — non-skippers all—have passed, but Marshal Petain lives on, venerated by his countrymen.

It was he who said, "They shall not pass"—on February 5, 1916, to be exact. He was the savior of Verdun, and, in this connection, a deft historian might discover that rope-skipping saved France. The general spent a solid week in an Automitralleuse without sleep, and the London Daily News commented at the time that no man who was not in perfect physical condition could have survived such ordeals. It was suggested that his energy and endurance had turned the tide of war.

He was born Henri Philippe Be

It is a unique contest for him, with no chance for his running broad-jump attack, in which he hurtles his body against his opponent. his opponent.

His career seems to have been mostly his wife's idea. Born Frank Leavitt, in New York, known as the "Hell's Kitchen Hillbilly," he did a hitch in the army and thereafter engaged in some desultory wrestling and mauling as a Soldier Leavitt. Nothing much came of it, and he began placidly taking on weight as traffic cop in Miami, Fla. Doris Dean married him and began prodding his lagging ambition.

ambition.

He started grappling again, in Boston in 1933, with fame still eluding his half-nelson, when a German as Henry VIII in On a tour of the Rhineland. This was more successful, and brought him to the attention of Alexandre Korda, who needed a double for Charles Laughton as Henry VIII in the wrestling scene. Thus came the famous whiskers, an important detail of his wife's clever showmanship in the build-up of the Man Mountain. It was she who persuaded him to take the name Dean and who managed the histrionics which made him a fabulous creature. He was born in West Forty-third street in 1891, weighing 16½ pounds.

GEORGE E. Q. JOHNSON, the self-effacing, bespectacled man who sent Al Capone to Alcatraz, is devoting his life to so-cial betterment. He wants to make Capone to cities less fertile soil for crime, and to that end, would flush city and country children back and forth, interchangeably, to the benefit of each, he believes, and the nurture of good behavior.

It was as United States attorney that he deftly enmeshed Capone in a silken spider-web of evidence, laboriously gathered and spun. The next year, Herbert Hoover made him a federal judge, but he stayed on the bench only a year and then went back to his law practice.

He broke the gangs in Chicago. His story of how he snared Capone, told before the senate judiciary committee, with its tales of trap-doors and secret panels; was Grade A melodrama, but he didn't make it sound that way. He is a modest man, with no instincts of showmenship.

-BEDTIME STORY-Old Mr. Toad, Filled With Pride,

Gets Another Dinner Invitation

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

OLD MR. TOAD was so puffed up with pride that he had become quite unbearable to his old friends and neighbors and all because he had dined with Buster Bear. He thought it an honor, a very great honor, to have been invited to dine with one for whom every one had such a very great respect as they had for Buster Bear and because he felt that it was such a very great honor, he puffed himself so that he would have nothing to do with any of them excepting Bobby Coon, who, you know, is a little cousin of Buster Bear.

At first everyone had laughed at Old Mr. Toad.

cousin of Buster Bear.

At first everyone had laughed at Old Mr. Toad, but after a little they grew tired of being treated so and some of them put their heads together to think of some plan to teach Old Mr. Toad a lesson, and what a very foolish thing false pride is. The very next day Jimmy Skunk went into the Green Forest to look for Buster Bear. You know, Jimmy isn't afraid of Buster. He didn't have to look long and when he had found him the very first thing he did was to ask Buster if he had seen any fat beetles that morning. You know Jimmy is very fond of fat beetles, and the first thing he asks, anyone he may happen to meet is if they have seen any.

fat beetles, and the first thing he asks anyone he may happen to meet is if they have seen any.

Buster Bear grinned and said he thought he knew where there might be a few and he would be pleased to have Jimmy go with him to see. Sure enough, under an old log he found five fat beetles, and these Jimmy gobbled up without asking Buster if he would have one. Jimmy is proud of anything that he laughed and laughed, and his laugh was deep and grumbly-rumbly. Then Jimmy told him the plan to teach Old Mr. Toad a lesson, and asked Buster if he would help. Buster's eyes twinkled as he promised to do what Jimmy wanted him to do.

Then Jimmy went straight to where Old Mr. Toad was sitting all puffed up taking a sun bath.

Tidbits on Rugs: All-Over Designs Win Most Favor

By BETTY WELLS

WE'VE been stepping lively lately, picking up tidbits of rug news. It seems that the all-over borderless designs are everything.
These are shown in both narrow and broadloom carpet and are often called "patterned plain" and twotone effects. Leaf and flower designs continue to lead—with a feeling of texture. By the way, texture effects are being achieved importantly with mottled or stippled backgrounds. These are taking the place of the perfectly plain carpets, for they don't soil so readily.

As for size, well, the main thing is—the rug should cover the room gracefully. Plan a uniform border of floor all around, keeping in mind that the larger the rug, the larger the room will look. If your floors are interesting, consider the possibilities of a round or oval rug finished with a wool fringe all around. You can have one cut out of broadloom, you know. INDIAN RUNNER IS GOOD LAYING DUCK

Ability May Exceed Any of the Breeds of Hens.

Ability May Exceed Any of the Breeds of Hens.

By a Poultry Authority in the Rural New-Yorker.—WNU Service.

The outstanding characteristic of Indian Runner ducks, as compared with other varieties, is their superiority as egg producers. Good strains may equal or exceed any of the breeds of hens in this respect. They are lighter in weight than the "meat" breeds of ducks and give place to the Pekins on duck farms where large numbers are annually produced for the markets.

The standard weight of the Indian Runner drake is 4½ pounds; of the duck a half pound less. They lay a white egg, larger than the hen egg, and make fair broilers weighing from 2½ to 3 pounds at six weeks of age. They are not suited to the production of large green ducks, but rather to the production of ducklings of broiler size. They are active, hardy and non-sitters. In other countries, where they have been longer bred for egg production, they are said to show an average of 200 eggs or more per year.

Ducks require more food for growth and egg production than hens, more floor space and more labor in caring for and shipping the eggs. As an offset, they are less susceptible to disease.

Some years ago, the Indian Runner duck was exploited as a competitor of the hen as an egg producer and achieved a popularity upon general or poultry farms that it does not seem to have held, some part of the loss in this being doubtless due to the greater feed consumption of the duck coupled with the more limited year-around demand for duck eggs. While duck eggs are larger than those of the hen and should command higher prices, they are not given their due in this respect during the greater part of the marketing season.

Brahmas Majestic Birds;

Hardy, Vigorous Layers
The Brahma has a comb different from most birds. This is called a pea comb and is rather a low comb consisting of three ridges instead of a rose comb or a single comb. Brahmas are very large, their weights being: Cock, 12 pounds; hen, 9½ pounds; cockerels, 10 pounds; pullets, 8 pounds.
They are truly majestic birds, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record. The head of the Brahma is very characteristic, being broad, with heavy brows giving the bird a look of great intelligence.
As a table fowl it is unexcelled in the very heavy class, and it is used pure and with crosses very extensively. In New England the bird had an extremely wide popularity, especially in the hands of specialists in Rhode Island, who turned out what was called the New England soft roaster.

Brahmas are hardy, vigorous and Hardy, Vigorous Layers

Brahmas are hardy, vigorous and excellent layers of very large dark brown eggs. The fact that they have been bred by many of our very best breeders is evidence of their real worth.

The Brahma comes in a color other than light. Then it is called the Dark Brahma. The males having a black body, black wing bar and white saddle and hackle laced with black. The female is steel gray, with each feather penciled with black.

Doilies Soon Done In Jiffy Crochet

Pattern 1669.

You'll find yourself so fascinated by this jiffy crochet pattern that you'll turn these doilies out by the dozen in all three sizes. Use heavy perle cotton or four strands of mercerized string to achieve that heavy richness that you usually find only in rare old lace. Use as luncheon set or just as centerpieces. Pattern 1669 contains directions for making these doilies; illustrations of them and of all stitches used; material requirements; a photograph of a doily.

Island Paradise
Since Shakespeare, who called them the "Bermoothes," generations of writers have found romantic Bermuda an archipelago of natural wonders. But the most amazing thing about the islands today to the visitor is the fact that these isles of modern communities have no automobiles. Safety and anti-noise campaigns are unknown and unnecessary as automobiles were banned from the roads years ago by the island parliament.

Gray said: "Ready to leave town yet? Or am I still too big a liar to believe?"
"I don't know what you are,"
Frank answered. "Hadn't been for you they would have got me. But you fired the first shot at me."
"You were walking right into their ambush. I fired to stop you. Lucky for you. It started them up before you were close enough to hit in the darkness."
Frank was still suspicious and ashamed of it. "You disguised your voice when you talked with them in the barn."
"So I did. I'm staying here. Would you want me to yell out my name to them?"
"You saved my life. No two ways about that. At the risk of yore about that. At the risk of yore own."

"Oh, hell!" Gray said. "You're such a fool someone has to look after you . . . Where is yore horse?"

"At the Alamo corral."

"Then get down there and saddle. Hit the trail for the L C—quick as you can."

The younger man agreed. "I'm much obliged," he added gruffly. "I won't forget it."

Gray watched him go, then cut across to the main street and joined those who were hurrying to the fire. He saw the roof of the barn crash in as he climbed over the wall.

the fire. He saw the roof of the barn crash in as he climbed over the wall.

His gaze swept the crowd. He caught sight of Morgan Norris and joined him.

"How'd the fire start?" he asked. Norris sild a look at him. "How would I know?"

"Thought maybe you were among those here early," Gray said lightly. It was important for him to find out whether he had been recognized by the ambushers. He thought not, since in the darkness he had not known any of them. But he had to be sure.

"No, sir, I wasn't."

The eyes of Norris were slits of shining light. This business tonight had got out of hand, and he had to watch his step. He had started out to kill one man, not three. Now there would be war to a finish with the L C outfit. Lee Chiswick would not rest until he had avenged the death of his son and the other two riders.

"Thought I heard some shooting," Gray said guilelessly. "I was down at Ma Presnall's fixing to turn in when things began to pop."

"I'reckon some drunk was punctuating the scenery," Norris said, watching his words. "Me, I was playing seven-up with some of the boys."

"Likely some lad was bedding down in the hay and lit it from his of his having whopped you. What's the use of lying among ourselves?"

"You're whistling right we meant to rub him out," Kansas admitted despondently. "But like Lou says, we didn't mean to burn him. The idea was to blast him as he walked up to Sanger's from the boardinghouse. And we didn't figure on the two other guys who busted in and took chips."

"When did they come to town?" Sherman Howard snapped, his superabundance of stomach overflowing the table as he leaned forward accusingly. "Who saw them after they got here? Who were they?"

"I wouldn't know the answer to any of those questions, Sherm," answered Norris, sulkily defiant. "Better ask Lou. It was his party. Maybe he knows."

The opaque eyes of the older Howard rested on his son, not without contempt. It was plain that Lou was sweating fear. Maybe he had better get him clear out of this part of the country before he broke down. That could be arranged later. Just partment," the red-headed man mentioned. "If a fire started when the wind was blowing hard, the whole main street would go."
"So it would," Norris agreed indifferently. "But I got no chips in this town's real estate."

A vaquero known as Kansa's sidled up to them.

That could be arranged later. Just now he would send him up into the hills. The big man brought his mind back to the immediate business of the day.

"Mighty funny about these two mysterious L C men," he said, thinking aloud. "What did they come here for? Where did they leave their mounts?"

"Search me," Kansas replied. "I didn't see but one of 'em."

"Fire's burnin out," ne said to Norris.

Gray read fear in the man's shifty eyes. He decided that Kansas had been one of those involved in the attack. Like Norris, he had been appalled at the swiftness with which three men had been wiped out so horribly. To shoot men was one thing; to burn them up another.

"Morg and I were just hoping nobody got caught in there," Gray told the cowboy.

The startled eyes of Kansas stabbed at Norris. "Why would there be anybody in there?" he asked hoarsely. "You don't figure that—that—"!

"Morg and I were just hoping nobody got caught in there," Gray told the cowboy.

The startled eyes of Kansas stabbed at Norris. "Why would there be anybody in there?" he saked hoarsely. "You don't figure that—that—"

"We don't figure a thing," Norris answered, his cold gaze fixing Kansas. "Crook-Nose here allowed that maybe someone sleeping in the hay might have lit it from a cigarette."

"Gray is the name, if you're meanin' me," the red-headed man drawled gently.

"That's right." The young killer's words dripped malice. "Clint Gray, isn't it?"

Words with switch the switches with who saw the other? Did you, who had the word in the draw of the larn. Up in the loft. Saw him when we rushed the stairs." Norris rubbed tenderly the side of his have deep with the sked hoarsely. "But you don't know who he was?"

"No, I don't. It was black as a manzanita gulch in the dark of the many might have lit it from a cigarette."

"Gray is the name, if you're meanin' me," the red-headed man drawled gently.

"That's right." The young killer's words dripped malice. "Clint Gray, isn't it?"

"No, sir. Nor Jeff Doke. Jeff Gray would be right. I'm a little particular about my name, Mr. Norris." The steady gaze warned the other that he was treading on dangerous ground.

"Call yoreself Paddy Ryan or John L. Sullivan for all I care," Norris said, his laugh insolently offensive. "Well, the show's over. I'm headin' back to the seven-up game. You comin' along, Kansas?"
Gray wotched them go. "That's two of them," he thought. "Jou Howard is probably another."
He walked up the main street to the Golden Nugget and sat in at a poker game.

Shern Howard slammed a his first.

After Reynolds had gone, the big man turned on the others with bitter sarcasm. "Now we don't know where we are at. You're a fine bunch of warriors. Arbuckle hands, I would say. Why pack guns at all? Better shuck them and go back to Kansas and Iowa. All four of you plugging at this Chiswick and he gets off scot free You'd better find out soon as you can about the other two fellows who were with Frank. 'Maybe they're getting sore sides laughing at you. Was there a back door to this stable?"

"No, there wasn't" Norris said, sullenly. "I don't see—"

He stopped, a sudden gleam of light in his smoky eyes.

"They kept making a noise upstairs in the loft—some kind of pounding." Morg Norris ripped out a vicious oath. "I'll bet they knocked a hole in the 'dobe wall and got away."

"Sounds reasonable," jeered their leader. "You boys were having such a good time at the fire you never thought to watch the back of the barn." Sherm Howard slammed a big fist down on the table in front of him. "Never saw anything more crazy in my life. That's no way to get a man—lie in wait for him right here in town so Lee Chiswick will know some of us must have done it. Couldn't some of you have bush-whacked him out on his own range? On top of that, you bump off three men instead of one. Bad medicine, Morg. These aren't the old days. We got to be more careful what we do. And you're not satisfied with shooting. You've got to burn 'em to death, like you were a bunch of Apaches."

Apaches."

"Ride yore son Lou," Norris said sulkily. "He was in it deep as any of us."

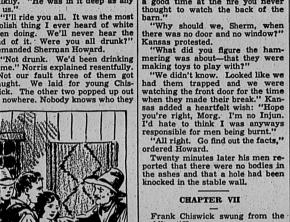

"I'll ride you all. It was the most foolish thing I ever heard of white men doing. We'll never hear the end of it. Were you all drunk?" demanded Sherman Howard.

"Not drunk. We'd been drinking some." Norris explained resentfully. "Not our fault three of them got caught. We laid for young Chiswick. The other two popped up out of nowhere. Nobody knows who they Frank Chiswick swung from the saddle stiffly.

"How's every little thing?" his brother Bob asked.

"All right with me."

"Anything doing at Tail Holt?"

"Plenty. Where's the old man?"

"In the house writing a letter."

Frank unsaddled and turned his horse into a pasture.

"Better come along and listen to my story." he said.

From a kitchen window Ruth saw her brothers and followed them into the office. She heard her father's booming greeting.

"Lo, Frank," she said. "You haven't changed much. We still have the same old cat."

"You came mighty near not having the same old brother," he told her with a grin.

when Frank reached in his narrative the fight with Lou Howard, his sister cut in sharply.

"I told you to leave him alone—that it was my fault as much as his," she scolded. "Now you've made more trouble."

"Sorry it came out that way," Frank said, in penitent justification. "He was bragging around how he jilted you. It came to me from two different people. One was Ma Presnall. I thought I ought to stop it."

"You did right, son," his father approved. "I hope you whopped him good."

"He wouldn't fight—not to amount to anything," Frank said simply.
"But I marked him up considerable. I reckon he made up his mind to have me rubbed out and took that killer Morg Norris in with him. They had two or three others along."

"Along when?" Bob asked.

"When they ambushed me."

"You recognized Howard and Norris," Lee said, his eyes blazing with excitement.

Frank told his story.

"Son, I ought never to have sent you to town alone," exclaimed Lee.
"I knew there were a lot of bad hombres in that bunch of rustlers, but I didn't think they would go so far as to try to burn a boy to death. Well, I've had my lesson. I might have known that any outfit bossed by Sherm Howard would be rotten. About this fellow Gray. I don't get him at all. We no sooner get him pegged for a double-crossing scoundrel than he up and goes into the fire for you. What's his game? Who in time is he?"

"Two or three times I heard that in time is he?"

"Two or three times I heard that he was an outlaw wanted in Texas for robbing a train," Frank said. "Name of Clint Doke, it was claimed. He's in with Howard's gang somehow. When we were in the barn he changed his voice so they wouldn't know who he was."

WHEN you see "Robin Hood" you're going to see some remarkable archery; it will look as if Errol Flynn is a wizard with the bow and arrow. But the man behind the bow was really Howard Hill, and you will be able to see him in a film of his own before long —one of those Pete Smith shorts. Hill will go William Tell one better by lining up fif-teen pretty girls with apples on their heads and shooting the apples off.

dangerous — and he'd manage to do it himself when the cameras weren't grinding, just to show that he wasn't afraid.

Speaking of Flynn—recently he worried Warner Brothers no little. He bought a new yacht, and decided to go on a six months' trip in search of adventure. The executives objected. They finally gave him three weeks off. He had to go to Miami to get the yacht; he was to sail it through the canal, and fly to Hollywood to work in "Sister Act," off he went, and off he stayed. He spent four weeks in Miami. A studio reprusentative went after him, and went back without him. So Jeffrey Lynn, whose face isn't exactly familiar on the screen as yet, was given the lead in "Sister Act," with everybody cheering for him, and now the studio's delighted with his work. It may be another of those cases where a star walks out and a new star walks right in.

If Jeffrey Lynn does climb to stardom he can thank Bette Davis for giving him a start. While appearing in a road company of a New York stage success he was given a screen test by Metro. Nothing came of it so far as Metro was concerned, but Miss Davis saw the test and wanted Lynn for a role in "Jezebel." He didn't get it, but Warner Brothers liked the test and gave the young man a contract.

They're admitting now that the clever Miss Davis was right when she refused to play in "Comet Over Broadway," saying that the
